FROST, S. E., ed. Masterworks of philosophy: digests of 11 great classics. (Masterworks ser) 757p $4 Doubleday

108 Philosophy 46-5771

"The key writings of ancient and modern philosophers are condensed in an attempt to give the reader a firsthand knowledge of western philosophy. This is the first in a series of condensations in various fields of interest. The writers selected for this volume are: Plato, Aristotle, Francis Bacon, Descartes, Spinoza, Locke, Kant, Schopenhauer, Nietzsche, James, and Bergson." Booklist

Booklist 43:5 S '46

"Excellent biographical introductions to about a dozen philosophers make this book something more than simply an anthology of their works. But even so, its value is primarily for school and college libraries and reference shelves."

+ Kirkus 14:216 My 1 '46 80w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 D 15 '46 70w

+ Weekly Book Review p25 S 8 '46 100w

FUCHS, WALTER MAXMILIAN. When the oil wells run dry. 447p 11 maps $3.75 Industrial service

665.5 Petroleum. Petroleum industry and trade 46-5568

"Timely and readable narrative of the discovery and development of oil. An all over survey of the social, political and scientific facts of petroleum and the relation of petroleum to national and international affairs." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1128 S 1 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:45 J1 '46

"The well-organized and lively text, combined with the many interesting photographs and diagrams, make this a most worthy volume. It will 'provide the chemist and technologist with historical and political information, the businessman and economist with salient scientific and technological facts, and the average citizen with a survey of all this.'"

+ Scientific Bk Club R 17:3 J1 '46 480w

"This volume covers the social, political, and scientific aspects of the story of oil in an easily readable and generally understandable manner, and is a balanced presentation that serves a broad audience. . . The many illustrations throughout the book are excellent and unusually well chosen."

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 2:346 D '46 200w

Reviewed by James Stokley

Weekly Book Review p31 O 6 '46 90w

FULLER, BENJAMIN APTHORP GOULD. History of philosophy. rev ed 2v in 1 432; 560p $4.40 Holt; also in 2v v 1 $2.60; v2 $2.90 Holt

109 Philosophy—History 45-6003;45-6002

A revised edition of a one-volume textbook first published in 1938 (Book Review Digest, 1938).

"It is hard to criticize a particular textbook history of this sort. Such a book can be well written, if at all, only by a scholar of extremely wide and exact learning—and obviously there are not nearly enough such scholars in existence to go around among all the textbook publishing-houses. Fuller's book is probably no worse, if no better, than the average." Marjorie Grene

Ethics 57:76 O '46 800w

"The popular one-volume edition of Fuller's History has been much improved in response to suggestions and criticisms sent to the publishers. The changes are in the direction of brevity and clarity of exposition, with the arguments divided into more sections and an informative caption provided for each. The discussion of the pre-Socratics has been expanded to advantage, giving a more adequate preparation to the student for the ensuing chapters on Plato and Aristotle." D. S. M.

+ J Philos 42:718 D 20 '45 600w

FULLER, EDMUND. Star pointed north. 361p $2.75 Harper

Douglass, Frederick—Fiction 46-11801

Fictionized biography of Frederick Douglass, who was born a slave, but escaped to the North, and became a leader in the Abolitionist movement both in the United States and abroad.

"In a brilliant historical novel, Edmund Fuller has written the life of the great abolitionist, orator, and journalist, Frederick Douglass, which promises to be a forerunner of many books on unknown Negroes who have contributed so much to U.S. history." Peter Pollack

+ Book Week p2 N 24 '46 500w

Booklist 43:102 D 1 '46

"The author . . . has written with certitude and deep understanding of the aspirations and ordeals of the first American Negro to become a conspicuous leader of his people." W. K. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p15 D 14 '46 550w

"A biographical novel about the famous Negro abolitionist, Frederick Douglass, which reads more like history than fiction, but a pretty thrilling piece of history at that. The most vivid and engrossing part of the book deals with Douglass' life as a slave."

+ Kirkus 14:431 S 1 '46 120w

"This story follows facts closely and after a jerky beginning becomes absorbing as the author warms to his powerful theme. Highly recommended." L. D. Reddick

+ Library J 71:1464 O 15 '46 80w

"With his fast-moving, well-written, at times beautiful historical novel based on the life of Frederick Douglass, Edmund Fuller has performed a double service. He has bridged an aching gap in American history; and he has done this in a thoroughly enjoyable book in which a great man is handled with dignity and warmth, in which a Negro hero is treated as the American hero that he was." Saul Carson

+ N Y Times p7 N 3 '46 800w

"Mr. Fuller has done the Douglass story straight. He has an honest regard for the people and the period with which he deals, and the result is a warmly felt book, historically satisfying. Which is not to say,

FULLER, EDMUND—Continued

however, that it is without fault as a novel. The telling of the story, especially in the early portions, cannot be commended wholeheartedly. The dialect, as so often happens when one attempts to render it too literally, comes out heavy and awkward. Douglass's swift transformation from dazed slavery to an alert public figure is likely to leave an unsolved problem in the minds of some readers." Arna Bontemps

+ — Weekly Book Review p12 N 17 '46 800w

FULLER, MURIEL. Runaway shuttle train; pictures by Doratheia Dana. [58p] $2 McKay 46-3137

Gay nonsense story about the traffic situation in the world's largest city. The building of the shuttle was to solve difficulties, but because shuttle train no. 2 had its feelings hurt there was more trouble. For small children.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p13 Ap 28 '46 300w

Booklist 42:303 My 15 '46

"An entertaining explanation for the four tracks in the Shuttle, with only three trains running on them, that city children will enjoy, and that will amuse those who are not familiar with subways. The gay, free, full-color watercolors of Doratheia Dana enhance the jauntiness of the story."

+ Kirkus 14:174 Ap 1 '46 150w

"Recommended for the picture book age and third-grade readers." G. E. Joline

+ Library J 71:827 Je 1 '46 50w

"Both young and old who have ridden the shuttle trains will enjoy the gay, humorous story and its vigorous pictures." L. M. Palmer

+ N Y Times p36 Ap 14 '46 80w

Reviewed by K. S. White

New Yorker 22:134 D 7 '46 40w

Sat R of Lit 29:43 N 9 '46 50w

"These large pictures are in juicy colors that cannot be represented by black and white; they have New York atmosphere, whether of underground, park or harbor; that is, the atmosphere through which a young child sees New York. The combination of text and illustrations make it a good book to read aloud to a little child." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 21 '46 320w

FULOP-MILLER, RENE. Saints that moved the world: Anthony, Augustine, Francis, Ignatius, Theresa [tr. by Alexander Gode and Erika Fulop-Miller]. 446p il $3.50 Crowell 922 Saints 45-10541

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Booklist 42:199 F 15 '46

"The biographies of the five saints are exceedingly interesting, and also edifying if the legendary elements are taken as such. The author, following the pattern of the most pious hagiography and even less critical than Jacobus da Voragine in his Golden Legend, recites every legend as though it were well documented history." W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 63:175 F 6 '46 1700w

"Given such materials as are furnished by the lives of these highly dramatic characters and the rich proliferation of legend by which they are surrounded, it is impossible that a writer of Fulop-Miller's admirable gifts should not produce a book of great charm. The factual and the imaginative elements are in the subject matter, and the author makes effective use of both—not always distinguishing between them very clearly. But it would be an almost libelous belittling of his purpose to say that he was chiefly concerned with writing a delightful book, even though he is too good a literary artist to be indifferent to that. Nor was his primary objective the writing of accurate and unbiased history. The purpose is, indeed, evangelistic rather than aesthetic or scientific." W. E. Garrison

+ J Religion 26:299 O '46 1250w

"The special contribution which 'The Saints That Moved the World' makes to our understanding of five familiar and outstanding saints is in presenting their lives and miracles no whit watered down for a skeptical age, yet in terms of the modern historian and psychologist. The book should be of interest, then, both to the religious and non-religious reader. It is solid but not dull reading." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p20 Ap 28 '46 270w

"Francis of Assisi has often been discussed, but seldom well. Mr. Fulop-Miller's hundred-odd pages not only make the Poverello come alive but suggest his proper niche in Christian history. The art of building a biography around moments of inner decision has seldom been more skillfully practised, but even more important is one's constant sense that the author has lived with his subject and come to love him. . . . The other four saints . . . have always been the favorites of artists, and Mr. Fulop-Miller sometimes caters excessively to his knowledge of that fact. Nevertheless his essay on St. Anthony, despite the excursions into lore about Flaubert and Anatole France, is a very competent bit of hagiobiography. . . . This book has unity in spite of its five subjects. It is very readable, extremely well informed, and commendable except for its title, its cover, and its frontispiece. This triad of faults should, however, dissuade no one from enjoying the pleasure of the author's company." G. N. Shuster

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:30 F 23 '46 550w

"This work will be of interest to the general reader and at the same time will prove useful to historians, theologians, philosophers and psychologists. Not the least of its merits is the combination of scientific knowledge with literary skill. The book closes with an excellent bibliography and an index in which names are well represented, ideas sparsely."

+ U S Quarterly BkI 2:18 Mr '46 280w

FULTON, ALBERT RONDTHALER. Drama and theatre illustrated by seven modern plays; drawings by Richard Smith. 556p $1.90 Holt

822.08 Dramas—Collections. English drama—History and criticism. American drama—History and criticism 46-5323

The texts of seven modern plays, illustrating the transition from realism to comedy. Each play has an introductory essay. Contents: The second Mrs. Tanqueray, by A. W. Pinero; A well-remembered voice, by J. M. Barrie; Beyond the horizon, by Eugene O'Neill; Roger Bloomer, by J. H. Lawson; Street scene, by Elmer Rice; Our town, by Thornton Wilder; Blithe spirit, by Noel Coward. Glossary of stage terms.

"Charmingly illustrated by Richard Smith, this anthology is chiefly valuable for the brief essays on types of drama by the author." George Freedley

+ Library J 71:1208 S 15 '46 50w

"Though this volume is intended primarily for the student, it will reward every theatre-goer who enjoys reliving great Broadway evenings in his easy chair." C. V. Terry

+ N Y Times p8 J1 21 '46 140w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Weekly Book Review p21 S 15 '46 50w

FULTON, JOHN FARQUHAR. Harvey Cushing. 754p $5 Thomas, C.C.

B or 92 Cushing, Harvey Williams

Med46-151

"Biography of one of America's greatest brain surgeons, covering all aspects of his life, work, and personality. Dr. Fulton, a noted physiologist himself, who worked with Cushing at Yale, has drawn heavily on his subject's correspondence and painstaking diaries for his material." New Yorker

"The bibliophile, Charles Thomas of Springfield, Ill., has published the biography of a bibliophile surgeon, Harvey Cushing, a task that must have given him much satisfaction for it is a task well done." Peter Williamson

+ Book Week p18 D 8 '46 400w

"There is something in 'Harvey Cushing' for everyone. For the doctor it is an absorbing story of the growth of medical science through half a century. For the scientist it is a glowing tribute to the importance of 'pure' science in medicine and the way medicine, 'the mother of the sciences,' enriches all the rest. And for the lay reader it should be the finest of chronicles—the story of a great man and his times, each as they influenced the other." F. G. Slaughter

+ N Y Times p40 N 24 '46 800w

"A bulky, thorough, and readable biography. . . . The descriptions of some of Cushing's celebrated operations on the brain and spinal cord and of his discoveries in electro-surgery are so clear that even the layman can get an idea of the man's achievements. Photographs and many reproductions of little drawings and portrait sketches by Cushing that are surprisingly expert."

+ New Yorker 22:142 N 30 '46 120w

"Dr. John Fulton, a former student of Cushing and now the distinguished physiologist and medical historian of Yale University, has done a more than creditable job in putting this book together. The book breathes of the subject instead of the author—high tribute to the skill of a biographer." Milton Silverman

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 D 8 '46 750w

FURMAN, ABRAHAM LOUIS, ed. Second armchair companion. 351p $2.50 Lantern press
Short stories—Collections

"An anthology of recent fiction selected on the basis of entertainment. Culled from such divergent sources as Woman's Day, Collier's, Esquire, New Masses, Good Housekeeping, the Saturday Evening Post and Extension magazine, it is naturally highly varied both in subject matter and style." Springf'd Republican

Reviewed by Jack Conroy
Book Week p45 D 1 '46 230w

"Since magazines of this class have discovered what the public wants to read, or, more probably, have established a prescribed bill-of-fare for them, it is painful to see what a bad showing this collection makes. Stripped of their four-color illustrations, deprived of the facing panegyrics of advertising copy, without even the excuse of a dateline, these stories are flat, clichéd, and imitative one of the other. It is also painful to have to admit that, though the better-known authors produce more literate sentences, their aggregate meaning and message are no more perceptive than those of their less talented and successful anthology companions." B. V. Winebaum

+ N Y Times p16 J1 14 '46 400w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 J1 21 '46 170w

"'Second Armchair Companion,' like the first volume, should not only please busy readers in search of a few moments' relaxation but should also be of interest to students as a cross-section of modern short story writing." M. L. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 22 '46 440w

FURNAS, MARTHEDETH (MRS S. E. STAUFER), Serpent's tooth. 430p $2.75 Harper

46-2115

Picture of family life in a midwestern locale. The family is large, and all its ramifications are included, but the central character is Virginia. Her life from childhood to maturity is traced, showing the effect of an unloving mother on the growing girl, and later the woman.

"The book has a likeness to a family album and the fascination of one. Several generations, a varied lot of individuals, are presented with veracity and occasional humor against an authentic, detailed background. As Americana the book has high value even though one may quarrel with some of its observations. But as a whole it is not well organized nor well thought out for the narrative struggles against the family album." Dorsha Hayes

+ Book Week p4 Mr 3 '46 360w

Kirkus 13:531 D 1 '45 180w

"Crowded with detail and shaped by a rather startlingly urbane philosophy, 'A Serpent's Tooth' creates its own genuine world." Paul Griffith

N Y Times p8 Mr 31 '46 280w

"An original and interesting story. . . . Despite her occasional flights into an irritatingly mannered prose, Miss Furnas can write."

+ New Yorker 22:85 Mr 2 '46 80w

"'A Serpent's Tooth,' though hardly pleasant reading, is interesting and well thought out, giving the complete insight into the character of a family who, though they seemed ordinary to the world, lived in reality a strange, unreal and miserable life behind their elegant social front. It's recommended as required reading for all mothers who feel that children haven't a right to a normal, happy childhood, and also endorsed for those readers who are interested in psychology of children in novel form. However, it is hardly exciting enough in action to become a best seller, nor light enough reading to be popular, and so is likely to have rather limited appeal." H. L. Mitchell

Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 14 '46 290w

"'A Serpent's Tooth' suffers from a plethora of incidents used to prove one point, of characters used to complete one picture, of conversations used to underline one kind of relationship. The anger, hot in the author's heart, too often emerges in the book as waspish irritation. Yet the anger itself is bona fide. Miss Furnas hates injustice, meanness, all the cruel abuses which people inflict upon each other in their common living. So, although her novel is neither a well proportioned nor particularly moving piece of work, it is impressive for the fervor with which she probes into sham and the vigorous contempt in which she holds all self-delusion." Virgilia Peterson

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Mr 3 '46 900w

FYODROV, MICHAEL, Death my generation; an autobiography. 301p $3 Roy pubs. [12s 6d Jarrolds]

B or 92 46-7234

"A young cosmopolitan opportunist describes his boyhood in Russia, California and New York; his youth in Paris; and his unsuccessful career as an author in England." Library J

"A very frank record of a restless, sometimes ruthless young man, at times opportunistic, at times parasitic, but now reformed." Kirkus 14:339 J1 15 '46 120w

"Sordid and unimportant. Not recommended." Scott Adams

Library J 71:1204 S 15 '46 90w

Reviewed by Antony West

New Statesman & Nation 30:165 S 8 '45 700w

"Fyodrov has worked as an office boy, factory apprentice, mechanic, marine engineer, advertising manager, teacher of French and biology, salesman, journalist. But this tidy list of occupations does not add up to a full-blooded autobiography at 35. Thus Fyodrov—when his life story gets thin—pads out his book with outlandish capsule essays on flappers, communism, economics, international politics, penology, and, of course, Sex." John Richmond

N Y Times p66 O 6 '46 550w

"There is stuff for quite a few books condensed into one slender volume, and more than once the reader feels tempted to wish that the author had understood the old Roman wisdom of 'less would have been more.' Still, justice requires us to acknowledge that Mr. Fyodrov, while considering himself a true product of a cynical lost generation, keeps in the end the 'faith that within us are the seeds of a better nature and better life.'" F. C. Welskopf

+ Sat R of Lit 29:38 N 2 '46 850w

FYODROV, MICHAEL—Continued

"The glimpses of so many different atmospheres which this book affords make it more readable than most autobiographies."

Spec 175:446 N 9 '46 250w

"To what extent Mr. Fyodrov intended this essay in autobiography to be as instructive, indeed as revelatory, as in fact it is one cannot be sure. It has its interest, which is not always the interest he seems to have aimed at providing, but leaves no very pleasant impression."

Times [London] Lit Sup p465 S 29 '45 550w

"Once in a while in reading these pages you get the feeling that no character in this book (including the author) is intended to resemble any actual person, living or dead, and any such resemblance is purely accidental. But it doesn't matter." Marcus Duffield

Weekly Book Review p14 S 22 '46 500w

G

G. B. S. 90; aspects of Bernard Shaw's life and work, by Max Beerbohm [and others] ed. by S. Winsten. 271p $3 Dodd

B or 92 Shaw, George Bernard 46-5783

These tributes to Shaw on his ninetieth birthday vary in length and substance from a poem, two or three brief letters and greetings, to full length critical essays. Partial contents: Shaw's Irish boyhood, by M. J. MacManus; G.B.S.—social critic, by J. B. Priestley; Shaw's philosophy, by C. E. M. Joad; Shaw as dramatist (including a surrealist life of G.B.S.) by James Bridie; Shaw the scientist, by J. D. Bernal; Shaw as a theologian, by W. R. Inge; Bernard Shaw and economics, by Maurice Dobb; Shaw and education, by A. S. Neill; Shaw as a wit, by J. C. Trewin.

Reviewed by Bergen Evans

Book Week p5 Ag 4 '46 650w

Booklist 43:15 S '46

"This book does not add up to very much of anything; judging the original by the tributes, one would be inclined to wonder what all the furor was about. Everybody takes a little segment walks around it from the outside, feels it and handles it, like the story of the blind men and the elephant, and never gets to the total reality: the book comes out more fromage than homage." Rolfe Humphries

— Nation 163:356 S 28 '46 900w

Reviewed by Kingsley Martin

New Statesman & Nation 32:62 J1 27 '46 850w

"This book published on his ninetieth birthday is certainly not monotonous. Some contributors write better than others; two or three are specialists in branches of knowledge beyond the scope of the ordinary reader; but their combined efforts total up to an impressive demonstration of the immense influence which G. B. S. as a solitary dynamic force has exercised on the history and ideas of the world during his long and still active life." Michael Sadleir

+ N Y Times p3 J1 28 '46 2800w

"A birthday tribute from many hands, which manages to be somewhat stimulating in spite of the fact that the contents are not always on a very high level." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 22:66 Ag 24 '46 440w

"It is likely that a collection like this has not been published before, a book written to a man of genius by his contemporaries, so filled with honest admiration and adulation. There are one or two sour notes, however, or cabages among the wreaths of flowers. . . . But in the essays on most of the aspects of Shaw's life and work from his boyhood to his scenario writing, he emerges shining, like an aged crusading knight of the Holy Grail. If he is still capable of it, these encomiums should bring a blush to his hollow cheeks. They are, on the whole, amazingly well written, witty, urbane, and filled with a kind of transmuted ardor that seems to have been borrowed from the fire that their subject has kindled in sixty years of writing, pamphleteering, and speaking." Harrison Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 29:11 J1 27 '46 850w

Reviewed by Walter Allen

Spec 177:68 J1 19 '46 1000w

Theatre Arts 30:622 O '46 60w

"Mr. Shaw's ninetieth birthday evokes a work of tribute which is neither official nor unduly reverent. Something of his own extraordinary liveliness has spilled over to all these friends and admirers who, in spite of the highly commemorative nature of the proceedings, have succeeded in avoiding the note of historic monumentality and have given, instead, a few notes of truth." Vincent Sheean

+ Weekly Book Review p1 J1 28 '46 1500w

GABRIEL, GILBERT WOLF. Love from London. 314p $2.50 Macmillan

46-5530

Story of three young American soldiers in London, of their relationships with the cosmopolitan group that they find in a small Hungarian restaurant in Adelalde Square, and of their love for Dria, an evacuee from Gibraltar. The story is told chiefly from the viewpoint of an elderly English actor, Reggie Lightly.

"One can only wish that this book had been published a year ago, or two years ago, before the reading public, in a frenzy of ostrich psychology, decided that it was tired of literary war. For this novel is one of those rarities: a civilized story about the least civilized manifestation of humanity and its effect upon over-civilized people." Olive Carruthers

+ Book Week p8 Ag 11 '46 360w

"Buzz-bombs provide occasional stimulus to the action, and by the polyglot characters and the frequent philosophical discussion of American democracy, Mr. Gabriel apparently intended to give thematic weight to his tale. None of it, however, survives the self-conscious artificiality of the style and the essentially factitious plot." D. S.

Christian Science Monitor p14 S 7 '46 360w

"Verbal, sentimental, this is really quite dull."

— Kirkus 14:111 Mr 1 '46 130w

"Author, former New York dramatic critic, has an ornate and occasionally overripe style. Plot interesting enough, however, and blitz scenes have real descriptive power which carries conviction." E. F. Walbridge

+ — Library J 71:667 My 1 '46 140w

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 11 '46 550w

"Whether you care for this slight tale depends upon whether you like sugar and cream with your wartime stories or prefer them straight."

New Yorker 22:71 Ag 3 '46 80w

"There was a charm in London, war and all, now that you look back on it. Gilbert Gabriel, has caught some of it—not enough, but a sufficient amount to carry the reader through a rather improbable love story. . . . In part, Mr. Gabriel has written pure melodrama; the scene, for example, where a buzz bomb removes what until then had seemed an insoluble conflict, and his soldiers do not, unfortunately, quite come off. . . . If 'Love From London' has any merit, and it has, it is in its slightly musty and occasional Dickensian flavor, its gentle attempt to retell what is surely the most ancient plot in the world—and, strangely, make it interesting, make it absorbing." Jay Adams

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:28 Ag 3 '46 550w

"Through the very pleasant, almost nostalgic pages of 'Love From London,' the young love story of some American boys and a girl, even the dimmest eyes can perceive a dream walking—Gilbert Gabriel's dream of and plea for an America that he believes in and hopes still may come fully into being—despite our wavering course and our backslidings from the best that we know or can imagine about democracy at work. 'Love From London' does a big little job worth doing, and does it enticingly well." F. H. Bullock

+ Weekly Book Review p2 Ag 4 '46 1000w

GAINES, AUDREY. Omit flowers, please. 249p
$2 Messner

46-21109

Detective story.

Kirkus 14:362 Ag 1 '46 80w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p36 O 27 '46 180w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 3 '46
30w

GALL, MORRIS. Judicial decision and practical judgment. 95p pa $1.50 King's crown press

340 Judgment (logic). Appellate procedure
A46-3047

"A study concerned with the development of practical judgment which will be of aid to the educator who desires the development of his students' personal and social responsibilities." (School & Society) Bibliography. Index.

"This book undertakes a praiseworthy task—a study and evaluation of the process of appellate judicial decision with the objective of deriving methods and procedures useful for all types of practical judgments. Its shortcoming is that the author never actually tackles his problem."

Harvard Law R 59:1021 J1 '46 440w
School & Society 63:415 Je 8 '46 30w

GALLAGHER, BUELL GORDON. Color and conscience: the irrepressible conflict. 244p
$2.50 Harper

325.26 U.S.—Race question. Negroes. Race problems
46-6453

"Objective treatment of the race question for white and nonwhite by the Professor of Christian Ethics, Pacific School of Religion. Controversial matters are handled without kid gloves. Many surprises await the reader. Author believes that should we draw up accounts and strike a balance, an unexpected deficit would be revealed. Since the caste system based on color is an established part of American culture—a source of confusion to the Christian conscience—inclusive brotherhood found in the Gospel remains a challenge to Christians. Dr Gallagher presents and shows how to meet this challenge." (Library J) Index.

Am J Soc 52:380 Ja '47 20w

"This prophetic book surveys the whole momentous issue with scholarship and unanswerable logic." A. W. Taylor

+ Churchman 160:17 N 15 '46 300w
Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '46

Kirkus 14:218 My 1 '46 130w

"A readable book which should be in all libraries." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 71:1047 Ag '46 140w

Reviewed by Alfred Werner
Nation 163:477 O 26 '46 700w

Reviewed by George Streator
N Y Times p24 S 29 '46 600w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 30 '46
950w

"An excellent primer for Protestants on the race question." Carey McWilliams
+ Sat R of Lit 29:9 S 7 '46 1200w

Reviewed by Marshall Bragdon
Spring'd Republican p4d S 22 '46 850w

Reviewed by Lillian Smith
Weekly Book Review p12 O 20 '46
1100w

GALLICO, PAUL WILLIAM. Confessions of a story writer. 576p $3.75 Knopf

46-6952

This book by an American writer who began as a sports columnist on the New York Daily News, contains twenty-four short stories and excerpts from novels, together with something about how they came to be written. Preceding the stories is a short autobiography. Contents: McKabe; 'Twas the night before Christmas; Expense account; Tightwad; Flood; Flight; Penntifer's plan; The Roman kid; Oh, them golden mittens; Conneaut nights; Stopwatch; Crisis in London; Sanctuary in Paris; Thief is an ugly word; Did you see the coronation?; The subdeb and the glamourpuss; The witch of Woonsapucket; The great charity open; Testimony; The adventure of Joe Smith, American; The snow goose; The dowry; Verna; Welcome home.

Reviewed by Herman Kogan
Book Week p11 N 3 '46 400w
Booklist 43:102 D 1 '46

Reviewed by John Hay
Commonweal 45:125 N 15 '46 600w
Kirkus 14:501 O 1 '46 150w

"The manner is close to O. Henry, though Gallico is always more a melodramatist than humorist. The introductions (more than 50,000 words) constitute the autobiography and market guide of a conscientious and successful professional writer." H. W. Hart
Library J 71:1462 O 15 '46 80w

"What makes 'Confessions of a Story Writer' something other than just another collection of short stories is Mr. Gallico's commentary. This is interesting, human, detached and warm." Lewis Nichols
+ N Y Times p46 D 8 '46 600w

Reviewed by William Hogan
San Francisco Chronicle p33 D 1 '46
800w

Reviewed by Phil Stong
Sat R of Lit 29:19 O 26 '46 500w

"Mr. Gallico is a craftsman of high competence. His work is tightly dramatic, adept in dialogue, frankly constructed to entertain the mass public seeking to be entertained." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Ja 5 '47 450w

GALLOWAY, GEORGE BARNES. Congress at the crossroads. 374p $3.50 Crowell

328.73 U.S. Congress
46-7851

"An urgent plea for Congressional reform, replete with recommendations. Detailed analysis of the essential functions of Congress, historically considered, with competent description of the complicated workings of our legislative machinery. Shows how Congress today is neither organized nor equipped to perform effectively its main functions of determining policy, authorizing administrative organization and reviewing executive performance. Author is co-founder of National Planning Commission and chairman of the American Political Science Association's Standing Committee on Congress." Library J

Reviewed by E. T. Douglas
Book Week p2 Ja 5 '47 650w

"Dr. Galloway's book is the first comprehensive explanation of what Congress has done—and might still do. It suffers somewhat from having been compiled just before Congress voted to reform itself." R. L. Strout
Christian Science Monitor p22 D 6 '46
480w

"A great deal of material here, much of which has appeared in other books on Congress, some of which is tedious for the general reader to follow. The market will be restricted to students and persons actively interested in the history and practice of government." Kirkus 14:373 Ag 1 '46 170w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 71:1462 O 15 '46 90w

Reviewed by Will Maslow
New Repub 116:39 Ja 27 '47 470w

GALLOWAY, G. B.—Continued

"This book can stand a little streamlining. It contains many repetitions of factual information, some of them annoyingly contradictory—at one point the average size of a Congressional constituency in 1940 is given as 300,000, at another, as 190,000. But these are only minor flaws in this trenchant study of a compelling problem of American government." H. J. Bresler

N Y Times p6 N 17 '46 900w

"This book is as good as an encyclopedia on the American Congress. . . The book is written by a man who knows Congress, respects Congressmen, and has dedicated years to the study and improvement of our national legislative body." T. V. Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 29:12 D 14 '46 1600w

Reviewed by D. C. Coyle

Survey G 35:414 N '46 800w

"The factual part of Mr. Galloway's book is the more valuable. The book should be taken as a text by teachers in high schools, colleges and law schools." T. K. Finletter

+ Weekly Book Review p12 D 29 '46 1500w

GALT, TOM. Volcano; pictures by Ralph Ray. 102p $2 Scribner

46-3355

An authentic story of the birth and development of the Paricutin volcano in Mexico. It is told as the experiences of Perico, a village boy, who acted as guide to the tourists. For grades five to eight.

Book Week p21 Je 2 '46 250w

Booklist 42:320 Je 1 '46

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

Christian Science Monitor p14 O 17 '46 210w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '46

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 22:211 My '46 80w

"There is good background material as well as dramatic story in this. A distinguished book-making job."

+ Kirkus 14:198 Ap 15 '46 110w

"Recommended for ages 12-16." Gertrude Andrus

+ Library J 71:829 Je 1 '46 70w

Reviewed by K. S. White

New Yorker 22:144 D 7 '46 50w

"Drawings in black and white give a good sense of the Mexican background."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:45 Je 15 '46 40w

"The whole book, exciting as it is, is touching; fate has come down so heavily on these helpless people. They are of course evacuated to safe lands—but it is with deep sadness that they realize that from henceforward when people speak of Paricutin they will mean not a village but a volcano. These pictures are both dramatic and atmospheric; they have a wild beauty and heighten the sense of the incredible actually coming to pass. It certainly puts zip into geography." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 21 '46 410w

GAMBS, JOHN SAKE. Beyond supply and demand; a reappraisal of institutional economics. 105p $1.60 Columbia univ. press [10s 6d Oxford]

330.1 Economics, Veblen, Thorstein

A46-2666

The author "insists on the necessity of facing certain fundamental issues in economic thought before economists can make a valid contribution toward solving the dilemma of modern society. To that end he offers in this unpretentious book a 'reappraisal' of the economic theories of Veblen and the 'neo-Veblenites,' with especial attention to their methodology and to modern psychology." (Book Week) Bibliography. Index.

"He writes with the sureness and ease that come from genuinely clear thinking. He uses unostentatiously the results of exceptionally broad and thorough study. The historical importance of this little book I cannot predict; but I can testify that for one reader it provides an exhilarating and fruitful intellectual experience." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 Ag 25 '46 150w

Current Hist 11:330 O '46 30w

"An original and important book, clearly and entertainingly written." Eugene Forsey

+ Nation 163:413 O 12 '46 420w

"Physically it is so short that it can be read in an hour. Yet it is so condensed that one can hardly read it with understanding unless he is familiar not only with economic literature at least from Veblen to Mitchell and Keynes, but with Freud, the gestalt psychologists, Hegelian dialectic, the literature of scientific method and preferably much besides. . . Dr. Gambs's work is on a level of thinking to which few recent economic writers have attained, and it should be read by all social scientists as well as any others who have, or can familiarize themselves with, the background required to know what he is talking about." George Soule

+ New Repub 115:356 S 23 '46 950w

Reviewed by C. E. Ayres

Pol Sci Q 61:437 S '46 750w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:202 S '46 440w

GAMOW, GEORGE. Atomic energy in cosmic and human life; fifty years of radioactivity. 161p $3 Macmillan

541.2 Atomic energy

46-4869

"Author of Mr. Tompkins Explores the Atom, clearly explains modern nuclear physics. Physicist Gamow outlines fifty years' research in radioactivity. The three parts of the book compromise 'Modern Alchemy,' 'How the Stars Use Atomic Energy' and 'How Can Man Use Atomic Energy?' Author uses schematic drawings to clarify various nuclear processes for the reader. Two selections devoted to the atomic bomb are based on the official Smyth report, the administrative history of the atomic bomb project. Photographs of 'atomic explosions.' Last pages of the book are devoted to 'peaceful uses of atomic power.' Background of high school physics needed." Library J

Reviewed by Rufus Oldenburger

Book Week p5 Ji 21 '46 550w

Booklist 43:9 S '46

Bookmark 7:5 N '46

"The story of the wartime developments and the problems of nuclear explosions as well as the prognostications for peaceful applications makes fascinating reading. The figures, by the author, are an added attraction." M. E. Rose

+ Chem & Eng N 24:2702 O 10 '46 450w

"If anyone could make this thing clear to the ordinary reader, it would be Professor Gamow. He has the knowledge, and he has the gift. As to expertness, he is one of the top men in nuclear physics. . . But whoever approaches the present work in the spirit of gaiety inspired by Mr. Tompkins Explores the Atom and Mr. Tompkins in Wonderland is in for the same kind of disappointment that Queen Victoria had when she asked for Lewis Carroll's other books—and got them. In the book now under consideration, Professor Gamow lays aside the ingratiating mood, assumes that the reader has a serious desire to have his ignorance cured, and presents his pill without sugar-coating." W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 63:869 Ji 10 '46 1150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 S '46

Current Hist 11:229 S '46 70w

Kirkus 14:287 Je 15 '46 210w

"Recommended." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 71:404 Mr 15 '46 140w

Reviewed by Benjamin Harrow

Nation 163:163 Ag 10 '46 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:36 Ji '46

"Professor Gamow, a distinguished physicist, goes over much familiar ground in his popular book on atomic energy, and he does so with the ingenuity that he displayed in his earlier discussions of relativity and quantum mechanics. . . . Unlike most of the physicists who have written on atomic energy, Gamow indulges in no moralizing. In fact he does no more than hope that 'the best important achievement of atomic energy will lie in planetary exploration and not in human destruction.' Waldemar Kaempffert

+ N Y Times p10 J1 28 '46 650w

"Here is a book in the best tradition of popular writing on science; it is meant for the interested and intelligent layman, and it is written by a scientist who has himself made highly important contributions to the field he is describing. It is a book on atomic energy which does not concern itself at all with 'the problem of the atomic bomb,' and concerns itself very little with the atomic bomb itself. . . . Haste in the preparation of this book for publication is its only defect. Its proof errors have already been remarked. There is also a somewhat unconventional employment of hyphens and of articles, which might have been avoided if the manuscript had been gone over with such points in mind." L. N. Ridenour
+ Sat R of Lit 29:12 J1 6 '46 800w

"In this slim volume, whimsically illustrated by his own cartoons, Professor Gamow presents an excellent introduction to the subject of atomic energy."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:345 D '46 130w

"A book of basic principles in the new science of nucleonics, not written for entertainment, but more thought-provoking than any I have read in years." Gerald Wendt
+ Weekly Book Review p6 J1 21 '46 750w

GANN, ERNEST KELLOGG. Blaze of noon.
298p $2.75 Holt

46-25261

The early days of airmail transportation forms the background of this novel. It begins with the four MacDonald brothers and their stunt flying at county fairs, sometime after World war I. Then it describes their breakover into the business of flying the mail, their lives in the air in those difficult flying days, the deaths of two of the brothers, and the crippling of the third. Only one of the flying MacDonald's is left on his feet at the end.

"While lacking the subtlety and sustained tactics of first-rate fiction, 'Blaze of Noon' is ingeniously constructed, fluently deploying and interrelating numerous persons and various episodes. . . . The high points of the book, however, are concerned with crises in flying." Warren Beck

+ Book Week p3 S 15 '46 380w

Booklist 43:35 O 1 '46

+ Kirkus 14:307 J1 1 '46 170w

"Recommended." Mary Clark

+ Library J 71:127 S 1 '46 40w

"Mr. Gann is at his best in transporting you through a cumulo-nimbus cloud, or landing you at a fogged-in airport. When the youngest MacDonald and the Girl 'meet cute,' however . . . we know that the author has his eye cocked on Hollywood. From there on he sets his course somewhere between Buffalo, the airline terminus, and Southern California. The results, fortunately, are not as bad as they might be. Mr. Gann is too much of an old pilot himself to let romance interfere with the United States mail." David Dempsey
+ N Y Times p5 S 15 '46 360w

"Because he understands how to handle incident and plot, Captain Gann makes this an exciting story. And, of course, a yarn must have suspense and action to carry it, as he well knows. But for my money, at least, it's the background that counts." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 S 10 '46 750w

"As long as his men are in the air [Mr. Gann] makes them believable and admirable, and, incidentally, his prose improves and is sustained. It is when he attempts a landing that the trouble comes. He invariably lands in a field of corn." John Woodburn
+ Sat R of Lit 29:30 N 9 '46 850w

"A thoroughly readable story of men who 'lived with valor as with a mistress.' It will serve, for the time, as a monument to the heroic air era midway between the Wright's flying machine and the B-20. Some day it will be superseded by a great novel of the air." Richard Match

Weekly Book Review p8 S 15 '46 700w
Wis Lib Bul 42:151 N '46

GARD, ALEX. More ballet laughs [il. by the author] with an introd. by Walter Terry.
[79p] $2.50 Scribner

792.8 Ballet. Dancers. Caricatures and cartoons 46-5036

A revision, with some replacements and with the addition of new caricatures, of the author's Ballet Laughs, published 1941 (Book Review Digest, 1941).

"It's a good book to have, especially if one happens to be a balletomane, whom the artist also considers in passing." L. M.

+ Springfield Republican p6 J1 22 '46 220w

"Both pertinent and funny, without being actually malicious."

+ Theatre Arts 30:744 D '46 40w

GARD, ROBERT EDWARD. Johnny Chinook; tall tales and true from the Canadian West; il. by Walter Phillips. 360p $3.50 Longmans
917.123 Alberta. Legends—Alberta A46-3

"Anecdotes about old-timers, gold prospectors, Indians, the mounted police, dead shots, horses and memorable events in the short but colorful history of southern Alberta. Some are echoes of other frontier and tall tales, others have a definite local flavor. Gathered largely at firsthand from present-day inhabitants of the country." Booklist

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Book Week p5 D 16 '45 500w

Booklist 42:198 F 15 '46

Kirkus 13:196 My 1 '45 130w

GARDINER, DOROTHY. Beer for Psyche.
255p $2 Doubleday

Detective story. 46-4935

"Exaggerated, from nomenclature to red herrings"

— Kirkus 14:205 My 1 '46 80w

"Aside from the expert plotting, this story is notable for vivid characterization of an unharmonious family group." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p26 J1 21 '46 120w

New Yorker 22:80 Je 29 '46 70w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p19 J1 21 '46 50w

"Fantastically named and extra hard to kill clan, provide plenty of acrid humor, thrills and action in semi-believable but engaging yarn. Different."

Sat R of Lit 29:42 Je 29 '46 30w

Reviewed by P. H. Bickerton

Spring'd Republican p4d J1 14 '46 170w

"One cannot honestly state that Miss Gardiner's offering is a gem of wit and humor, or even that it is highly risible, but the author goes through the motions with such confidence and enthusiasm that it probably amounts to the same thing for mystery readers. At any rate, she doesn't annoy you with a lot of terror that wouldn't scare a fly and such stuff. We, therefore, recommend it for warm-weather perusal." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p26 Je 23 '46 270w

GARDINER, GLENN LION. When foreman and steward bargain. 194p $2 McGraw

658.3124 Foremen. Industrial relations 46-11268

"A book written to guide the foreman in developing and maintaining successful relations with union stewards—the most critical stage of collective bargaining. The treatment is based upon the latest developments in union relations, demonstrates to the foreman the important part he plays in the management team, and provides effective techniques and strategy for use in his daily relations with stewards. The book details the foreman's responsibility to management and how he may best handle the steward and the grievances which develop, emphasizing throughout the opportunities to develop good human relations in a unionized work-force through a constructive and cooperative relationship between foreman and steward." (Publisher's note) Index.

GARDINER, G. L.—Continued

Booklist 42:243 Ap 1 '46

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:56 Ja 1 '46 70w

GARDINER, HAROLD CHARLES. Mysteries' end; an investigation of the last days of the medieval religious stage. 142p $3 Yale univ. press

822.09 English drama. Religious drama. Miracle, morality and mystery plays A46-1583

"Father Gardiner's purpose in this essay is to treat fully of the reasons for the discontinuance of the medieval religious plays, particularly in England. In England, he asserts, the 'true and practically sole cause' of this cessation was the 'Reformation distaste for the religious culture of the past,' made operative by such figures as Cromwell and Cranmer as early as the reign of Henry VIII, and under Elizabeth completing the eradication of the plays from English life. . . This book is a work for specialists in the history of the late medieval drama, and necessarily omits the background which would make it appealing to a wider public." (Commonweal) Bibliography. Index.

"This is a valuable and scholarly addition to the literature on the emergence of the Elizabethan theater and its debt to the medieval religious stage. Everyone interested in this field should welcome Father Gardiner's clear and lucid summing up of a controversial subject. The book is a masterly résumé of an appalling amount of material, old books, records and archives. From these multitudinous sources a unified, straightforward and plausible story emerges—clearer and more satisfying than any other book I have read on this theme." M. C. Livingston

+ Cath World 163:280 Je '46 270w

Christian Century 63:1065 S 4 '46 240w

"Let this book be immediately and warmly commended as a fine piece of scholarship, and a work of rich interest to those who are familiar with the medieval religious drama, or who are concerned with the historical background of the Shakespearean stage." Granger Ryan

+ Commonweal 44:196 Je 7 '46 1100w

GARDNER, ALBERT TEN EYCK. Yankee stonecutters; the first American school of sculpture, 1800-1850; pub. for the Metropolitan Museum of art. 30p pl $4 Columbia univ. press [20s Oxford]

735.73 Sculpture, American. Sculptors

45-8846

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Reviewed by Fiske Kimball

Am Hist R 51:551 Ap '46 400w

"This illustrated book contains many explanatory allusions which are certainly not conveniently available elsewhere. It is an anecdotal rather than a systematic treatise, but contains much of the stuff from which such more fundamental treatises are made. It is a provocative essay on a period quite neglected by art historians because the statues which it produced do not have 'permanent' value. For socio-historical purposes, however, they have just that." J. H. Mueller

+ Am Soc R 11:374 Je '46 450w

"This excellent volume consists of a group of essays and a biographical dictionary of carvers of The First American School of Sculpture, 1800-1850. It is written with a critical understanding of American life and American taste. Poised and discerning is the commentary on outstanding sculptors, their ideals, their limitations, their economic motivation."

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 13 '46 140w

"This book is well documented, succinct and competently organized. As befits the period, it attempts no praise of the accomplishment. But it does restore to us the men who furnished many a gleaming page for Hawthorne's memento to his Italian days." Jerome Mellquist

+ Commonweal 43:557 Mr 15 '46 400w

"As originally intended, this book was to be merely a catalogue of such sculpture as the Metropolitan Museum had of the period. Fortunately, Mr. Gardner became so interested in the whole picture—the setting as well as the art—that a far more valuable publication resulted. It is probably a compliment to his writing to say that his readers will all of them probably wish that there were more than just twenty-one illustrations, and that they were tied somehow by reference numbers into the text. Several listings, a Biographical Dictionary of the School, and an index put the book on a businesslike footing." R. H. Kettel

+ New Eng Q 19:120 Mr '46 850w

"A sympathetic and quite human account of our initial gropings toward a native expression in the medium." Howard Devree

+ N Y Times p33 Mr 10 '46 320w

Times [London] Lit Sup p328 Jl 13 '46 850w

GARDNER, BURLEIGH BRADFORD. Human relations in industry. 307p $4 Irwin

658.3 Employment management. Industry—Organization, control, etc. Factory management 45-6092

"Burleigh Gardner began his research career by studying the structure of modern communities under the sponsorship of the Harvard group. Five years as an employee relations research director with the Western Electric Company gave him direct contact with industry at all levels. Now, as assistant professor of industrial relations at Chicago, he has written a book designed to guide the executive or prospective executive through the human problems of management. The emphasis is upon industrial relations activity as it actually works itself out in a given organization." Am Soc R

"Executives and students of management, to whom the book is primarily addressed on an introductory level, will get a better understanding of the social structure of industry by reading this book, and they will be impressed with the complexity of the problems of getting cooperation between groups and levels in the factory organization. But they are less likely to understand clearly how to handle those problems effectively." C. A. Myers

+ Am Econ R 36:457 Je '46 900w

Reviewed by E. D. Chapple

Am J Soc 52:277 N '46 800w

"This book coupled with W. Lloyd Warner's forthcoming The Social System of the Modern Factory should prove to be landmarks in the developing field of industrial sociology. . . The book emerges as an excellent elementary text for the training of executives. It should be especially influential in making the business man aware of the plant as a community within which he and his fellow workers live." Delbert Miller

+ Am Soc R 11:129 F '46 950w

Booklist 42:277 My 1 '46

Library J 70:1090 N 15 '45 70w

GARDNER, CURTIS T. Bones don't lie. 254p $2 Mill

46-21132

Detective story.

"Industrial item, and uninspired."

— Kirkus 14:361 Ag 1 '46 80w

"Flint is a novelty and the mechanical details of steel manufacture are endlessly fascinating—and deserving of a better story." Anthony Boucher

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 20 '48 50w

"High grade."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:40 N 30 '46 50w

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. Case of the backward mule. 250p $2 Morrow

Detective story. 46-18817

"Gardner's skill makes this fairly routine yarn run smoothly." Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p6 Ag 18 '46 140w

Booklist 43:71 N 1 '46

Kirkus 14:262 Je 1 '46 80w

"It is not likely that Clane will ever supplant Perry Mason in the affections of the Gardner fans, but he is an interesting character just the same." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p20 Ag 11 '46 140w

+ New Yorker 22:72 Ag 3 '46 110w

"Clane is an interesting try at a novel type of detective, fusing Western and Eastern civilizations; but I doubt if he will quite appeal to followers of either Perry Mason or Gerald Heard." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 11 '46 70w

"Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:30 Ag 3 '46 60w

Spring'd Republican p4d Ag 4 '46 180w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p12 Ag 4 '46 200w

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. Case of the borrowed brunette. 272p $2.50 Morrow

Detective story. 46-8195

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Book Week p18 D 8 '46 180w

Booklist 43:171 F 1 '47

Kirkus 14:438 S 1 '46 80w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p48 D 8 '46 140w

"Good, standard Gardner, with lots of lively court action."

+ New Yorker 22:136 N 16 '46 80w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p14 D 1 '46 50w

"Grade-A Gardner."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:40 N 30 '46 50w

"No doubt about it, Perry Mason fans are going to love this latest adventure of their hero, just as they have adored the other twenty-seven stories about the great criminal lawyer." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p39 N 17 '46 230w

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. D.A. breaks a seal. 217p $2 Morrow

Detective story. 46-25070

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p12 Mr 10 '46 80w

Booklist 42:227 Mr 15 '46

Kirkus 13:535 D 1 '45 80w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p31 F 17 '46 130w

"All alright, and less exasperating, on the whole, than would be a similar chronicle devoted to Perry Mason."

New Yorker 22:99 F 16 '46 80w

Sat R of Lit 29:32 Mr 9 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p20 F 17 '46 300w

GARDNER, HENRY ALFRED, and SWARD, GEORGE G. Physical and chemical examination of paints, varnishes, lacquers and colors. 10th ed 652p il $18.50 Henry A. Gardner laboratory, inc, 4723 Elm st, Bethesda 14, Md.

667.6 Paint. Varnish and varnishing. Lacquer and lacquering 46-6871

"Standard reference work, best book in its field for test methods in the paint industry revised to cover the advances of the last six years. . . Covers all the important test methods in organic coating, both current and experimental with detailed descriptions. 200 color charts include the charts used by the army and navy." Library J

"The tenth edition of this book is a very welcome sight to the chemists, chemical engineers, paint technicians, and other technically trained men of the organic coating industry and all the other related industries. Because of the war emergency, it has been out of print. The ninth edition has been used so frequently by the technical workers in the laboratories of the industries mentioned that it has become worn by constant use." J. J. Mattiello

+ Chem & Eng N 24:2288 Ag 25 '46 350w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

+ Library J 71:1332 O 1 '46 90w

GARDNER, MARY SEWALL. Katharine Kent. 298p $2.75 Macmillan

46-5164

In fictional form this is an account based on the author's own career, of thirty years of public health nursing in the United States.

"I believe public health nurses, health officers, and the 'lay' public concerned with community health will enjoy and greatly profit by reading this book, especially board and committee members. It is full of Miss Gardner's own sound philosophy and high ideals, gleaned from a very rich experience in public health nursing, locally, nationally, and internationally. It 'interprets' very successfully. I am a little doubtful whether student nurses—who should read the book—will stay with the author at all points. Some of the discussions dealing with organization are a little abstruse for those without experience, but the human interest in Katharine herself will carry all readers to the end. Those nurses now faced with the problem of help to the countries abroad following a second world war will find Miss Gardner's report of conditions overseas in 1921-1922 especially pertinent and timely. Because this book is excellent supplementary teaching material, this reviewer mourns the author's failure to 'name names.'" Dorothy Deming

Am J Pub Health 36:1170 O '46 600w

Booklist 43:17 S '46

Christian Century 63:991 Ag 14 '46 70w

"Career story interesting to serious-minded adolescent girls. Recommended." L. R. Miller

+ Library J 71:824 Je 1 '46 70w

"Why the author elected to present this story in the fictional form is difficult to decide; to this reviewer it seems an unfortunate choice. The facts presented lend themselves admirably to a factual account of public health nursing, through the experiences of one who was long and intimately concerned with its growth." F. G. Slaughter

+ — N Y Times p24 Jl 28 '46 500w

"Though the personal developments of Katharine Kent's life are an integral part of the story, inevitably a historical flavor predominates in this novel of the profession in which the author herself has played so active and leading a part. The book will be prized the more for that reason by the many nurses who, valuing Miss Gardner's judgment, will find here her way of interpreting and evaluating the role and course of their profession. For similar reasons, it should be read by the many lay members of boards and committees which public health nursing associations have developed to help their work to function appropriately in relation to the whole community."

GARDNER, M. S.—Continued

It should be exceedingly helpful in giving background and foreground to girls who are interested in nursing generally or in public health nursing in particular. And for the general reader it offers not only information on many situations of wide interest and importance but a smoothly told story." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 11 '46 850w
Wis Lib Bul 42:132 O '46

GARRETT, MRS EILEEN JEANETTE (LYT-TLE), and LAMARQUE, ABRIL. Man—the maker; a pictorial record of man's inventiveness. 116p $2.50 Creative age

609 Industrial arts. Science. Inventions
 46-7590

An attempt to portray, pictorially, the panorama of man's progress from the discovery of fire to the atom bomb. Many of the pictures are historical prints. The explanatory text is brief.

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn BK 22:473 N '46 100w

Kirkus 14:415 Ag 15 '46 80w

School & Society 64:120 Ag 17 '46 90w

"The book has a beautiful format, with its illustrations occupying the upper two-thirds of every page and the captions forming a running story. However, the text, although eloquently written, does not quite carry out the evident intention of the book. Perhaps it is too eloquent. We are given some inspiring generalizations, but often the reader is left wondering about the content of the drawing or photograph that fills most of the page." H. M. Davis

+ — Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 29 '46 380w
Weekly Book Review p24 S 29 '46 150w

GARRISON, KARL CLAUDIUS. Psychology of adolescence. 3d ed 355p il $4.65; to schools $3.50 Prentice-Hall

136.7354 Adolescence 46-6757

"In his third revision of the text, first issued in 1934 [Book Review Digest, 1934] and revised in 1940, Professor Garrison has added fresh material on the attitude, development and needs of adolescents, on heterosexuality, and on youth problems of today and tomorrow. The volume has a new format and has been completely reset. Another welcome change is the addition of a seven-page, concisely annotated bibliography of novels and other types of popular literature dealing with adolescence." (School & Society) Index.

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

+ School & Society 64:228 S 28 '46 200w

"This interesting and well-written book is equipped with a subject and an author index." R. T. Solis-Cohen

+ Social Studies 37:334 N '46 240w

GARRISON, WINFRED ERNEST. An American religious movement; a brief history of the Disciples of Christ. 167p $1.25 Christian bd.

286.6 Disciples of Christ 45-21135

"Fifteen years ago Dr. Garrison wrote a more comprehensive history of the Disciples under the title Religion Follows the Frontier. The present volume, while briefer, is not a condensation of the earlier volume but has been rewritten from a slightly different point of view. In the first volume Dr. Garrison was concerned with the influence of the frontier on shaping the life and thought of the Disciples; here he is equally concerned with the way in which the Disciples have grown up and matured with the country as a whole." J. Religion

"This volume of 156 pages, plus 11 pages of index, is easily the best little history of the Disciples of Christ, the largest religious body of American origin. It should have a good sale for many reasons—an important one being that there is no other history of the Disciples, large or small, now in print." A. T. DeGroot

+ Christian Century 62:1354 D 5 '45 700w

"This is a history of the Disciples for Disciples, but also for non-Disciples, a model of what a brief denominational history should be, written by one of the recognized authorities in the field of American church history." E. T. Thompson

+ J Religion 26:230 Jl '46 250w

GARST, DORIS SHANNON. Cowboy boots; il. by Charles Hargens. 191p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury

46-25286

A pair of cowboy boots and a horse—those were what Bob wanted most of anything in the world, but Bob learned on his uncle's ranch in California that a greater reward was to be called "cowboy" by Montana, the top hand.

Book Week p22 N 10 '46 140w

Booklist 43:58 O 15 '46

"This honestly written and readable story contains many sound hints for boys who want to know how a cowboy gains his skill."

+ Horn BK 22:353 S '46 90w

Kirkus 14:384 Ag 15 '46 50w

"Excellent picture of ranch life and good characterization. Middle-aged boys will feel that they have really been with Bob. Illustrations by Charles Hargens give added flavor and spirit to the book." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 71:1466 O 15 '46 70w

"In the whole process Bob gets a lot of character training, which doesn't detract at all from the fun and entertainment of the story." Frances Smith

+ N Y Times p28 O 27 '46 150w

"Shannon Garst, who knows her reading audience as well as she knows ranch life, has skillfully blended these constituents into a lively story that will be exciting and instructive reading to any would-be cowboy between the ages of 11 and 13. Charles Hargens' authentic illustrations lend further enjoyment to the book." Margaret Goodloe

+ San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 10 '46 80w

Sat R of Lit 29:52 N 9 '46 50w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p8 D 15 '46 320w

Wis Lib Bul 42:153 N '46

GARST, DORIS SHANNON. Scotty Allan, king of the dog-team drivers; il. by Dan Sweeney. 238p $2.50 Messner

B or 92 Allan, Allan Alexander—Juvenile literature 46-2625

Fictionized biography of Scotty Allan, the Scottish shepherd boy who came to America in his youth, and became known as "the best dog musher of the North." Contains material about Eskimo dogs and gold rush days in Alaska, and a chapter on the first K9 units. For grades six to nine.

Booklist 42:284 My 1 '46

"Single incidents in the book are exciting and well-told, but all in all, it is a patchy job, carelessly written and poorly organized. And yet the story of Scotty Allan is a fascinating one. A little Scot, who at 19 brought a prize Clydesdale stallion to South Dakota, and then stayed there, he ultimately earned the title of 'King of the Dog Team Drivers' in Alaska. . . . Swell material which deserved a more finished presentation."

+ — Kirkus 14:71 F 1 '46 170w

"Recommended." G. E. Joline

+ Library J 71:589 Ap 15 '46 100w

"Since Scotty Allan's life was compounded of the best elements of a dog story and an adventure tale, it is a grand subject for a biography for young people. Mr. Garst writes briskly, vividly."

+ N Y Times p18 Mr 31 '46 90w

"His story as Shannon Garst tells it is an American saga. This indomitable little Scotsman belongs with the heroes of North America." M. G. D.

Sat R of Lit 29:40 My 18 '46 400w

GARST, DORIS SHANNON. Sitting Bull; champion of his people; il. by Elton C. Fax. 189p $2.50 Messner

970.2 Sitting Bull, Dakota chief—Juvenile literature 46-7379

"This fictionalized biography of Sitting Bull is a moving account of his adventurous boyhood, his growth to power among his people, his growing uneasiness with the coming of increasing numbers of white settlers, and his valiant but futile fight for the rights of the Indian. The way of life among the Sioux is well portrayed and the injustices and indignities to the Indians by the white man are fairly presented. Grades 7-9." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:89 N 15 '46

Kirkus 14 392 Ag 15 '46 90w

"Not as smooth writing as we have come to expect in modern biographies. In spite of the fact that many parts read like a mere chronicle of events, the subject is so intriguing it will prove useful to many 9 to 12 year old boys and a few girls. Good picture of the white man's treatment of the Indian. . . Well-documented." F. W. Butler

+ Library J 71:1719 D 1 '46 80w

"Mrs Garst tells the shameful story of our Indian relations without heat, but she applies no whitewash. The result is a moving tale with the authentic ring of truth." N. B. Baker

+ N Y Times p11 D 29 '46 180w

GEARON, JOHN. Velvet well. 197p $2.50 Duell 46-5163

Mystery story.

Kirkus 14:284 Je 15 '46 110w

"A frenetic and improbable spy-cum-murder tale."

New Repub 115:86 J1 22 '46 20w

"The story has a nightmarish quality which enhances the terror and suspense." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p28 Je 16 '46 150w

"Things get tense indeed, so much so that even the hardest reader may find himself breathing heavily at the end. Well plotted, too."

+ New Yorker 22:96 Je 15 '46 60w

"One of the most impressive novels of the pursuit school to appear in years." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 J1 4 '46 70w

"Good!"

+ Sat R of Lit 29:52 Je 22 '46 20w

"If the narrator seems overwrought in spots, even running to italics for a whole chapter, well, that's in character. He's nervous." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p18 Je 16 '46 230w

GEDDES, DONALD PORTER, ed. Franklin Delano Roosevelt; a memorial. rev ed 229p il $3 Dial press

B or 92 Roosevelt, Franklin Delano 45-10304

Six days after the death of President Roosevelt a memorial volume, paperbound, was for sale. The present volume is basically the same book, in more durable form, with the addition of many Roosevelt photographs, and an index.

"It is testimonial to Geddes' original work that the new edition, seven months after the event, still seems spontaneous, in excellent taste, and surprisingly comprehensive." Willard Shelton

+ Book Week p3 D 16 '45 450w

Booklist 42:229 Mr 15 '46

"As good a memento as one could obtain of the widely beloved late President."

+ Commonweal 42:101 My 11 '45 50w (Review of paper ed)

School & Society 61:303 My 5 '45 10w (Review of paper ed)

GEIRINGER, KARL. Haydn, a creative life in music. 342p il $5 Norton

B or 92 Haydn, Franz Joseph

"This Haydn biography, the work of a devoted fellow-Viennese now living in America, is the standard single-volume authority in any language. Divided into two main parts—the Life and the Works—provided with a full bibliography and an admirable index, it is well-arranged for quick reference." Library J

"In many respects the most valuable section of the book is the account of Haydn's work. As a former curator of the archives and collections of the Vienna Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde, Dr. Geiringer had invaluable opportunities for research there and in Austria generally, including the collection of Haydn's manuscripts in the library of the Princess Esterhazy at Budapest." Felix Borowski

Book Week p4 N 24 '46 550w

"A monumental, learned piece of research and a needed contribution to music literature by the curator of the Society of Friends of Music in Vienna."

+ Kirkus 14:371 Ag 1 '46 120w

"In the lively section of the Life, the balance is exceptionally well handled between the setting . . . and the dramatic personae. Includes excellent material on the early piano sonata, string quartet and symphony." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 71:1462 O 15 '46 140w

"Its author, formerly curator of the Society of the Friends of Music in Vienna, has had access to all the Haydn material which has been recently collected, and the result of his researches is the first well-rounded, complete, and accurate biography of this composer so far offered the American public. It is charmingly written, very well documented, but avoids minutiae of scholarship." A. V. F.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 D 22 '46 130w

"It would be unjust to judge Geiringer's book from [its] shortcomings. This is the only up-to-date biography of Haydn in the English language, for which we must thank Mr. Geiringer, one of the few scholars who have devoted themselves almost exclusively to the study of this great master. He has not only collected all the new data that have cast light on Haydn research, which has been in such a jumbled state for so long; he has also contributed many valuable observations and ideas." Erich Hertzmann

+ Sat R of Lit 30:33 Ja 25 '47 850w

"The biography is a service, if not an addition, to our personal knowledge of the little man in the periwig who worked up from nothing, always did what was expected of him and in his old age found the pinnacle of his art and his fame. The second half of the book (and it is literally half) is a true contribution to the knowledge of his music." J. N. Burk

+ Weekly Book Review p34 N 24 '46 800w

GEIRINGER, KARL. Musical instruments; their history in western culture from the stone age to the present; tr. by Bernard Miall. 278p il $4 Oxford [25s Allen, G]

781.91 Musical instruments 45-10303

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"Dr. Geiringer has approached the task of discussing this subject from a new angle for, instead of dealing with each instrument separately, he has divided his book into chronological periods and gives the reader information as to the standing or development of the instrument at that particular time. The author, in pre-Hitler days, was the custodian of the fine collection of the Society of Friends of Music, Vienna, and now is professor of music at Boston University. His qualifications for creating such a book as that under review are unquestionable." F. B.

Book Week p21 Ap 14 '46 140w

"Will be restricted in its appeal largely to musicians. It traces the history of musical instruments from pre-history and antiquity to the present." L. A. Sloper

Christian Science Monitor p14 F 2 '46 40w

GEIRINGER, KARL—Continued

"I do not think this work has much to offer in the way of originality, but it has the rather negative and utilitarian merit of being more limited in scope than Dr. Sachs's monumental work. Dr. Geiringer has limited himself to the musical culture of the Western World, whereas Dr. Sachs embraced Oriental cultures also. This gives to the present work a certain advantage of unity and conciseness. It is, moreover, the work of an able and conscientious musical scholar who has produced an accurate and reliable manual. Particularly commendable are the numerous and well-chosen illustrations, and a clear and useful introductory chapter on the acoustics of musical instruments." Gilbert Chase

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:19 Ja 26 '46 400w

GEISSMAR, BERTA. Two worlds of music. [Eng. title: Baton and the jackboot]. 327p il $3 Creative Age [15s Hamilton, H.]

B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Music—Germany. Music—England 46-7443

"Berta Geissmar's two worlds of music are prewar Europe and the Europe of Hitler, the world of freedom and the world of regimentation. Born in Mannheim of a cultured Jewish family, Dr. Geissmar has devoted her life to music, as general secretary first to Wilhelm Furtwängler and, after her forced departure from Germany, to Sir Thomas Beecham. She gives a vivid account of the contrast between the two systems as it affected musical artists." (Christian Science Monitor) Index.

"This book will undoubtedly add fuel to one of the warmest controversies of the postwar musical world, that over the war record of Furtwängler. Dr. Geissmar, a keen admirer of her chief, is not an unbiased witness. She defends the conductor's course, insisting that he remained in Hitler Germany because he hoped by so doing to preserve a musical heritage which otherwise might have been wiped out." L. A. Sloper

Christian Science Monitor p23 N 9 '46 800w

"The book is full of ridiculous bewailings of everyone's early blindness to the evils of the Nazi—but only a few were blind, including Doctors Geissmar and Furtwängler." Leonard Burkatt

— Library J 71:1204 S 15 '46 140w

"We are given a remarkably intimate account of musical and social conditions in Germany just before the war and in England during the war... The only serious fault in this extraordinary narrative is an occasional superabundance of detail. The essential material is far too good to be clogged in any way." G. A. H.

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 My 3 '44 300w

"Her story is fascinating to the amateur of music; it is full of the sort of back-stage international gossip about music and musical personalities which austere persons deplore and the rest of us eagerly devour... Considerable as is the musical interest of Dr. Geissmar's book, however, it is outweighed by the political and the psychological. No sooner did the Nazis come to power than they started a long cat-and-mouse game with the Jewish secretary of the Berlin Philharmonic; she escaped physical ill-treatment, but endured every other kind of humiliation, and the confiscation, over long periods, of her passport. All this she relates in great detail and in good English; but even more interesting than her own tribulations is the portrait which she paints of that unwilling 'collaborator,' Dr. Furtwängler." Desmond Shawe-Taylor

+ New Statesman & Nation 27:424 Je 24 '44 1200w

Reviewed by Robert Pick
Sat R of Lit 30:34 Ja 25 '47 900w

"An instructive and entertaining book... Dr. Geissmar relates with dignified resentment but unflinching good humour and vivacity all the penalties and injuries unscrupulously imposed by the Nazis, and describes with great tact and loyalty to him the difficult position of Furtwängler, who struggled hard to remain an artist as well as a German, but in the end was overwhelmed by the difficulties of his situation... Dr. Geissmar was lucky in finding a similar position in England as secretary to Sir Thomas Beecham, and the stories she tells of her association with that brilliant and erratic personality are among the most entertaining chapters in her book."

+ Spec 172:344 Ap 14 '44 270w

Times [London] Lit Sup p189 Ap 15 '44 850w

GEORGE, WILLIS DE VERE. Surreptitious entry. 214p il $2.50 Appleton-Century

351.74 Secret service—U.S. 46-11827

A government agent who has obtained proofs of guilt of such criminals as narcotics smugglers, kidnappers, and enemy agents, describes here some of his methods used on big cases. During the war he was an undercover man in Naval intelligence.

Booklist 43:112 D 15 '46

"A government agent tells his story of specialization in adventure and excitement in which crime can be countered by authorized but unrecognized crime. A unique career and the secrets of the trade, which should appeal to grown up Rover Boys."

Kirkus 14:537 O 15 '46 120w

"This is all first-rate spy stuff, fast moving and with the extra thrill that comes from knowing what you read is just the plain truth. Mr. George ought to do a sequel, really. It doesn't seem possible that he has used up all his material on this single volume." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 19 '46 550w

GERMAINE, INA MAY, ed. Design for decoration. 163p il $4 McBride

747.88 House decoration 46-5078

"Articles on house decoration and furnishing are contributed by various specialists with copious illustrations. All rather on the over-elaborate order; interesting to look at; hardly to be followed in the average home." Wis Lib Bul

"The standard is luxurious, with too many nonessentials for people of modest means, but the pictures show what can be done with money and with good taste, either modern or traditional. For those who desire no drastic changes but who delight in the fresh effects that may be obtained with a few pieces of furniture or mere decorative accessories many suggestions are offered... This attractive magazine-size book contains a fund of advice that is sound and comprehensive if rather high-flown." D. B. B.

+ Springfield Republican p6 Je 3 '46 70w

"As the record of a period from which the best can be selected for the future, the book amply justifies its existence." Richardson Wright

+ Weekly Book Review p15 Ag 25 '46 90w
Wis Lib Bul 42:112 J1 '46

GERMAINE, INA MAY. Handbook of color and how to use it in your home. 108p $3 McBride

747 House decoration. Color 47-131

"Rules of color harmony simply stated and applied directly to home decorating. Useful color chart of 24 basic colors and their grayed tones form the basis of complete color schemes. Special instructions on mixing paints with formulas and the most commonly used pigments are listed together with 65 of their derivative color tones. Chapters on painting furniture and estimates for wallpaper and paint." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1627 N 15 '46 70w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p26 D 1 '46 150w

GERVASI, FRANK. To whom Palestine? 213p
$2.50 Appleton-Century

956.9 Palestine—Jewish-Arab problem. Zionism 46-658

The author, an American journalist who has studied the Palestine question for several years, here presents what he considers the principal arguments for and against the establishment of a Jewish national state in Palestine. In a "personal" foreword he acknowledges his lack of objectivity and impartiality and affirms his belief in the justice of the Jewish claim.

"Despite occasional poor organization of material and some superficial analysis, Mr. Gervasi's sincerity and journalistic style should make this little volume attractive as well as informative to the general reader." A. P. Fernbach

+ — Am Pol Sci R 40:1025 O '46 380w

"The book, with its highly readable style, attempts in too short a space to give all three sides of the question—Jewish, Arab, and British—and then to balance these three against one another to see which emerges with the weight of justice and morality on its side. Probably justifiably, the British come out a bad third; but it is in the weighting of the Jewish and Arab sides that the book shows its greatest weakness." J. R. Randall

+ — Ann Am Acad 248:279 N '46 400w

"To Whom Palestine?" is excellent pamphleteering. Whether its partisanship is an advantage or drawback is a question. In some ways it is similar to Tom Paine's equally biased document, 'Common Sense.' It has the force of simple, convincing language and the power of moral conviction. Whether it will open the eyes of the world to the need for a just solution of the Palestine problem is another matter." David Karno

+ Book Week p6 F 24 '46 950w

Reviewed by Jabir Shibli

— Cath World 163:89 Ap '46 450w

Christian Century 63:433 Ap 3 '46

"Mr. Gervasi does not pretend to be 'objective.' He openly denounces 'objectivity' in the face of human suffering. Yet despite his emotional attachment to one side in the five-cornered struggle he succeeds in presenting a comprehensive analysis. . . His study contains much factual evidence and may be called one of the most informative and thought-provoking of all the more recent books on the Palestine problem." E. S. P.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 9 '46 600w

"Among the books written by non-Jewish authors upon this theme, this one will occupy a place of distinction. It can be heartily recommended as objective, as authoritative, and as persuasive in its pleading for a magnificently humane cause." K. M. Chworowsky

+ Churchman 160:17 S 1 '46 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '46

Foreign Affairs 24:755 Jl '46 100w

"A highly informative but volatile vindication of Jewish claims, which is perhaps too emotional to be objective. Controversial." Kirkus 13:554 D 15 '45 250w

"The book is an ardent presentation of all the arguments on his side, and a too easy refutation of all possible objections. For a soberer, more restrained, and no less deeply felt statement of the Zionist case, I should prefer the late Abraham Revusky's 'Jews in Palestine.'" B. D. Wolfe

N Y Times p33 Mr 10 '46 900w

New Yorker 22:88 F 23 '46 80w

"To Whom Palestine?" is a disturbing and challenging document written by an author who combines with the flair of the newspaperman intellectual integrity." Kurt Weinberg

+ Sat R of Lit 29:25 Mr 16 '46 950w

Reviewed by L. O. Kattsoff

Social Forces 25:231 D '46 950w

"Mr. Gervasi covers the whole ground, not exhaustively but competently. Perhaps he takes in a little too much territory; his discussion of the international aspects of the Near Eastern question is, in some respects, confusing rather than convincing. But the author has accomplished his avowed purpose well. He has set forth the Palestine issue in all its complexity, and he has made an impressive presentation of his central thesis." H. W. Baehr

+ — Weekly Book Review p3 Mr 3 '46 500w

Wis Lib Bul 42:85 Je '46

GESELL, ARNOLD LUCIUS, and others. The child from five to ten. 475p $4.50 Harper

136.7 Child study 46-6211

Study of the important steps in the development of the child's life, during the years from five to ten. The distinctive traits of each year are brought out. The volume supplements an earlier one: Infant and Child in the Culture of Today (Book Review Digest 1943). For both parents and teachers. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Gerald Hill

Book Week p6 Ag 18 '46 360w

Booklist 43:5 S '46

Bookmark 7 3 N '46

"Rewarding, for parents and teachers. . . This should prove a most welcome aid."

+ Kirkus 14:218 My 1 '46 130w

"Highly recommended." A. I. Bryan

+ Library J 71:822 Je 1 '46 90w

Reviewed by Catherine MacKenzie

N Y Times p6 Ag 11 '46 1150w

New Yorker 22:101 S 7 '46 120w

"Though written for the student the authors have managed to set down their findings in fairly simple form. The intelligent layman, I should say, can learn much from the book, and I think a good many parents will." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 13 '46 650w

Wis Lib Bul 42:162 D '46

GHISELIN, BREWSTER. Against the circle. 87p $2 Dutton

811 46-1751

Collection of poems by an American author and painter, who is now assistant professor of English at the University of Utah.

"Its too soon to say whether this young man will join the cataleptic school of modern poets who express what they have to say in spasms and rigidity, often quite effective; or whether his not inconsiderable lyric gift will determine his later work. But he is someone to watch." Kirkus 14:85 F 15 '46 80w

"Mr. Ghiselin is a painter, too, and this is perhaps a clue to both his weakness and his strength as a poet. He has a sensitive eye, and most of the poems in this volume are careful observations of sensuous detail expressed with precision and taste. For he has a sensitive ear as well, and he has encouraged it with an evident study of prosody. He lacks, however, the passionate conviction that makes competent poetry meaningful." Claude Fredericks

+ — N Y Times p37 Mr 31 '46 320w

"The best in this book is a poetic achievement of no mean quality; the weaknesses I am sure Mr. [Ghiselin] will master or outgrow. For all his experimenting, he is at heart a traditionalist—and of the high tradition of fine and enduring poetry." S. H. Hay

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:11 Mr 23 '46 400w

GIBBINGS, ROBERT. Blue angels and whales; a record of personal experiences below and above water; with ill. by the author. 153p $3 Dutton [12s 6d Dent]

597 Fishes. Coral reefs and islands 46-11826

"The author of 'Sweet Thames Run Softly,' 'Coming Down the Wye,' and 'Lovely is the Lee' now takes his drawing board underwater to represent the weird, colorful life that builds and inhabits the reefs of Tahiti, Bermuda and the Red Sea. His personal observations through the window of a diving helmet are interspersed with local anecdotes and quotations from professional naturalists. Many of the drawings were made on sheets of celluloid-like xylonite on the floor of the ocean; this technique unfortunately precluded the use of color, which is so salient a feature of tropical marine life." (Commonweal) Bibliography

GIBBINGS, ROBERT—Continued

Reviewed by E. D. Branch
Book Week p5 N 24 '46 400w
Booklist 43:113 D 15 '46

Reviewed by Eric Forbes-Boyd
Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 11 '46
420w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '46

"Gibbings' approach is essentially that of the amateur, seeking not so much to satisfy his readers' curiosity as to stimulate interest in a fascinating hobby; he does not, for example, caption his graceful drawings of individual fish and growths, although these can sometimes be identified from the text." David Burnham
+ Commonweal 45:213 D 6 '46 200w

"Another lovely book—and a surely popular gift book which his earlier readers will want."
+ Kirkus 14:532 O 15 '46 120w

Reviewed by M. C. Manley
Library J 71:1539 N 1 '46 70w

"Gibbings has the art in him to make delightful a variety of excursions, and some of that art is evident here. But on the whole the book is a hodge-podge, with notebook entries, anecdotes which do not always have much point, and quotation after quotation from books and memoirs of those who went before him. . . Only occasionally are there flashes of the Gibbings who made so many friends with 'Lovely Is the Lee.' As when he likens the ease and grace of fish in the water to the grace of birds in the air. . . The Gibbings illustrations are all in black and white, and a good many of them are rather conventional. One is reminded of the vivid color in the pictures Chris Olsen painted under water off Bermuda and off the Florida Keys, but the present examples fail to catch that mood. It's a bit like writing a book on rainbows and gems and illustrating it in black and white." Hal Borland
N Y Times p56 N 17 '46 450w

"Readers are entitled to expect luminous prose from Robert Gibbings, and in this, as in his other books, they will not search in vain. The haunting sentence is to be found here and there throughout the text; a paragraph or two may comprise so terse and enchanting a description that its spell expands, to tempt one to turn back and to read the pages again. . . Unfortunately, these high spots prove, in flintlock language, to be only flashes in the pan. They are certainly not followed by any sustained fire of musketry." R. C. Murphy
Weekly Book Review p32 D 8 '46
700w

Wis Lib Bul 42:165 D '46

GIBBONS, STELLA (MRS ALLAN BOURNE WEBB). Gentle powers [Eng. title: Westwood; or, The gentle powers]. 335p $2.75 Dodd [10s 6d Longmans]

46-7633

Margaret Steggles, a young English school teacher held down by her mother, longs for a fuller life. When she finds a ration book belonging to the wife of a famous artist, and returns it, she is drawn into a different kind of life which fills her with enchantment at first. But disillusionment follows.

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock
Book Week p3 N 17 '46 500w
Booklist 43:102 D 1 '46

"Done with perception and irony it is a tale of contemporary English life that has warmth and charm plus a memorable style." Andrea Parke
+ N Y Times p22 O 20 '46 270w

"It is a credible, and even intelligent, picture of people who are more preoccupied with their own concerns—love affairs, jobs, and housekeeping problems—than with the tragedy of war."

New Yorker 22:115 O 26 '46 90w

"'Cold Comfort Farm' devotees will be disappointed. By now, Miss Gibbons must suffer from this constant deprecating comparison, like a mother with one unusual, precocious offspring who continually overshadows the quiet, worthy members of her brood. . . Since 'The Gentle Powers' is quiet and competent, it is perhaps ungrateful to expect more." R. C. Benét
Sat R of Lit 29:43 N 2 '46 650w

"The book is, an excellent study in growth. Margaret, however, is Miss Gibbons's one solid character here: the rest are sketches, often shrewd and generally amusing (though the playwright comes near burlesque at times), but conceived less as human beings than as necessary figures in a planned landscape. The scene is London in war-time; the news, the dangers and the discomforts are there, but they are not allowed to dominate the story."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p561 N 16 '46 320w

"'The Gentle Powers' is a lively and sensitive novel, deceptively easier to read than to interpret, full of neatly drawn portraits, wise observations and an occasional fearless factualism. . . There is something both refreshing and oddly disconcerting about these war-time novels as, one after another, they come out of post-war England. They do not exalt war; still less do they debunk it as an earlier generation of novelists did after ten years of waiting. Their attitude is at once less definite and more damning; it is almost as if they are at pains to snub the war, as part of the only English recipe for making victory civilized." James Hilton
+ Weekly Book Review p3 O 13 '46 650w

GIBBS, LELAND EDWARD. Cold working of brass; with special reference to cartridge (70-30) brass. 104p il $2 Am. soc. for metals
673 Metal work. Brass 46-4613

"In part, this book covers a subject in which the technical literature is deficient; the cold working of copper alloys, the difficulties encountered, and remedial suggestions. One alloy only, 70% copper and 30% zinc, is considered, but that alloy is widely used for deep drawing purposes. The relationship between cold working, heat treatment, and grain size is adequately discussed, and the importance of the latter in connection with further cold working is emphasized. . . The manufacture of 20 mm. cartridge cases is used as an example of deep drawing, and the various stages of manufacture including deep drawing, annealing, and the microstructure at various locations in the cartridge are discussed at length." U S Quarterly Bkl

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '46

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:56 Ja 1 '46 70w

"The subject is well covered from a metallurgical viewpoint. There is, however, little information on the mechanical processes or types of machines or equipment used. Several pages of color photomicrographs are included in the book."

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:156 Je '46 240w

GIBBS, SIR PHILIP HAMILTON. Through the storm. 369p $2.75 Doubleday [10s 6d Hutchinson]

46-2641

Story of three New Englanders, the Hambletons, all of whose lives are changed by the war. One of the brothers who was in Paris before the fall of France, joins the Maquis; the pacifist brother joins the American army after Pearl Harbor; and their sister joins the Red Cross.

"The book serves a good purpose in reminding us that at no time during the war were most Americans too sure of just what it was they were fighting for. It's diverting reading for those who like a comfortable sprinkling of current events in their fiction." E. D.
+ Book Week p19 Mr 31 '46 140w

Cath World 163:284 Je '46 200w

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 23 '46 450w

"The characters are types—the plot is familiar formula, maintaining the dull realism of previous opf."

—Kirkus 14:44 F 1 '46 190w

Reviewed by E. V. Winebaum

N Y Times p26 Ap 21 '46 120w

"It's a good old reliable record Sir Philip has put on, and if the familiar tune sends you into a mild doze, it will, on the other hand, do you no harm."

New Yorker 22:89 Mr 30 '46 120w

Reviewed by John Hampson

Spec 175.92 Jl 27 '45 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p365 Ag 4 '45 360w

"Philip Gibbs has elected to place his story against a chronologic background, from the break-through of the Germans at Sedan to the fighting around Aachen. That he had done such a good job of it is a tribute at least to his energy. 'Through the Storm' does not soar, but it certainly travels. . . Too often on the page, however, Mr. Gibbs' writing lies flat—a virtue in toothpaste but not a merit in print." George Conrad

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Ap 21 '46 500w

GIBBS, WILLA. Tell your sons; a novel of the Napoleonic era. 525p $3 Farrar, Straus

Napoleon I, emperor of the French—Fiction 46-7450

Long historical novel based upon the times of Napoleon, and taking as its central point the personal hold which Napoleon had over the men and women connected with him. A young French lieutenant of good family, Paul d'Aunay is the chief character. The story traces Paul's career in love and war, as he follows his revered leader, Napoleon

Reviewed by E. K. Leisy

Book Week p2 N 17 '46 360w

Booklist 43:86 N 15 '46

Christian Science Monitor p16 N 16 '46 600w

"I liked this as well as any novel of the Napoleonic era that has come this way for some time. One senses throughout the powerful hold of one man's personality—his dangerous fascination for those who served with him. . . A good story—for Napoleon fans and others."

+ Kirkus 14:306 Jl 1 '46 210w

"In her characterization of Napoleon Miss Gibbs surprisingly drops all pulp fiction procedures, and emerges, if only briefly, as an unexpectedly good writer; her vision is certainly genuine, sometimes almost profound. However, praise should go to the author as an honest researcher, rather than as a talented creator. Once again in literature one finds a man, a symbol, that expresses infinitely more than the writer intended. Napoleon seems, moreover, to have lent Miss Gibbs the illusion of clarity and passion—which were his gifts to those who knew him. All that has value in this novel belongs to the Emperor of the French. What does not concern him is lifeless and tiresome." Patricia Blake

+ N Y Times p20 O 13 '46 500w

"The reader, making up his own mind, will like one aspect or another of the novel, as readers have always had the right to do. For myself, however, it's the psychological side of 'Tell your Sons' that interested me most and that seems to me the point where Miss Gibbs most nearly attained her objective. Using the curious, master-man relationships between Napoleon and d'Aunay to bring out Napoleon himself in higher relief is a first-rate idea. Miss Gibbs chose an excellent way to present the contradictory puzzle that is any great man." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 O 10 '46 800w

"'Tell your Sons' is a novel in the romantic manner, with the sweep of scene, episode and adventure that is inherent in its theme.

It moves swiftly across most of the map of Europe and years as fateful as our own. Miss Gibbs is to be welcomed as a storyteller. Moreover, her courage in attempting a portrait of Napoleon through the eyes of one who served him results in a fresh, if romantic, picture of the enigmatic leader and an interesting exploration of the hold of one man over others." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p10 O 20 '46 750w

GIBBS, WOLCOTT. Season in the sun, and other pleasures. 358p $2.75 Random house 818 Dramatic criticism 46-8342

Selections from the author's contributions to The New Yorker over a period of years, but almost entirely from his second decade with that periodical.

"As a social commentator he is perhaps without the warm sympathy of E. B. White, but he is no less the wielder of the telling cut, the mental wit, the champion of the civilized simplicity and these articles, even if read before, have the power to create a complete enjoyment for the reader."

+ Kirkus 14:378 Ag 1 '46 120w

"It is no secret by now that Mr. Gibbs has one of the most formidable pens in the business, and this new volume offers it at its smooth and amusing best. As historian of the theatre, where such things are usual, as well as sometime contributor everywhere else in the pages of The New Yorker, Mr. Gibbs has met some very pretty bubbles. That few of them remained bubbles afterward, becoming blobs instead, is the result of an approach and style which are midway between a leer and the deep wound of a stiletto." Lewis Nichols

+ N Y Times p3 N 24 '46 1200w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 3 '46 330w

"It takes a book like 'Season in the Sun' to restore your faith in anthologies." Richard Match

+ Weekly Book Review p8 D 8 '46 700w

GIBSON, MRS JEWEL. Joshua Beene and God. 238p $2.50 Random house

46-7181

Character study of a Texas prophet, justice of the peace, and president of the school board, whose conferences with God usually ended in triumph for Uncle Josh. Since he was adept at gaining his own ends, Uncle Josh held the village down to his own advantage until the last moment when he put on a purple robe and went away to meet God.

"The earthy talk of the characters has no burlesque in it. Mrs. Gibson has skill in the art of writing, above all she has that vitality that makes the writing easy and delightful reading." J. F. Dobie

+ Book Week p4 O 13 '46 320w

"It is more a character study than a novel, 'character' in the sense of the odd, the amusing, the different."

Kirkus 14:309 Jl 1 '46 160w

"Humorous—but surprisingly reverent. Many will like it." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 71:1206 S 15 '46 140w

"Mrs Gibson's novel is full of false starts and dead-end sub-plots, and never quite settles down to a consistent view of its prophet, whether as religious bigot or lovable old curmudgeon. The picture of Joshua Beene browbeating the Almighty, funny at first, rapidly becomes grotesque. There is enough folk-humor and poetry in this story to indicate that Mrs Gibson could write an excellent novel of Texas religion; but 'Joshua Beene' is not it." Richard Match

N Y Times p20 O 6 '46 290w

"The book is not well written, but it is easily read."

New Yorker 22:125 O 5 '46 100w

GIBSON, JEWEL—Continued

"It is a good story, and gives insight into the methods of prophets and the reasons why they have always been such nuisances." Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 29:48 O 12 '46 490w

"This is Jewel Gibson's first novel and it is an excellent one, a first-class piece of Americana, a superb satire on the ultimate degeneration of anthropomorphism." Thomas Sugrue

+ Weekly Book Review p6 O 13 '46 800w

GIDDING, NELSON. End over end. 298p $2.50
Viking

46-6985

A young American flier, captured and thrown into jail by the Germans in Italy, relives incidents of his past life while he speculates on his present position and his possible future.

Kirkus 14:301 JI 1 '46 160w

"Happy welding of direct writing technique with a result not for the squeamish. Written secretly during author's months in prison. Recommended." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 71:1050 Ag '46 100w

"Like his hero, Dale Stribling, Mr. Gidding was himself a flier and a prisoner of war; certainly his account of Stribling's prison experience has the ring of authenticity. But although there is no doubt that a similar autobiographical accuracy operates through the rest of Mr. Gidding's novel, it does not give it a similar substance. Unlike the prison scenes, the flashbacks to Stribling's life before the war swing no natural or contrived dramatic weight. Indeed, in their closeness to their source in Mr. Gidding's own experience they seem only egotistical—an inflation, by means of pretentious prose, of lamentably thin material." Diana Trilling

— Nation 163:386 O 5 '46 500w

"The author writes with a very evident talent which would be even more compulsive if it were less frequently strained. The freshness, the sharpness, the genuine goodness of much of the phrasing is not negated, but it is somewhat blurred, by a tendency to be smart, or daring, or flip." R. S.

+ — N Y Times p24 S 15 '46 550w

"A vigorous and quite interesting chronicle."

+ New Yorker 22:109 S 14 '46 50w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 6 '46 800w

"Mr. Gidding's is simply another war book. It says what they have all said and adds very little that is new. The only suggestion at continuity is Dale's constant apprehension concerning his fate. Perhaps to compensate for its other weaknesses, the story ruthlessly makes use of the weapons of realism: unpleasant shock, license of expression, telling all merely because it happened." A. C. Fields

Sat R of Lit 29:8 S 7 '46 400w

"To put it simply and exactly, Nelson Gidding is a novelist of unusual power and skill, and 'End Over End' is as fine a first novel as has been published in America in several seasons. Mr. Gidding's range is remarkable: he moves unerringly among the dark and the violent, the fantastic and the sentimental, from uninhibited farce to unsparing tragedy, and always with a vigor that compels as it convinces." William Abrahams

+ Weekly Book Review p3 S 8 '46 1200w

GIFFORD, WILLIAM ALVA. Story of the faith; a survey of Christian history for the undogmatic. 622p maps $5 Macmillan

270 Church history

46-6234

"The history of the Christian faith is outlined step by step beginning with Judaism, and continuing through the life of Jesus, the history of the early church, the development of the Church of Rome, century by century; the Reformation and its aftermath of religious revolution, the effect of modern philosophy and science, and the challenge of Communism and Nazism." (Kirkus) The author is professor of church history and of the history of religions in the United Theological college, Montreal. Index.

"This book is for the reader who wants a rapidly moving narrative with a thoughtful and consistent presentation from a single viewpoint and only incidental allusions to differing views. That is the reason why 'dogmatists' and others who hold those views will not be altogether happy about it. It suits me. And even those readers who most vehemently dissent from some of the judgments expressed can scarcely withhold their admiration of the compact, incisive and flowing style in which the book is written. It is good reading." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 63:1311 O 30 '46 1200w

Reviewed by F. J. Moore

Churchman 160:15 D 1 '46 240w

"It is a well-written, consistent and comprehensive history of the church. The author is an out-and-out liberal Protestant and his point of view is reflected throughout. At the end the author rejects Catholicism and fundamentalism as vital factors in the future of Christian faith. Though the volume will elicit sharp disagreement at many points and from different sources, it is thought-provoking and interesting."

+ — Kirkus 14:499 O 1 '46 170w

"A young lady read Renan's 'Life of Jesus,' breathlessly, 'to see how it would end.' I had the same feeling with this volume. It started with a magnificent promise: in the last chapter, The Valley of Decision, would the author bring us a definite message? Alas! The answer is equivocal. Gifford destroys the faith of the fundamentalists—who, by the way, are not all millennialists. But he has no substitute, except Rousseau's Confession of Faith of a Savoyard Vicar, made a little more respectable with a touch of Kantism. He spurns theology and ecclesiasticism; yet he concludes that the churches are indispensable. Then let us seek our guidance in the churches, not in undogmatic religion." Albert Guerard

Nation 163:587 N 23 '46 750w

GILBERT, ANTHONY. See Malleson, L. B.

GILBERT, GLEN ALEXANDER. Air traffic control; II. by John Sebastian. 274p $5 Ziff-Davis

629.1366 Air traffic control 45-6413

"The purpose of air traffic control is to prevent aircraft collisions and to secure safe landings. An elaborately outlined, authoritative survey, adequately illustrated, is here presented of the procedures and methods of control now followed in the United States by the Civil Aeronautics Authority. Needed improvements in the system, based largely upon air traffic predicted for 1950, are outlined in some detail. The need of fundamental research and development on ground-operated automatic controls and on collision-warning devices in the aircraft is indicated." U S Quarterly Bkl

Booklist 42:159 Ja 15 '46

"The treatment is free of highly technical details and can be readily followed by general readers interested in the subject."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:68 Mr '46 170w

GILBERT, HELEN EARLE. Mr Plum and the little green tree: pictures by Margaret Bradfield. [32p] $1.75 Abingdon-Cokesbury

46-26272

Picture story book about a little green tree which grew at the intersection of two busy city streets, and of the old man who loved the tree and saved it from being cut down. For grades two and three.

Booklist 43:58 O 15 '46

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 22:461 N '46 80w

Kirkus 14:383 Ag 15 '46 90w

"Charming story-telling style and full-page pictures in soft, pleasing colors by Margaret Bradfield make it a worthwhile book for the read-aloud age and for the second- and third-graders to read for themselves." N. L. Rathbun

+ Library J 71:1131 S 1 '46 70w

"Charmingly illustrated, this story should be popular with 4-to-7 year old children." R. A. Gordon

+ N Y Times p14 S 29 '46 150w

Reviewed by Dorothy Peterson

San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 10 '46 80w

Weekly Book Review p9 N 10 '46 270w

Wis Lib Bul 42:153 N '46

GILBERT, JANE. Imps and angels; il. by Nedda Walker. 179p $2 Dutton 46-6545

Lincoln, England, in the thirteenth century is the scene of this story for eleven to thirteen year olds. Hugh is the son and grandson of stonemasons, and wants to aid in the building of Lincoln cathedral. There is a mystery, too, to keep the story moving.

"Eight to 12 year olds will read this book with great interest." Martha King

+ Book Week p9 O 6 '46 90w

Booklist 43:74 N 1 '46

"There is a slight mystery, faithful guarding of a secret, joy in beautiful figures carved in stone, admiration of gorgeous color in glass windows. All is seen through the eyes of two mischievous boys about to make choice of their life calling. A well-made, well-illustrated book." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:470 N '46 140w

"Exciting and well-written story. Through the adventures of eleven-year-old Hugh and his family and friends are unfolded many fascinating details of medieval life. Although the book is crowded with information, the characters are alive and develop naturally; plot moves swiftly and the mystery upon which the story hinges is fairly plausible. Attractive make-up." M. A. Herr

+ Library J 71:1334 O 1 '46 100w

"This is a religious book, breathing a simple faith untouched by bigotry. It is also a vivid picture of life in a medieval artisan family, a close-knit, loving group whose members are real and likable. Hugh is honest, inquisitive and impulsive, as prone to get into scrapes as any American Huck Finn. His adventures in the half-built cathedral make a pleasant story for readers of 10 to 14. Nedda Walker's drawings are delightful." N. B. Baker

+ N Y Times p22 S 22 '46 170w

Reviewed by E. B. Schlipf

San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 10 '46 100w

"The story is touched with a humor that makes it seem contemporary. The black and white illustrations are unusually good."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:50 N 9 '46 70w

Wis Lib Bul 42:153 N '46

GILBERT, SIR WILLIAM SCHWENCK. Gilbert and Sullivan songs for young people; selected and arranged by Margaret Bush; introd. and notes by J. R. de la Torre Bueno, jr.; designed and il. by Erna M. Karolyi. (Whittlesey house publication) 71p $2.75 McGraw

784 Songs

Words and music of nineteen ballads from eleven of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas, the music arranged for quick reading. Each opera is introduced by a brief synopsis of the story. For grades six to nine.

Booklist 42:350 J1 1 '46

"If you have not already discovered that Gilbert's wit shines in rhymes and rhythms, and that Sullivan's music has a bubbling gaiety, this volume is a good one for you to use to play or sing from." H. F. Griswold

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 12 '46 140w

+ Kirkus 14:251 Je 1 '46 120w

"Brief introductory notes and lively, decorative illustrations by Erna Karolyi emphasize the piquant fun and rhythm of these gay melodies and should incite interest in the complete operas." E. M. Gordon

+ Library J 71:984 J1 '46 70w

"The accompaniments are so simple that the music sounds thin, but this is more than compensated for by the fact that they are easy to figure out. The songs are always charming, and the words, written in Queen Victoria's glorious days, achieve as ever the unusual feat of being both gay and respectable." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times p33 Je 16 '46 180w

Reviewed by Reta Van Straaten

San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 10 '46 120w

"When this handsome book gets into the family circle it will certainly suspend other proceedings for as long as it takes to play through and sing nineteen of the best beloved songs from Gilbert and Sullivan ever-blooming operas. The music is easy enough for anybody to play who ever 'took piano.' . . . Mr. Bueno's comments are crisp and Gilbertian."

+ Weekly Book Review p10 My 19 '46 180w

Wis Lib Bul 42:116 J1 '46

GILBERT, SIR WILLIAM SCHWENCK. H. M. S. Pinafore. See Wheeler, O.

GILKEY, JAMES GORDON. When life gets hard. 138p $1.50 Macmillan

248 Christian life

45-9947

"Reconversion from war to peace is essentially a spiritual matter that concerns civilian and service men alike. The book redirects those whose personal lives are stymied by disillusionment, uncertainty, frustration, faltering faith, and grief. Twelve chapters deal with 12 critical personal problems in plain, homey, heart-to-heart talks." Churchman

Booklist 42:177 F 1 '46

Christian Century 63:81 Ja 16 '46 70w

Reviewed by W. F. Thompson

Churchman 160:15 F 15 '46 60w

"The author's concern is that 'those who read these chapters will remember that they aim to be practical and helpful rather than academic.' That they prove to be both practical and helpful is the result of the timeliness of the issues and the great good sense of the author. . . . The language is clear and devoid of a technical terminology; the reader is addressed directly and informally; pertinent illustrative material is used to advantage. The greatest merit of the book is its genuine practicality. Everywhere is evidence of a wisdom gained over long years of pastoral experience in dealing with personal problems in all their variety and uniqueness. While he says much that is capable of bringing both inspiration and confidence, yet the realism and directness of Dr. Gilkey's treatment prevent a 'pep-talk' approach: the dominant note throughout is one of courage and hope. . . . While the treatment is strident in parts, yet withal it is well balanced and open to immediate application as a help to the multitudes for whom life, in time of postwar adjustment as in wartime itself, is indeed hard." R. M. Murphy

+ Crozer Q 23:391 O '46 500w

"Extremely practical and helpful sermons."

+ Kirkus 13:513 N 15 '46 270w

"These chapters . . . are filled with practical encouragement for times of tension, and in stressing opportunities to the community the author uses local examples. When Life Gets Hard offers help and stimulation for ordinary people in their every-day lives. Appended is an index of references and acknowledgements." D. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d D 2 '46 180w

GILL, TOM. No place for women. 220p $2 Putnam

46-3065

Story of romance and adventure in the rubber country in South America.

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers

Book Week p6 Ap 28 '46 200w

Kirkus 14:160 Ap 1 '46 90w

"This is a light novel and a natural for the movies, preferably in Technicolor." I. A. N Y Times p16 My 12 '46 90w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p24 Ap 28 '46 140w

GILLIGAN, EDMUND. I name thee Mara 429p $3 Scribner

"Tale of two pairs of brothers, their two fishing schooners and the working out of their destinies in the Northwest Atlantic. The sea provides a mirror which reflects both bright and dark sides of the human spirit so that this, like Moby Dick, is considerably more than just a sea story." Library J

Book Week p6 O 27 '46 140p

Booklist 43:86 N 15 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '46

"Sea story to stand on the shelf alongside of the best of Conrad and Melville. . . Full of suspense and action and told with such beauty of expression as to make the reading an unforgettable experience. More than recommended!" R. F. Kingery

+ Library J 71:1330 O 1 '46 110w

"At times, Mr. Gilligan writes about his incredible creatures with baffling compression, at others, with an unusually watery Celtic fancy. There are a few passages of clean, strong descriptive prose, particularly in storm scenes, but like the current slang and the references to phonographs and flashlights and the first World War, they come as something of a shock amid the antiquated deeds, the 'tises' and 'twases' and 'ayes.' Donald Barr

— N Y Times p24 O 13 '46 700w

"Authorities on seafaring will have to pass judgment on the extent of Mr. Gilligan's nautical knowledge, but any layman who can distinguish between a subject and a predicate may reasonably complain of his strange and highfalutin prose."

New Yorker 22:133 O 19 '46 90w

"It is all moving and dramatic and highly charged; and one comes to feel that Mr. Gilligan has crowded too much into his novel. Too much symbolism, too many correspondences of twentieth-century fishermen to too many ancient myths. The result is murky and magnificent. And credible Gloucester men become shadows against cloud and water." Walter Havighurst

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:13 O 26 '46 650w

"Written consistently in a high key of romance and mystical unreality, this book's sheer narrative power carries it through a maze of psychological outbursts cast around a slender plot and brings it forward to certain tragic and substantial conclusions. In 'I Name Thee Mara' the author of half a dozen successful sea novels has gone Herman Melville on us with a vengeance. . . And make no mistake about it, this story is well told, although it is based on a nautical impossibility; it is enough to raise the hair on the reader's head. . . The fact remains, however, that this is a remarkable book. Something is churning furiously in the author's mind, the rightness of human conduct, the ultimate truth of life, and he puts it before us in a perfect turmoil of words." Lincoln Colcord

+ — Weekly Book Review p14 N 17 '46 1200w

GILLIN, JOHN LEWIS. Criminology and penology. 3d ed 615p $4.50 Appleton-Century
364 Crime and criminals. Prisons 45-9285

A new edition of a textbook first published in 1926, and revised in 1935 (See Book Review Digest 1926, 1935). "All material pertinent to the present situation found in previous editions has been preserved in the present edition, although for the most part it has been rewritten. The results of the author's studies of the penal systems in other countries of the world reported in the previous edition have been retained with such modifications as have occurred since. In addition, his more recent studies of penology in Mexico and Guatemala and the published reports of others in countries abroad have been drawn upon to complete the picture." (Pref to third edition)

"The volume under review is a revision in part of the author's original work, and an attempt to clarify and modernize certain sections by inclusion of new material. In this reviewer's judgment, the author has not succeeded in presenting either a coherent, systematic, consistent, or up-to-date summary of contemporary criminological or penological, to say nothing of police, knowledge." J. P. Shalloo

— Am Soc R 11:374 Je '46 650w

Christian Century 62:1217 O 31 '45 50w

"In large part the work has been rewritten and reorganized with benefit to its clarity. The use of charts, maps, and pictographs adds to its effectiveness. Footnote references take the place of a special bibliography. Students will, no doubt, appreciate the reduced bulk of the Third Edition and the generally improved form. It is a good, sober, orthodox text." Albert Morris

+ Social Forces 24:478 My '46 270w

GILLMORE, MARGALO, and COLLINGE, PATRICIA. The B.O.W.S. 173p il $2.50 Harcourt

940.5477873 Soldiers—Entertainment. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 45-35239

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Bookmark 7:10 Ja '46

Christian Science Monitor p15 Mr 9 '46 40w

"Mainly a light and pleasantly written account of the experiences of this extraordinary group on a special mission; to make their unusual audiences forget themselves and their troubles for a while at least." P. T. Hartung

+ Commonweal 44:76 My 3 '46 450w

"Since my guess is that the craze for calling everything by initials has gone almost far enough, I'm afraid I had a certain mild advance prejudice against this account of Katharine Cornell's wartime European tour in 'The Barretts of Wimpole Street' merely because it is called 'The B.O.W.S.' In addition, it was my impression that narratives by popular actors about their adventures in bringing entertainment to embattled G.I.'s tend to be, no matter how worthy the actor, a little coy and embarrassing. On two scores, therefore, I owe Margalo Gillmore and Patricia Collinge a deep apology. Theirs is a warm, winning, and thoroughly delightful book, modest, decently sentimental, and honestly moving. In its unpretentious way, it is an endearing work, and one of lasting value." Richard Watts

+ Sat R of Lit 29:11 F 2 '46 1200w

"Delightful reading . . . set down in lively fashion."

+ Theatre Arts 30:127 F '46 160w

Wis Lib Bul 42:19 Ja '46

GILPATRIC, GUY. Flying stories. 387p $2.50 Dutton

46-1436

Seventeen short stories, all of them connected in some way with aviation.

"Gilpatric obviously is too skilled a craftsman in the magazine-fiction genre to turn out a completely dull or unreadable story, but none of this collection approaches the high gloss and guffaw-producing power of his Inchcliffe Castle gems. Persons engaged in the aviation industry, or of that fraternity of interested outsiders who love to hang around airports, will enjoy this book more than that semi-mythical character, the general reader." W. F. Morse

Book Week p6 Mr 3 '46 230w

Booklist 42:317 Je 1 '46

"Commercial property but entertaining." + Kirkus 14:42 F 1 '46 170w

"The stories range from the tragic ('The Wing Walker') through the humorous ('The Goddess and Private Gallagher') to fantasy ('The Devil Headed South'). All have the authentic note of the old flying man and the skill of the born story-teller. If there are any old wing walkers left, they'll get a real boot out of the stories dealing with aviation in its pinfeather days." Frederick Graham

+ N Y Times p14 Mr 31 '46 270w

Weekly Book Review p18 Ap 14 '46 140w

GIONO, JEAN. Blue boy; tr. from the French by Katherine A. Clarke. 251p $2.75 Viking 46-2802

A novel, autobiographical in part, which pictures the life of a small French community before the first World war. The tragedies and comedies, the hopes and fears and loves and hates are revealed as they appear to the eyes of a small boy, son of the village cobbler.

Reviewed by E. D. Branch

Book Week p5 Ap 21 '46 650w

Kirkus 14:32 Ja 15 '46 180w

"For several years before the recent war the fame of Jean Giono grew consistently within a certain snobbish clique. To the Parisian sophisticates the primitive naturism of this poet of nature was most appealing. A self-educated man who had feasted on Homer during his adolescence, Giono chose to live among the peasants in the sunny foothills of the Alps. His many novels idealizing that life are saturated with a rich poetry compounded of protracted, often charming images, a childlike naïveté and an intoxication with words." Justin O'Brien

N Y Times p5 Mr 24 '46 500w

"A series of more or less interrelated stories set in Provence, Mr. Giono's homeland, that remind me greatly of Sherwood Anderson's 'Winesburg, Ohio.' The stories are told, as in Anderson, obliquely rather than directly, and there is the same deceptive simplicity. . . The translation, by Katherine Allen Clarke, is a well-turned job. Those who are fed up with synthetic nightmares, as I am, ought to welcome Mr. Giono's excursion into the open air." Hamilton Basso

+ New Yorker 22:108 Ap 6 '46 450w

"It is a novel of great charm and imaginative force. It seems to distill by some magic the odors of the earth, of animals and men, and to bring forth the essential qualities and nature of the village and country folk who live passionately in its pages. Giono is a great prose poet of nature, as pagan as a faun." Harrison Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 29:17 Mr 30 '46 1000w

Time 47:104 Ap 1 '46 440w

"While Giono is a gifted writer, tantalizingly aware of the pulse of the human heart, he does not integrate his work. Implicit in the lack of shape and ordered progress of this book is the author's essential anarchy." Virgilia Peterson

Weekly Book Review p4 Mr 24 '46 750w

GIORDANI, IGINO. St Paul, apostle and martyr; tr. from the Italian by Mother Clelia Maranzana, and Mother Mary Paula Williamson. 286p $2.50 Macmillan 46-1836

A life of St Paul, written by an Italian journalist connected with the Vatican library. The book has a Catholic point of view. Index.

Reviewed by B. L. Conway

+ Cath World 163:372 Jl '46 250w

"The book is written for the general reader. The author's first aim is to present Paul as apostle and martyr and to incite the modern Christian to the fullness of the Christian life. At the same time it is the work of a scholar. The book is given largely to the retelling of the career and to a paraphrase of the letters, with concluding chapters on the man, his work and his thought. The edifying aim is achieved, often eloquently. But with few exceptions the successive lives of Paul that are written have a certain sameness about them, whether as regards the story or the insights." A. N. Wilder

+ Christian Century 63:841 Jl 3 '46 700w

"As a life of St. Paul it is engagingly and imaginatively written; but it has clear marks of its Roman origin throughout, and for this reason can scarcely be commended to non-Romans without caution." F. J. Moore

+ Churchman 160:16 My 1 '46 200w

"There are numerous little gems in the book describing Paul the Apostle. . . The Epistles of Saint Paul are handled extremely well. They are fitted into their historical setting and synopsis expertly. In this way they are spread throughout the book. Only two chapters have a preponderance of doctrinal and moral material which is, the author advises us, Saint Paul's and not his own. Accordingly the book can be read with fruit by the housewife and the businessman as well as by the student and the theologian. Each will inevitably be inflamed by Paul's love of Christ." H. L. Brozowski

+ Commonweal 44:244 Je 21 '46 1200w

"While distinctive Catholic doctrine is introduced occasionally, on the whole the approach is historical and biographical rather than dogmatic. It therefore should have a wider reading public than a theological work."

+ Kirkus 14:99 F 15 '46 110w

GIPSON, FRED. Fabulous empire; Colonel Zack Miller's story; with an introd. by Donald Day. 411p $3 Houghton

976.6 101 ranch, Oklahoma. Miller family. Miller, Zachary Taylor 46-6960

An account of the rise and decline of the 101 Ranch in Oklahoma, and of the family, George Washington Miller and his sons, who built it up, and finally lost it.

"There is something of an epic quality to the story of this product of the Old Frontier struggling in a mesh of modern-day entanglements, legal as well as financial, against which the old law of the six-shooter, under which he grew up, could not prevail. Gipson makes the most of the opportunity which this theme affords." E. S. Watson

+ Book Week p3 O 6 '46 320w

Booklist 43:67 N 1 '46

Kirkus 14:216 My 1 '46 160w

"Interesting account of ranch life and cattle country. Written in down-to-earth style. Will appeal to lovers of things western." L. R. Etzkorn

Library J 71:1047 Ag '46 100w

"The story of the Millers suffers the split of the centuries. Before 1900 it was their world; after 1900 the landscape is less rich and the adventure somehow touched by showmanship. But it is a fine story." Ernest Haycox

+ N Y Times p26 S 29 '46 800w

"Fred Gipson, the author, is a Texan with a vast fund of ranch country idiom and a flair for anecdote; the book is rich in both. Best of all, Mr. Gipson avoids literary flights and tells the story as it should be told—as an old cowman might tell it as he perched on the corral fence and whittled a pine stick." A. R. Bosworth

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 S 22 '46 850w

"An exceedingly fast-moving, anecdote-packed tale, possibly a bit self-consciously salty, written in a rawhide style larded with phrases out of the Southwest vernacular. Mr. Gipson's prose has a world of zing; the discriminating may wonder whether his frequent use of 'like' as a conjunction is necessary for verisimilitude, but, since such use is undoubtedly the custom in the speech of the folks out in God's country, perhaps he is fully justified. . . Colonel Zack adds a few new sidelights, and gives a slightly different version to some old ones, but his fresh contributions are of no great importance." Stanley Walker

GIPSON, FRED—Continued

+ — Weekly Book Review p22 O 6 '46 900w
Wis Lib Bul 42:150 N '46

GIPSON, LAWRENCE HENRY. British empire before the American revolution; v 6; The great war for the Empire; the years of defeat, 1754-1757. 501p maps $7.50 Knopf

942.07 Great Britain—History—18th century. Great Britain—Colonies. U.S.—History—Colonial period. France—Colonies (36-20870)

This sixth volume of the author's monumental historical work is concerned with the perilous situation of the English speaking people in North America during the first three years of the French and Indian war. For earlier volumes see Book Review Digest, 1936, 1940, 1942.

Reviewed by Walter Johnson
Book Week p15 Ap 7 '46 430w

"It is impossible, within the scope of a brief review, to discuss all of the superior qualities of Dr. Gipson's work. His description of the Braddock campaign, in which he praises Braddock's competence and places much of the blame for the disastrous rout on the shoulders of Colonel Gage, is an unusually capable job. To perceive that the author is equally competent on the sea, the reader needs only to turn to the account of Admiral Boscawen's failure to prevent French reinforcements from reaching Canada in the summer of 1755. The appraisal of Governor Shirley's leadership is clear, forceful, and interesting." R. A. Brown

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 6 '46 600w

"Professor Gipson's colleagues, from the publication of his first volume, have urged the general public not to be alarmed by the scale of his work, by its professional air and its critical apparatus, by its lack of deliberate literary embellishments. This injunction should be repeated. Professor Gipson is not at all hard reading. His sixth volume is full of material of the very greatest interest to a thoughtful person today." Crane Brinton

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 3 '46 1700w

"Any volume on this period tends to arouse comparison with that of Francis Parkman. Gipson centers his interest on the British colonies; Parkman on the French. Gipson has the advantage of being able to examine the result of sixty years more historical research than was available to Parkman, but suffers the real handicap of having more material to compress into a coherent narrative. Unlike Parkman, Gipson sometimes falls prey to the eighteenth-century vice of unduly prolonging a sentence. Nonetheless, Gipson's fundamental clarity of organization, his careful analysis of the major factors, and his sense of the dramatic enable him, like Parkman, to hold the reader's attention and frequently to fire his imagination." L. A. Harper

+ — Pol Sci Q 61:466 S '46 550w
U S Quarterly Bkl 2:117 Je '46 240w

Reviewed by Carl Bridenbaugh
Weekly Book Review p6 Mr 10 '46 1300w

"Gipson's theme, which emerges more clearly in this sixth than in earlier volumes, is nothing less than the reinterpretation of the American Revolution from a Tory point of view. . . Up to this point in its progress, the execution of the work scarcely equals the grandeur of its author's aim. He appears to lack the ability to see the whole of a situation as a clear-minded, unexcited, and practical man of affairs." Stanley Pargellis

Yale R n s 36:186 autumn '46 700w

GIPSON, MORRELL. City country ABC; pictures by Leonard Weisgard. (Picture bk) [48p] 50c Garden City pub. co.

"A is for apple. In the city, Bobby finds one on the fruit stand. In the country, Billy picks one from a tree.' So runs this ABC. A separate page for each letter for city and country, pictured in poster style by Leonard Weisgard." Library J

"An excellent A B C book with ingenious contrast of city and country customs and with spirited, humorous pictures."

+ Cath World 164:381 Ja '47 20w

Kirkus 14:520 O 15 '46 90w

"Although not a necessary item there is a nice idea of contrast between city and rural life." F. W. Butler

+ Library J 71:1718 D 1 '46 70w

GIRVAN, MRS HELEN (MASTERMAN). Light in the mill; il. by Joseph Hopkins, Jr. 246p $2 Rinehart

46-6428

Mystery story for older girls.

"A charming story with an exciting plot, this book is extremely well written in an easy flowing style." A. P. Bennett

+ Book Week p25 N 10 '46 220w

+ Cath World 164:381 Ja '47 20w

"This book has an ingenious plot, boldly drawn characters and a satisfactory solution of the mystery." H. F. Griswold

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 N 21 '46 180w

"Girls will like the twitters plot, the art and romance, family feuds, and cats—all of which evolve gently toward the happy ending."

Kirkus 14:349 Ag 1 '46 120w

"A rather mild but fairly well written mystery story with a well sustained plot, set in French Canada. The interchange of identities stretches the readers' credulity, as does an incident about a doll filled with diamonds. Satisfactory if another mystery story for the teens is needed." Claire Nolte

+ — Library J 71:1546 N 1 '46 80w

GLASSER, OTTO. Dr W. C. Röntgen. 169p il $4.50 Thomas, C.C.

B or 92 Röntgen, Wilhelm Conrad 46-1564

"An important life of Röntgen by Dr. Glasser appeared in German in 1931. This was translated into English in 1933, with an American edition in 1934. The present shorter study is based upon the author's comprehensive work, and upon subsequent material unearthed by the repercussion of the original volume upon the medical world. It is a fitting memorial to the fiftieth anniversary of Röntgen's discovery of the X-ray on November 8, 1895." U S Quarterly Bkl

"Dr. Glasser has produced a most sympathetic and penetrating story of the discoverer of X-rays, one that will prove most satisfactory to many readers."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 17:3 Ja '46 360w

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:24 Mr '46 200w

GLASTONE, SAMUEL. Elements of physical chemistry. 695p il $4.50 Van Nostrand

541.2 Chemistry, Physical and theoretical 46-4116

"This is an introductory textbook designed not only for college students intending to specialize in chemistry, but also for those who are interested in other branches of science and technology and need only an elementary knowledge of physical chemistry. There is approximately one-half as much textual matter as in the author's Textbook of Physical Chemistry (1940). However, this book is not a condensation of the earlier work, but is a fresh treatment of the subject from a more elementary viewpoint. In many cases, the new work will be more satisfactory for library use and reference because the exposition of basic laws and phenomena is clearer." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:761 My 15 '46 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:5 Ja '46

GLASSTONE, SAMUEL. Textbook of physical chemistry. 2d ed 1320p il $9; reference ed $12 Van Nostrand

541 Chemistry, Physical and theoretical 46-5700

"Second edition revised to date contains principles of physical chemistry and their applications. College text for more complete courses. Important developments in thermochemistry, electrochemistry, properties of solids, liquids and gases, solutions, phase equilibria, rates of reaction, catalysis, surface phenomena and colloids are treated. Detailed discussions of atomic structure and atomic spectra and radioactive isotopes, including the major new discoveries published. Diagrams, tables, and references." Library J

"This revised edition is to be welcomed because it has afforded the opportunity to strengthen the weak points of the original text and to introduce new material of interest. . . Without meaning to detract at all from Dr. Glasstone's book, the reviewer nevertheless feels that this book is no substitute for the specialized texts and monographs in various fields of physical chemistry. . . [However] this new edition will make an already established text even more valuable to various classes of readers." K. S. Pitzer

Chem & Eng N 24:2552 S 25 '46 400w

"Glasstone's book is an extremely useful text and has already made many friends. The second edition will no doubt widen the audience of Glasstone's readers." F. C. Nachod

+ Chem Eng 53:298 O '46 150w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:980 J1 '46 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:37 J1 '46

GLATZER, NAHUM NORBERT, ed. In time and eternity; a Jewish reader [the greater part rendered into English by Olga Marx]. 255p $2.75 Schocken bks.

892.4 Jewish literature—Collections

"An anthology of Jewish literature from the 2nd century to the 19th—from Talmud and Midrash, from rabbinical responsa and Hassidic legends, and many more classes of writings. This collection, for the most part in short selections, gives a good view of the varieties of post-biblical Jewish literature. A useful appendix describes the sources and gives brief data about the authors." Christian Century

Christian Century 63:1536 D 18 '46 70w

"Of course you will have your difficulties reading the book, its whole way of thinking being as different from ours as it is. This juxtaposition of profundity and triteness, of majesty and scurrility, sincerity and ambiguity is something unusual to our orderly and systematic modern mind. The promise of mystic readings should not give us the idea that we will find parallels to Saint Teresa or Eckhart or even Angelus Silesius. Even their approach to martyrdom—self-inflicted martyrdom—is so different from our modern approach that we will feel in a strange world of thought. . . There is a kind of smartness, a cold wit, something grotesque and illogical in many of these writings—the counterpoint to the tragic sadness of Jewish history and the unending bloody persecutions to which this noble and restless race has been put by godless and religious, pagan and Christian, ancient and modern men from Egypt and Assur down to Germany and Poland. Don't miss this strange book." H. A. Reinhold

+ Commonweal 45:356 Ja 17 '47 550w

"This is a rich anthology, and it is very attractive as to printing and binding."

+ Weekly Book Review p17 D 29 '46 70w

GLEIT, MARIA, pseud. See Gleitsmann, H.

GLEITSMANN, HERTHA (MRS WALTHER VICTOR) (MARIA GLEIT, pseud). Niko's mountains; il. by Mimi Korach. 259p $2.50 Scribner

Niko was a French-Armenian boy whose father disappeared during the war, and whose mother grieved until she almost lost her mind. Niko was sent by the Red Cross to Switzerland where his bitterness gradually wore itself out due to the understanding of his hosts. For ages ten to fourteen.

Booklist 43:173 F 1 '47

"The story is told through charming dramatic incident, as he lives with a happy family, learns to know a girl his own age, and turns towards a happier future. Well-sustained to the very last page."

+ Kirkus 14:526 O 15 '46 120w

"This story of a child suffering from the war and its aftermath is introspective and self-analytical throughout, but because of its unusual subject deserves a place in larger collections." M. M. Clark

Library J 72:83 Ja 1 '47 70w

Sat R of Lit 29:60 N 9 '46 30w

"Seldom does a book for children under fourteen face so squarely a world problem of today and bring it home to a young reader's sympathies and imagination. The problem affects children the world over." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p10 D 8 '46 400w

GLEMSE, BERNARD. Love for each other. 331p $2.75 Creative age

Story of a London family: the father was a Russian; the mother French, and there were five children. Rebellion came natural to all of them, and in three of the young Cranes it took a normal turn. But Paul, the oldest, it turned into a revolting type of fascist, and in time the corruption spread to the youngest brother also. The scene is London and Paris.

"Entanglements of a quixotic quintette, toned down by writing in quieter terms."

+ Kirkus 14:231 My 15 '46 110w

"Modern setting. Well written but of limited appeal." Mary Clark

Library J 71:758 My 15 '46 70w

"Because of the author's far from competent handling of the mechanics of style, the book reads curiously, at times, like a lending library romance—somewhat thin, distant and predestined. . . When it rises above its surface of commonplaceness, the plot is lurid and dramatically forced. . . It's not a very successful book. . . But it is a thoughtful try and a non-commercial one, a strange little sport not so much worth your approval as your attention." B. V. Winebaum

+ N Y Times p12 Je 30 '46 500w

"Mr. Glemser writes felicitously. With a few deft lines he can sketch in a character, and with easy multiplicity of incident he can fill in with lights and shades until the character is full-dimensioned. If anything, he is felicitous to a fault, so that we sometimes wish for a more intense examination of the roots of character." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 29:23 J1 6 '46 400w

Reviewed by R. M. Morgan

Spring'd Republican p6 Je 18 '46 240w

"More impressive, perhaps, than his fine gift for narrative and characterization is Bernard Glemser's persuasiveness as a storyteller. . . The note of melodrama on which the book ends is extravagant, but Mr. Glemser's skill as a storyteller makes it acceptable." Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Je 16 '46 700w

GLIDDEN, FREDERICK DILLEY (LUKE SHORT, pseud). Coroner creek. 222p $2 Macmillan

Western story.

"Good".

+ Kirkus 14:206 My 1 '46 80w

"A typical Western yarn—complete with despicable heavy, brave hero, roaring six-guns—and romance to round out the story." I. A. N Y Times p22 J1 7 '46 90w

GLIDDEN, F. D.—Continued

"There's no dearth of gun-fighting, Indians and other phenomena of the good old days in this superior open-space thriller by one of the leaders in his field." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p14 J1 7 '46 90w

GLIDDEN, HORACE K., and others. Airports; design, construction and management. 583p il $7 McGraw

629.136 Airports

46-7827

"Airport design is treated in a novel manner in this book. Less than half of the text is a concise discussion of such matters as site selection, topographic and soil surveys, grading, drainage, pavements, lighting, buildings, and traffic control. The remainder of the book is made up of 31 appendixes, which are largely reproductions of publications of the Civil Aeronautics Administration relating to the preceding text matter." (Eng N) Index.

"All illustrations are grouped in the back of the book, which may have simplified the publisher's problem but is a very inconvenient arrangement from the user's viewpoint. As most of the appendixes are CAA detailed specifications for the design and construction of various types of airport paving, the book is the most comprehensive text yet published on that major aspect of airport design."

+ Eng N 137:127 N 14 '46 200w

"Recommended." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 71:666 My 1 '46 140w

GLOVER, TERROT REAVELEY. Springs of Hellas, and other essays; with a memoir by S. C. Roberts. 210p $2.75 Macmillan [12s 6d Cambridge]

824 Rome—Civilization, Greece—Civilization

46-3081

Contents: Springs of Hellas; Savages; The exiles; The welding of mankind; A quip of Quintilian's; Polybius at Rome; Cicero among his books; Prince of digressors; The mind of St Paul, Index.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 Ap 7 '46 140w

Christian Century 63:627 My 15 '46 210w

Current Hist 10:132 Ag '46 50w

Reviewed by Gilbert Murray

Manchester Guardian p3 S 14 '45 850w

Reviewed by John Day

N Y Times p36 My 12 '46 450w

"To enjoy it you will have to know something of classical languages and literature and of ancient history; among people who have that knowledge, it will not appeal to the solemn pedants whom the Greeks called brass-bowled." Elmer Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 29:19 Je 8 '46 800w

"The book consists of nine essays, all scholarly and whimsical and thoroughly delightful." H. W. Marr

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Ap 14 '46 480w

"To his friends—and there were far more of them than he knew—to his readers in all the world, and to all lovers of sensitive and wide-ranging scholarship a new last book by Terrot Reaveley Glover will bring a rare and deep emotion. There are few men whose passing leaves the world so obviously the poorer; few, perhaps in Britain at present none, who have so fully combined knowledge with imagination, the power to visualize and interpret the past with adequate understanding of its memorials."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p486 O 13 '45 2100w

GLUECK, NELSON. The river Jordan; being an illustrated account of earth's most storied river. 268p $3.50 Presbyterian bd.

956.9 Jordan river, Palestine—Description and travel. Bible. Whole—Geography

46-2845

"After a preliminary survey the reader is taken on a personally conducted tour down the river from its sources in the snows of Lebanon and Hermon to the point where it merges with the Dead Sea, with excursions backward into history, biblical and other, as points with historical associations come into view. . . There are 113 pictures, including a great number of views from the air which give a vivid portrayal of the physical geography of the area." Christian Century

Book Week p22 Ap 14 '46 70w

Booklist 42:296 My 15 '46

"Expert scholarship, a sensitive appreciation of scenic beauty and religious significance, good writing and superb photography, all combine to make this a completely satisfying account of 'the world's most storied river.'" W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 63:626 My 15 '46 700w

"Dr. Glueck brings to this study sound scholarship and a sympathetic religious spirit. He can tell a story well; sometimes his sense of the dramatic results in overwriting, but he makes his characters live." G. R. Stephenson

N Y Times p32 O 6 '46 600w

Reviewed by Norman Bentwich

Spec 177:712 D 27 '46 550w

"The reader will find this not only a book of splendid photographs of the Jordan, but also a well-written authoritative record." C. M. Sauer

+ Springfield Republican p6 S 13 '46 140w

"Throughout the text full use is made of literary and archaeological data; personal reminiscences of the author's recent experience in archaeological exploration in the region enliven the book at many points. The 114 full-page illustrations, many of them air views, are a valuable aid to the descriptions."

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 2:215 S '46 260w

GLUECK, SHELDON. Nuremberg trial and aggressive war. 121p $2 Knopf

341.3 War crimes—Trials

46-5474

"A polemic on the trial, by a man who did a lot of the preliminary work for Justice Jackson. Dr Glueck, an authority on criminal law, debates the question of whether it is a crime, in the strictly legal sense, to wage aggressive war, and comes to the conclusion that 'the waging of an aggressive war is not only unlawful but also criminal' (i.e., bad). The book is helpful in explaining the ethic, at least from the Anglo-American point of view, of the affair at Nuremberg." (New Yorker) No index.

Reviewed by K. C. Cole

Am Pol Sci R 40:1206 D '46 1700w

Reviewed by Sterling North

Book Week p2 Ag 4 '46 450w

Booklist 43:30 O 1 '46

Kirkus 14:269 Je 1 '46 80w

"Recommended for law, public and other libraries interested in international relations and political science." H. H. A. Bernt

+ Library J 71:1047 Ag '46 100w

Reviewed by A. H. Pekells

New Repub 115:232 Ag 26 '46 1900w

"A brilliant, scholarly, easily understandable book which should be read by every intelligent American." Jerome Frank

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 4 '46 1150w

New Yorker 22:68 Ag 10 '46 100w

"This reviewer had the uncomfortable feeling during the reading of this well-reasoned and admirably expressed treatise that there are too many 'experts' in high places to whom a cold and technical construction of legal forms and phrases is much more important than the growing rights of man." Paul Speegle

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ag 11 '46 320w

"This book by Sheldon Glueck is a valuable addition to the growing literature concerned with the Nuremberg trial. Professor Glueck, who is professor of criminal law and criminology at Harvard University, is well equipped for such an undertaking." James Marshall

+ Sat R of Lit 29:9 S 21 '46 2050w

"Professor Glueck's distinction as a criminologist in the private law fields adds importance to his views, but his approach is not that of a trained international lawyer. His theories of the manner in which customary international law has developed are not supportable and his conclusions are thus invalidated from the point of view of international law."

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:319 D '46 220w

GOBLE, GEORGE WASHINGTON. Design of democracy. 248p $2.75 Univ. of Okla. press 342.733 U.S.—Politics and government—20th century. Industry and state 46-7675

"The purpose of this book, written by a professor of law at the University of Illinois, is to explain how democratic government works in the United States. . . Mr. Goble divides his discussion into four sections, which deal respectively with individual liberty, with the functioning of the government, with the responsibility to the people of those who hold political power and with the responsibility to labor and to the public of those who hold economic power." Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p6 D 15 '46 90w

"At first glance, the book seems platitudinous and therefore superfluous, but it turns out to be an invigorating presentation of vital truths. In the midst of contemporary passions, with some Americans shrieking for Soviet Russia and others shouting against it, this calm, concise, comprehensive description of the aims, framework, and forces of democracy is refreshing. It is not conservative, not radical. It depicts the stream of progress, as made through constant voluntary adjustment." R. H. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 19 '46 550w

"The style is sufficiently simple and lucid to be comprehensible to readers of all degrees of literacy, while the point of view is liberal and (in discussions of economic questions) sympathetic to the New Deal." H. B. Parkes

Weekly Book Review p48 D 1 '46 380w

GODDARD, ROBERT HUTCHINGS. Rockets. 69p il $3.50 American rocket society, 50 Church st, N.Y.

629.13338 Atmosphere, Upper. Rockets (aeronautics) 46-6733

"Collected works of the foremost authority on rockets and jet propulsion Contains A Method of Reaching Extreme Altitudes and Liquid Propellant Rocket Development and a foreword by Dr. Goddard written shortly before his death, as well as a biography of the physicist and many photographs." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:761 My 15 '46 60w

"This is no book for the general reader, but it is certainly a book that the historian of rockets cannot ignore." Waldemar Kaempfert

+ N Y Times p32 S 29 '46 420w

Reviewed by James Stokley
Weekly Book Review p31 O 6 '46 190w

GODDEN, RUMER (MRS LAURENCE FOSTER). The river. 176p $2 Little

46-6854

Brief, quiet story of the lives of two adolescent girls, the daughters of an Anglo-Indian family living in Bengal. The death of their young brother, due to the bite of a snake which he was trying to charm, is the central episode.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 179:106 Ja '47 320w

Reviewed by Dorothy Sparks
Book Week p3 O 20 '46 500w
Booklist 43:102 D 1 '46

"Readers of this book must needs bring to it imagination, reverence, and a sense of the intangibles underlying the commonplace. Miss Godden might well be Harriet grown up; she here proves herself master of a rare and difficult art."

+ Cath World 164:284 D '46 240w

"It is Harriet's book, Harriet, the most convincingly natural child this reviewer can remember in recent literature. Harriet, who made the discovery that the first Latin declension and conjugation are concerned with love and war: Bellum and Amo. Her discovery gives the clue to this whole distinguished little book. For Harriet discovered the first things, the things with which we have all to contend. Harriet was thirteen and she found growing up difficult, and yet she was desperately and engrossingly engaged with the task. When everything threatened to overwhelm her, she went out and looked at the river. . . Miss Godden's readers end by accepting the fact that Harriet will in all naturalness become a writer." Margaret Williamson

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 O 24 '46 450w

"A flawless account of two children on the brink of girlhood, that must owe at least as much to the author's present power of listening as to her remembrance of her own past." Anne Fremantle

+ Commonweal 44:624 O 11 '46 850w

"Frail, fugitive, this may be too tenuous for many tastes—even though she has a following."

Kirkus 14:353 Ag 1 '46 150w

"The sixth book by this discriminating writer is no disappointment and all libraries will welcome it. . . A short penetrating story for all who love the sensitive analysis of life." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 71:1464 O 15 '46 70w

"This is a story of the unfolding of young natures, each on its own lines, and it is told with unflinching sympathy." Charles Marriott

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 6 '46 140w

"The River is the work of a delicate sensibility, nurtured on other delicate sensibilities, which finds the innocent, unintellectual, amorphous mind of a child adequately receptive to complex experience and an appropriate medium for subtle impressions. Readers who are not bored should be charmed." John Farrelly

New Repub 115 740 D 2 '46 1200w

"There are descriptive passages of exceptional beauty, delicate observations of the ways of children and a number of faintly exasperating tricks of style." Rayner Heppenstall

+ New Statesman & Nation 32:192 S 14 '46 90w

"In a story of this sort, where the interest centers on delicate sentiments and feelings, it is not a little startling to come upon such elemental happenings as birth and death. Driving her point too hard, Miss Godden has got both, with the result, I think, that she almost spoils the essential simplicity of her theme. Harriet has to learn too much in too short a space. And because she becomes more like a child prodigy than the very human child Miss Godden started to create, 'The River' seems, in the end, a little more pretentious than wise." Nona Balakian

N Y Times p20 N 3 '46 650w

"A brief moment in the unfolding life of a little girl growing up in India that catches, because of the author's exquisite delicacy and wisdom, the wavering, elusive lights of childhood. This beautifully written long short story may not greatly increase the number of Miss Godden's readers, but it will certainly delight the ones she has."

+ New Yorker 22:132 O 19 '46 80w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p5 D 1 '46 250w

"There is in 'The River,' if one cares to look for it, a kind of unobtrusive symbolism. The death of a child becomes the death of childhood. There is a serpent, a cobra, which some will say is surely the Serpent in the Garden, the murderer of innocence. There is Harriet's kite-flying, which may or may not be the image of dreaming ambition. But these are the things to ponder after reading, for I assure you 'The River' is so intense, so quietly demanding of attention, that at the time there will be nothing in your thoughts but a small girl in India, and the people and the place that were her world." John Woodburn

GODDEN, RUMER—Continued

+ Sat R of Lit 29:16 O 19 '46 750w

"The River is little more than a hundred pages long. Yet it would be difficult, and unprofitable, to summarise it. The story flows evenly along like the river beside the children's home in India. It will not stay to be analysed. The reviewer can only report that it is a book with few faults." V. C. Clinton-Baddeley

+ Spec 177:248 S 6 '46 210w

"There is the natural charm of childhood about all these young persons, their confidences, their uncertainties, their shifts of mood from one hour to the next. Their problems are the problems known and partly solved by wise parents everywhere; and truth to character and situation is the real attraction of the novel. The novel is gently written and deftly constructed."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p413 Ag 31 '46 400w

"The River" is written simply and with unhurrying leisure, its style characterized by endearing, apparently natural artlessness that conceals a high degree of art. Miss Godden's touch, both of pen and heart, is light and true." F. H. Bullock

+ Weekly Book Review p3 O 20 '46 550w

Wis Lib Bul 42:168 D '46

"To my mind the most nearly flawless novel of the year is The River by Rumer Godden. And it is not surprising that it is, for with each book she writes Miss Godden's position as one of the finest of living English novelists becomes more secure. The translucent purity and limpid grace of her prose and the compassionate wisdom and serene understanding of her mind stamp all Miss Godden's books with the imprint of her own personality, with her own vision of life." Orville Prescott

+ Yale R n s 36:382 winter '47 360w

GODDEN, RUMER (MRS LAURENCE FOSTER). Thus far and no further; with drawings by Tontyn Hopman. 196p $3 Little

915.42 India—Description and travel 46-3669

A collection of essays, recorded conversations, and reflections on life, written while the author was living on a tea estate in India. The plantation was in the high Himalayas, and altho the author was accompanied by her two small daughters, their governess, and a host of servants, it was a rather solitary existence. The peace of this existence has crept into her book.

Reviewed by Wendell Johnson

Book Week p8 My 12 '46 360w

Booklist 42:315 Je 1 '46

Bookmark 7:11 N '46

"Herein is set forth color, beauty, pathos, philosophy, humor, the world of children and of their elders. . . It is an odd and original arrangement, but effective in its way. Though it will not be in the least what is expected by enthusiastic readers of Miss Godden's other books, especially not of the clever novel, 'Take Three Tenses.'"

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 My 2 '46 420w

"There are lovely descriptions of making a garden, of local birds, of divall, the feast of lights, of the growing and harvesting of tea, of the Himalayas, and their people, the lusty goatherds, the Nepalese women gathering in brilliant colors for the Durga puja. But Miss Godden's own self-conscious perfume pervades all so strongly that the reader has no chance even to sniff a whiff of the flowers or even of the coolies, whose smell of sweat and birds' Miss Godden at first hated 'then found familiar, then—almost—even though it was so strong—found friendly.' She should stick to novels. This snippet of autobiography reeks."

—Commonweal 44:290 Jl 5 '46 650w

"Colorful, lively prose, with characteristic cadences,

+ Kirkus 14:80 F 1 '46 140w

"Recommended for readers who responded to the exhilaration of the Black Narcissus atmosphere and who do not demand to have the adventures of their minds limited by a plot." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 71:482 Ap 1 '46 130w

"A book of rare poetic descriptions and reflections. . . There is something of the quality of Chinese poetry in Miss Godden's deceptively simple prose, not only in its delicate cadences and unresolved codas, but in its subtle juxtaposition of the ethereal and the commonplace. One moment she will be describing with ecstatic delight the beauty of a flower. The next moment she has centered all her attention on the intricacies of bamboo plumbing or the process of manufacturing tea. She is equally absorbed in the beautiful and prosaic, which, placed in apposition, gain in vividness." Nona Balakian

+ N Y Times p6 My 5 '46 850w

"There is a serenity, a calm about her recollections that is very refreshing in this troubled, hectic world. . . Whether it is the little yellow hand of the lama or Miss Godden's skill, 'Thus Far and No Further' has its own spell, a curious combination of vivid color and serenity." R. C. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 29:14 My 11 '46 700w

Reviewed by William Manchester

Spring'd Republican p4d My 26 '46 420w

"Against the somewhat novel Himalayan background 'Thus Far and No Further' offers a series of miniatures, sometimes quite ruthless when they appear most delicate. The book also contains illustrative drawings by Tontyn Hopman. These have sentimental charm but do not match a vividness which, in Miss Godden's prose, is aimed at the inner eye of the imagination." James Hilton

+ — Weekly Book Review p4 My 5 '46 700w

Wis Lib Bul 42:85 Je '46

GODSEY, TOWNSEND. Free lance photography. 246p il $4 Essential bks.

770 Photography, Commercial 46-8104

"Good survey of, and introduction to photography. Gives opportunities and limitations of free lance photography; equipment one should have; what to photograph and how to do it for best results. Treats of the preparation of negatives and prints; how to write cut lines; what the editors demand and the ethics governing photography. A final chapter tells about rights and copyrights. Bibliography." (Library J) Index.

"To the amateur photographer with a hopeful eye focused on a commercial career, this book is an invaluable 'must.'" R. M. S.

+ Book Week p5 D 8 '46 130w

"Recommended." W. A. Kalenich

+ Library J 71:1623 N 15 '46 80w

GOLDING, LOUIS. Glory of Elsie Silver. 390p $2.75 Dial press [10s 6d Hutchinson]

46-25107

"If you read Mr. Golding's spacious family chronicle, 'Five Silver Daughters,' [Book Review Digest, 1934] you will remember Elsie as one of the girls of Sam Silver, the Jewish waterproof manufacturer of Doomington, England. This latest installment of Silver family history begins with Elsie travelling to Poland, where she believes her husband, an important general high up in the Nazi hierarchy, has been wounded. It turns out that he has been liquidated as the result of a feud with Himmler. Without her husband's protection, Elsie's own life is in danger. She hides in the Warsaw ghetto and finally takes a magnificent part in the month-long battle in which Jews and underground forces from all over Europe held off the Nazis." New Yorker

Reviewed by James Light

Book Week p8 Ap 21 '46 350w

Booklist 42:282 My 1 '46

"Readers should not be frightened away from this book by the title, nor be prevented from finishing it by the flippant and tasteless irony that mars the earlier chapters; for it rises to scenes of tremendous emotional power. The finest of all is the scene in the council chamber, where the elders have been assembled to choose which areas of the Ghetto shall be raided for people to be sent to Treblinka. Mr. Golding's emotions were recollected in fury, and he has scarcely pretended to deal objectively with many of his characters. The book suffers in consequence. But few readers will rise from it without an impassioned realization of the Jews' suffering in Europe, without a fiercer hatred of all tyranny, and without a strengthened conviction of the duty to prevent its ever happening again, anywhere."

D. S.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p20 Ap 18 '46 500w

Kirkus 14:160 Ap 1 '46 110w

"It is all very exciting and horrible and told with that unflinching verve and knowledgeableness we should expect from Mr. Golding." J. D. Beresford

Manchester Guardian p3 D 21 '45 200w

"In piecing together the circumstances, the details, the day-to-day processes of both the Ghetto and the last uprising Mr. Golding is more than convincing. The knowledge of each has been fragmentary, and this book is, therefore, another attempt to penetrate one of those impenetrable curtains of the war, to take an imaginative X-ray of what never will be known, a matter that will give up its secrets, if at all, only to the imagination. With little to judge by except credibility, one feels that Mr. Golding has gotten the insane logic that ruled Warsaw, its Nazis and its Ghetto at that particular time." Kenneth Fearing

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 21 '46 400w

"Mr. Golding has two styles: the easygoing, rambling one that made the Doomington novels such satisfactory reading, and the subtle, almost precious one of 'Miracle Boy' and 'No News from Helen.' This latest book lacks the more distinguished qualities of each of these very different manners, but it is nevertheless an extremely interesting novel, which succeeds in making a ghetto into a real, physical place and not just a vague synonym for horror."

+ New Yorker 22:88 Mr 30 '46 240w

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Jl 7 '46 200w

"Under what is probably the season's most inept title, and diluted by a fictitious plot that is distinctly second-rate, this book has nevertheless for bedrock a great and thrilling story." N. L. Rothman

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:16 Ap 20 '46 460w

"The author has told his story in a way which is moving and absorbing in spite of a certain theatrical quality. We have suppd full with horrors in these last years; but although emotions may have become dulled, recent evidence at the Nuremberg trials has shown that the almost unspeakable events described in this book under a thin veil of fiction are desperately and ineffaceably true, and the mind can no longer take refuge, as it used to do in childhood, in the comforting reflection that it is 'only a story.'"

Times [London] Lit Sup p5 Ja 5 '46 240w

"Mr. Golding's heroine is overdecorated and overdrawn, but his depiction of brutality, suffering and starvation is starkly realistic." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p34 Mr 31 '46 200w

GOLDMAN, LAWRENCE. Tiger by the tail. 217p $2 McKay

46-4961

Mystery story.

"There's not a mention of fascism nor any other word on politics in the book; but its healthy attitude of defense of human rights and its unstressed allegories on labor solidarity and racial equality make it as sane and sensible a political whodunit as has emerged in some time. Quite aside from which, it rates high honors as a fast, vigorous, hard-boiled opus." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 Jl 4 '46 110w

"Produce market background new and unusual, characters—mostly tough—well limned action plentiful and pay-off satisfactory. O.K."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:42 Je 29 '46 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p22 Je 30 '46 90w

GOLDSTONE, LAWRENCE ARTHUR (LAWRENCE TREAT, pseud). H as in hunted. 252p $2.50 Duell

46-6605

Mystery story.

"The details showing the workings of the technical research laboratory are fascinating and there's a fine, suspenseful plot to boot." Elizabeth Bullock

+ Book Week p6 Ag 25 '46 140w

"Proceeding from more classical criminal detection to the suspense specialty of the chase, this offers some fine excitement."

+ Kirkus 14:360 Ag 1 '46 90w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p25 Ag 25 '46 130w

"An excellent variation on the well-worn hide-and-seek theme."

+ New Yorker 22:72 Ag 24 '46 100w

"It's high time somebody up and said that Lawrence Treat is in the very top flight of American mystery writers; so I'm hereby saying it. H as in Honey!" Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 S 1 '46 100w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p19 Ag 25 '46 90w

GOLDTHWAITE, EATON KENNETH. Cat and mouse. 217p $2.50 Duell

46-8192

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Book Week p12 N 17 '46 30w

New Repub 115:638 N 11 '46 20w

"The story is so skillfully plotted that not until the closing chapter does one become aware that the cat and mouse of the title have a double significance." I. A.

+ N Y Times p22 N 10 '46 120w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 24 '46 60w

"An interesting study in practical detecting; also in frenzied amateur ditto. Characters snared in emotional net do strange and surprising things."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:36 N 16 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p46 N 10 '46 150w

GOLDWATER, ROBERT JOHN, and TREVES, MARCO, eds. Artists on art; from the XIV to the XX century. 497p il $4.50 Pantheon bks.

704 Art. Artists

45-11131

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Booklist 42:209 Mr 1 '46

Bookmark 7:8 Mr '46

"Ferretting out the material compiled in this volume took years. The editors, Robert Goldwater and Marco Treves, have done the job beautifully, made splendid selections and fluent translations. They have added some relevant notes and included portraits of every artist." Dorothy Adlow

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 F 2 '46 360w

"A most valuable and unique book." Clement Greenberg

+ Nation 162:481 Ap 20 '46 500w

GOLDWATER, R. J.—Continued

"I am anxious," said Constable, 'that the world should be inclined to look to painters for information on painting.' Conceived in this spirit and planned to facilitate easy access to such authoritative points of view, 'Artists on Art' is a unique anthology, fresh in content and fascinating in its unexpectedness of subject. It is an encyclopedic compilation, reaching from the fourteenth century to our own day, of what great painters and sculptors have said, both in writing and conversation, relative to their own work and the work of other artists." Ellis S. Joseph

+ N Y Times p38 My 5 '46 1200w

"Here is a new thing in the world of anthologies which should prove a boon to teachers of 'art' and esthetics in young ladies' finishing schools as well as in institutions of the higher learning. . . . There is reason to believe that in the conventional academic classroom such a tool will facilitate instruction in 'art' more readily than any handbook of esthetics could." H. M. Kallen

+ Sat R of Lit 29:48 Mr 16 '46 700w

"Although one might wish that a few more Americans like Benton and Sargent had been included, the selection is skillful. A large number of classic utterances is balanced by many keen observations by lesser known men. The translations, many of them made by the editors, read well. Biographical notes are provided, and all the citations are identified in a general bibliography. Some of the works of art mentioned in the text are reproduced, but because of the poor quality of the paper most of the illustrations are unsatisfactory."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 2:3 Mr '46 320w

Reviewed by Thomas Craven

Weekly Book Review p20 Ja 27 '46 800w

GOLLANCZ, VICTOR. Our threatened values. 157p 5s Gollancz [English publication]

940.55 Reconstruction (1939-). Civilization [46-6732]

"Mr. Gollancz sees in Europe three special dangers ('apart from the major question of Communism and the Soviet Union') to our civilisation—the violence and lawlessness learned in the resistance movements, the intensification of nationalism and racialism, and a reversion to barbaric justice. . . . The last pages contain suggestions for dealing with the British zone of Germany—abolish the muddle of divided control, give people enough food to be healthy on, do not requisition the good houses for the use of our army and their wives while the natives live among ruins, respect civil liberties, encourage the Social Democrats, give democracy a chance to compete with the Russian Communist drive, revise the Potsdam agreements, or declare that they will not be applied in the British zone." Spec

Reviewed by G. Tatham

Canadian Forum 26:236 Ja '47 650w

"Mr. Victor Gollancz's Our Threatened Values is at once disturbing and heartening. It is disturbing because it sets down so frankly some of the causes of the disillusionment of our time—the latent nationalism of British Socialism, the blunting of the sense of international justice, the amorality of Communism with its glorification of ruthlessness and expediency. It is heartening because in the very vehemence of his protest Mr. Gollancz is driven back to the principles of liberal democracy, so often at a discount among writers of the Left."

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 5 '46 180w

"Addressed to Englishmen, with very few references to the United States, Our Threatened Values is a liberal-socialist manifesto which should find a wide and appreciative audience in this country." Heinz Eulau

+ New Repub 115:105 Jl 29 '46 1750w

Reviewed by C. E. M. Joad

New Statesman & Nation 32:49 Jl 20 '46 2150w

"Mr. Gollancz believes that 'there are in this country reserves of moral leadership that can still save the world.' Even those who may differ on points of detail from this book must find it a very moving and stirring plea for humanity, justice and common sense." Rose Macaulay

+ Spec 177:16 Jl 5 '46 800w

"Mr. Victor Gollancz's thesis is that the liberal civilization of the West is declining. . . . It is a familiar theme, but Mr. Gollancz develops it with a passionate conviction and a degree of detachment from the prejudices of his own political sympathizers which make this book one of the best contemporary examples of didactic writing. It has, however, one signal defect. Mr. Gollancz repeatedly asserts that his book is an essay about morals and not a political pamphlet, and it is as an essay about morals that it merits attention. Unhappily it does not keep this character throughout."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p339 Jl 20 '46 1250w

GOLLOMB, JOSEPH. Tiger at City high. 213p $2 Harcourt

46-6544

"Good school story, filled with suspense and tension of conflicting ideologies. Phil, easy-going and friendly, is forced to compete with Mike, brilliantly resourceful and unprincipled. Climax is exciting football game, but underlying the whole book is the idea of a democracy that is working for One World." Library J

Book Week p21 N 10 '46 230w

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 O 17 '46 180w

Churchman 160:3 N 15 '46 30w

"Integrity, warm human relationships, human portraits of teachers, combine to make the book attractive to older boys, who liked the author's Up At City High."

+ Kirkus 14:425 S 1 '46 90w

"Boys may feel the presence of too much moralizing, but the excitement of the story should get it read. Recommended. For ages 12-16." Gertrude Andrus

+ — Library J 71:1336 O 1 '46 70w

"The adult characters are all well drawn, especially Mike and Phil's faculty advisor, Mayer Gordon. The purpose behind the story is, perhaps, a little obvious. It is, however, a story that will set boys and girls thinking along lines that are significant just now." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:45 O 19 '46 270w

"Though there are types recognizable in any large school, and though Mike, for all his jungle ethics, keeps one's sympathy by his baffled, almost innocent surprise when they don't work; though the milling activities and surging under currents of a New York City school are faithfully reported, the problem quality never gets out of sight. Chilton is not above using school politics to support his own plans, into which Mike is drawn against his own father. Boys may find familiar scenes in this turbulent narrative, which will interest high schools of any large city. Viewed as literature, however, a reviewer might enjoy it more if he could lose the sense that somewhere out of sight A and B are digging a cellar." M. L. Becker

+ — Weekly Book Review p8 O 27 '46 400w

GOMME, ARNOLD WYCOMBE. Greece. (World today) 131p 11 maps $1.25 (3s 6d) Oxford

914.95 Greece, Modern A46-1791

A study of Greece as it was just before the beginning of the second World war, with a brief history of its last hundred years added. The author is an historian of ancient Greece and has traveled in modern Greece for the last thirty years. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 Ap 7 '46 270w

Bookmark 7:10 My '46

Foreign Affairs 24:754 Jl '46 30w

"One may feel that [the author] is a little too indulgent to General Metaxas and a little too reconciled to the inevitable poverty of Greece, but on the whole this forms an excellent textbook which should encourage by its record of progress those who feel inclined to despair of this gifted, wayward, but always independent nation." J. M. D. P.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 18 '46 180w

"For scrupulous accuracy the book cannot be faulted; only the recurrent present tense (for which the author apologises) reads uncomfortably every now and then. . . There are omissions which are less easy to explain by the date of writing. He deals with 'a considerable amount of social legislation when Venizelos was in office'; he does not mention (though he is otherwise resolutely just to General Metaxas) the ambitious labour laws of the Metaxas dictatorship. It is to be hoped that later editions of Greece will admit at least one more chapter." Kenneth Matthews

Spec 175:364 O 19 '45 700w

"Mr. Gomme's little book is to be widely recommended, for in it are to be found, simply stated, the answers with which many readers find themselves unprovided when questioned about Greece."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p495 O 20 '45 800w

GOOCH, GEORGE PEABODY. Courts and cabinets. 372p $3.75 Knopf [12s 6d Longmans]

940.204 Courts and courtiers. Europe—Kings and rulers 45-10968

"Critical essays, designed for the casual reader, on thirteen memoir writers of the monarchies and republics of Europe, from the time of Louis XIII to that of Gambetta. The writers include such gossips as Horace Walpole; the waspish Duc de Saint-Simon, whose reminiscences of the courts of Louis XIV and the Regency run to forty-one volumes; the melancholy and appealing Queen Hortense, step-daughter of Napoleon; and Frederick the Great's sister, Wilhelmina, whose diaries indicate that the court of her father was in the grand, frothing-at-the-mouth German tradition. Dr. Gooch, whose historical baggage is immense and to whom writing this book must have been pie, let's his subjects speak for themselves much of the time, while he compares notes and checks up on them as he goes along." (New Yorker) Index.

"In most memoirs, as Macaulay complained of Saint Simon, the road from fountain to fountain lies through a very dry desert. Dr. Gooch helps the reader lightly over the desert. The fountains at which he lingers ought to lead many a reader to turn to the original memoirs and to study some of the criticisms of them which he cites in his excellent bibliographies. The book is no doubt designed for the general reader rather than the professional historian. Seven of the studies have already appeared in the Contemporary Review. The historian would have been glad if Dr. Gooch, with his mature historical scholarship, had given a fuller critical appraisal of each of the writers." S. B. Fay

Am Hist R 51:703 J1 '46 480w

"The writing of history so that the principal characters who have molded the destiny of mankind emerge not as demi-gods shrouded in thick fog of legend but as living human beings is an art reserved for the very few. Among these few the distinguished British historian, G. P. Gooch, deserves a place at the very top. Gooch already is famed for his studies of European history during the tense period from 1871 to 1914. . . In this, his latest work, he accomplishes an amazing tour de force." David Karno

+ Book Week p4 F 3 '46 650w

Booklist 42:182 F 1 '46

Reviewed by R. F. Nichols

Christian Science Monitor p15 F 9 '46 700w

"Dr. Gooch's book is highly selective, but will be of the greatest interest and utility to students of history who desire to have in their own keep a series of original sources from Mazarin to Gambetta. In such a collection, many valuable and diverting items are necessarily omitted—the Letters of Madame, mother of the Regent, and Mme. de Lafayette's life of the first 'Madame,' the charming Henriette of England. Incidentally, there is a short but useful bibliography." Cuthbert Wright

+ Commonweal 43:578 Mr 22 '46 600w

Kirkus 13:536 D 1 '45 150w

"The book is frankly addressed rather to those who have not read the memoirs themselves than to those who have, and it aims successfully, to be interesting as well as informative. . . Like the professor who is said to have remarked that 'everybody knows a little Sanskrit,' Professor Gooch occasionally takes for granted a bit of knowledge which every schoolboy does not really have." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 162:291 Mr 9 '46 280w

"Let others read the collection cautiously. I read it with gusty relish, the privilege of those who read for entertainment and for the mere purpose of discovering what habits, manners, appearances, virtues, vices and mentalities were possessed by the great ones of the earth who crowd these pages. Historians and other lamp-bearers from the exterior of the past to the corridors of the future will find new oil and wicks herein. They will be better able to illuminate the events they carry with them for the inspection of posterity. But he whose enjoyment of gossip columns and 'now-it-can-be-told' dispatches is quite humanly enhanced by the high names of the subjects and their effects on their times will be content with the rare facilities this book affords of listening at the keyholes of palaces and inner cabinets and salons where history was made." Arthur Krock

+ N Y Times p3 Ja 20 '46 1750w

"It's all very entertaining."

+ New Yorker 21:78 Ja 19 '46 160w

"Such a book leaves us like a novel, and that the facts related were true facts, and that the actors were personalities who truly did live, only enhances the value of the narrative in which truth is stronger than fiction. Though nothing will be gained to an understanding of our times, the insight into human nature will be deepened, and the fascination of past times which were not always 'the good old days' will be recreated for the readers of today." Hans Kohn

+ Sat R of Lit 29:30 F 9 '46 350w

"It seems almost unnecessary to state that, thanks to Dr. Gooch's skillful guidance, even the casual reader would rise richer in information and understanding from his introduction to those exalted rulers and their ministers whose names span two centuries of European affairs. A less casual reader, on the other hand, might ponder how deeply purveyors of episodes and anecdotes can illuminate the processes of historical development. . . The memoir writers of yesterday and the gossip chroniclers and recorders of today are all of the lineage of Suetonius and Tacitus; like their progenitors, and, as Dr. Gooch wisely and repeatedly warns us, they are valuable only if handled with care." Leo Gershoy

+ Weekly Book Review p1 Ja 20 '46 900w

"It is with the hope of stimulating a wider interest in the reading of memoirs that Professor Gooch has written 'Courts and Cabinets.' Believing that few persons of their own accord will turn to the great memoir writers, he has taken upon himself the agreeable task of introducing thirteen different authors who range in time from Mme. de Motteville in the seventeenth century to Mme. Adam in the nineteenth. One of the most distinguished of living British historians, Mr. Gooch has done an expert job, and a thoroughly pleasant one, too. He has summarized the contents of each work, pointed out its highlights, placed it in its historical setting, evaluated it as an historical document, and by well-chosen and generous quotations transmitted the genuine flavor of the original." Alexander Thomson

+ Yale R n s 35:742 summer '46 700w

GOOD, CARTER VICTOR, ed. Dictionary of education; prepared under the auspices of Phi Delta Kappa. 495p $4 McGraw

370.3 Education—Dictionaries 45-7172

"The Dictionary is concerned with technical and professional terms and concepts in the entire area of education. As general policy, it has excluded names of persons, institutions, school systems, organizations, places, and titles of publications and journals, except where a movement, method, or plan is represented. . . . An attempt has been made to select from such related fields as psychology, sociology, and philosophy those terms with significant educational connotations.' (Preface) The approximately 16,000 definitions and terms in the final list are the work of 'coordinators' and their 'associates' and 'reviewers.' There is a twenty-page list showing the assignment of these specialists, most of whom are either connected with colleges or universities or are active in some other phase of education. The arrangement is alphabetical by the first word or the key word of a phrase. . . . At the end of the main dictionary are brief lists of educational terms used in the following countries: Canada, with over six pages; England, with about nine pages; France, with over four pages; Germany, with over five pages; and Italy, with slightly over ten pages. The terms are given in the language of the country with definitions in English." Subscription Bks Bul

GOOD, C. V.—Continued

School & Society 62:128 Ag 25 '45 20w

"Definitions in general are brief but clear. However the 75 entries under the key word 'course' show the need for a uniform understanding and usage of terms familiar but too often not clearly understood. . . . The format and paper are good. The print is rather small, but clear, comparable with Webster's Collegiate Dictionary (3rd ed.), though the headings in Webster's are darker and more easily distinguished from the definitions which follow than in the Dictionary of Education. . . . The Dictionary of Education provides educational workers and teachers with a scientific dictionary of professional terms comparable with the technical dictionaries in fields such as medicine, law, engineering, and psychology. It is recommended both for use of laymen and educators."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 17:2 Ja '46 600w

"This authoritative volume will be useful to the young teacher and scholar in acquainting him with commonly accepted definitions, and will enable the mature scholar to compare his definitions of terms with those of others."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:69 D '45 170w

GOOD, CARTER VICTOR, comp. See American council on education. Guide to colleges, universities, and professional schools in the United States

GOODIN, PEGGY. Clementine. 246p $2.50 Dutton

46-4252

At the beginning of the story Clementine is ten; at the end she is finishing her sophomore year in high school. At first Clem's idea of heaven is to be allowed to play on the boys football team, but gradually her boyden ways change, and her ways of tackling a three letter man and making him her own are just as effective, altho slightly more subtle. The scene is a small Indiana town.

Booklist 42:329 Je 15 '46

"A gay and clever little story of adolescent girlhood, written obviously by one whose memories are verdant, this novel won for its author the Avery Hopwood Award. Clementine, a lively, red-headed youngster in a midwest small town, romps, talks and rollicks her way into the reader's heart. Because she and her friends seem like real people, and nice ones, it is natural to lament her extremely limited resources as a Catholic."

+ Cath World 164:94 O '46 100w

"Very pleasant, lightly subsurface tale of adolescence, which sneaks up on you."

+ Kirkus 14:204 My 1 '46 210w

"Wholesome, generally sensitive but creaking with inept handling of colloquialisms." J. M. Brittan

+ Library J 71:919 Je 15 '46 70w

"Parents of 10-year-old daughters (who are understandably terrified when they try to think ahead) are urged to go to 'Clementine' for enlightenment. Those who are not so fortunately bedeviled are advised to come along for the ride. As a picture of a small Indiana town in the Nineteen Thirties, 'Clementine' merely skims the surface agreeably. . . . Miss Goodin's story is as pleasant to take as good conversation: if the fun gets a little out of hand at times, the emotion under it is sound."

William Du Bois

+ N Y Times p5 Je 30 '46 500w

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue

Sat R of Lit 29:12 Je 29 '46 430w

"What goes on these days in the junior miss department probably has Louisa May Alcott turning in her grave. If Peggy Goodin's history of one uninhibited small town girl growing up in Indiana is typical of the crop, the feminine adolescent isn't what she used to be. Clementine's evolution from the age of ten to sixteen is fast and curious." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p11 Jl 28 '46 230w

Wis Lib Bul 42:132 O '46

GOODIS, DAVID. Dark passage. 248p $2 Messner

46-7192

Mystery story.

"Intricate psychologizing, hot music take the place of the usual sex and drink and give this new directions in the hardhitting mystery field."

Kirkus 14:362 Ag 1 '46 120w

New Repub 115:638 N 11 '46 20w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p36 O 20 '46 200w

"Here is the most notable writing talent to emerge in the field in a long time. Mr. Goodis has an originality of naturalism, a precise feeling for petty lives, a creatively compelling vividness of detail that you might perhaps match if you could combine top Woolrich with early Odets. This is the goods." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 20 '46 120w

"Reasonably effective blend of toughness, sentiment, and speedy action. Innocent man's sleuthing interesting. Altho slightly omniscient, retrospective passages decelerate tempo."

Sat R of Lit 29:36 N 16 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p12 D 22 '46 180w

GOODMAN, JACK, ed. While you were gone; a report on wartime life in the United States, by Allan Nevins [and others]. 625p $3.50 Simon & Schuster 973.917 U.S.—Civilization. World war, 1939-1945—U.S.

46-633

Collection of short essays on various phases of civilian life in the United States, during World war II, written especially for service men. Partial contents: How we felt about the war, by Allan Nevins; What we talked about, by Paul Gallico; What happened to the younger people, by A. W. M. Wolf and I. S. Black; What we did about racial minorities, by Carey McWilliams; The Presidency, by Jonathan Daniels; The war agencies, by H. F. Pringle; What labor did, by R. J. Thomas; What industry did, by D. M. Nelson; What happened in agriculture, by Russell Lord; What happened in science, by Gerald Wendt; The women in the war, by Margaret Mead; The world of sports, by Dan Parker; The newspapers, by Lester Markel; The radio, by Norman Corwin; The magazines, by Eric Hodgins; Advertising, by Raymond Rubicam; Books, by Lewis Gannett; The theatre, by Wolcott Gibbs; The comics, by Milton Caniff; The movies, by Bosley Crowther; How we planned for the veterans' return, by Charles Hurd and Charles Bolté; How your Congressmen voted. Index.

Reviewed by Ira Wolfert

Book Week p1 F 17 '46 1800w

Booklist 42:198 F 15 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '46

"Non-veterans will enjoy the book; it is far and away the likeliest candidate for the servicemen's best seller."

+ Current Hist 10:445 My '46 130w

+ Kirkus 13:482 N 1 '45 350w

"This capsule recapitulation of civilian thought and action is a well edited, refreshing and liberal picture of the United States under stress. Recommended." H. G. Kelly

+ Library J 71:120 Ja 15 '46 110w

"The idea of 'While You Were Gone' is to give returned service men what is apparently now called a 'fill-in' on life in the United States during the war. It is a good idea, carried out here with no system or consistency, but at its best with results both entertaining and illuminating." A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.

+ — Nation 162:318 Mr 16 '46 800w

"A serviceable and in some respects excellent report on life in the United States proper from Pearl Harbor through V-J Day. Mr. Goodman says that he undertook the job at the suggestion of a soldier friend who thought it would be nice to have a book filling him in on what happened at home while he was away, and the book has been packaged for the veteran trade. But good history is good history, no matter for whom it is written. For all of the many limitations of scissors and paste, this is a very superior representation of the available facts, the observable moods and the detectable changes in American life during the war." R. H. Rovere

+ New Repub 114:289 F 25 '46 750w

"'While You Were Gone' helps us understand the somewhat confused views in Washington and in the country today. Since this book is fodder for all, not only for the men newly out of uniform, it may help us in the days ahead to find the way to one another and to work together as we did four years ago." Shepard Stone

+ N Y Times p4 F 17 '46 2000w

"Whatever the book's value as a survey of civilian America at war, most of the essays are informative and some of them very entertaining."

+ New Yorker 22:98 F 16 '46 160w

"It is probably best not to read this book at that single sitting we are always hearing about. To the reader who demands smooth coherence the shift in mental gear from a discussion on race relations to one on the comics may be somewhat grinding. . . . In general the arts and sciences come off best in this book—even though music and painting are treated only incidentally." W. S. Lynch

Sat R of Lit 29:7 Mr 16 '46 900w

"If you were overseas for an extended period during the war, this book will probably prove very absorbing. For it is a record of what happened in the USA during the war years, and it is a good and complete account. There is much in it that is trivial and some that is dull. It is aggravating in spots, and generally speaking it is uncritical. Nevertheless, it makes good reading, and it is a valuable history." Alden Stevens

+ — Survey G 35:173 My '46 230w

Theatre Arts 30:431 Jl '46 40w

"It is amazing how much the authors managed to pack into a little over 600 pages. . . . It is at times sparkling and at times dull; it is occasionally important and occasionally frivolous; it contains many things that you ought to know. . . . It is hilarious, boring, encouraging, discouraging, stimulating and infuriating. Come to think of it, the book is remarkably similar to the republic and the cigarette; of all three it may be said in the words of the adwriter, 'There's something about it you'll like.'" G. W. Johnson

+ — Weekly Book Review p2 F 17 '46 1200w

Wis Lib Bul 42:44 Mr '46

GOODMAN, PAUL. State of nature. 227p $2.50. Vanguard

46-5254

"Mr. Goodman calls his book a novel, but I would describe it as a series of broken sequences of experimental writing in which Mr.

Goodman, examining some people beset by all the ills that modern people can possibly fall heir to, takes off for the cosmic and comes home with a bag of green cheese. It contains much evidence of an original if pretentious talent, as well as page-long quotations, in big type, from Freud, Gide, and Marx; chapter heads, in smaller type, made up of quotations from Goethe, Mallarmé, Kropotkin, and others." New Yorker

Reviewed by James Laughlin

Book Week p5 Jl 28 '46 420w

"This is an amazing, often psychotic, creation, with little continuity or any norm in character, milieu, or story to provide the reader with a secure footing."

— Kirkus 14:180 Ap 15 '46 130w

"Some of the satire is witty; at least one of the characters, an old sage who dominates the book, has a nightmare reality; there are numerous aphorisms of the copybook variety; and in one sequence of incidents (the reveries of a dying soldier) Mr. Goodman displays his real talent for nostalgia. But the fragments are uneven, and the least successful parts and the large plan of the book are exasperatingly pretentious. Mr. Goodman appears to be saying more than he really does by a kind of automatic writing which makes sense if the reader wants to contribute the meaning. But anything he sees in the beguiling surface of this pseudo-biblical baby talk is merely his own reflection. Should he dive for the depths of significance he'll find his head stuck, just below the surface, in the mud of intellectual obscurity." John Farrelly

+ — New Repub 115:108 Jl 29 '46 750w

Reviewed by Isa Kapp

N Y Times p5 Jl 14 '46 550w

Reviewed by Hamilton Basso

New Yorker 22:54 Jl 6 '46 240w

"Some of [Mr. Goodman's] ideas have significance, others have none; sometimes the symbols he uses to convey his meaning evoke momentary responses of the sort he intends, more often they confuse and exasperate." Grace Frank

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:26 Ag 10 '46 410w

"[This book] contains much good writing, and frequently surprises the reader by unexpected events, insights and collocations, so that he feels considerable pleasure at dealing with so original a mind and so fresh a point of view. The work's greatest weakness is structural; it tends to fall into separate episodes rather than to shape into a single whole, but Mr. Goodman's talent is well worth watching and this book is, so far, the best example of it."

+ — U S Quarterly BkL 2:280 D '46 120w

"Mr. Goodman's characters are sardonic symbols—sometimes quite clear, often obscure. As such they add nothing to the book in the way of the entertainment or story values of more conventional fiction, and often they get in the way. Mr. Goodman might have done well to discard them altogether and make this a straight philosophical essay. The Goodman philosophy, be it noted, is not regulation modern Communism, which he calls 'Sociolatri,' a mere collectivized form of factory society. Mr. Goodman is, if nothing else, a man of startling individuality. His book is always provocative—the sort of writing that seems acute even when you're not quite sure what it means." Richard Match

Weekly Book Review p11 Jl 7 '46 900w

GOODRICH, LELAND MATTHEW, and HAM-BRO, EDVARD. Charter of the United Nations; commentary and documents. 400p $2.50 World peace

341.1 United nations (organization). Charter 46-2343

"The constitution of the United Nations Organization was written at the United Nations Conference on International Organization, which met at San Francisco from April 25 to June 26, 1945. This book contains all the official documents which entered into this Charter. It also describes the process by which it evolved at Dumbarton Oaks and at Yalta. The accompanying commentary analyzes the Charter, article by article, in an attempt to describe the nature of the obligations assumed by the fifty nations which signed it. Over 100 pages are taken up by documents, including the text of the completed Charter." (Christian Century) Bibliography. No index.

GOODRICH, L. M.—Continued

Am Hist R 51:744 J1 '46 30w

"There are a few gnats to strain at. On page 103, referring to the codification of international law, the authors say: 'Thus, in a sense, these so-called "codes" are little more than international statutes.' This common-law sniffishness about codes seems strange in a work devoted to an international statute. . . . Lastly, the whole Charter is not really dealt with in the book, since there is no commentary on the Statute of the International Court of Justice. But the reviewer is a little ashamed of himself for mentioning these things—especially as he thinks of how many years he will be likely to use this book, of all the notes he is likely to enter on the margins and on papers between the leaves, and how grateful he is to Messrs. Goodrich and Hambro and the World Peace Foundation for services like this one. He hopes that, year by year, the Foundation will give us surveys of the work of the United Nations equal in accuracy and helpfulness to those previously published on the work of the League." Llewellyn Pfankuchen

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:987 O '46 600w

"A careful and elaborate study of the United Nations Charter as adopted at San Francisco." G. M. A. Grube

+ Canadian Forum 26:167 O '46 100w

"An excellent volume for general reference purposes."

+ Christian Century 63:463 Ap 10 '46 150w
Foreign Affairs 24:742 J1 '46 30w

"The commentary is clear and, what is particularly worthy of praise, absolutely impartial and objective." J. L. Kunz

+ Harvard Law R 59:1181 S '46 800w

"This is a technical book, really a reference book; it cannot be read easily at one or two sittings for general enlightenment. Laymen can, however, consult it with profit. In the torrent of material which will be upon us in due time, this effort will more than hold its own." R. C. Snyder

+ Pol Sci Q 61:320 Je '46 400w

"One of the most helpful single volumes on the subject yet available. It should be useful to a variety of persons and groups, from university classes to adult education groups and study clubs." Alzada Comstock

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Je 2 '46 230w

GOODRICH, LLOYD. American watercolor and Winslow Homer; an exhibition monograph pub. by the Walker art center, Minneapolis, in collaboration with the Detroit Inst. of Arts and the Brooklyn museum. 109p il $2 Am. artists

751.42 Water color painting. Homer, Winslow 45-4794

"This is the first in a series of books on important exhibitions, which the American Artists Group is publishing in order to make them available to everybody and not just to the fortunate few who reside in or near the city where they were originally held. In 1945 the Walker Art Center in Minneapolis traced in an exhibition the development of the naturalistic tradition in American water color. Now in book form, this material is liberally illustrated and clearly arranged and explained by Lloyd Goodrich." Book Week

Reviewed by Dorothy Odenheimer

Book Week p14 Mr 24 '46 360w

Kirkus 14:64 F 1 '46 40w

"The text furnishes a challenging, informative, deeply understanding outline of this important part of America's coming of age in art, and should prove of lasting value to artist, student and the lay reader. It is a really notable contribution." Howard Devree

+ N Y Times p45 Ap 7 '46 320w

"Mr. Goodrich, an authority in the field, outlines wisely and succinctly the course that American watercolor has followed, from Homer on down to such modern exponents as John Marin, Charles Burchfield, and Reginald Marsh."

+ New Yorker 22:106 Mr 9 '46 90w

"With its excellent illustrations, the book is a model of what a catalogue should be, and can be." Thomas Craven

+ Weekly Book Review p16 My 5 '46 700w

GOODSPEED, CHARLES ELIOT, comp. Treasury of fishing stories; il. by Everett Ward. 600p $5 Barnes, A.S.

Short stories—Collections

Agr47-1

Collection of fishing stories, poems, and descriptions, ranging as to author from Saint John, thru Walton, Cotton Mather, the Brothers Grimm, Melville, Audubon, Thoreau, to Philip Wylie and Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings. Illustrated with drawings.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 179:108 Ja '47 260w

"Charles Goodspeed's 'Treasury' is physically a huge, and textually, a wonderful, affair; for those just discovering the world of fishing literature and editors, he is 'the' Goodspeed, the Boston bookseller, in private life and an earnest and most literate angler." Leo Kennedy

+ Book Week p2 D 15 '46 130w

Booklist 43:165 F 1 '47

"A good gift item for the sportsman."

+ Kirkus 14:534 O 15 '46 120w

"Any fisherman who found this excellent collection in his Christmas stocking is going to be a happy man indeed. It's not the first compilation of fishing stories ever made, nor will it be the last; but it is now, and is likely to remain, the best. Its variety, its richness, and the sustained high quality of its selections set it quite apart from any similar work this reader has seen." J. R. de la Torre Bueno

+ N Y Times p30 Ja 19 '47 700w

New Yorker 22:66 D 28 '46 70w

GOODSPEED, EDGAR JOHNSON. How to read the Bible. 244p $2.50 Winston 220 Bible. Whole

The purpose of this book is to "undertake a literary and historical approach to [the Bible], taking up the chief books in it as biography, oratory, history, poetry, drama, fiction, letters, and visions, in the light of the times that produced them and the purposes of their writers, thus combining literary and historical interests, always remembering that important as they undoubtedly are for literature and history, their religious messages must be kept uppermost. . . . The book is intended not as a summary of the Bible or as a substitute for it but as a companion and guide to the reading of it." (Pref)

Reviewed by J. O. Supple

Book Week p5 D 8 '46 450w

Booklist 43:112 D 15 '46

"Professor Goodspeed furnishes a guide which will be useful not only to those who know little about the Bible but also to those who know a good deal. His scholarship is thorough and mature, a scholarship for which all scholars in the field of biblical research have profound respect. But he bears his scholarship lightly. In this book, which is intended for use by ordinary people who do not expect to become great scholars, he does not clutter the pages with the many minute details which are of the essence of scholarly research." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 63:1440 N 27 '46 650w

"There have been many books intended to guide the Christian in his reading of the Bible. Few, however, have come from the pen of as universally acknowledged an authority in his field as is Dr. Goodspeed. And fewer still have given the results of profound scholarship in as simple and understandable form. This is a book which can have many uses. The individual student of the Bible will find that it opens up anew the literary and spiritual treasures of Holy Writ. The minister could have no more valuable reference book. The teacher of the Bible might well use it as a text-book for young people or adults."

+ Kirkus 14:552 N 1 '46 130w

"There are questions, very puzzling to modern readers of the Bible, which Dr. Goodspeed does not tackle—the perplexing differences between our ways of thinking and the thinking of the ancient biblical world about such matters as cosmology, demonology, miracles and in general the pre-scientific world-view as over against our present-day ideas. Here, too, if one follows Dr. Goodspeed's suggestions through, one is likely to need further help from other sources, and this reviewer wishes that this book contained a bibliography of such supplementary aids. What Dr. Goodspeed undertakes to do, however, he does very well, indeed." H. E. Fosdick

+ N Y Times p7 D 1 '46 900w

"A readable and stimulating introduction to some of the world's greatest literature." A. F.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 24 '46 140w

"This is the perfect 'reader's guide' to the Bible. To be sure, I have some questions—why, for example, the prophets, who were preachers, are here so tangled up with poetry, as though poetry and not the fate of Israel were their prime concern? But such questions are unimportant and intrusive. Nothing should be allowed to take away from the sheer delight of his book, its precise and genial scholarship, its feeling for human values, and its love for the Bible as pure literature." J. H. Holmes

+ Weekly Book Review p22 D 8 '46 700w

GORDON, ALVIN J., and GORDON, MRS DARLEY (FULLER). Our son, Pablo; introd. by Kenneth Macgowan. (Whittlesey house publication) 235p il $2.75 McGraw

970.3 Velasquez Gallardo, Pablo. Tarasco Indians 46-25230

The authors went to Mexico to work on a documentary film: Mexico Builds a Democracy. While there they were adopted by a young Mexican Indian, Pablo, whose zeal for an education in the United States appealed to them. Later Pablo came to California and lived with the Gordons while he studied at the University. This story describes Pablo's efforts to adjust himself to American ways of living, and the Gordon's visit to Pablo's Mexican home after he left them.

"Right now, when humanitarian impulses seem to have undergone a climacteric, this true story can be recommended as a remarkable pick-me-up. If you don't need a prescription, just keep it in mind anyway. It is, from beginning to end, first-rate entertainment. . . It is all told, with photographs, in the best anecdotal style—told so well that this book must be classed as an anomaly and an insult. Here are a couple of young motion picture producers who have the tactlessness to demonstrate, as few writers have done recently, the still unrivaled charm of the printed page." George Dillon

+ Book Week p3 Ag 11 '46 410w

Booklist 42:362 J1 15 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '46

"The story of Pablo's adventures as the Mexican lad reacts and adjusts to American life and ways, could have made a light and amusing tale were it not for the unfortunate effort to give it 'significance.' Cinema producer Kenneth Macgowan's solemn assurance, in his introduction to the book, that 'The authors have drawn the reader into an understanding of the greatest problem that lives before the nation and our world: the problem of . . . the minority groups,' is an injustice to the book. If the reader can ignore the taint of Hollywood's 'supercolossal,' there is a goodly residue of humor and interest in 'Our Son Pablo.'" L. J. T.

+ Commonweal 44:582 S 27 '46 200w

"A warm, disarming story that captures the Mexican spirit."

+ Kirkus 14:166 Ap 1 '46 190w

Reviewed by L. R. Etzkorn

Library J 71:1047 Ag '46 90w

Reviewed by Nona Balakian

N Y Times p8 Ag 11 '46 650w

"Though the Gordons make no pretensions to literary talent their sincerity and earnestness come through the often amateurish construction and writing their book shows. Their experiment in human relations—it seems to have been remarkably successful so far, too—is the important thing, and the book is worth reading for that reason." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 14 '46 850w

"It is a moderately humorous but inconsequential little book, interesting because the experiment was interesting, because Pablo was a nice chap and the Gordons nice people. Its message against racial and minority discriminations makes it worthwhile." Elizabeth Fagg

Sat R of Lit 29:19 Ag 31 '46 800w

Reviewed by Betty Kirk

Weekly Book Review p1 Ag 11 '46 850w

Wis Lib Bul 42:148 N '46

GORDON, MRS ELIZABETH SOUTHALL (CLARKE) GORDON BIDDLE. Days of now and then. 260p $2 Dorrance

B or 92

46-255

"Elizabeth Gordon Biddle Gordon has known a great many people and in 'Days of Now and Then' she writes about them, and about herself. This is the biography of a southerner in Baltimore, Philadelphia and continental society and is dedicated to three men, two of whom were her husbands. Born Elizabeth Clarke in Henderson, N.C., Mrs Gordon soared high and far in the social world of dinners, balls and charitable affairs, and likes to tell who was there and to whom they were married." Springfield Republican

Christian Century 63:145 Ja 30 '46 10w

"The flatteries of those who have told her she looked young or beautiful are by no means omitted, and there is evidence of a strong sense of humor. Her story lacks continuity, but Mrs Gordon prepares the reader for that by saying that 'its very nature is a record of incidents not completely sequential.' It is filled with anecdotes and personal reminiscences, which she hopes 'will prove of wider interest than at first visualized.'" D. B. B.

+ — Springfield Republican p6 Ja 22 '46 240w

GORDON, MRS MARY C. (BIGGAR). Life of George S. Gordon, 1881-1942; with an introd. by Lord Halifax. 171p $3 (10s 6d) Oxford

B or 92 Gordon, George Stuart A46-408

"The late president of Magdalen College and vice-chancellor of Oxford University passed a happy, active, fruitful but almost eventless life as student and don successively at Glasgow, Leeds, and Oxford. Save during the first world war, when he served with distinction in the British Army, his career was wholly academic. . . Since the chancellorship of Oxford is an honorary office, as vice-chancellor Gordon was administrative head of the University; and he carried the weight of his great responsibilities during the difficult period of transition and adjustment to war conditions between 1938 and 1942. . . The portrait which emerges from this biographical sketch by Gordon's widow is that of an attractive man of strong mind and kindly heart; but we really learn more about him from the volume of letters published in 1943." Weekly Book Review

"This biography is too good to miss; whether the name of George S. Gordon carries prior associations or not, one lays down this little book the richer for a very warm and human view of a fine and memorable person." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 Mr 10 '46 100w

"Mrs. Gordon's biography is pleasant and informative; and it firmly sketches the main lines of Gordon's character. And, if it is more uniformly genial in tone than some personal narratives that have recently emerged from the universities, few readers will quarrel with it on that account." H. H.

GORDON, M. C. B.—Continued

+ Christian Science Monitor p19 N 17 '45 400w

"As a companion volume to his selected letters published last year The Life of George S. Gordon, with an introduction by Lord Halifax, could hardly be bettered. His wife, with sensitive self-effacement, has seen to it that so far as possible her husband should be made to tell his own story through his letters and papers. But her skill in doing this owes much to intimacy and to the recollections of some of the many friends who delighted in so companionable, shrewd, and racy a being." H. I. A. F.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 14 '45 240w

"We have no desire to talk big about a modest and unpretentious book, but Mrs. Gordon's life of her husband is one of those biographies that fill their frame. It shows (as Gordon would have wished) the man who could be loved and laughed at, and persuades us that he was one with the master of humane letters and wise administrator."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p522 N 3 '45 2800w

Weekly Book Review p33 Ap 28 '46 360w

GORDON, MILDRED. Little man who wasn't there. 224p $2 Doubleday

46-3586

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p10 My 19 '46 180w

Booklist 42:349 J1 1 '46

Kirkus 14:136 Mr 15 '46 90w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p34 Ap 28 '46 140w

"Western background, atmospheric characters and plentiful action partly make up for incomplete opacity of puzzle."

Sat R of Lit 29:44 My 4 '46 40w

"This is a likable little anecdote with Arizona scenery and a bit of fun to ease the shudders." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p22 My 5 '46 150w

GORDON, MRS PATRICIA. Rommany luck; ll. by Raffaello Busoni. 206p $2 Viking

46-11823

Tale of the English gipsies during the last days of the reign of Queen Elizabeth. The hero is the gipsy youth Orlando who goes to the queen to seek pardon for his family and gains her favor and pardon for all gipsies in England. For grades five to eight.

Booklist 43:120 D 15 '46

"Interesting and holding reading. Good colorful background of rural and urban England adds to the interest. Some adults may question the portrayal of gypsies as attractive vagabonds with a penchant for being light-fingered, and the author hastens to forestall such criticism by indicating that the folkways and morals of 16th century England were none too savory. Anyhow, it's good story telling."

+ Kirkus 14:424 S 1 '47 130w

"Theme is serious, yet the story is light, swift-paced and very interesting. Strongly recommended." Ruth McEvoy

+ Library J 71:1808 D 15 '46 70w

+ N Y Times p31 Ja 19 '47 130w

"There are some exciting adventures, among them a scene with the queen surrounded by her court. There are effective chapter-headings in black and white." M. G. D.

Sat R of Lit 29:31 D 14 '46 120w

"Life on the road in old England, always a fascinating subject, takes most of the narrative, the brief scene with Elizabeth is lifelike, and gypsy life, language and customs pervade the book." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p7 Ja 12 '47 270w

GORE ALLEN, W. See Allen, W. G.

GORKY, MAXIM, pseud. (ALEXEI MAXIMOVICH PYESHKOFF). Orphan Paul; tr. by Lily Turner and Mark O. Strever. (Pursuit press bk) 270p $2.75 Boni & Gaer

47-632

A hitherto unpublished novel by the famous Russian author. It is the tragic story of an orphan, lonely and imaginative, and the hardships and disillusionments which made up his life. Includes also the essay "How I became a writer."

Book Week p6 D 22 '46 140w

"The characterizations are excellent, the story gloomily interesting, the portrayal of Russia's poor, vivid. An appendix gives important dates in Gorky's life and a list of all his writings. Recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 71:1625 N 15 '46 100w

"A story of the love of a foundling for a prostitute, which manages to convey with beauty and reality a situation which is trite and usually treated with sentimentality. Perhaps no one in the history of literature has managed to describe squalor with such success and such wit. 'Orphan Paul' is real Gorky." M. R. Werner

+ N Y Times p7 D 29 '46 650w

"'Orphan Paul,' it must be said, does not represent Gorky at his best. Its climactic murder scene springs from a rather bookish and romantic conception of how a lover ought to behave when he is greatly moved, and much of the first half of the novel is cluttered with grotesque, irrelevant detail that betrays an unsure taste. It is clearly a young man's work. Nevertheless, many of Gorky's finest characteristics are fully in evidence here, among them his compelling emotional power, his genius for character projection, and his brooding sense of environment as doom." Stephen Stepanchev

+ Weekly Book Review p10 D 15 '46 550w

GORKY, MAXIM, pseud. (ALEXEI MAXIMOVICH PYESHKOFF). Reminiscences. 215p $2.75 Dover

928 Tolstoi, Lev Nikolaevich, graf. Chekhov, Anton Pavlovich, Andreev, Leonid Nikolaevich. Blok, Aleksandr Aleksandrovich

46-5503

"Maxim Gorky was one of the world's greatest journalists, in the Plutarchian sense, and this book contains some of his best work—memories of Tolstoy, Chekhov, Andreyev, and others, along with what appears to be the whole of the Chekhov-Gorky correspondence." New Yorker

"This is a welcome collection of Gorky's reminiscences, which have hitherto, in English at least, been available only in scattered volumes, some of them out of print. . . The total effect of the book is to give us a remarkable view of Gorky, almost unaffected by the necessities of the political background. It is, of course, true that he had keen political interests throughout his life, but I think that most critics will agree that he was at his literary best when free from immediate consideration of the political situation." G. V. Bobrinskoy

+ Book Week p4 J1 14 '46 400w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 4 '47 120w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard

Nation 163:560 N 16 '46 40w

Reviewed by Perry Miller

N Y Times p3 J1 21 '46 1200w

"Whenever Gorky thought a man's personality was worthy of his attention, he did a thorough job on it, probing and worrying his subject until there was nothing left to learn. He remembered everything and wrote it all down, and it is our good fortune that most of the men who interested him were of titan size."

+ New Yorker 22:78 Je 29 '46 80w

Time 48:100 J1 15 '46 550w

GORSKA, HALINA. Prince Godfrey, the knight of the star of the nativity; introd. by Phyllis Fenner; illuminated by Irene Lorentowicz. 206p $3 Roy pubs.

398.2 Legends—Poland 46-7452

"Twelve wondrous stories of a Polish hero, Prince Godfrey, Knight of the Star of the Nativity, as told by the astrologer of his father's court. Twelve strange prophecies were made when the child was born. Twelve times they came true and none who was oppressed or in need of help ever failed to receive that help from Prince Godfrey." Book Week

Book Week p3 N 10 '46 140w

Booklist 43:105 D 1 '46

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 22:472 N '46 120w

+ Kirkus 14:387 Ag 15 '46 130w

"Similar in spirit to the King Arthur stories, this hero tale of Polish extraction has both dignity and charm." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 71:1545 N 1 '46 70w

"Halina Gorska writes with Slavic poetry and fire, which is well conveyed by the translator, and the spirit of the book is as Polish as that of Hans Christian Andersen is Scandinavian. As with him, we can recognize one of those rare people who not only love children but can think in their language. 'Prince Godfrey' will appeal especially to children who love poetry, fairy tales and legends." Mary Mian

+ N Y Times p48 N 10 '46 200w

"The stories, each forming a complete entity, combine to comprise a whole that is a real contribution to hero literature. The illustrations and illuminations make it an exceptionally attractive book." Yvette Schmitt

+ San Francisco Chronicle p5 N 10 '46 110w

"The translation is a bit 'flowery,' but it has a touch of humor, and the word pictures are often very beautiful. Irene Lorentowicz's illustrations give the book great distinction. . . It is a book whose value will remain constant as the years go by. It will bring, this year, beauty and dignity to the Christmas festival." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:29 D 14 '46 400w

"For centuries such heroes have been held in the hearts of their people, heroes of romance, Christian in feeling but retaining the pagan principle of having magicians to fight. And if the effect of this book, even on an older person, is curiously soothing, restful and generally satisfying, it is because whether he believes in the strictest sense or not, he is basking in something long believed."

+ Weekly Book Review p10 N 10 '46 470w

Wis Lib Bul 42:153 N '46

GOTTSCALK, FRUMA. The runaway soldier; il. by Simon Lissim. 161p $2.50 Knopf

398 Folklore, Russian 46-25275

Sixteen folk tales of old Russia retold for reading aloud to children, could be used by storytellers. For grades three to five.

Book Week p10 N 10 '46 140w

Booklist 43:58 O 15 '46

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 22:463 N '46 80w

Kirkus 14:420 S 1 '46 80w

"Well told in a form that will be readily accepted by storytellers as well as by the many boys and girls who love fairy tales. For ages 8-12. Recommended." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 71:1334 O 1 '46 70w

"There are excellent stories for telling and reading aloud in the collection. . . The stories are told simply and clearly, but without the genuine folk quality and peasant humor of another Russian collection, 'Picture Tales From the Russian,' by Valery Carrick. These qualities are found abundantly, however, in the illustrations by Simon Lissim." Mary Mian

+ N Y Times p30 O 6 '46 230w

Reviewed by Dagny Juell

San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 10 '46 60w

"This is a new version—and a good one. We can think of no nicer Christmas present than this gay, attractive book. It will be approved by young and old and it looks like Christmas!" M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:46 N 9 '46 140w

Wis Lib Bul 42:170 D '46

GOTTSCALK, LOUIS REICHTHAL, and others. Use of personal documents in history, anthropology, and sociology; prepared for the Committee on appraisal of research. 243p $1.50 Social science research council

301.8 History—Historiography. Anthropology—Methodology. Sociology—Methodology 46-2844

"This book deals with the use of human and personal documents in history and also in the two social studies of anthropology and sociology. Such documents are the chief source of historical information; but they are only one source of many, and a minor source, in the two latter studies. Therefore their use in history is the most widely treated of the three. A discussion of the use of personal documents in history really requires a book on historical method and that is what Professor Gottschalk has given us here. . . The article on the use of personal documents in anthropology by Clyde Kluckhohn ought to prove very helpful to teachers and writers of history as well as to those who work in the field of the most basic social study. . . The third part of this book, dealing with the use of personal documents in sociology, the most inclusive of the social studies, is the work of Robert Angell, sociologist, of the University of Michigan." Am Hist R

Reviewed by E. M. Hulme

Am Hist R 51:91 O '45 480w

Reviewed by R. T. LaPiere

Am J Soc 52:156 S '46 1250w

"The Social Science Research Council is to be congratulated on presenting this valuable collection of studies. It should be made available to students in the social sciences everywhere." W. E. Caldwell

+ Social Forces 24:354 Mr '46 2650w

GOUDGE, ELIZABETH. Reader; comp. and arranged, with an introd. by Rose Dobbs. 498p $3.50 Coward-McCann

46-8278

"A collection of favorite short stories and selections from all the famous novels from 'A City of Bells' to 'Green Dolphin Street.'" (Note on title-page)

"This would be a happy choice for a bedside or a guest-room book, for it is pleasant reading—very English, lyrical in its appreciation of the beauties of nature and warm with a mystical religious faith. Miss Goudge's favorite settings—the English cathedral towns and the stanch Channel Islands—are felicitous background for her story-telling gift. Even the fragments scissored from her novels make bright bits that stand on their own." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p22 D 15 '46 550w

Weekly Book Review p17 D 29 '46 40w

GOULD, JEAN ROSALIND. Miss Emily; il. by Ursula Koering. 220p $2.50 Houghton

Dickinson, Emily—Fiction 46-3353

Fictionized biography of Emily Dickinson, written for young people.

"Seldom has an author succeeded so well in making a character become our choice new friend." H. F. Griswold

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 13 '46 360w

"Through a sensitively written story-biography Jean Gould attempts to reveal the baffling personality of Emily Dickinson to young girls. . . Girls will naturally turn to Emily Dickinson's poetry after reading this book." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:311 My '46 110w

GOULD, J. R.—Continued

"Historically, the author's statements seem more positive than proved evidence warrants. The poetry is inadequately represented with a kind of false emphasis on imagined incidents which purport to bring meaning to the hackneyed verses. Any young person mature enough to be interested in Emily Dickinson beyond the few famous simple poems of anthologies, would do better to go for biographical material to the direct, lucid, distinguished biographies written by members of the Dickinson family, contradictory as they are, or to the sensitive volume by Genevieve Taggard, The Life and Mind of Emily Dickinson."

— Kirkus 14:72 F 1 '46 250w

"Style of writing is not outstanding but will be acceptable to serious-minded readers of high-school age." Dorothea Dawson

Library J 71:764 My 15 '46 90w

"The pedestrian character of this narrative, its wealth of clichés, and its tone of immitigable gentility, alike suggest that the author is impervious to the quality of the woman about whom she has chosen to write. She treats the psychopathology of Dickinsonian life with a childlike innocence, but is unashamed in her freedoms with the known facts of Miss Dickinson's history. . . . Intended 'for boys and girls who have read or will want to read Emily Dickinson's poetry,' this highly fictionalized biography is calculated to dismay those in the first group and to turn those in the second group away from their poet." Babette Deutsch

— N Y Times p32 Ap 28 '46 400w

"The beauty of Emily Dickinson's spirit and her chosen way of life is not easily expressed in prose. Miss Gould suggests it only briefly. A few of the more obvious poems are quoted, but not enough to give a real insight into the productive years that were to follow. The illustrations are lifelike and attractive. They and the text form a careful and an entertaining introduction to the young Emily Dickinson." R. A. Hill

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:42 S 28 '46 600w

"A biography of Emily Dickinson for young people written with such charm and enthusiasm that the fame of Amherst and its shy genius should for a while at least resound above the sound of juke boxes. Probably it will have the most appeal for girls, but there is no reason why boys and even adults should not get pleasure from this gay story of a girl and her friends in Amherst a century ago." R. F. H.

+ Spring'd Republican p6 Ap 27 '46 260w

"This, I suppose, must be as near as a book for boys and girls can come to a book about the life of Emily Dickinson. Why they should be greatly interested in her life I do not know. There are her poems instead, into which her life withdrew. I do not find that most of this book would greatly inspire me to read them." M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p6 My 12 '46 360w

Wis Lib Bul 42:76 My '46

GOULD, KENNETH MILLER, and COYNE, MRS JOAN, eds. Young voices; a quarter century of high school student writing selected from the Scholastic awards; foreword by Dorothy Canfield Fisher. 396p $3 Harper

810.8 School verse and prose 45-10354

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Booklist 42:197 F 15 '46

Reviewed by W. R. Benét

Sat R of Lit 29:9 Mr 23 '46 90w

"Scores of the themes point unerringly to the fact that the recognized objectives of English instruction in high schools are being attained in a measure worthy of commendation. It is significant also that the authors of these selections are representative of all types of secondary schools: technical and vocational as well as academic and general, rural as well as metropolitan, private and parochial as well as public. To borrow the evaluation of Dorothy Canfield Fisher, who wrote the Foreword: 'The book gives us a bird's-eye view of young hearts and young minds from Maine to California.'" E. S. Lide

+ School R 54:121 F '46 600w

Wis Lib Bul 42:72 My '46

GOULD, RALPH ERNEST. Yankee storekeeper [il. by Stephen J. Voorhies]. (Whittlessey house publication) 195p $2.50 McGraw

B or 92

46-3058

Reminiscences of a Maine storekeeper, who later branched out to become the town undertaker, and still later to sell gasoline. The breath of life to him is a good trade, and the book is full of stories of swapping.

Reviewed by Rosemary Taylor

Book Week p18 Ap 14 '46 550w

Bookmark 7:7 My '46

"Some of his discussions—as of the cynical economics of the undertaking business—get a little strong. And his Grange meeting anecdotes are rather fatuously off-color. But it is an authentic book, written out of a lifetime of hard experience. It should delight any businessman, for it is filled with primitive lore that appears to be as useful on Wall Street or Fifth Avenue as it was in Harmony, Maine." E. D. C.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 Ap 27 '46 600w

"Readers with any nostalgia in their make-up will savor reading the story just as much as the self-dehydrated Mr. Gould clearly does the writing. Part of the autobiography appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, which would like his super-hard-headed individualism, but which has drawing room rules against some of his more salty and peppery phrases and anecdotes and irreverences. R. E. Gould is, of course, a character—and he really is."

Commonweal 44:20 Ap 19 '46 130w

"Fascinating reading for anyone interested in folk ways. Vigorous portrait of a tight-fisted Down Easter."

+ Kirkus 14:60 F 1 '46 130w

"Told with shrewd Yankee wisdom and sly humor, this book gives a vivid picture of the old-fashioned country store when it was a lively trading-center for goods, gossip and politics. . . . Tribute to a grand old institution gradually disappearing from American life which should find its way to all public library shelves with other Americana." S. E. Sherman

+ Library J 71:584 Ap 15 '46 140w

"Not since 'David Harum' has a book appeared with more horse sense and better horse stories in its pages than this chronicle of a Maine storekeeper. . . . Every chapter has a full measure of racy anecdote and every page its flash of Yankee wit." R. T. Bond

+ N Y Times p20 Ap 14 '46 650w

"The book is as authentic as the smells of tea, kerosene, rubber boots, mouse cheese; the jumble of harness, crackers, tobacco, work clothes, fishing poles, and foodstuffs that is any crossroads store you have ever known. It is as authentically Maine as an L. L. Bean catalogue." J. P. Wood

+ Sat R of Lit 24:26 Ap 20 '46 800w

Spring'd Republican p4d Ap 28 '46 480w

"The essential of the book is its picture of a way of life, not merely of business, a picture that, despite its harshnesses, arouses nostalgia and more than a little envy." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p30 Ap 14 '46 650w

GOULD, RANDALL CHASE. China in the sun. 403p $3.50 Doubleday

951.04 China

46-317

The author "provides a comprehensive account, part personal, but most of it entirely impersonal, of the background, present status and future possibilities of the seemingly overwhelming problems, political, social, economic and spiritual, that face the Chinese giant as it struggles so clumsily, so desperately, to its feet. The long conflict of the Kuomintang and the Communists, of course, figures largely in Randall Gould's story, but he does not omit the potential importance of the League of Democratic Parties, which is neither Kuomintang nor Communist, although closer in immediate interest to the latter, and which would be certain to play an interesting role in any workable coalition rule in a unified China. While these political sections of the book are currently of the most immediate interest, there are likewise valuable chapters on the general quality of Chinese social life and institutions." (Weekly Book Review) Index.

Reviewed by E. M. Gale

Am Pol Sci R 40:810 Ag '46 650w

Booklist 42:211 Mr 1 '46

Bookmark 7:10 My '46

Christian Science Monitor p16 F 7 '46 650w

Reviewed by W. F. Sands

Commonweal 43:532 Mr 8 '46 390w

Current Hist 10:351 Ap '46 80w

Foreign Affairs 24:755 Jl '46 100w

"An important book, but difficult for steady reading, with multiplicity of names and assumptions of knowledge. But don't overlook it."

+ — Kirkus 13:501 N 15 '45 250w

"Mr. Gould refuses to see any connection between the activities of the Chinese Communists and the foreign policy of the Soviet Union. And this is the greatest weakness of his book, for it leads him to a grotesquely over-optimistic conclusion. . . It is a great pity that a book so admirable in so many respects as 'China in the Sun' should be marred by such a grievous fault. In the writing of contemporary history and the forecasting of the future, ignorance of some of the relevant facts can be quite as dangerous as their deliberate suppression. . . 'China in the Sun' proves that Mr. Gould knows a very great deal about China, and that he tries conscientiously to be fair. It does not prove that he knows much about Communist Russia. Nor does it prove that he is very worldly-wise." Varian Fry

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:10 Mr 2 '46 1250w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:118 Je '46 210w

"Since [an] unusual breadth of interest and sympathy is to be found throughout 'China in the Sun' [it] becomes a report of high value to the increasing number of Americans who realize the importance to all of us of what is going on in the storm-tossed land of Cathay." Richard Watts

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ja 27 '46 1500w

Wis Lib Bul 42:73 My '46

GRAEFENBERG, ROSIE (GOLDSCHMIDT) (COUNTESS WALDECK) (R. G.). Lustre in the sky. 434p $2.75 Doubleday

46-3212

Novel based on the final phase of the Napoleonic era. Vienna, during the days of the Congress of Vienna is the scene and the center of this scene of brilliant pageantry is Talleyrand.

Reviewed by Arthur Meeker

Book Week p3 My 5 '46 700w

Kirkus 14:110 Mr 1 '46 210w

"Countess Waldeck displays considerable gusto in painting a pleasant picture of Ancien Régime society. But nothing new is added to the conventional, glamorized portraits of Metternich, Czar Alexander, Talleyrand, the Duchess of Sagan and others. The main characters, though drawn with a profusion of detail, remain flat, and the description of their passion is more eloquent than convincing." F. C. Weiskopf

N Y Times p18 Ap 28 '46 320w

"'Lustre in the Sky' is one of those full-blown novels of history wherein practically every character bears a familiar name, wherein bands play and soldiers march, wherein elaborate foods and coiffures and gowns have their importance, where scenes shift from throne room to ballroom to bedroom in dizzy succession, and where snowy bosoms are just as important in achieving decisions as economic or national necessities. Such material can be handled badly or it can be disciplined into a convincing whole. Countess Waldeck has made a success of it." Herbert Gorman

+ Sat R of Lit 29:8 Je 1 '46 1150w

"A descriptively colorful, but excessively talkative, narrative in which practically every character is a historic personage. . . 'Lustre in the Sky' is not a true historical novel, since it is so deliberately written with a modern perspective and in verbiage that is far too colloquial. It does not add veracity to the text to speak glibly of Czar Alexander's brain trust, nor to dress the Congress of Vienna in the garments of Teheran and Yalta, and at no time does the author succeed in completely immersing her story in the drama of its own era, with the result that the novel is entirely dominated by an atmosphere of elaborate costume charades." L. S. Munn

Spring'd Republican p4d My 12 '46 480w

"Every one of consequence in the history of the Congress troops through these pages. . . But all other figures at the Congress pale, in this account, before Talleyrand. . . Though the style of the book is not distinguished (it stoops to expressions such as 'took a dim view' and 'dreamed up') and there are doubtless historical distortions, 'Lustre in the Sky' is a readable account of the end of another war, of another international gambling-table around which a few people were gathered, as others are today, while all over the earth the helpless millions awaited the outcome of the game." Virgilia Peterson

Weekly Book Review p8 Ap 21 '46 800w

GRAF, MAX. Composer and critic; two hundred years of musical criticism. 331p $3.75 Norton

780.072 Musical criticism 46-1344

The author, a music historian and critic who began his career in Vienna in the 1890s, covers two hundred years of the history of musical criticism relating it to the cultural and intellectual development of Europe of that time.

Booklist 42:223 Mr 15 '46

"Nobody loves the critic, least of all the composer. Two hundred years of conflict between them is recorded by Max Graf, himself a critic in Vienna from 1890 to 1938. His book is lively and sound. He plays fair with his enemy, the composer, and advances some interesting theories of his own." L. A. Sloper

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Je 8 '46 480w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '46

"It will disappoint many that 'Composer and Critic' halts without discussion of living American critics. It would be of great interest to know, for one thing, Dr. Graf's thoughts on Time's recent pronouncement that Virgil Thompson's criticisms are superior to Olin Downes's. But Dr. Graf's method is necessarily one of charm, understanding, and mature judgment. No doubt it would be thankless to enter the arena of current, competitive criticism, even with the unique equipment Dr. Graf could offer. This work will profit the music lover, the student and the professional." John Brubaker

+ Commonweal 43:626 Ap 5 '46 550w

"Nothing more worthless and more vicious could be offered in the name of authority to the lay public that doesn't know and would like to learn than the unreliable facts and judgments, the distorted mis-learning, in this book." C. B. Farrell

— Nation 163:328 S 21 '46 2000w

"Dr. Graf has written a charming, comprehensive, intelligent treatise on music criticism, drawing generously on his own large supply of knowledge and experience. . . The only major issue on which I cannot reach agreement with Dr. Graf is his manner. He is much too polite. No subject in the world deserves more rudeness than music criticism." M. A. Schubart

+ — N Y Times p41 Ap 14 '46 750w

GRAF, MAX—Continued

"In spite of its unique value in tracing the historical course of music criticism as it wended its devious way through various periods and countries, 'Composer and Critic' emerges chiefly as a human document, not only in the recounting of a very great period of music in which Graf was a participant as well as an interested spectator, but because of his wise, profoundly understanding appraisal of the critical forces of other times than his own." Ashley Pettis
+ Sat R of Lit 29:23 O-19 '46 800w

Reviewed by Frederick Morton
Theatre Arts 30:680 N '46 310w
U S Quarterly Bkl 2:82 Je '46 250w

"'Composer and Critic' is the most humane and enlightened, as well as comprehensive, treatment of the subject this writer has yet encountered." Virgil Thomson
+ Weekly Book Review p2 Mr 3 '46 1500w

GRAF, MAX. Legend of a musical city. 302p il $3 Philosophical lib.

914.361 Vienna. Music—Vienna 46-25082
For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Booklist 42:243 Ap 1 '46
Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '46

"It is a pleasure to recommend this warm and affectionate book about Vienna by Max Graf. It was not written for scholars, who might lift their eyebrows at Dr. Graf's uncritical enthusiasms, at the same time finding a mass of useful and interesting information to hand. There may be, for the sophisticated, too much of the sentimental sterbende Maerchenstadt formula. This reviewer, however, sent the book to a few friends, hoping that by an 'Operation Magic Carpet' in reverse, they might find transportation in fancy if not fact to a city in Europe we love only less well than Paris." Chalmers Clifton
+ Sat R of Lit 29:40 Ja 26 '46 600w

Reviewed by Frederick Morton
Theatre Arts 30:680 N '46 310w

"The book is nostalgic and sentimental, and the translation is heavy with unresolved German idioms; but it offers a constant stream of personal reminiscence regarding the great figures of music that must interest every musical reader." H. M. Parshley
Weekly Book Review p29 O 6 '46 270w

GRAF, MAX. Modern music; composers and music of our time [tr. by Beatrice R. Maier]. 320p $3 Philosophical lib.

780.9 Music—History and criticism. Musicians 46-7085

This book of reminiscences of Mahler, Schoenberg, Hindemith, Stravinsky, and other modern musicians of the period from 1896 to the present, gives also a picture of the development of music during those years. Index.

Reviewed by Felix Borowski
Book Week p30 D 1 '46 300w

Booklist 43:97 D 1 '46

"Not much use to anyone with a serious interest in the subject, as the author seems almost incapable of referring to music except in terms of metaphors and similes from other arts; but it mentions a good many names and contains a number of cultural pep-talks which might provide some frame of reference to a beginner in music 'appreciation,' whatever that is. The general line of approach is Bruckner-Mahler Viennese." N. F.
Canadian Forum 26:190 N '46 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '46

"His book is informative and stimulating."
+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 D 1 '46 50w

GRAHAM, AL. Timothy Turtle; pictures by Tony Palazzo. [30p] $2 Robert Welch pub. co, 465 Main st, Cambridge 42, Mass.

46-21131

Picture book with story in verse, describing the journey of Timothy Turtle up Took-a-

Look Hill, his experience with the falling rock, and his welcome home.

"This is a book for 'exceptional' children and all grownups who like to be quietly amused. A sophisticated writer of light verse and the art director of Coronet and Esquire magazines have created a masterpiece of fun, subtle comment and pleasant satire."

+ Book Week p5 N 10 '46 150w

Booklist 43:173 F 1 '47

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p12 D 10 '46 100w

"This large-size picture book, with its lively story in verse, its delightful drawings and exceptional printing, will bring joy to the most jaded household on Christmas morning." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 22:455 N '46 170w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 22:461 N '46 90w

"Dramatically told with interesting choice of words and a well sustained rhythm which young children will like to hear." E. W. Turpin

+ Library J 71:1629 N 15 '46 70w

"A merry book for the picture-book age which should be read aloud for the whole family." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p5 N 10 '46 210w

GRAHAM, MRS ELINOR (MISH). Maine charm string. 231p $2.50 Macmillan

917.41 Maine—Social life and customs. Buttons 46-4950

The original of charm strings were buttons: 999 of them, no two alike. In this series of sketches the author describes her button collecting hobby, and the Maine people with whom she came in contact during her avid search for buttons.

Booklist 42:363 Jl 15 '46

Christian Century 63:843 Jl 3 '46 40w

"A humorous, pleasant adventure tale."

+ Kirkus 14:216 My 1 '46 150w

"Quite a bit of personal philosophy runs through this amusing magpie-style book. Elinor Graham realized that there were narrowness, bigotry and evil in Maine people, but she deliberately looked for generous and good qualities, and found them in plenty." Barbara Bond

+ N Y Times p17 Jl 14 '46 500w

"The social and moral effects of button collecting have many implications, you'll discover. But aside from the buttons there are other interests. Mrs. Graham writes about country living in Maine somewhat in the vein that Zephine Humphreys used to write about country living in Vermont. You get the meaning of country hospitality which extends far beyond threshold and board to the spirit." Jane Volles
+ San Francisco Chronicle p8 Jl 6 '46 750w

"While buttons are discussed to a certain extent, the charms on the string of this story are the anecdotes of people and places Mrs. Graham has come to know in pursuit of her hobby. They make very good telling and they make very good reading. The author retains the sense of humor that made her first book so delightful. She can still make fun of herself in a manner that tickles the ribs of the reader. She still writes with enthusiasm and simplicity. But she has gained, as we all should gain with added years, in insight and sympathy; and she has gained in skill with words." L. D. Rich
+ Sat R of Lit 29:14 Ag 10 '46 410w

"Her story not only is filled with the thrill of collecting, but is a delightful picture of Maine and its people."

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Jl 14 '46 120w

"It is her description of the people she knows and loves and their reactions to her yearning for buttons that give her book its quality of warmth and generosity. She laughs at herself often, but never at others. Her charm string, she discovered at the end, was not made up of buttons, but of friendships and relationships that grew out of her quest. . . Mrs. Graham's book is rich with Maine character and the feeling of Maine seasons. If she stresses the beauty and goodness of the life she knows, it is not through sentimentality." Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p6 J1 7 '46 450w
Wis Lib Bul 42:129 O '46

GRAHAM, LORENZ B. How God fix Jonah; wood engravings by Letterio Calapai, 171p $2.50 Reynal

398.21 Biblical stories. Folklore, African 46-8692

Biblical stories—of Jonah, the Prodigal Son, David, Joshua, and others—set down in the English vernacular of certain African coastal tribes, and following the patterns of speech of a modern West African boy.

Kirkus 14:379 Ag 1 '46 100w

"Out of a period of work with a missionary in Monrovia, Liberia, Lorenz Graham has gathered twenty-one Bible stories as told in the idiom of the West African native. As Mr. Graham says, the stories must be spoken to be appreciated fully—true of all folklore—but some pleasure and a faint insight into the life of a slightly known people can be got from the printed page." Hubert Creekmore

+ N Y Times p34 D 8 '46 500w

"One feels a keen disappointment in the fact that this West African teller-of-tales has been so closely confined to the environs of the missionary compound. One wonders with sadness if Liberia and the West Coast have been bleached of their native cultures. Where are the tales of the Mandingos, the Golahs and the Krus? The feeling of Africa is lost to a great extent through the omission of native material, and the book suffers. But in this era of clamors and frustration, 'How God Fix Jonah' is nevertheless a very fine investment." Z. N. Hurston

+ — Weekly Book Review p5 N 24 '46 600w

GRAHAM, SHIRLEY. Paul Robeson, citizen of the world; foreword by Carl Van Doren. 264p $2.50 Messner

B or 92 Robeson, Paul—Juvenile literature 46-5096

Biography of the great Negro singer and actor written for young readers. Shirley Graham is also co-author of a book about another great Negro, Dr. George Washington Carver.

"Miss Graham errs, along with most writers of juvenile biographies, in praising her subject too fulsomely. Robeson's life speaks for itself. It doesn't need double bowknots of laurel." Jane Cobb

Atlantic 178:166 D '46 80w

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p7 J1 28 '46 220w

Booklist 43:19 S '46

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

Christian Science Monitor p14 S 12 '46 230w

"She makes it good reading and one even forgives its being on the side of hero worship, for the proportions of the hero are so large that it would be difficult to write of him otherwise."

+ Kirkus 14:73 F 1 '46 150w

"Recommended for theater, music and Negro collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 71:482 Ap 1 '46 120w

"The author has given too little attention to chronology if the book is intended to portray to youth the details of a great struggle upward and the rhapsodic style fails to make the hero lovable or understandable. It takes much more than a procession of names greeting Paul in world-famous places to complete the picture. Much of the conversation created by the author is meaningless without a glossary of double-talk." George Streater

— N Y Times p18 Ag 18 '46 270w

Sat R of Lit 29:68 N 9 '46 270w

Reviewed by El. J. R. Isaacs

Theatre Arts 30:619 O '46 480w

"The life of Paul Robeson is a highly dramatic one and Miss Graham brings to it the quality of fictional suspense. She starts with his singing at Barcelona, during the Spanish War, and then goes back to retrace the steps that brought him there. While he emerges as a highly lovable and modest person who achieved renown for his acting and singing, his portrait lacks the third dimension of depth. The book as a whole gives the impression of a writer getting his material from a series of portraits taken of the subject during various stages of his career. One gets to know the public, but not the private figure." Rose Feld

Weekly Book Review p18 Ag 4 '46 410w

GRANT, MRS DOROTHY (FREMONT). Night of decision; a novel of colonial New York. 279p $2.75 Longmans

46-7816

Historical novel of colonial New York between 1683 and 1690. It depicts the circumstances attending the regime of Colonel Thomas Dongan, the Catholic governor appointed by the Stuarts. The heroine, gentle daughter of a stern, irascible Protestant father, marries one of Dongan's Catholic supporters. The villain is Jacob Leisler.

"Historically the novel has [much] to commend it. Dongan, a much misunderstood and neglected figure, was a colorful character and one of the best of colonial administrators. . . Mrs. Grant does him full justice. In dealing with Jacob Leisler, who is the villain of the piece, she is on less firm ground. There is still difference of opinion as to the character of the man and the government he established after his successful revolt of 1689, and he may not have been so blackhearted as this novel paints him." R. B. Nye

+ — Book Week p14 N 17 '46 450w

"This historical novel of colonial New York, at the time of Colonel Dongan's administration, toward the end of the seventeenth century, is most engrossing. The author is a capital story teller. The dialogue, sometimes quaintly archaic, is well handled; from the beginning there are abundant and thrilling climaxes; and the character delineation is excellent." J. K. Sharp

+ Cath World 164:378 Ja '47 450w

"An informative novel with melodrama to spare." Barbara Bond

N Y Times p26 N 24 '46 270w

Reviewed by Jennings Rice

Weekly Book Review p12 Ja 12 '47 400w

GRANT, FREDERICK CLIFTON. Practice of religion. 271p $2.50 Macmillan

248 Christian life 46-915

"Valuable guide in understanding and practicing the Christian religion in the complex world of today. Defining the religious life as one 'controlled by the consciousness of God,' Dr. Grant discusses with spiritual understanding and intellectual acumen the problems arising when the individual seeks this control and this consciousness—the personal nature of all religions, morality, prayer, sin, suffering, mysticism, church doctrines, the social goal and immortality." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 42:220 Mr 15 '46

"There is little that a reviewer can criticize once the fundamental presuppositions have been granted. The author is a liberal who has not lost his touch with history; he is an intellectual who has not lost the fire of conviction; he is a man who tempers vision with realism. There are two possible objections: (1) There is a feeling that some problems are oversimplified, and that tension and depth have been sacrificed for simplicity; but this is an impression which is difficult to classify. (2) Dr. Grant's suspicion of metaphysics is not well grounded." R. C. Miller

+ — Christian Century 63:430 Ap 3 '46 950w

GRANT, F. C.—Continued

"Dr. Grant has . . . done two things at the same time: he has provided an excellent book for those who want to know what religion has to say for itself, and an equally excellent course of instruction for those—already Christian—who need to know more about religion in practice. By all means put it in the hands of questioning youth!" F. J. Moore
+ Churchman 160:16 My 1 '46 240w

Reviewed by I. G. Matthews

Crozer Q 23:186 Ap '46 700w

"There is much of philosophy, theology and church history in this book, but it is solid rather than heavy, more thought-provoking than scholarly in the narrow sense. While no book for the superficial man in the pew, it should appeal to a wider public than academic and theological circles."

+ Kirkus 14:99 F 15 '46 180w

"Highly successful in achieving its aim, this book should be of great interest and inspiration to all thoughtful people seeking enlightenment and aid in their spiritual life. Recommended for all libraries purchasing any religious books at all." G. W. Wakefield

+ Library J 71:180 F 1 '46 150w

Wis Lib Bul 42:56 Ap '46

GRAUMONT, RAOUL. Handbook of knots. 194p il $1.75; pa $1 Cornell maritime

677.7 Knots and splices 45-11362

Illustrates and describes 428 knots and ties, most of them common types which will be useful in many trades and industries. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 42:222 Mr 15 '46

Bookmark 7:6 Mr '46

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 70:1135 D 1 '45 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:57 O '45

"The clearly written text and an extensive glossary and index help make 'Handbook of Knots' attractive to beginner or expert and Mr Graumont in his fourth book on the subject acknowledges the assistance of several United States navy men." D. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 10 '46 180w

Reviewed by James Stokley

Weekly Book Review p21 Ag 25 '46 90w

GRAVES, ROBERT. King Jesus. 424p $3 Creative age

Jesus Christ—Fiction 46-7142

Historical novel based on the life of Jesus. The central theme is that Christ was the son of Mary's first husband, who was the son of Herod. Assuming the truth of this statement Christ would have been the grandson of a king, therefore actually "King of the Jews."

"An unconventional and pre-eminently readable novel about Jesus Christ." Leo Kennedy

+ Book Week p11 O 6 '46 400w

Booklist 43:70 N 1 '46

"If this book seems to most readers to be a shocking, offensive and bizarre account of the life and work of Jesus—and I promise that it will—they must also credit it with being seriously meant as the exposition and defense of a hypothesis. To the support of his audacious conjecture, the author brings his own indisputable power as a writer . . . and adduces a vast accumulation of data from obscure sources bearing upon ancient religions and cults in the dim borderland between religion and magic. . . . Graves treats the mass of data with which he buttresses and embellishes his hypothesis as though all parts of it were of equal credibility, though much of it has no sound historical evidence and most of it is irrelevant to anything in the recorded life of Jesus, but the whole is wrought into a mosaic of extraordinary brilliance." W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 63:1184 O 2 '46 1500w

Reviewed by Millicent Taylor

Christian Science Monitor p15 O 15 '46 300w

"This is not reading for the easily shocked; it definitely presents Jesus as a sage and a poet, if not divine. It moves, as does all Mr. Graves' writing, at a brilliant fast pace, and with a tremendous style."

Kirkus 14:548 N 1 '46 130w

"Not another David the King but dramatic and certainly unorthodox." R. E. Kingery

Library J 71:1206 S 15 '46 100w

"Mr Graves is a poet; both the knowledge of a scholar and the imagination of a poet are brought to bear upon Jesus as child, boy, and man. The end is done with austere restraint. Each of us has his own Jesus; here, at full length, is the Jesus of Mr. Graves. The book is a bold speculative adventure" Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p3 D 13 '46 230w

"When the intelligence report is submerged in the narrative, Mr. Graves writes with suavity and beauty, and it is certainly true that he has, as he says, great respect for Jesus. But in [some] passages there is not only inaccuracy but, as they multiply, a certain anti-Christian pettishness or uneasiness that all Mr. Graves's powers cannot quite dispel. It is, I think, only a consciousness on his part that although the Christ of the church simply won't do for him, his Christ really won't do for anyone" Robert Fitzgerald

Nation 163:475 O 26 '46 2900w

Reviewed by E. E. Kellett

New Statesman & Nation 33:15 Ja 4 '47 950w

"It will undoubtedly take a rather special class of reader to cope with the rich and complex imagery of 'King Jesus,' which not only operates on several levels at once but fuses traditional orthodox conceptions with the imaginative musings of Mr. Graves. Most readers will marvel at the care and learning which Mr. Graves brings to his examination of some of the roots of the Jewish and Christian religions. Many will also feel that the author is more aware of the roots of the tree than of its fruit." N. K. Burger

N Y Times p5 S 29 '46 900w

"Mr. Graves, in this, the most ambitious of his fictional reconstructions of history, not only retells, in his own way, the story of Jesus but gives a brilliant, if fantastic, exposition of the pagan religions which reached their fulfillment in the person of the Nazarene. A great many of the book's departures from accepted legends are not likely to be noticed by the layman, but the more drastic changes in the life of Jesus and His Mother, which advance neither the pious nor the realistic elements of the story, may make the reader begin to wonder what the purpose is and, if he does not know that Mr. Graves is a serious and dignified historian, suspect him of a very erudite tour de force. The author will probably be less criticized, though, for shuffling the incidents of the story than for not making it move along."

New Yorker 22:112 O 12 '46 190w

"Many devout Christians will doubtless be shocked by this extraordinary life of Jesus. Some readers will find the details of myth and ritual of the pagan and Jewish faiths difficult reading that obstructs the story. Certainly Mr. Graves's solution of the nativity problem will arouse violent controversy, as will much else in the book, but the Jesus of his story is undeniably a man of divine character and purpose if not of divine nativity." Donald Armstrong

Sat R of Lit 29:17 O 19 '46 850w

"That any writer, let alone a poet like Robert Graves, should attempt to narrate [the story of the Resurrection] in prose so dead, so pedestrian, so unlighted, passes my understanding." Kate O'Brien

— Spec 177:654 D 13 '46 150w

"Most readers will have no doubt whatever that their descendants will still be reading, marking and inwardly digesting the Gospel story long after such a literary curiosity as King Jesus has gone the way of Ignatius Donnelly."

Time 48:106 S 30 '46 1450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p601 D 7 '46
550w

Reviewed by Ernestine Evans
Weekly Book Review p16 N 3 '46 1150w

GRAVES, ROBERT. Poems, 1938-1945. 58p $2
Creative age [5s Cassell] 46-5047
821

Collection of poems from the work of this English poet written between 1938 and 1945.

"Mr. Graves rightly has the esteem of poets; if he were to take the harder course and employ more of his poetic force and skill in describing the excellence he loves than the evil he satirizes, he might be a poet for everyman." P. J. H. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 1 '46
320w

"We have ceased to think of Robert Graves as a poet of thirty years ago. He was then simple, clear, and creative. He is now complicated, obscure, and analytical. Then he wrote for people in general. Now, he tells us, he writes for poets and wits. People in general will still acclaim him as a technician and will receive wholeheartedly the romantic imagery of the seven-lined lyric 'She Tells Her Love While Half Asleep.' But most of the new poems will not get through to them. As a technician he is brilliant. As a metaphysician he is cloudy and difficult." Charles Powell

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Je 5 '46 120w
Reviewed by G. W. Stonier
New Statesman & Nation 31:456 Je 22 '46 330w

Reviewed by Marguerite Young
N Y Times p23 Ag 18 '46 300w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan
New Yorker 22:57 Jl 6 '46 650w

Reviewed by George Snell
San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ag 11 '46
50w

"The real interest and value of this book are professional. Awareness of words and what can be done with them; understanding of syntax and what, within the bounds of lucidity, can be done with it; knowledge and skill in the handling of rhythm and metre—Mr. Graves has them all." Sheila Shannon

+ Spec 176:330 Mr 29 '46 480w

"His scansion and his internal rhymes are not always true, and his chief virtue most certainly is not clarity. Yet the freshness of his metaphors—the brilliance of his form, and his skillful use of assonance are such that 'Poems: 1938-1945' is likely to take its place among the poetical events of the year." William Manchester

+ Springf'd Republican p4 Ag 3 '46 120w

"The crisp new poems show that Mr. Graves will not allow himself to mellow into a quiet and unshocking philosopher. These poems . . . show the author unsentimental and determined to attain some personal reality, and there is an occasional tone of bitterness—but not despair."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p69 F 9 '46
360w

GRAY, ALEXANDER. Socialist tradition;
Moses to Lenin. 523p $7.50 (21s) Longmans
335 Socialism 46-5261

"A scholarly treatise on the development of Socialist thought, broadly interpreted, from classical times down to Lenin." Foreign Affairs

"It is idle to expect that this book by the distinguished professor of political economy and mercantile law at the University of Edinburgh will find a large number of readers. The pages are too many and the print too fine. Yet it should at least repose upon the library shelves of every institution of higher learning in the country; for Professor Gray has made a unique contribution, even to the already voluminous literature about socialism and socialists. The book does not, as the author himself hastens to make clear in the prologue, 'aim at being a history of socialist thought.' Still less is it a history of the socialist movement. Rather, it is a series of studies of the ideas of certain individuals who stand high in the socialist tradition. Students of the history of social and political thought will be intrigued for two reasons. The first is the inclusion in the book of essays on the work of men who were not without significance in the development of socialist thought, yet who are seldom mentioned in the conventional histories of social or political thought. . . . Secondly, students of socialist thought will be interested by the fresh viewpoint and the unquestionable depth of scholarship which Professor Gray brings to his consideration of even the familiar landmarks. His erudition is almost incredible, and he writes with grace and charm enlivened by frequent splashes of wit." Hidden Gibson

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:1008 O '46 650w

"With [certain] reservations, it has to be admitted that, within its species, this is a well-informed, witty, and even entertaining book. It will appeal to serious laymen and is likely to find a wide use in colleges and universities. The success which I foresee for it is well deserved." John Lindberg

+ Ann Am Acad 247:197 S '46 450w

"This is a book which should be read and pondered by all people who think of themselves as socialists. . . . The main impression that any reader of the book is bound to get is that there is something queer about men who go in for socialism. It ought to be possible to write without assuming that all Socialists are fundamentally dishonest, and that Socialism attracts exclusively the world's failures and incompetents," says Mr. Gray. I don't think he has quite succeeded. But the book is good reading throughout, for Mr. Gray is both learned and sophisticated." F. H. Underhill

+ Canadian Forum 26:184 N '46 500w

Foreign Affairs 25:162 O '46 20w

"Of the book as a whole, it is not possible in this space to say more than it certainly takes a place in the book list of any undergraduate reading political theory, even if, as I do, he differs strongly from some of Mr. Gray's views of Socialism and his emphasis upon certain of its protagonists. But whether the material is valuable for the seminar or for private reflection, it is seriously and provocatively presented." Norman MacKenzie

+ New Statesman & Nation 31:364 My
18 '46 850w

Reviewed by Louis Wasserman
San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ag 11 '46
800w

"This is a scholarly work written with unusual freshness and candour. . . . The author makes no attempt to go behind the ideas to their social background, but, perhaps somewhat inconsistently, gives a good deal of attention to biographical detail. It is questionable whether the individual peculiarities of the thinkers he discusses are more relevant to an interpretation of Socialism than the analysis of social forces. On the other hand, the book is greatly enlivened by the biographical material which the author has brought together, and he handles it with shrewdness and good humour, making no secret of his likes and dislikes." Morris Ginsberg

+ Spec 177:218 Ag 30 '46 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p501 O 19 '46
5500w

GRAY, GEORGE HERBERT. Housing and citizenship; a study of low-cost housing. 254p il
$7.50 Reinhold

331.833 Housing. City planning 46-5297

"Scholarly review of forces working in the housing movement here and abroad during the past. Purpose of book is to present a sound well-coordinated plan for future low-cost development in the United States as seen by the late author from his experiences as city planning consultant. He discusses housing, the social, economic and technological background including population, costs, rents and design." (Library J) Bibliography.

GRAY, G. H.—Continued

"Major Gray's volume is largely derivative. Thus much of the case history of New York City is 'taken from "Slums and Housing," by James Ford.' His statements about the work of Federal agencies are largely taken from summary articles in the Housing Yearbooks of the National Association of Housing Officials. This method of compilation is justified if the author's purpose is to lay the base quickly for critical or reflective comment, to erect an edifice of theoretical conclusions or proposals. I have unhappily to report that I do not find that edifice in the book." C. S. Ascher
— Ann Am Acad 248:296 N '46 500w

Reviewed by Robert Lasch
Book Week p7 S 29 '46 230w
Library J 71:1052 Ag '46 100w

"Major Gray's discussion of America's low-cost housing problem is unquestionably an important one and, in spite of a prolix style and a somewhat disorganized arrangement of topics, is interesting reading."

+ New Repub 115:269 S 2 '46 230w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:41 J1 '46

"If the reader will take the trouble to read Major Gray's book—it is a solid package of information—he will be grateful for an introduction to a subject that concerns him more vitally than he realizes." E. J. Kahn
+ Sat R of Lit 29:18 O 5 '46 900w

GRAY, JAMES. On second thought. 264p $3 Univ. of Minn.

810.9 American literature—History and criticism. Authors A46-5008

A collection of literary essays and book reviews based on the author's daily column in the St Paul Pioneer Press and Dispatch. Mr Gray is now book editor of the Chicago Daily News. Among the contemporary writers dealt with in these pages are Sinclair Lewis, Eugene O'Neill, Pearl Buck, Arnold Bennett, George Bernard Shaw, John Dos Passos, Ernest Hemingway, Thomas Wolfe, William Saroyan, Willa Cather, Ellen Glasgow, Aldous Huxley, Dorothy Parker, Storm Jameson, Thomas Mann, Arthur Koestler.

Reviewed by J. W. Rogers
Book Week p2 O 20 '46 330w

"Mr. Gray's judgments are always worth hearing, but often the analyses leave one somewhat uncertain about the actual contents of the books. He is clearer as critic than as reviewer. One may also wish that his appraisals would flower from roots deeper in the past. . . All eager students of contemporary literature, nevertheless, will find this volume interesting, provocative, illuminating." Robert Berkelman

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 N 21 '46 480w

"A literary re-assemblage and reappraisal . . . which is sound, solid rather than interpretative criticism, and serves as an orientation to the present day scene."

+ Kirkus 14:473 S 15 '46 170w

"In this selection of literary essays, a veteran in the field proves once again that reviewing at its best can be both an art and a pleasure. . . Some of his judgments may seem a shade too final to the confirmed novel-reader: despite his long silence, it is hard to believe that Hemingway's best work is behind him, to dismiss Marquand's 'satiric detachment' as 'chilly and meager,' to tag Edna Ferber and Louis Bromfield with 'the catastrophe of competence,' to consider the work of Somerset Maugham as an obituary for the human race. Yet even in these examples the critic's incisive mind cuts straight to the heart of the matter, uncovering the lacuna that bans each writer from the company of the immortals." James MacBride

+ N Y Times p36 D 8 '46 500w

"What one soon discovers on turning these pages is that Mr. Gray writes criticism with the same imaginative grasp of personality and the same vivacity of phrase that make his novels an enlivening experience. . . It is a privilege to salute a reviewer who has published his considered opinions without fear or favor over a score of years and who is still going strong." G. F. Whicher

+ Weekly Book Review p18 O 6 '46 600w

Wis Lib Bul 42:164 D '46

GRAYSON, CHARLES. Angel town. 248p $2.50 Doubleday

46-4755

A story of a group of young people—high school and college boys and girls—told against a setting of Los Angeles in both its historic and modern aspects.

"A rather undistinguished story of three youngsters. . . And certainly not for recommendation to youngsters—in spite of the subject."

— Kirkus 14:158 Ap 1 '46 150w

"The account of adolescence, in high school and college, with its young love, its country club social structure, and its array of familiar characters, has little more than an external connection with the setting. Although tension is achieved in some scenes, there is never any real coming to grips with problems which though frequently ugly or complex, somehow are smoothly turned aside. Major events, defeats, seductions, deaths seem to leave little lasting impression on the characters—and less, consequently, on the reader." Barbara Herman

— + N Y Times p18 Je 16 '46 210w

Reviewed by Paul Speegle

— San Francisco Chronicle p12 D 8 '46 120w

"Dealing with campus life, teen-age petting, social climbing, drinking, gambling and a dozen other phases of life in this onetime village 'inundated and vanquished' by the swift rise of a 'pseudo-metropolis,' it presents some vivid insights into character, segments of sharply observed college behaviorism and dialogue deftly transcribed. But the novel is such a mixture that the reader is uncertain as to its destination, and finally suspects that Mr. Grayson is in the same high fog." Lisle Bell

— + Weekly Book Review p16 Je 16 '46 210w

GREAT BRITAIN, BRITISH COUNCIL. British civilization and institutions; a book list. 4th ed 75p pa $1 A.L.A.

016.942 Great Britain—Civilization—Bibliography

"The list was originally prepared and distributed in Great Britain in 1936. This first American edition, the British fourth edition, is published in the U.S. by the A.L.A. in collaboration with the British information services. It is a select, unannotated list of British and American books on British history, description and travel, economics, social conditions, art, literature, agriculture, political, social, and educational institutions, and a short section on the dominions and colonies. No fiction. Appendixes on ordering British books and government publications." Booklist

Booklist 42:241 Ap 1 '46

"The breadth of scope of the bibliography offers a definite challenge to the selective ability of any bibliographer—a challenge which has been ably met within the defined intentions of the list. . . Within the first group there is little cause for disagreement, for the selection is essentially sound, and other titles which might be mentioned would be supplementary rather than complementary. . . Part VIII, dealing with the dominions and colonies, is the weak section of the bibliography, for here we find a list of titles relating to Canada, South Africa, Australia, and New Zealand which is inadequate and incomplete as compared with the earlier treatment. . . A similar criticism may be leveled at the section on education, for here again are isolated titles dealing with a particular aspect of colonial life—a procedure which was not followed in the preceding sections. However, these are minor points, and, while the inclusion of these sections adds little to the value of the work as a whole, it does not impair its merit as a selective reading guide." J. E. Brown

+ — Library Q 16:263 J1 '46 850w

GREAT BRITAIN. Ministry of war transport. British merchant men at war. See Hodson, J. L.

GREBANIER, BERNARD D. N. Fauns, satyrs and a few sages. 136p $3 Thomas Bird Mosher, 81-87 Washington st, Boston
811 45-6418

Collection of brief poems, songs, and epigrams. "Some of these pieces are free adaptations of classic Greek lyrics; some owe only a line or an idea to them; some have no connection with a Greek poem at all. . . . Of translations the reader will find only six, all from Greek Tragedy: The Lament of Prometheus; Ion's greeting to the sun; Creusa's accusation of Apollo; Antigone's lament; Jocasta's death; and Electra, believing Orestes dead, to the burial urn." (Note)

Reviewed by W. R. Benét
Sat R of Lit 29:9 Mr 23 '46 90w

"The poems show Prof. Grebanier's ability to turn a graceful phrase, but they seem to lack warmth and feeling. Possibly this is due to a classic restraint, consciously or unconsciously employed. It is obvious, however, both from his poetry in general and 'Not invited' in particular that he is not to be counted as a member of the modern school of poetry." C. K. Bausman

Springf'd Republican p4d N 4 '45 450w

GREBANIER, BERNARD D. N. Mirrors of the fire [poems]. 124p $3 ltd ed $5 Mosher 811 47-105

A second volume of poems by the author of Fauns, Satyrs and a Few Sages. The author is a professor of English at Brooklyn college.

"For a man well on in years, Professor Grebanier is still, curiously enough, the pastoral adolescent apostrophizing or abjuring lady loves of sundry shapes and ages. In subject matter, style, and treatment, he is a pale echo of the British bards he teaches in class. But in imitating them he has mistakenly taken their faults for virtues." Gustav Davidson
— Sat R of Lit 29:32 N 23 '46 650w

Reviewed by C. M. Sauer
— Springf'd Republican p66 J1 29 '46 200w

GREEN, DAVID EZRA, ed. Currents in biochemical research; thirty-one essays charting the present course of biochemical research and considering the intimate relationship of biochemistry to medicine, agriculture and social problems. 486p il $6 Interscience 574.19 Biological chemistry 46-5550

"This collection of 31 essays successfully presents condensed and up-to-date outlines of some particular fields of biochemistry by experts in those fields, together with stimulating speculations on possible paths of future progress." Chem & Eng N

Reviewed by F. P. Chinard
+ Chem & Eng N 24:2412 S 10 '46 450w

Reviewed by Linus Pauling
Chem Eng 53:297 O '46 240w

Reviewed by L. A. Fales
Library J 71:1125 S 1 '46 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:36 J1 '46
U S Quarterly Bkl 2:343 D '46 270w

GREEN, MARY MCBURNEY. Everybody eats: pictures by Edward Glannon. [20]p $1.25 Scott, W.R.

Colored pictures and brief text describe the eating habits of some well-known animals. On the last page the child is asked what he likes for dinner. For ages three to five.

Kirkus 14:454 S 15 '46 120w

"Both story and pictures will stimulate children to a greater interest in what they eat." L. P.

+ N Y Times p42 N 10 '46 100w

"Amusing, delightful little book with splendidly colored pictures."

+ Weekly Book Review p40 N 10 '46 320w

GREEN, PAUL. Forever growing; some notes on a credo for teachers. 42p $1.50 Univ. of N.C. press

371.3 Teaching 45-10446

An American dramatist—and a teacher himself—here sets down some notes on the philosophy and meaning of teaching.

"A series of thoughtful and positive little essays."

+ Theatre Arts 30:431 J1 '46 80w

Weekly Book Review p28 My 26 '46 160w

GREEN, PAUL. Salvation on a string, and other tales of the South. 278p $2.50 Harper 46-6956

Twenty-one short stories about the people of Little Bethel, a village and farming community in North Carolina. Some of the stories are gay or humorous, others tragic or serious. Contents: Salvation on a string; The corn-shucking; A tempered fellow; The devil's instrument; The humble ones; Love and a fiddle; Lay this body down; Fare thee well; Roll on, John; Doctor Hyde; The first death; The sixth of June; Frizzle; Archie and Angus; Her birthday; Austin Honey and the buzzards; The lost Ford; The locket and the seal; Supper for the dead; Saturday night; Fine wagon.

Reviewed by Henry Rago
Book Week p16 N 24 '46 370w
Booklist 43:170 F 1 '47

"Paul Green, a prize winning dramatist, can write—with a poignancy that does not descend to the sentimental or the mawkish."

+ Kirkus 14:258 Je 1 '46 170w

"Recommended." G. D. McDonald
+ Library J 71:1206 S 15 '46 80w

"'Salvation on a String' is not a volume that lends itself to derogation. The stories gathered in it have been written over a period of more than twenty years, have appeared in magazines of widely different kinds; but they have a tone and purpose as well as a locale that bind them firmly together and give them force and point." E. R. Mirrelees

+ N Y Times p12 O 20 '46 650w

"Mr. Green is essentially a dramatist, and many of these stories have the feeling of one-act plays. With the exception of a few rather sentimental lapses, 'Salvation on a String' is a deeply moving collection, written with warm tenderness and true understanding of a region and a people." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 29:31 D 7 '46 360w

Reviewed by Kenneth Fearing
Weekly Book Review p4 O 20 '46 550w

GREEN, VIVIAN HUBERT HOWARD. Bishop Reginald Pecock; a study in ecclesiastical history and thought. 262p $3 Macmillan [12s 6d Cambridge]

B or 92 Pecock, Reginald 45-10018

"Reginald Pecock lived from ca. 1390 to ca. 1460. He was educated at Oxford and in 1431 became rector of St. Michael Royal and master of Whittington College, London. Thirteen years later he was appointed to the bishopric of St. Asaph, and subsequently he was translated to the see of Chichester. During his episcopal career he devoted himself to producing books designed to controvert and convert the Lollards. In 1457 he was charged with heresy, convicted, and ordered to recant or be burned. The recantation was a dramatic affair. . . . As to why Pecock was forced to

GREEN, V. H. H.—Continued
recant, there has been a wide variety of opinion. . . V. H. H. Green attempts to bring some order out of this chaos of interpretation and to present an 'integrated' study of Pecock's thought." J Religion

"The author has done a workmanlike job, and the volume constitutes a welcome addition to the monographic literature on the cultural history of fifteenth century England. . . It is a book for the student, since neither the subject nor the treatment will be likely to attract a large number of readers." A. P. Evans
Am Hist R 51:534 Ap '46 650w

Reviewed by W. S. Hudson
J Religion 26:302 O '46 600w
Spec 176:74 Ja 18 '46 270w

"Mr. Green deserves both praise and congratulation for the research of his book and for his perseverance amid formidable difficulties in bringing it to publication."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p462 S 29 '45 2750w

GREENE, HARRY WASHINGTON. Holders of doctorates among American Negroes; an educational and social study of Negroes who have earned doctoral degrees in course, 1876-1943. 275p $3 Meador

378.24 Negroes—Education. Degrees, Academic 46-5916

"This is the first comprehensive study of American Negroes who earned doctoral degrees during the years 1876-1943. Granted were 351 Doctors of Philosophy, and thirty more or less 'equivalent' doctorates. Degrees in medicine were naturally omitted. The inquiry traces the academic history of these 381 men and women, their later scholarly and scientific activities, their present occupations, with a general statement about the salaries paid them. The study thus gives a picture of the present situation, and supplies a factual basis for 'educational planning.'" U S Quarterly Bkl

School & Society 64:103 Ag 10 '46 20w
U S Quarterly Bkl 2:309 D '46 280w

GREENSLET, FERRIS. The Lowells and their seven worlds. 442p il $4 Houghton

920 Lowell family 46-25260

A composite biography, tracing the family history of the Lowells of New England for ten generations, beginning with old Percival Lowle who came to Massachusetts from England in 1639. The record is "not so much the success story of a family as a chronicle play of New England history for three centuries, seen through the family's eyes and dramatized in its actions." (Pref) Index.

Am J Soc 52:380 Ja '47

"You cannot warm to all of them. Yet they cannot fail to have some importance for you, kindled as they are by Mr. Greenslet's skill. Lowell genealogy aside, the book is swift history of New England, even of the United States. The Lowells are the book's backbone—and what backbones they did have!—but the flesh, the color and light, and anecdote are Greenslet." Frances Woodward

+ Atlantic 178:165 O '46 600w

Booklist 43:34 O 1 '46

Bookmark 7:12 N '46

"Amy Lowell once said to the author, 'Ferris, you are a good boy, but you don't know a thing about biography.' For once, at any rate, a Lowell was wrong, for Ferris Greenslet has written The Lowells and Their Seven Worlds with admirable perspective, sympathy, and detachment." John Pick

+ Cath World 164:186 N '46 500w

"Fascinating family record. . . The reader is guided skillfully through the tangled relationships of the clan. A chart is an excellent aid. An infusion of sly humor pervades the pages." F. L. Bullock

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 S 17 '46 900w

Kirkus 14:291 Je 15 '46 170w

"The story of the Lowells is traced with humor, affection and complete understanding of what seven generations have contributed to business, law, science, art and education in America. The Lowells supplement the Adamases and the Cabots! This book will be more popular than James Truslow Adams' The Adams Family." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 71:1047 Ag '46 110w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
Nation 163:624 N 30 '46 320w

"The Lowells and Their Seven Worlds is skillfully organized, informative, entertaining, discreetly revealing and judicious." Willard Thorp

+ New Repub 115:560 O 28 '46 1000w

"His judgment of James Russell is balanced and sane; while it avoids the temptations of adulation it never veers into what has now become the easy fashion of discounting him entirely. The chapter on Amy is sheer good reading and does not overdo the cigar smoking. On this as on all matters Mr. Greenslet keeps his perspective. He writes with admiration for his subjects and even with affection, but also with admirable detachment." Perry Miller

+ N Y Times p1 S 22 '46 1200w

"It is easy to see that Mr. Greenslet knows the family well. He writes in a spirited style and keeps his obvious admiration for the Lowells under control, but he has a way of minimizing uncomfortable chapters in their history, such as Lawrence's part in the Sacco-Vanzetti affair. The reader ends this very entertaining book with the feeling that the Lowells of the past, for all their money, attainments, and prestige, were more imposing than inspiring, which is probably the way they liked to be."

+ New Yorker 22:126 O 5 '46 120w

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 D 1 '46 300w

"A Lowell nursery is a comfortable place for a cradle to rest in. There is no doubt about that, and if the theories of Epicurus had not gone into the democratic discard, this excellent book of Mr. Greenslet's would furnish proof positive of their validity. The ten generations he paints with skill and fidelity are a sturdy race enjoying comfort, despising luxury, and finding their high satisfaction in advancing public welfare. What a privilege it is to escape the dominion of Horatio Alger and be assured that success does not invariably spring from the thin soil of poverty!" Ellery Sedgwick

+ Sat R of Lit 29:5 S 21 '46 3050w

"Those who have repeated with such glee the little ditty about the Lowells speaking only to Cabots in the home of the bean and the cod will find much to admire in Ferris Greenslet's excellent family history. The author has avoided one of the greatest pitfalls of such a book in not including so much as to weary the reader. The problem of selection must have been great, and Mr Greenslet has solved it well, including just enough correspondence to give the book a flavor but not enough to make it tedious. There is great enjoyment in this fine multiple biography."

C. K. Bausman

+ Spring'd Republican p4d S 22 '46 500w
Time 48:106 S 23 '46 150w

Reviewed by M. A. D. Howe
Weekly Book Review p1 S 22 '46 2250w

Wis Lib Bul 42:150 N '46

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

Yale R n s 36:346 winter '47 700w

GREER, GENEVIEVE (MRS SERGIUS KAGEN). The aristocrat. 236p $2.50 Vanguard

46-5053

The scene of this story is laid somewhere in the American Southwest; the time is the present. The chief character is Dan Blake, a middle-aged rancher, a lonely, unhappy man, and the story deals principally with his illness and death and their effects on relatives and acquaintances, and on one true friend, the old Negro, Abe.

"A sorry—to sordid—portrait, only dubiously of general interest."

— Kirkus 14:77 F 15 '46 130w

Reviewed by Alfred Butterfield
N Y Times p18 Je 16 '46 250w

"The title of Genevieve Greer's novel 'The Aristocrat' is, presumably satirical; but one cannot be certain. Such qualities as the protagonist Dan Blake, possesses are, to be sure, hardly those of aristocracy; but, compared to the other half dozen dreary characters of the novel, he has the small distinction of being the noblest of the lot. None of the characters is sufficiently well realized to encourage any prolonged speculation as to the author's intention. Miss Greer may be earnest in naming her novel. She does not elsewhere display a satirical temper." Coleman Rosenberger
Weekly Book Review p10 Jl 21 '46 700w

GREGORY, CHARLES OSCAR. Labor and the law. 467p $5 Norton

331 Labor laws and legislation. Industrial relations 46-7065

"From common law development in England, with the right of combination, and the doctrine of 'illegal purpose,' author proceeds to important laws and cases in the United States. He traces the questions of competition and tort liability, of various forms of concerted action, the development of legislation—such as the Norris-LaGuardia and National Labor Relations acts, and ends with suggestions for the solution of the problem of ruinous strikes. One is the use of codes of fair employment. He presents also Thurman Arnold's statement of five typical union practices that might be prevented under the Sherman Act. Final solution, however, lies in a satisfactory answer to the problem of the creation and distribution of wealth and income." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by Hugo Sonnenschein
Book Week p5 O 27 '46 750w

Booklist 43:128 Ja 1 '47

Christian Science Monitor p14 N 2 '46 280w

"Written clearly, simply, interestingly, this is for the man concerned with unionism, collective bargaining, picketing, labor injunctions, strikes, etc., and is never too difficult for the layman to read and understand."

+ Kirkus 14:371 Ag 1 '46 180w

"Recommended for students of labor problems." Walter Hausdorfer

+ Library J 71:1205 S 15 '46 140w

Reviewed by B. B. Seligman
Nation 163 762 D 28 '46 650w

"The great value of his book lies in its well-organized and not too technical summary of what has happened in the legal field where labor is concerned. Those who wish to contribute intelligently to the formulation of future policy will benefit from having it handy." A. H. Ras-kin

+ N Y Times p45 O 13 '46 750w

"This is a good book because it will inform and disturb both management and labor partisans." Louis Burgess

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 N 10 '46 250w

"Mr. Gregory is not only a distinguished scholar but a first-rate teacher. In addition, he has had a broad experience in the labor field." L. K. Garrison

+ Sat R of Lit 29:11 N 16 '46 2800w
U S Quarterly Bk1 2:319 D '46 360w

"In an extraordinarily lucid book Charles O. Gregory, professor of law at Chicago University, has attempted to clarify our understanding of the laws and court decisions governing organized labor today. This is a book on law which can be readily comprehended by the layman. . . . The great weakness in Professor Gregory's approach to much needed reforms is his reliance upon increased government intervention in the field of labor relations." E. M. Herrick

+ — Weekly Book Review p6 N 10 '46 2600w

GREGORY, HORACE, and ZATURENSKA, MARYA ALEXANDROVNA (MRS HORACE GREGORY). History of American poetry, 1900-1940. 524p $4 Harcourt

811.09 American poetry—History and criticism 46-11800

Historical survey of American poetry during the first forty years of the present century. The arrangement is strictly chronological; each poet is discussed as to derivation of his work, and as to critical judgment of his contemporaries. Descriptive bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:98 D 1 '46

Reviewed by W. P. Sears
Churchman 160:19 D 15 '46 200w

"Ample illustrations of the various poets' work is given and more than ample criticism from sources other than the authors' opinions is offered. In fact, in this respect the volume is often a little cluttered, while at the same time the super-illuminating remarks of some of the most highly gifted critics of our times often show up the paucity of insight of the authors. Still as a handy reference book and something considerably more, this should have a wide sale. The true critical history of American poetry, in the last fascinating forty years, still remains to be written."

+ — Kirkus 14:589 N 15 '46 250w

"A book more useful for topical reference than for an overall view of the development of American poetry." B. B. Libaire

Library J 71:1462 O 15 '46 100w

"It is difficult to say how much is wrong with this book because there is so much that is wrong and the wrongness is of so many different kinds. Although it is a history, the errors of fact are not as important as the triviality of detail. . . . And to speak of the wrongness of judgment is difficult too, since this may be said to be merely a matter of opinion. Nevertheless, it is the opinion of one reader that the Gregorys indulge in a systematic wrongness of praise and dispraise. Most of the important and famous poets of the period consistently receive the damnation of faint praise; and at the same time minor, mediocre, and bad poets are equally damned by being overpraised. Most difficult of all to make clear is the margin of inexactness involved in the Gregorys' use of comparison." Delmore Schwartz

— Nation 163 660 D 7 '46 2300w

"This volume is the first of its kind. . . . There have been other, and in some respects more discriminating, critical studies of a great part of the period covered, and a number of anthologies have sought to give a picture of twentieth-century American verse. But this book is unique in offering a systematic record of poetic events, with names and dates duly set down, and a good deal of illustrative material." Babette Deutsch

+ N Y Times p20 N 10 '46 1050w

"The book, which is not scrupulous enough to be a scholarly study and not well enough written to be entertaining, is chiefly remarkable for the authors' personal judgments, which waver between unmitigated praise when dealing with certain established and respectable reputations and a disturbing kind of originality when dealing with immediate contemporaries."

New Yorker 22:135 N 16 '46 160w

Reviewed by W. T. Scott
Poetry 69:210 Ja '47 3100w

Reviewed by George Snell
San Francisco Chronicle p28 D 1 '46 60w

"Their estimates of one or two poets, notably John Gould Fletcher, are horrifyingly kind, and of one or two others, notably Laura Riding, apparently insensible. But in the main, the chapters of this book are civilized, clear, usefully illustrated and deeply meditated."

+ Time 48:112 N 18 '46 420w

"This is the sort of book that is recognized as inevitable as soon as someone writes it. Among all the anthologies of recent poetry there was no comprehensive and systematic history of poetic developments in twentieth-century America. Of course there ought to be one. It may be added that since Mr. Gregory and Miss Zaturenska (Mrs Gregory) have done the job and done it in superlative fashion, we can now see that they were inevitably the right authors to do it." G. F. Whicher

GREGORY, HORACE—Continued

+ Weekly Book Review p8 D 8 '46 1250w

Wis Lib Bul 42:164 D '46

Reviewed by S. T. Williams

Yale R n s 36:374 winter '47 650w

GREGORY, JAMES STOTHERT, and SHAVE, DONALD W. U.S.S.R.; a geographical survey. 636p maps $4.25 Wiley [21s Harrap]

330.947 Russia—Economic conditions. Physical geography—Russia [45-1753]

"This study of the Soviet Union in relation to its geographic background shows how the Russia of today evolved from the pre-revolutionary Russia. The volume is full of maps, charts and tables, much of the material gathered from works published in the U.S.S.R. Both the authors have been associated with Trinity County School, Middlesex, England." Book Week

Book Week p14 D 8 '46 60w

Library J 71:1052 Ag '46 40w

GRENNAN, MARGARET ROSE. William Morris, medievalist and revolutionary. 173p $2.50 King's crown press [12s 6d Oxford]

B or 92 Morris, William A45-4643

"The hatred William Morris came to feel for modern civilization was the inevitable growth of his instinctive love of the Middle Ages and his passionate sympathy for his fellows. Other men moved by a like sympathy had found in the Middle Ages what they deemed an indictment of the slavery of the workman in their generation and a program for a brighter and perhaps utopian future. A 'medieval tradition' was in the making with its sources in Cobbett's History of the Protestant Reformation, Southey's Colloquies, Book II, of Carlyle's Past and Present, Ruskin's 'The Nature of Gothic,' from The Stones of Venice, and Pugin's Contrasts, and it is Dr. Grennan's concern to define and develop the interrelations of Morris' medievalism and his socialism and to indicate his place in the 'tradition.'" Cath World

"Unerring in its research, lucid in its presentation of ideas and tendencies whether of an individual or an epoch, and stylistically distinguished, this book is an example of creative scholarship at its best." J. J. Reilly

+ Cath World 162:471 F '46 550w

Reviewed by R. E. E. Harkness

Crozer Q 23:187 Ap '46 1200w

"Mrs. Grennan's book is somewhat unnecessarily long, but it is worth reading. As becomes such a study, there are ample notes and bibliography and index. It is heartening to see Morris treated with clarity and enthusiasm as well as with fairness and intelligence. The author has understood the profound basis of Morris's revolutionary tactic and, in addition, writes sympathetically and shrewdly." C. P. Rollins

+ Sat R of Lit 29:28 J1 20 '46 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p30 Ja 19 '46 1100w

GRESHAM, WILLIAM LINDSAY. Nightmare alley. 275p il $2.50 Rinehart

46-5411

"This is the story of Stanton Carlisle, a clever, personable and thoroughly unscrupulous carnival man who, driven by a force generated out of childhood frustration, sets out to achieve riches and power by exploiting the things men fear most: death and the creak of fortune's wheel. With the help of three women, each of whom he uses and mistreats, he rises from carnival announcer to vaudeville mentalist and finally becomes the wonder-working spiritualist of New York's neurosis-ridden rich, who give him flatfuls of money and offer him prospects of more." Weekly Book Review

"This queer, tough, colorful novel combines the biography of a scoundrel with the exposure of half a dozen pseudomagical rackets. As a study in psychotic villainy, it is lively but not particularly impressive. As a source of information on sleight of hand, mind reading, mental telepathy, conversing with spirits, raising the dead, and cleaning a chump, it is invaluable. The book's weakness, in the end, is the predominance of characters who never can be honest and sane simultaneously." P. L. Adams

+ Atlantic 178:154 S '46 550w

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Book Week p8 O 20 '46 470w

"Unrelieved, realistic, this is able handling of distasteful characters, emotions and situations and is definitely out for conservatives—for most P.L.'s."

Kirkus 14:467 S 15 '46 170w

"Extremely frank language and scenes may be disgusting to some. Urge reading before purchase. Not recommended." E. F. Kelly

Library J 71:1127 S 1 '46 70w

"If you enjoy hundred-proof evil—and a cogent analysis of same with your nightcap—then, in the words of the Ten-in-One barker, hurry, hurry, hurry!" James MacBride

N Y Times p5 S 8 '46 900w

"This is not a 'nice' book. Its sex episodes are almost brutally frank. Its psychological probings are often shocking; its relentless exposure of the hidden nightmare alley in one human heart is a constant reminder to every reader of whatever his or her own nightmare alley may be, and this in itself is shocking, too, in the proper sense of the term. Nevertheless, Mr. Gresham conducts it all in the spirit of cold, almost scornful analysis, and where sex is concerned, for instance, the total effect is never salacious, merely surgical. And this is equally true of his investigations into other aspects of that curious mixture called a human being. The net of it is that Mr. Gresham can write. It will be extremely interesting to see what he does next."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 S 17 '46 850w

Reviewed by F. K. Kelly

Sat R of Lit 29:32 S 21 '46 900w

"There is a refreshing contemporaneity about the whole performance. The writing is skillful and supple and at times vividly graphic; and the sex scenes, which are as frank and adult as you would want, are managed without a trace of leer." Stephen Stepanchev

+ Weekly Book Review p15 S 8 '46 450w

GRESHOFF, JAN, ed. Harvest of the Lowlands. 626p $5 Querido

839.3108 Dutch literature

46-2204

An anthology of Dutch prose translated into English. It includes only the work of authors from 1880 to the present. There are brief biographical notes on the authors, and an author index.

Reviewed by J. J. De Boer

Book Week p13 Mr 10 '46 400w

Booklist 42:244 Ap 1 '46

"There is no poor writing in this anthology. A reader has only to look for a style or a subject to please him. One of the useful things that may come out of the book is the translation of novels by these writers, if these stories find the audience they deserve. Mr. Greshoff's introduction is a history of motifs in Netherlands literature, and even if the Dutch names do not mean much, his intelligent scanning of ideas and tendencies should." Isa Kapp

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 24 '46 600w

"Most Americans, who want their literature to keep pace with their trains and automobiles, probably will not care for what the Dutch masters of literature have meticulously recorded for their countrymen, but their less hurried compatriots will find much entertainment and value in this generous volume of samplings. Those adventurous enough to try a literary exploration will find nothing that can be called 'great' and little that is stirring, but they will be fully satisfied." R. F. H.

+ Spring'd Republican p6 Mr 13 '46 800w

GREW, DAVID. Wild dog of Edmonton; II. by Ellen Segner. 198p $2 Reynal

Dwight, an orphan working on a Canadian farm, adopts a dog, against the farmer's wishes. When the farmer threatens to kill the dog, Dwight runs away with his pet and nearly dies of exposure. The result of this adventure is a better home for both dog and boy.

"The vivid portrayal of a dog's loyalty and endurance is the best part of the story." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:269 J1 '46 160w

"The author writes with vigor and excitement, and the illustrations by Ellen Segner are lively line drawings."

+ Kirkus 14:127 Mr 1 '46 110w

"Recommended." Elizabeth Johnson
+ Library J 71:1057 Ag '46 70w

Reviewed by Creighton Peet

N Y Times p31 My 26 '46 120w

"The introductory and the concluding chapters are awkward and unconvincing. But the main part of the story moves quickly and with a well-sustained pace. Young people will find the plucky trek of young Dwight and his dog through the inhospitable Canadian forests completely absorbing. Exceptionally well done is the author's account of the adventures of Whitepaw, Dwight's loyal dog, when he finds himself alone in Edmonton." Marian King

+ Sat R of Lit 29:42 My 13 '46 180w

"This is a vivid study of self-preservation, on the well known basis that only ten dinners stand between an alderman and an anarchist. The dog, not being a theorist, acts it out and I am happy to say that the end is happy." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 J1 14 '46 240w

GREY, ZANE. Shadow on the trail. 278p $2.50 Harper

46-1626

Western story.

Book Week p14 F 24 '46 90w

Booklist 42:283 My 1 '46

"It's good Zane Grey! A better than average story on the revolution to break the power of the rustlers on the newly opened Arizona ranges."

+ Kirkus 14:50 F 1 '46 180w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p20 Mr 24 '46 90w

GRIERSON, SIR HERBERT JOHN CLIFFORD, and SMITH, JAMES CRUICKSHANK. Critical history of English poetry. 593p $5 Oxford [21s Chatto]

821.09 English poetry—History and criticism
46-11822

A history of English poetry and evaluation of the poets themselves from Anglo-Saxon times to 1939. The twentieth century poets are treated briefly, in about thirty-six pages. The book is intended for the general reader. Bibliography. Index.

"Oversimplification provoked by space restrictions is not too satisfactory. But this is by the way. It is overall an excellent, helpful popular history." Leo Kennedy

+ Book Week p8 D 22 '46 350w

Booklist 43:115 D 15 '46

"It is not only a scholarly record of the development of the various types of poetry through succeeding generations, but is also a critical history in the sense that each poet is judged, in the last analysis, not by the literary fashion and theory of his own day, but by a definite and objective standard—the poetic faith of Smith and Grierson. To a certain extent, therefore, your estimate of this work will depend upon whether or not you agree with the concept of poetry applied by these critics. The reader may wish that they had defined this concept at the beginning of the volume, but it is at once clear that for them great poetry is that of the romantic school—the poetry of Wordsworth, Spenser and Shakespeare. . . . However much you may disagree with some of its judgments, this remains a scholarly and useful book." A. P. Campbell

+ Commonweal 45:211 D 6 '46 500w

Reviewed by John Berryman

Nation 163:733 D 21 '46 1700w

"A generous background both of history and of the course of English intellect and imagination is provided, and some chapters—particularly those on Shakespeare, Burns, Blake, Crabbe, and Byron—are bright with informative detail. The modern poets, from Eliot on, are less successfully appraised, but these two historians' admirable insight into the past makes up for a certain shortsightedness about the present."

+ New Yorker 22:135 N 16 '46 100w

"Professor Grierson and Professor Smith set themselves a task at once fascinating and appalling. There will, no doubt, be differences of opinion as to the success of their enterprise, but the reviewer thinks they come out well from a tremendous test. And certainly they were well equipped for it. Almost outrageously well informed, they also have the sympathy and charity without which there is no understanding. And practically nowhere do they fall into that odd heresy which compels some critics to hate Pope because they see virtue in Keats. . . . However, I have found myself far more often in agreement than at odds with two pleasant and enlightened guides, who, uninhibited by preconceptions and unimpressed by famous and frequently shopworn criticism, have examined, as if for the first time, every great poet, and many a small one, who has used the great language." Leonard Bacon

+ Sat R of Lit 29:70 D 7 '46 750w

"The volume should serve the student as a scholarly and often illuminating work of reference, in more ways than one, for it not only presents a compendious history of English poetry, but also admirably illustrates the Victorian point of view." Babette Deutsch

+ Weekly Book Review p46 D 1 '46 1150w

GRIGGS, GEORGE PHILIP. Days are spent [Eng title: Readiness is all]. 314p $2.75 Coward-McCann [9s 6d Hamilton, H]

46-3947

A story of English naval officers during the war. The first and third sections are concerned with the actions of an MTB during two battles with the Germans. The middle section relates the amorous career ashore of the young captain, handsome, bearded, Rupert Illingsworth.

"A first novel, English, with moments of good writing, that tries to blend the actions at sea with a 72 hour leave, in the story of Rupert, the young officer of a motor torpedo boat. . . . Verbatim reporting does not give tangible reality, and the romance is not equal to the night scenes of small, but effective efforts against the enemy—which leaves this straddling, as neither a full action story nor yet entirely wartime romance. It is saved, however, by some nice writing."

+ Kirkus 14:156 Ap 1 '46 170w

Reviewed by Harold Brighthouse

Manchester Guardian p3 N 30 '45 100w

"Mr. Griggs gives individuality both to major and minor characters, and he writes with compassion without being sentimental. The style, owing something to Hemingway, is vivid and objective; but the novel as a whole, though well done in individual scenes, lacks a solid, total impact." John Bicknell

+ N Y Times p14 My 12 '46 270w

"The Days Are Spent' contains elements of a first-rate story, but Mr. Griggs has unhappily not knitted them together. Individually and collectively, they are not developed in scope, depth, or perspective. His characters are stereotypes in habits, in language, in performance, even in their names." Joseph Hirsh

Sat R of Lit 29:37 My 25 '46 400w

"[The book] sags a little in the middle. But it is a book which will be enjoyed because of its straightforward and accurate description of work in the Navy. The boredom, the hardship, the cold, the close quarters, the power and the glory: it is all here, neither minimised nor accentuated, but set together in just proportion." V. C. Clinton-Baddeley

GRIGGS, G. P.—Continued

+ — Spec 175:602 D 21 '45 360w

Reviewed by R. M. Morgan
Spring'd Republican p4d My 26 '46
180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p581 D 8 '45
420w

"Mr. Griggs, who served eight years in the Royal Navy (he is at present a student at Oxford), is at his best when describing action at sea. There is sustained drama and mounting tension in these scenes; the writing is vivid and evocative. The London episodes are less effective. Here he tends to fall into a kind of neo-Hemingway style, and there are long passages of repetitious dialogue during which the story remains static. Despite all their talking to and about each other, we never learn enough concerning the backgrounds or inner lives of the characters to give them much more than a generic reality." Jennings Rice

+ — Weekly Book Review p22 Ap 28 '46
400w

GRONOWICZ, ANTONI. The Piasts of Poland [tr. by Joseph Vetter]. 199p il maps $2.50 Scribner

943.8 Poland—History 45-9938

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Booklist 42:230 Mr 15 '46

Christian Science Monitor p13 Mr 2 '46
80w

"The Piast family is an old Polish family—a typical group, picturesque, peasant, bearing the name of the 'first dynasty of kings of Poland.' This is a charming story of their life, written by a well-known Polish author, translated for the English reader by Joseph Vetter, delightfully illustrated with maps and pictures and jacket design by Frances Lichten." T. F. Ople

+ Churchman 160:17 Ja 15 '46 120w

"This useful and informing book is written by a liberal Pole who knows his country." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:47 Ja '46 90w

"Interesting to adults or adolescents. By a liberal, informed historian; translated by Joseph Vetter." Maude Adams

+ Library J 71:125 Ja 15 '46 130w

"Written from the viewpoint of liberal, this is a lucid introduction for readers of high school age to a complicated subject." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p24 F 3 '46 90w

GRONOWICZ, ANTONI. Sergei Rachmaninoff; il. by Woodi Ishmael [tr. by Samuel Sargenstein and Edna Ruth Johnson]. 153p $2.50 Dutton

B or 92 Rachmaninoff, Sergei—Juvenile literature 46-6700

A biography for young people about this Russian composer, pianist, and conductor. It begins with his childhood in Russia, describes his early success, his contacts with famous musicians of the day, his voluntary exile after the revolution, and his later career in Europe and America. List of works. Index.

Booklist 43:75 N 1 '46

"A very interesting and profound book. Especially recommended for ages 12-16." S. J. Robinson

+ Library J 71:1336 O 1 '46 40w

Reviewed by Spencer Barefoot
San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 10 '46
150w

"This is a translation from the Polish, and it may well be that a poor translation is responsible for its static, almost awkward quality."

Sat R of Lit 29:68 N 9 '46 60w

GROSS, MARTIN. Acetanilid; a critical bibliographic review; with an introd. by Howard W. Haggard. (Inst. for the study of analgesic and sedative drugs. Monograph 1) 155p $3 Hillhouse press, 432 Temple st, New Haven 11, Conn.

615.78 Acetanilid

SG46-290

"In 'Acetanilid' there is presented a critical bibliographical survey of the history, physico-chemical properties, metabolism, therapeutic uses, pharmacology, toxicology and tolerance of the drug. Because of the very extensive use of acetanilid, especially as an ingredient of a great variety of proprietary preparations, unbiased opinion relative to its toxicity is of paramount importance. This subject, as well as the question of habituation or addiction, has been given lengthy and careful consideration. The bibliography and author index includes seven hundred and sixty-three references." Am Chem Soc J

"It seems to the writer that this monograph is to be recommended to those interested in the field because of the interesting and thorough treatment of the subject." F. F. Blicke
+ Am Chem Soc J 68:2123 O '46 200w

"If the succeeding volumes are as carefully planned and as succinctly edited as this one, the series will be a valuable addition to the scientific literature concerning useful drugs. . . The printing, paper, and format are excellent. The bibliography and author index is arranged alphabetically under the author's name and occupies about one fifth of the book. A valuable feature is the topical lists of reference numbers appended to each chapter, which makes it possible to consult original sources on specific topics." T. E. Cone
+ Chem & Eng N 24:2702 O 10 '46 250w

GROSS, RAPHAEL HENRY, ed Century of the Catholic essay; with biographical notes. 352p $3.50 Lippincott

824.08 Roman Catholic literature—Collections 46-7396

Partial contents. The rhythm of life, by Alice Meynell; Definition of a gentleman, by J. H. Newman; Goodness and gayety, by Agnes Repplier; On the delights of an incognito, by L. I. Guiney; On lying, by Hilaire Belloc; A day in the bog, by Seumas MacManus; The fourth order of humanity, by Francis Thompson; On lying in bed, by G. K. Chesterton; Of pleasant noises, by D. B. W. Lewis; Mr. Dooley; on the education of the young, by F. P. Dunne; Reading and education, by F. J. Sheed; The unrecognised air, by Alfred Noyes; Art and prudence, by Eric Gill; Imagination, by Coventry Patmore; Chaucer's nuns, by Sister M. Madeleva; Hermann the cripple, by C. C. Martindale; Christian freedom, by Christopher Dawson; Catholicism and the future, by R. H. Benson.

Reviewed by Jex Martin

Book Week p8 D 22 '46 400w

Booklist 43:98 D 1 '46

"Certainly one of the most gratifying of Catholic compilations is this present well printed, well arranged and well chosen collection. Obviously the fruit not only of formal but also of that informal education without which lovers of literature are not made, it is a testimony to unexceptionable literary taste and Catholic instinct."

+ Cath World 164:285 D '46 230w

"Though not all the essays are on religious themes, the propagandist purpose of the volume is evident. It contains much good writing."

+ Christian Century 63:1408 N 20 '46 80w

Reviewed by John Broderick

Commonweal 45:210 D 6 '46 460w

"Whatever the underlying purpose, the editor of this anthology has brought together a rich collection of essays and gives evidence to support Newman's thesis that the Catholic Church is entering upon a cultural resurrection, a 'second Spring'. . . However, there are just enough essays embodying distinctive Catholic teaching to have to say that the anthology will be more apt to find wide acceptance among Catholic readers than any other group."

+ — Kirkus 14:498 O 1 '46 170w

Reviewed by A. Foff

San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 1 '46
50w

GROSSBERG, ELMER. Farewell, my son. 300p
$2.75 Messner

46-8059

Portrait of a pitiful bit of human flotsam, a Greek immigrant and misfit, called Polk, as seen thru the eyes of a fifteen-year-old boy whom Polk had befriended.

Kirkus 14:560 N 1 '46 170w

"The book is diffuse, would have been much better as a novelette. The story itself, such as it is, barely moves, no matter how much the writer prods it; and, worst of all, dat ole debbil Saroyan gets into him once in a while with unhappy results. Yet, as a study of character, this novel is quite an achievement." Catherine Brody

+ — N Y Times p16 D 1 '46 360w

"Farewell, My Son," a first novel by Elmer Grossberg, must be judged on two levels. Measured by the ordinary yardstick, it has great deficiencies in structure and style; measured with the knowledge that it was written by Mr. Grossberg when he was eighteen years old, it is deeply arresting in concept and characterization. On the second level it leaves a deep impression of youth discovering the injustices of the world and taking upon his shoulders the burden of its reform. . . . A major weakness in the novel is Mr. Grossberg's technique of telling the greater part of Polk's story in Polk's personal language. His phonetic speech is difficult to follow, it is almost like reading another tongue that requires translation." Rose Feld

+ — Weekly Book Review p10 D 29 '46 550w

GROSSMAN, JONATHAN PHILIP. William Sylvis, pioneer of American labor; a study of the labor movement during the era of the Civil war. 302p $3.50 Columbia univ. press

B or 92 Sylvis, William H. Trade unions
A45-4563

"This study describes and evaluates the role of William Sylvis in the labor movement. Although active in the labor movement for less than ten years (1859-69), he made an enduring contribution to labor union organization and administration. His early death at the age of 40 deprived contemporary currents of reform of an important source of energy. Drawing almost entirely on primary materials, the author presents a valuable record of the activities of America's first great trade union leader, and one which should interest students of American economic history." (Ann Am Acad) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Herbert Solow

Am Hist R 51:730 J1 '46 500w

Reviewed by M. L. Hoch

Ann Am Acad 244:194 Mr '46 450w

"The minister who is seeking inspirational and educational material for a Labor Day sermon could perhaps do no better than to read and take notes on this book. Mr. Grossman has accomplished a fine piece of work. It is a contribution to American history and a further understanding of the labor movement in this country." R. H. Abrams

+ Crozer Q 23:185 Ap '46 700w

"Mr. Grossman has written of Sylvis with full understanding of his relation to his times and to preceding and subsequent labor history." N. K. B.

+ N Y Times p20 N 18 '45 220w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:25 Mr '46 320w

GROSSMAN, VLADIMIR. Pan-Germanic web: remaking Europe. 179p $2 Macmillan

327.43 Germany—Foreign relations. Pan-germanism [45-5403]

"To Grossman all that has occurred in Germany is the logical outcome of a century of political chicanery. He relates her attempts at expansion in all directions, and her philosophy of false treaties in furtherance of her ambitions. After reviewing the intrigues of the various successive political leaders, he analyzes the present situation and calls for the return of Germany to her position in 1864, which means the dissolution of the Reich. He also suggests immediate supervision by her close neighbors, the greatest sufferers at her hands. The problem of re-organizing Germany is only a part of the greater task of reconstructing Europe." Current Hist

Reviewed by F. E. Duddy

Am Hist R 52:180 O '46 120w

Current Hist 10:154 F '46 110w

Foreign Affairs 25:167 O '46 20w

GROSZ, GEORGE. A little yes and a big no; autobiography; il. by the author; tr. by Lola Sachs Dorin. 343p $7.50 Dial press

B or 92 Artists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-191

Memoirs of a modern artist, born in Germany in 1893, who here tells the story of his life in human as well as artistic terms. He recounts his experiences in the Latin Quarter and in Germany, and his flight to America, where he has made his home for some years. The book is copiously illustrated with reproductions of the artist's work. No index

"Good painters have seldom proved good writers. Mr. George Grosz, in his autobiography, is no exception. For once this defect is not of major importance, for however sloppily he may use words, for all his contradictions, ambiguities and obscurities, Mr. Grosz is anything but dull. His book is worth its price for the satiric drawings of the people of his native land alone. No artist dead or alive, I believe, has revealed with such (seemingly unconscious) penetration what lies within the shaved bumpy craniums, inside the sinister souls of the German bourgeoisie. But 'A Little Yes and a Big No' is more than that. It is the fascinating, maddeningly incomplete account of the life of a genial, sensual, complicated and confused German Romantic." James Stern

+ — N Y Times p5 Ja 12 '47 750w

"The hand that sketched the moral tatters, the deliquescence of the bourgeoisie could draw the distinct stems and twigs and fill in the big sweep of the dunes; and the man who directed the hand may be met in this autobiography: a great German artist, we recognize, who, in becoming an American citizen, has given himself an international passport." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 22:65 Ja 4 '47 1200w

"His literary method is much like his pictorial method—sharp, concentrated studies of individuals—but his drawings remain his greatest contribution to contemporary culture. Fortunately there are hundreds—so it seems—of these marvels of observation, caricature, and delineation scattered through the volume. For this alone it would be worth while." Alfred Frankenstein

+ San Francisco Chronicle p3 D 1 '46 180w

Reviewed by H. W. Janson

Sat R of Lit 30:20 Ja 11 '47 1700w

"If the criterion of a successful autobiography is the subconscious but inevitable growth and emergence of a rewarding personality from selected material, then this book is a truly important and successful accomplishment. In this instance the rewarding personality is a highly sensitive artist, bruised by life, sometimes admittedly petty, occasionally even shabby in small ways; explosively vital, honest to a degree that hurts, disillusioned by success as much as by suffering." George Biddle

+ Weekly Book Review p5 D 8 '46 1700w

GROUP, HAROLD E., ed. House-of-the-month book of small houses. 138p il $2.50 Garden City pub. co.

728 Architecture, Domestic—Designs and plans 46-2921

Pictures, plans, and estimates for building fifty-six houses, costing between $5,000 and $15,000. House-of-the-month glossary.

Book Week p14 My 12 '46 220w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '46

New Yorker 22:108 Ap 20 '46 140w

Spring'd Republican p6 Ap 10 '46 160w

Reviewed by Richardson Wright

Weekly Book Review p8 Je 30 '46 90w

Wis Lib Bul 42:71 My '46

GROVER, FREDERICK WARREN. Inductance calculations; working formulas and tables. 286p $5.75 Van Nostrand

537.6 Inductance 46-5701

"The purpose of this work is to provide a means for simplifying the routine calculations of mutual and self-inductances. The author provides for each case a single formula which includes numerical constants that may be interpolated from tables in which the shape ratios are the arguments. Circuits composed of straight filaments are first considered, then coils and other circuits composed of circular elements. Solutions of illustrative examples accompany each case discussed. There is a bibliography of some one hundred seventy-five publications, but no index. This lack is partly made up for by an extensive table of contents. The volume should prove useful to the advanced electrical engineering student and to the electrical engineer." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:980 J1 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:39 J1 '46

GROVER, LA MOTTE, comp. Manual of design for arc welded steel structures. 281p il $2 Air reduction, 60 E. 42d st, N.Y. 22

691.7 Steel construction. Electric welding 46-6526

"Comparable with the manner in which steel handbooks supply information on riveted connections, data have been compiled to form a manual on the design of welded steel joints. With diagrams and tables included to simplify computations, the book is divided into three parts. Part I covers fundamentals of design, typical details, data and diagrams for design calculations, estimation of costs, and inspection; Part II, standardized welded connections for simple framing, tables of allowable loads on beams and plate marks for welded connections; and Part III, data for reference purposes, such as definitions, symbols, acceptable weld profiles and electrodes." Eng N

Eng N 137:127 N 14 '46 120w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1715 D 1 '46 70w

GROVES, HAROLD MARTIN. Financing government. rev ed 653p $4 Holt

336.73 Finance—U.S. Taxation—U.S. 45-9110

"This is a revision of Professor Groves' highly regarded text, the first edition of which appeared in 1939 [Book Review Digest, 1939]. It follows the general outline of its predecessor directing the student into the field of taxation before taking him into the less exciting areas of public expenditures, borrowing, and fiscal administration. The text is essentially a treatise on taxation. Of its twenty-eight chapters, twenty are devoted to that subject. Unlike many authors, Professor Groves has taken the opportunity presented by a new edition to reduce, rather than expand, the amount of material presented. The statistical data as well as the discussion have been cut considerably." (Ann Am Acad) Chapter bibliographies. Index.

Reviewed by M. S. Kendrick

Am Econ R 36:417 Je '46 370w

"The work is well done and is an excellent text." C. C. Zimmerman

+ Am Soc R 11:242 Ap '46 650w

"The new edition is an up-to-date text with new material added to reflect recent thinking and developments in public finance. It is clearly and interestingly written, fair in its treatment of controversial issues, and well adapted to use in college classes in governmental finance. The general reader will also find the text valuable for reading and reference." A. G. Buehler

+ Ann Am Acad 244:199 Mr '46 360w

GROVES, HAROLD MARTIN. Postwar taxation and economic progress. (Com. for economic development. Research study) 432p $4.50 McGraw

336.295 Taxation—U.S. 46-2782

"A comprehensive coverage of the entire tax structure is given, starting from the federal system and working down through the state and municipal fields. Analysis is made of corporate and personal taxes with special emphasis placed on the important role of the income tax. Other taxes studied include death, excise, and sales taxes as well as forms of incentive taxation. The objective of these studies is to formulate specifications for a permanent tax structure." (Chem & Eng N) Index.

Reviewed by R. G. Blakey

Am Pol Sci R 40:1002 O '46 1800w

Ann Am Acad 247:202 S '46 480w

Booklist 43:49 O 15 '46

Reviewed by J. B. Irwin

Chem & Eng N 24:2112 Ag 10 '46 350w

Reviewed by D. B. Marsh

Pol Sci Q 61:434 S '46 1800w

"Harold M. Groves, professor of economics at the University of Wisconsin, deals with the subject in his scholarly book . . . in such a clear, attractive fashion that any ordinarily intelligent adult will not find it beyond him. It is not oppressively academic. He writes as one who has an intimate knowledge of his field in a mature, able, thought-provoking study which deserves a wide reading. It is greatly to the credit of the committee for economic development that they should have sponsored a work of such quality for in so doing they are rendering service of a superior kind." H. W. Cross

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Je 2 '46 550w

"As a whole, this report is one of the major contributions to the study of the problems of taxation."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:202 S '46 240w

GRUNEBAUM, GUSTAVE EDMUND VON. Medieval Islam; a study in cultural orientation. (Oriental Institute essay) 365p $4 Univ. of Chicago press

950 Mohammedanism. Civilization, Mohammedan. Civilization, Medieval A46-5260

"This volume by a distinguished member of the Department of Oriental Languages and Literature at the University of Chicago proposes 'to outline the cultural orientation of the Muslim Middle Ages, with eastern Islam as the center of attention. It attempts to characterize the medieval Muslim's view of himself and his peculiarly defined universe, the fundamental intellectual and emotional attitudes that governed his works, and the mood in which he lived his life.' At a time when any light shed upon the world of Islam should be welcome, especially light upon that period when Mohammedanism rose to great heights of power and for a time threatened to conquer Europe, Dr. Grunebaum's scholarly efforts 'to trace the temper and flavor of the Muslim Middle Ages' should receive very special attention." (Churchman) Index.

"The book is done with skill and erudition. Its story of the advent of the great Arabian prophet and of the rise to power of his mighty movement is fascinating both to the reader who reads for entertainment only and to him who would subject the contemporary bid for power of Muslim peoples to the careful scrutiny of the historian and sociologist." K. M. Chworowsky

+ Churchman 160:15 D 1 '46 300w

"It is not surprising that his book on medieval Islam should be a competent scholarly work covering adequately the field to which he has limited himself. . . . The book will be a disappointment to those interested in social and cultural history although the elaborate discussion of religion and literature does shed some light upon other fields as well." W. J. Marx

+ Commonweal 45:173 N 29 '46 500w

Current Hist 11:510 D '46 70w

U S Quarterly Bk1 2:314 D '46 340w

"Medieval Islam sounds a dull and futile subject for modern scholars, but when presented in easy language and with competence as Dr. Grunebaum has done, it makes informative as well as interesting reading." P. J. Searles

+ Weekly Book Review p50 N 10 '46 340w

GUERARD, ALBERT LEON. France: a short history. 274p maps $3 Norton

944 France—History 46-981

"Here is the ideal book for the reader who wants a brief history of France. Its 273 pages document the author's interpretation of the living French spirit with cultural and political data from pre-history to 1945. Guerard's standing as historian and critic makes the book all the more acceptable. Summary tables of significant dates, maps, well annotated reading list and index enhance its value for quick reference." (Library J) Suggestions for further study. Index.

Reviewed by W. J. Pugh

Am Hist R 52:174 O '46 320w

Reviewed by Louis Gottschalk

Book Week p10 Ap 14 '46 400w

Booklist 42:245 Ap 1 '46

Christian Science Monitor p14 My 11 '46 140w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '46

"Those of us who have known and enjoyed Mr. Guerard's previous studies in French civilization, 'French Prophets of Yesterday,' for example, or 'Reflections on the Napoleonic Legend,' do not need to be told that, among the numerous well-known and competent scholars scattered through our universities at the present moment, he is, probably the most qualified to write a short history of France." Cuthbert Wright

+ Commonweal 44:18 Ap 19 '46 1000w

Current Hist 11:327 O '46 80w

Foreign Affairs 24:750 Jl '46 10w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Horn Bk 22:215 My '46 300w

"This is necessarily sketchy history but an interesting profile by a French scholar."

+ Kirkus 14:27 Ja 15 '46 150w

"Highly recommended." Scott Adams

+ Library J 71:343 Mr 1 '46 120w

"Albert Guerard has succeeded admirably in a most difficult task. His short history of France is both stimulating and sound, dense and leisurely, brilliantly written—the sprightly narrative and thoughtful essay of the born historian, of one who has spent a lifetime studying his native land." C. A. Micaud

+ Nation 162:548 My 4 '46 650w

"This little book is my testament," Mr. Guerard says in his Foreword. It is a brilliant distillation of his years of thinking, teaching and writing on the subject."

+ New Repub 114:422 Mr 25 '46 120w

"Albert Guerard has added brilliance to American writing of this century. Among university professors he has long been remarkable for his independence of thought, his pungent and vivid style. . . . To a subtle irony which some would term Gallic and to the virtue which George Meredith admirably called

'French sanity' Albert Guerard joins some of the finest virtues of an American: a distrust of national prejudices and European rivalries, a lofty yet practical idealism, an invincible faith in man and in the future of mankind. . . . The book is elegant in style and in its material presentation, impeccably informed, precise and clear; it has no axe to grind, no partisan views to put forth or, which would be wise in a historian, to conceal. It is objective, but kindled with warmth because the author admires the qualities of the French, and radiating with light because his trenchant intellect refuses to be blunted by prejudices." Henri Peyre

+ N Y Times p28 Je 9 '46 1500w

"Although Professor Guerard disclaims any intention of introducing a thesis into this brief document, a concise and intelligent piece of writing which he says is his testament, it is apparent that he had more in mind than just a bit of fact collecting."

+ New Yorker 22:102 Mr 16 '46 120w

"In the reviewer's opinion the book fails to substantiate the thesis or to realize a satisfactory synthesis. . . . Yet the text does throw light upon human behavior as disclosed over time by people in one geographical area. In reading this account of French history, one gets the impression that as far as France's domestic past is concerned the real story lies in age-long struggles between those on top of the heap and those less favored who were striving to improve their lot—with the latter achieving a modicum of success. . . . The secondary thesis of the book seems open to question. . . . Although I favor most heartily historical synthesis, I am convinced that it has to be achieved on a broader framework than employed here." S. B. Clough

+ Pol Sci Q 61:460 S '46 750w

"To write in brief compass the history of the oldest and most influential nation in Europe is a most difficult task. Professor Guerard has accomplished it brilliantly. Abandoning traditional subdivisions of the subject, he skillfully adopts novel chapter and section headings that afford new perspectives and stimulating ideas. Many a passage, like the one on the Gothic cathedrals of France, is exquisite in its warmth, color and delicacy."

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 2:118 Je '46 250w

"Those who are in some degree familiar with France will find Professor Guerard's little book a stimulus—sometimes, as is inevitable, a stimulus to disagreement over specific judgments. Those who are beginning to learn about France can hardly find a clearer, more accurate and more interesting guide. And to those Americans who have succumbed to the ridiculous and dangerous notion that since 1940 France has 'ceased to count' it should be required reading." Crane Brinton

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Mr 31 '46 950w

GUGGENHEIM, MARGUERITE. Out of this century; the informal memoirs of Peggy Guggenheim. 365p $3.75 Dial press

B or 92 Guggenheim, Marguerite 46-3983

Informal autobiography of a member of the wealthy Guggenheim family. The author has been interested in modern art for some years, and is the founder and director of the New York gallery called Art of This Century. Her memoirs are highly colored with anecdotes about members of both European and American bohemian circles.

"One cannot help but wonder why books of this nature are published during a paper shortage. Carelessly edited (there are many typographical errors), 'Out of This Century' is the outpouring of a super-Bohemian; in reality an old-fashioned type of exhibitionism which might better be reserved for the private office of a psychoanalyst." Katharine Kuh

+ Book Week p18 Mr 31 '46 450w

"Unblushing and unbowed reminiscences of a career which for all its lack of decorum was not too successful at that—and which, were it not so shameless, might be a little sad."

Kirkus 14:171 Ap 1 '46 90w

GUGGENHEIM, MARGUERITE—Continued

"At every turn it is the author's slumbering mind and soul that shock the reader rather than the amorous incidents she is so fond of describing. In this cave-dweller's atmosphere it is not surprising that the few references Miss Guggenheim makes to the grim facts of this century—strikes, the war, the plight of the Jews, the refugees on the roads of Europe—should be quite blood-curdling in their inadequacy. But perhaps the most depressing thing in the book is that the author, a not inconsiderable patron of art, seems to be as hopelessly mute on painting as on other subjects and must confine herself to epithets like a 'marvelous Klee' and an 'incredible Miro.'" Elizabeth Hardwick

— Nation 162:405 Ap 6 '46 500w

"Miss Guggenheim's generous contributions to twentieth-century art and artists entitle her essay in autobiography to an equally generous reception. But apart from some unconsciously humorous passages and Jackson Pollock's handsome jacket, this is a book to avoid unless your taste runs to dull writing about things that must have been exciting at times and unless you are part of that constantly growing audience that finds anything about Europe in the twenties irresistible." E. H.

New Repub 114:486 Ap 8 '46 100w

Reviewed by B. V. Winebaum

N Y Times p12 My 26 '46 750w

Reviewed by Philip Wylie

— Sat R of Lit 29:14 My 4 '46 800w

"The psychoanalytical job which Miss Guggenheim has done on herself—which is as boring to unprofessional outsiders as most prolonged psychoanalytical revelations are—has taught her something. . . At the end she says: 'But one lives and learns, or maybe one lives too much to learn.' I think you have a nugget there, Miss G.'" F. H. Bullock

— Weekly Book Review p14 Ap 28 '46 600w

GUINAGH, KEVIN. Search for glory; decorations by Ben Kutcher. 220p $2.50 Longmans

Pilâtre de Rozier, Jean François—Fiction

46-19672

"This novel tells the story of Pilâtre de Rozier, who came up to Paris from Metz early in the reign of Louis XVI, and became not merely an expert pharmacist, an attaché at Versailles and director of the King's Museum but also, apparently, the first inventor of the gas mask and one of the prime developers of the hot-air balloon." Cath World

Book Week p9 O 27 '46 120w

"One could wish, perhaps, for more vivid personality in the characters portrayed, but the background of France during those pregnant and ominous years is painted with a painstaking fidelity which modern readers will find both informative and challenging." Katherine Brégy

Cath World 163:569 S '46 180w

Churchman 160:3 N 15 '46 20w

Horn Bk 22:358 S '46 160w

"Good library and school material."

+ Kirkus 14:299 Jl 1 '46 130w

"Well-written and very worthwhile book. Recommended for the junior and senior high school ages." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 71:1132 S 1 '46 100w

"It is an interesting story, and the author has told it with great charm, country life before the Revolution, the life of the middle class in the cities, the new interest in science, the haughty indifference and callousness of the nobility, the growing anger of the populace, the food that was eaten and the clothes that were worn—all of these receive interesting treatment. This is certainly a valuable book for the 'teen-age audience.'" R. A. B.

+ N Y Times p52 N 10 '46 140w

"Kevin Guinagh, linguist and aviation enthusiast, has written an excellent book—a book which is noteworthy for several reasons. As a carefully written, often exciting, sometimes dramatic story it will appeal to many young people." R. A. B.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:68 N 9 '46 240w

School & Society 64:88 Ag 3 '46 40w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p7 S 1 '46 270w

GUNN, NEIL MILLER. Key of the chest. 285p $2.75 Stewart [8s 6d Faber]

46-19686

The setting is the western highlands of Scotland. Young Charlie MacIain, a former student, now living with his dour older brother, saves the skipper of a wrecked Swedish vessel. The wreck sets off a long string of events, involving the pastor and his young daughter, the village doctor, and others, besides the two brothers.

"When Gunn is writing about less complex people (less complex verbally, that is), he is warm and discerning. The scenes in Smeorach's cottage, for example, are first rate. The author points a moral and adorns the tale, however, with super-intellectual discussions between a physician, the young master of Ros Lodge, and Mr. Gwynn, 'a subtle analyst of mental conditions.' Alas, the analyses of the deep-browed three are none too subtle at best, and become very boring after a while. Moreover, their deductions do not blend artistically with the essential thread of the story."

Jack Conroy

+ — Book Week p3 Jl 14 '46 320w

Kirkus 14:43 F 1 '46 170w

"I must confess to a feeling of disappointment in finding that Mr. Gunn has abandoned, it may be only temporarily, the beautiful lucidity of the manner that so greatly distinguished his story of 'Young Art and Old Hector' in favour of rather overwrought poetic metaphors that produce no picture in the mind. Nor do I feel that he has succeeded with his portraits of such characters as the Doctor, the young laird with his passion for photography, or the metaphysically minded Mr. Gwynne, none of whom really comes to life." J. D. Beresford

Manchester Guardian p3 F 15 '46 240w

"Mr. Gunn's setting is the Highlands, but his canvas sprawls and his sense of form is unsure. What begins as a very promising thriller loses itself in discussions on religion, traditions. . . Mr. Gunn uses big scenes with an almost reckless prodigality—storms, fog, thwarted love, near-incest, rescues in high seas. Individually, all are good; but they do not add up to a total effect. The Key of the Chest suffers from too much of the sinister." Walter Allen

+ — Spec 176:150 F 8 '46 110w

"Mr Gunn's philosophical meanderings have slowed down the pace of what might otherwise have been a fairly readable suspense story."

R. M. Morgan

Spring'd Republican p4d Jl 28 '46 180w

"Mr. Gunn's story has its excitements and its intellectual stimulus, but does not compel belief."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p65 F 9 '46 600w

"To present the academic side of the Crime drama, Mr. Gunn uses his ultra-intellectual characters to discuss . . . the whys and wherefores of human behavior in the face of the inarticulate struggle raging in the village. This device results in too much static conversation, most of which is confused philosophy that serves only to detract from an otherwise excellent piece of work. These moot discussions, whenever they occur, bring the novel to a sudden stop and add nothing but an incentive to the reader to thumb hurriedly through the pages on which they appear in order to pick up again the main thread of the story. The author on the whole, however, has presented a delicately drawn novel, relying freely upon his vast store of knowledge about his fellow countrymen to create an absorbing study of a little known group of people." W. M. Kunstler

+ — Weekly Book Review p10 Jl 7 '46 850w

Wis Lib Bul 42:132 O '46

GURVITCH, GEORGII DAVIDOVICH. Bill of social rights. 152p $2 Int. univs. press

323.4 Liberty. Social problems 46-2446

"An English edition of a book recently published in French. . . [The author] reviews the trend, shown in the constitutional provisions of many countries, to extend rural guarantees in social and economic fields. He is emphatic in his belief that a bill of social rights must supplement and reinforce a bill of political rights. But he maintains that the provisions of bills of social rights of the recent past carry the danger of making the recipients of social security passive beneficiaries rather than active participants in an enlarged sphere of democratic action. . . The book contains a twenty-page draft of a proposed bill of social rights for workers, consumers, and 'the common man.'" Am Pol Sci R

Reviewed by J. D. Lewis

Am Pol Sci R 40:614 Je '46 450w

"The book is excellent in all its negative aspects, painting the dangers of totalitarianism arising out of socialism or the state ownership of industry. The positive program contains, certainly, everything that is desirable. However, the question of how economic planning is compatible with liberty, including the right to strike, remains unsolved. This is no argument against the merit of the author, who is to be congratulated for his courage in tackling one of the most burning problems of our time." E. J. Gumbel

+ Ann Am Acad 246:153 Jl '46 600w

GURVITCH, GEORGII DAVIDOVICH, and MOORE, WILBERT ELLIS, eds. Twentieth century sociology. 754p $6 Philosophical lib.

301 Sociology 46-3930

"A new sociology text edited by Georges Gurvitch, lecturer in sociology at Harvard University and Wilbert E. Moore, of the Office of Population Research of Princeton University. The contributors include such scholars as Talcott Parsons, Jerome Hall, Roscoe Pound and others. The book is divided into two sections: Part I deals with sociological problems in general, and Part II with the concepts developed in specific political or racial areas within the present century. The chapters under such headings as 'British Sociology,' 'Eastern European Sociology,' etc., are written by authorities [on] those parts of the world." Book Week

"Teachers of sociology, those attempting to make further significant contributions to the literature, and graduate students should find this book useful and stimulating. It has the advantage over earlier works of somewhat similar plan in that it is by several years more recent than any of them; and some of the collaborators have rather skillfully incorporated into their chapters the results of the latest thought and research. The volume is marred by numerous glaring typographical errata; and it entirely lacks an index, which would have been a valuable addition. Brief biographical sketches of the several authors appear at the close of their contributions." F. N. House

+ Am J Soc 52:85 Jl '46 360w

Reviewed by E. D. Monachesi

Am Soc R 11 775 D '46 500w

Book Week p10 F 24 '46 120w

Harvard Law R 59:478 F '46 240w

Reviewed by J. E. Fleming

Social Forces 25:104 O '46 1050w

Social Studies 37:144 Mr '46 80w

"The authors of the various chapters differ considerably in the effectiveness of their presentations. But, in general, it may be said that they are inclined to verbosity and sometimes to polysyllabic logomachy. The style is heavy, even in articles by men who usually express themselves fluently and clearly. . . This ponderous tome will not add much to the understanding of those who do not belong to the profession. It will stimulate the thinking of sociologists who find the time to wade through its lengthy perorations. But the whole job, one suspects, might better have been done more briefly and more concretely. This reviewer has found much of value in 'Twentieth Century Sociology,' but at a great expenditure of time and effort. Perhaps younger and more vigorous minds will gather richer returns at lower cost. But the prediction is here made that very few persons will ever read this book, and that—provided some other group does a better job—it may not make a great deal of difference." S. A. Queen

— Survey 82:244 S '46 650w

U S Quarterly BkI 2:233 S '46 160w

GUTHRIE, DOUGLAS JAMES. History of medicine; with an introd. by Samuel C. Harvey 448p 72pl $6 Lippincott [30s Nelson] 610.9 Medicine—History SG46-203

History of the progress of the medical art from prehistoric times to the present. This author is an Edinburgh physician. Many of the illustrations are from rare plates Chapter bibliographies Index.

"A gracious style and adroit use of the material make for easy reading, but this by no means implies that the book is superficial. On the contrary, it simply means good craftsmanship and careful selection and much cutting." Peter Williamson, M.D.

+ Book Week p8 Jl 14 '46 250w

Booklist 43:9 S '46

"As an introduction and guide to the study of medical evolution this book should prove highly successful." G. F.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 21 '45 240w

"The book will interest, inform and entertain any educated reader, medical or lay; and for those who wish to study the subject or any part of it more fully, help is given in the form of footnotes on nearly every page and a classified bibliography of medical history as an appendix." Harry Roberts

+ New Statesman & Nation 30:444 D 29 '45 600w

"It is refreshing to open Dr. Guthrie's new 'History of Medicine' and find it viewed not as the dry bones of fact, but with the eye of a writer who can transmute even a discussion of primitive trephining tools into a fascinating and readable tale. Other histories of medicine have been more detailed, more exhaustive. Few have managed to present the evolution of medical thought (from the caperings of the witch doctor to the age of superspecialism) with quite so deft a touch and such obvious relish for the task at hand. With its detailed bibliography, this is an excellent survey of medical growth—and of its place in our complex society today." F. G. Slaughter

+ N Y Times p6 Jl 14 '46 1000w

"The writing is good, especially for so documented a treatment of such a vast subject, and the book is abundantly illustrated with rare and curious pictures."

+ New Yorker 22:59 Jl 6 '46 80w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 14 '46 120w

"This good book is far more than a record of sequences in medicine. It is a story of science, of philosophy, of anthropology, and should be read by those who are concerned with any of those fields of thought. The last four pages, dealing with the life and contributions of William Osler (and of his colleague William Welch), reveals how truly Dr. Guthrie is an artist as well as a physician, delineating the foibles as well as the supreme achievements, the skill as well as the charlatany, of men of medicine through the ages." E. H. Hume

+ Sat R of Lit 29:15 Ag 3 '46 1000w

"To write a history of medicine that is at once readable by the average layman and satisfying to the average doctor is no easy task. To make it also commendable to the serious student is even more difficult. But thanks to an obviously immense amount of reading, a fine sense of compression and selection, a straightforward, simple style, and full documentation, excluded from the text, Dr. Guthrie has managed to accomplish it with very great success. The name of almost every contributor, in some important sense, to the art and science of medicine, the development of hospitals and public health, medical literature and journalism has received appropriate mention. If Dr. Guthrie has been unable to provide detailed portraits, this is because the nature and scope of his task have forbidden it. But he has made ample amends in his appendix of relative literature in many languages." H. H. Bashford

GUTHRIE, D. J.—Continued

+ Spec 175:368 O 19 '45 750w

"As a literary exercise, and as a reasonably satisfactory compendium of the subject, this book has merit, but it seems to this critic that the author has not made a very good case of raison d'être. The abundant illustrations are interesting and helpful, however, and the bibliographic notes and appendix seem to prove that he has gone into his subject exhaustively and in a scholarly manner." I. W. Voorhees

+ Weekly Book Review p10 J1 28 '46 650w

QYSIN, BRION. To master—a long goodnight; the story of Uncle Tom, a historical narrative. 276p $3 Creative age

B or 92 Henson, Josiah 46-7380

The true story of the man Josiah Henson, who was the prototype of Harriet Beecher Stowe's fictional Uncle Tom. Henson lived the latter part of his life in Canada, where he died in 1883. The author is a Canadian who wrote much of the book while serving in the U. S. and Canadian armies. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by E. E. Lelsy

Book Week p2 N 3 '46 290w

"It is generally sound, readable and popular." L. D. Reddick

+ Library J 71:1205 S 15 '46 90w

H

H. D. See Doolittle, H.

HAAS, WILLIAM S. Iran. 273p il $3.50 Columbia univ. press

955 Persia A46-962

Describes the development of Iran from earliest times to the present. The author, who is from the Iranian institute and school for Asiatic studies, presents first hand information on Iran's religion, government, culture, economics, and its outlook for the future. Index.

Reviewed by A. C. Millsbaugh

Am Hist R 61:712 J1 '46 550w

Reviewed by W. W. White

Am Pol Sci R 40:609 Je '46 350w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 Mr 3 '46 120w

Booklist 42:211 Mr 1 '46

Bookmark 7:13 My '46

"Mr. Haas is well qualified to discuss Iran. . . In his book, he gives an all-round picture of Persian history and development, placing the main emphasis on events in the 20th century and on the country's cultural, ethnological and economic aspects. His excellent chapter on pre-Islamic and Islamic religion in Persia deserves special mention." E. S. P.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 2 '46 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 J1 '46

"Unfortunately the chapter on the rôle of Iran in modern world politics is written in a more hasty way than those on Iran's old culture; the story of the Anglo-Russian rivalries in the Middle East is very incomplete and the presentation of present days' problems neither deep nor very precise. The book is supplemented by some excellent photos, economical statistics, information on the irrigation problem, the financial and budget situation, two diplomatic documents and a very careful index. Strangely enough a sound bibliography is missing. Haas's book will prove a disappointment to the student of contemporary affairs but useful as an elementary introduction to Iran's history and civilization." Max Fischer

Commonweal 44:77 My 3 '46 350w

Current Hist 10:348 Ap '46 900w

"This very superior book is one of the best to appear on the Middle East in several years."

+ Foreign Affairs 24:561 Ap '46 60w

"Timely—and needed."

+ Kirkus 14:63 F 1 '46 150w

"All this most pertinent information is particularly valuable at the present time. Recommended." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 71:280 F 15 '46 70w

Reviewed by Stewart Symes

New Statesman & Nation 32:12 J1 6 '46 750w

"A competent, scholarly and streamlined survey of Iran and its civilization. In a book too brief to do justice to his fascinating subject—especially in view of the international situation existing today." C. P. Grant

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 24 '46 1100w

Reviewed by Taraknath Das

Pol Sci Q 61:461 S '46 1100w

Reviewed by W. H. Hindle

Sat R of Lit 29:14 Mr 2 '46 900w

+ Springfd Republican p6 F 23 '46 270w

Reviewed by Ernest Jackh

Survey G 35:267 J1 '46 360w

"The best part of the book is the analysis of the political and geographical factors which have made the Persian people what they are today. Mr. Haas brings to bear upon his problem a critical mind, a real interest in Persian philosophy and a keen appreciation of the historical causes which help to shape national mentality. Within the compass of a short book he has succeeded in collecting a great mass of important information and he has set it out with clarity and penetration."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p387 Ag 17 '46 600w

"Dr. Haas's treatise on Iran is invaluable in directing our attention to a potential volcano, in making us acquainted with a strategically located country and people, and the difficulties confronting them." P. J. Searles

+ Weekly Book Review p16 Mr 24 '46 750w

HAGEDORN, HERMANN. Americans: a book of lives; with portraits by Rafael Palacios and others. 392p il $5 Day

920 U.S.—Biography 46-2626

Biographical sketches of seventeen Americans who made outstanding contributions to American life during the twentieth century. The sketches were originally written for foreign reading. Those included are: Samuel Langhorne Clemens, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Thomas Alva Edison, Luther Burbank, Booker T. Washington, Theodore Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson, Jane Addams, John Dewey, Louis Dembitz Brandeis, George Washington Carver, Henry Ford, Helen Keller, Will Rogers, Herbert Hoover, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, Wendell Wilkie.

Reviewed by J. O. Supple

Book Week p12 Ap 23 '46 500w

Booklist 42:264 Ap 15 '46

"Clear concise treatment of familiar material from a fresh angle. Good adult education material."

+ Kirkus 13:541 D 1 '45 150w

"The book was designed primarily to give readers all over the globe an idea of American achievement in other fields besides the bazooka and the atomic bomb. But it deserves wide reading at home." Thomas Laak

+ N Y Times p12 Ap 21 '46 320w

"Presumably not as familiar with these American figures as we are, the foreign readers for whom 'Americans' is primarily intended should find these somewhat idealized biographies entertaining and enlightening. Readers here will find it a kindly, rather old-fashioned, pleasant collection of biographical tributes." J. P. Wood

+ Sat R of Lit 29:66 Ap 13 '46 650w

"It is puzzling, indeed inexplicable, that apart from politics Mr. Hagedorn is a shrewd and penetrating critic, accepting no shibboleths that will not stand scrutiny in the light of plain common sense. When he writes of artists, scientists, inventors and business men he is always good and frequently excellent. . . . But whenever he touches a politician Mr. Hagedorn's feet become entangled in the treacherous coils of history and he trips badly." G. W. Johnson

+ Weekly Book Review p7 My 5 '46 1350w

HAGEDORN, HERMANN. The bomb that fell on America. 57p pa $1.25 Pacific coast pub. co, 1022 State st, Santa Barbara, Calif.

811

46-6093

In fifty-odd pages of free verse, couched in everyday, almost colloquial phraseology, the poet attempts to express what the atomic bomb which fell on Hiroshima should mean to the people of America.

Christian Century 63:966 Ag 7 '46 70w

Christian Science Monitor p15 D 14 '46 120w

"No matter what professional critics of poetry have to say about the long, loose-jointed Carl-Sandburgian quality of these irregular trumpet-like lines, it is indeed the very best in our American tradition in germ and in seed, which speaks to us from this book. It is the inner voice, deep within us all." D. C. Fisher

+ N Y Times p14 My 26 '46 800w

Reviewed by Alfred Kreyenberg

Sat R of Lit 29:45 J1 27 '46 320w

HAGGERTY, JAMES EDWARD. Guerrilla padre in Mindanao. 257p $2.75 Longmans

940.53914 World war, 1939-1945—Philippine islands. World war, 1939-1945—Religious aspects. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 46-1131

Personal reminiscences of an American Catholic priest who chose to stay on in the Philippines after the fall of Bataan.

Reviewed by Eddie Doherty

Book Week p12 F 24 '46 180w

Booklist 42:224 Mr 15 '46

Cath World 163:94 Ap '46 250w

Reviewed by J. N. Moody

Commonweal 43:629 Ap 5 '46 500w

"This is an absorbing war story. . . . While Catholics will, perhaps, be the more interested than others, the book should have a wide appeal to the general public, irrespective of religious affiliation."

+ Kirkus 14:99 F 15 '46 200w

Reviewed by M. P. McKay

Library J 71:120 Ja 15 '46 140w

"This reader must plead one disqualification in appraising 'Guerrilla Padre.' It is impossible to say to what extent even a brief experience in the Philippines and acquaintance with the Filipinos serves as a prerequisite to full author-reader identification. It is true that the image of the smiling little people, always with sores on their legs, yet often spotless above the 'high mud mark' somewhere between shin and knee, rose from the printed page. So it may be that this book has especial meaning for those who served under General MacArthur. In these days of 'cooperative' Japs it has a vital and vivid meaning for every American." E. F. Hall

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 10 '46 650w

Reviewed by T. S. Hanrahan

Spring'd Republican p6 S 16 '46 360w

"'Guerrilla Padre in Mindanao' is not one of those hot, on-the-spot, thrill-packed tales dashed off in the quick flame of superficially felt horror and admiration. The thrills are there, the horror is there, and there is much splendid, selfless admiration, but their telling is not stepped up for the insensitive by an operatic style. 'Guerrilla Padre in Mindanao' is the literate, articulate, unsentimentalized journal of West Virginia-born Edward Haggerty, some time rector of Ateneo Cagayan and, for three years, co-ordinator, signal officer, commissary agent, paymaster and spiritual father of the guerrilla forces whose grimly pursued job on Mindanao furnished the Allies with another arm in their fight through the South Pacific." Clare Godfrey

+ Weekly Book Review p37 Mr 10 '46 800w

Wis Lib Bul 42:58 Ap '46

HAHN, EMILY. China A to Z: pictures by Howard Baer. [28p] $1.50 Watts, F.

46-7905

Alphabet book illustrated with twenty-six delicate water colors showing Chinese scenes. The paintings are on pale yellow paper and the book is bound so that it can lie flat on a table. The text is in rhyme, and about things Chinese.

"One of the most beautiful picture books of the year. . . . The Hahn doggerel seems out of tune and time with the skillful pictures and many 'world travelers' will wonder about the fat Amah and the many un-Chinese faces, but books on China are welcome, and this one will find eager buyers."

+ Book Week p17 N 10 '46 110w

"A picture book of the Chinese way of life, with the alphabet aspects of secondary importance—and artistically one of the loveliest books of the season."

+ Kirkus 14:421 S 1 '46 170w

Reviewed by Claire Nolte

Library J 71:1808 D 15 '46 90w

"The story is told in bouncing rhymes which will please the 5-to-8-year-old group. The illustrations have caught the mood of the text and show the children of China laughing and playing." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p11 D 29 '46 140w

"The war is evidently over when we can get as pretty a picture-book as this in so many colors and with really as much information as this for such a price. The reader is, I suppose, really a listener, and the pages open so as to make a spread across the child's lap and that of some older person. The jingling poetry in which it is expressed runs through salient points noticed in China."

+ Weekly Book Review p20 N 10 '46 200w

HAHN, EMILY. Hong Kong holiday. 305p $2.75 Doubleday

B or 92 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 46-4653

Some twenty sketches about the author's life in Hong Kong during the war, and before she came home on the Gripsholm. The last chapter is about life on the two ships which brought her and her young daughter to the United States. Most of the stories appeared first in the New Yorker.

Booklist 42:364 J1 15 '46

Cath World 164:189 N '46 150w

"Miss Hahn possesses an endless facility at this sort of writing; those addicted to it will ever clamor for more."

Commonweal 44:438 Ag 16 '46 130w

Kirkus 14:214 My 1 '46 170w

"Material has been chosen with more discrimination than in Miss Hahn's previous book." H. S. Taylor

Library J 71:917 Je 15 '46 120w

"It is far from irrelevant that this collection originally appeared as a New Yorker series. . . . The editors have a pretty good idea of what should be written about any particular subject, and it seems not unlikely that Emily Hahn sent them the sort of pieces she knew they wanted. Certainly this is the easiest way to account for the family resemblance among the several dozen New Yorker series which have

HAHN, EMILY—Continued
later been published as books. Theodore Pratt's France, Ludwig Bemelmans' Ritz Hotel, Clarence Day's old-time Madison Avenue—all these have a quality shared by Emily Hahn's Hong Kong. They are all two-dimensional backdrops for a program of cheerful and inoffensive vaudeville." Russell Maloney

N Y Times p5 Je 23 '46 650w

Reviewed by Philip Hamburger
Sat R of Lit 29:18 Je 29 '46 1050w

"As a whole, the book is an uneven and often repetitious miscellany of impressions and character studies. Some of the material, such as the sketches about the gibbon apes and that about Lieutenant MacBean are trivial and dull, but in spite of its obvious failings, the book gives a really vivid impression of an international city dominated by the victorious Japanese. Its virtue lies in Miss Hahn's first-hand knowledge of the difficulty of living in a beleaguered city and her natural preoccupation with the reactions of human beings under stress." Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Je 23 '46 550w
Wis Lib Bul 42:131 O '46

HAHN, EMILY. Picture story of China; with pictures by Kurt Wiese. [52p] $2.50 Reynal
915.1 China—Juvenile literature 46-8311

"The record of the daily life of a little Chinese boy whose family keeps to the old faith and traditions although the scene is modern China. The pictures in color include a map and a history of the events in China's development in small 'strip' drawings. For younger children." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 43:157 Ja 15 '47

"The little children are real, friendly and attractive. But the book swerves sharply to an older level when the author, in the last quarter of the book, attempts a quick historical survey. . . Kurt Wiese's illustrations are colorful and charming."

+ Kirkus 14:388 Ag 15 '46 100w

Reviewed by Lois Palmer
N Y Times p11 D 29 '46 140w

"A child from seven to eleven can learn from the colorful pictures and graceful text of this charming book how a modern Chinese child's daily life differs from his own." K. S. White

+ New Yorker 22:145 D 7 '46 80w

Sat R of Lit 29:70 N 9 '46 50w

"Miss Hahn has evolved an excellent scheme for presenting China to children older than those who look at the pictures of her Chinese alphabet but not yet old enough to settle down to serious history. . . It is a lively way of conveying information that is more than likely to be well remembered."

+ Weekly Book Review p18 N 10 '46 270w

HAHN, EMILY. Raffles of Singapore; a biography. 587p $3.50 Doubleday

B or 92 Raffles, Sir Thomas Stamford 46-7848

"Biography of Thomas Stamford Bingley Raffles who was the British equivalent in the Far East of Clive of India or Rhodes of South Africa. Considerable attention is given to the operations of the old East India Company and to the British colonial policy in the Orient." (Library J) Map on end papers. Index.

Reviewed by F. S. Marquardt
Book Week p3 D 8 '46 900w

Booklist 43:131 Ja 1 '47

Library J 71:1543 N 1 '46 60w

"As this era of Occidental domination of the Orient rushes dramatically to its conclusion, it is particularly timely and provocative to turn to the story of the days when it was just beginning and look at the forces and men that brought it about. Such a contemplation can be particularly valuable if the study is neither lyrically rhapsodic nor bitterly hostile but frank, understanding and reasonably detached. Since these are just the qualities that Emily Hahn brings to her biography of Sir Stamford Raffles, 'Raffles of Singapore,' it is a pleasure to welcome Miss Hahn on her at-least-temporary emergence from recording her own adventures as mother and Japanese prisoner into the ranks of the informal historians." Richard Watts

+ N Y Times p3 D 15 '46 1050w

"Miss Hahn has a skittish way with biography; she dominates the book, letting her wit run loose, chiding other biographers, and generally enjoying herself. She has made Sir Stamford's story highly entertaining and instructive."

New Yorker 22:143 N 30 '46 90w

"As one of those ordinary persons for whom Emily Hahn wrote, I wish (1) that she had done it in less than 544 pages of text, and (2) that she would go back into the wings where a biographer belongs, and not stand on the stage nudging her hero out of the spotlight so that she may have it herself." E. D. Breed

— San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 6 '46 700w

"'Raffles of Singapore' is heavy, turgid reading. Raffles never comes to life in the 570 pages of the book, except when his own letters are quoted, or when he is being described in the exact words of his Indian clerk, Munshi Abdullah. . . In an apology, Miss Hahn states clearly the difficulty with 'Raffles of Singapore,' when she applies the following quote to her own work, 'The volume is too cursory for the specialist and too detailed for others.' As Miss Hahn realizes this, it is a pity that she made no effort at its correction." Wenzell Brown

+ Sat R of Lit 29:16 N 30 '46 700w

"In her books (China to Me, the Soong Sisters, Hong Kong Holiday) impertinent, casual Emily Hahn proved that she was the only living person who could write about China as though it slept under her pillow. Raffles of Singapore has just the same chummy tone; few historical figures have ever been apostrophized so chattily, so personally—at times, Hero Raffles simply gets lost in the Hahn handbag, like a lipstick. Nonetheless, Raffles of Singapore is a lively, unconventional biography, which is also as formless as a conversation conducted by walkie-talkie."

Time 48:106 N 18 '46 1000w

"Miss Hahn has written the most readable biography of Raffles which has yet appeared. Others may be more solemn (even, not so clearly, more accurate), but none is quite so enjoyable. Both the public and private lives of Raffles are spread out for inspection. There are plenty of entertaining quotations from those quaintly ponderous contemporaries whose eloquence seems to be amusingly old fashioned to today's readers. And for good measure, Miss Hahn devotes many pages to description of India, Java, Sumatra, Malay and even England of over a century ago. With pleasing informality she paints pictures as vivid and exotic, in 1946, as Currier and Ives prints of early America." P. J. Searles

+ Weekly Book Review p3 N 24 '46 900w

HAIG, GEORGE C. (DAN STILES, pseud).
High schools for tomorrow. 212p $2.50 Harper
373 Education, Secondary 46-2816

A discussion of the possibilities of change and improvement in the high school curriculum. It is the author's suggestion that many of the formalized, static subjects (but not all) might be replaced by a program of practical experiences in community living, involving running a bank, a cafeteria, a model home, a juke joint, a chapel, etc.

"As the expression of a well-informed layman, not hampered by academic tradition, it is provocative and stimulating."
+ Booklist 43:7 S '46

"A glib analysis of American schools, almost stripped of the implications of the philosophy of education. But there are provocative ideas included."

Kirkus 14:58 F 1 '46 140w

Reviewed by J. S. Diekhoff

— Sat R of Lit 29:28 S 14 '46 300w

"In spite of the idealistic nature of this book, it offers a challenge to school administrators to examine critically our present-day practices, to inaugurate activities that will better meet the needs of youth, and to help the pupils cope with the problems of family and community life more effectively. No high-school teacher, principal, or superintendent should forgo the reading of this stimulating publication." A. S. Wilson

School R 54:495 O '46 700w

HAIG, GEORGE C. (DAN STILES, pseud) Land of enchantment; the Penobscot bay, Mount Desert region of Maine; text and phot. by Dan Stiles. 181p $2.75 Sugar ball press, Concord, N.H.

917.41 Penobscot bay. Mount Desert island, Maine 46-70

"A book about the Penobscot Bay—Mount Desert region of Maine. . . There are general chapters on the whole region and separate chapters on Castine, Belfast, Camden, Rockland, Mount Desert, Deer Isle, Vinalhaven and the lesser islands. . . The book is full of chuckling anecdotes and the salty flavor of the region." N Y Times

"Those who know this section will gain from a reading of 'The Land of Enchantment'; newcomers will find it a good introduction. The title may be a bit on the hackneyed side, but the subject matter is chosen with discrimination, and it is presented in honest prose." H. S. Pearson

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 10 '46 230w

Weekly Book Review p28 Ap 28 '46 180w

HAIG-BROWN, RODERICK LANGMERE HAIG. A river never sleeps; il. by Louis Darling. 352p $4 Morrow

799.1 Fishing Agr47-75

The author of Return to the River (Book Review Digest 1941) describes his fishing experiences thru one whole year, beginning with searching for steelhead in January. Sometimes he writes of lake or salt water fishing, but nearly always it is river fishing which he describes.

"Roderick L. Haig-Brown is an Englishman who has fished in the United States and lives in British Columbia; he is a fly fisherman who bridges the gap between American and British angling, and he writes like an angel. . . 'A River Never Sleeps' is a thrilling experience that happily can be relived in dirty weather." Leo Kennedy

+ Book Week p2 D 15 '46 90w

"Fishermen, when they write at all, write extraordinarily well. Haig-Brown is an outstanding example."

+ Kirkus 14:451 S 1 '46 200w

"The writing has lots of charm and some touches here and there of Thoreau"

+ New Yorker 22:87 Ja 11 '47 80w

"A surprisingly good job of bridging the gap between the piscatorial pundit and the uninitiated." Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 D 7 '46 450w

"It is a work of such excellence, such penetration and sureness and knowledge coupled with wisdom, that it stands very near the head of its class. . . These suggestions, rich, wide ranging, and expanded in English of precision and beauty, give 'A River Never Sleeps' a broad and lasting worth beyond the range of all but the best anglers' writing." J. R. De La Torre Bueno

+ Weekly Book Review p4 D 15 '46 800w

HALE, GARTH, pseud. See Cunningham, A. B.

HALE, KATHLEEN. Orlando, the marmalade cat: a trip abroad; il. by [the author]. 32p $2.75 Transatlantic

"Bound for a seaside holiday, Orlando, that unpredictable orange cat, sails for France instead. With his usual British aplomb, he makes the most of that mischance, accepting easily the friendship of Albert, the sailor; the pleasing oddities and gaieties of a French port, and the return by parachute to Newhaven." N Y Times

Reviewed by Martha King

Book Week p6 D 8 '46 60w

"The picture-book public which has met Orlando before will rejoice to see him again, more resplendent than ever in these truly distinguished color lithographs—and so will grown-ups." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p30 O 6 '46 140w

Reviewed by K. S. White

New Yorker 22:148 D 7 '46 60w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 N 3 '46 500w

HALL, CHENOWETH. Crow on the spruce. 201p $2.50 Houghton

46-1515

When Carl Alders was killed in a shooting accident, no one in the small Maine village mourned his passing—not his wife who hated him, not the fishermen who brought in the fish for his factory, their wives who cleaned the fish, nor the young men who drove his trucks. The story, made up of separate sketches and anecdotes of the townspeople, relates what Mrs Alders decided to do about the factory and what effect Carl's death and her action had on the lives of others.

Booklist 42:247 Ap 1 '46

Kirkus 14:19 Ja 15 '46 250w

"There is more to the writing of a novel than accurate reporting, and 'The Crow on the Spruce' is deficient in almost all the essential qualities of fiction beyond those supplied by a talent for acute observation of surfaces. Most deplorable of all its faults is the absence of any consistent direction in Miss Hall's book. A novel does not have to have a purpose or a solution or even a plot, but its people should be developed by its events or its events should be developed by its people. In Miss Hall's book nothing develops." W. E. Wilson

+ N Y Times p12 Mr 17 '46 600w

"A quiet, unemphatic little book. . . The story starts out with the obvious intention of being a novel, but it presently loses its way and becomes a collection of nicely drawn sketches of some pathetic people, their weaknesses, and their strength."

New Yorker 22:87 F 23 '46 80w

"The book does not cohere completely and is not always effective as storytelling, but it contains a lot of good writing and a fine feeling for the small-community spirit, the gossip and legend and rivalries of village life. Promising is inevitably the word for Miss Hall's book." T. M. Purdy

+ Sat R of Lit 29:12 Mr 9 '46 400w

"Here is a novel about life on the Maine coast which bears the happy distinction of being no echo of some other novel of the Maine coast. It has the clarity and composition of an etching in which every stroke adds to the effect, with none of the rustic or rheumatic touches which often smudge delineation of character in quest of the quaint. In this first mature novel Miss Hall's style is compact without being clipped. It is writing that erases the impression of effort, flowing yet controlled, a rhythm to which the inner ear as well as the mind respond." George Conrad

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Mr 10 '46 550w

HALL, FREDERICK FAIRCHILD. Your faith and your neighbor's. 142p $1 Wilde

290 Religions—Examinations, questions, etc. 46-5361

"In question and answer form [this book] covers all of the leading religious faiths, including Catholics, Protestants (Lutherans, Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Methodists, etc.) and the Friends, the Christian Scientists; and also Judaism, Mohammedanism, Hinduism, Buddhism, Jainism, Sikhism, Confucianism, Taoism, Zoroastrianism, etc." Churchman

HALL, F. F.—Continued

"The author modestly says that his aim is to provide entertainment. Though pretty sketchy as a presentation of facts about the world religions and the Christian sects, the book does more than entertain. Besides giving information, it is slanted toward tolerance and brotherhood."

+ — Christian Century 63:113 Ja 23 '46 100w

"One of the breeziest and most rewarding little volumes on comparative religions that I have even seen. . . It is an invaluable reference book for all who are interested in religion."

T. F. Ople

+ Churchman 160:16 My 1 '46 120w

HALL, HENRY MARION. Full creel; il. by Ralph Ray, Jr. 181p $3 Longmans
799.12 Fishing Agr46-204

Reminiscences of a sportsman, whose experiences as a fly fisherman have taken him as far as Greece and the Pyrenees.

"Fresh-water fishermen will rejoice in this book." Leo Kennedy

+ Book Week p14 My 19 '46 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '46

Kirkus 14:119 Mr 1 '46 110w

"Belongs to the breathlessly excited school of sporting writers, which will lead some of his fellow-anglers to take him with a grain of salt, if at all. That would be a pity, for he's a pleasant-spirited fisherman and genuinely, if not always accurately, informative. He is especially interesting on the fresh-water fish of Cape Cod, and on trouting in the French Pyrenees, of which most of us know virtually nothing." J. R. de la Torre Bueno

+ — N Y Times p12 Je 9 '46 100w

New Yorker 22:112 My 18 '46 60w

"Anyone who has flipped a fly or dunked a night crawler and experienced the pleasures of angling, who likes a good tale and good writing, will enjoy 'A Full Creel.' Henry Marion Hall is well qualified to write of fishing. For many years he has written on fishing and hunting and his articles have been read by sportsmen as they appeared in leading sports magazines as well as those dedicated to literature and travel." Leo Marceau

+ Spring'd Republican p6 My 21 '46 330w

"There is a good creel-full of fishing yarns and reminiscences to be had in this thinish volume, but to get them the reader must first scramble through a twenty-page thicket of lushly literary sentiment. When Mr. Hall forgets that he is a writer and becomes a teller of gentle, pleasant, thoroughly enjoyable stories, he makes the scramble well worth while."

Ed Zern

+ — Weekly Book Review p28 My 26 '46 400w

HALL, HENRY MARION. Ruffed grouse; il. by Ralph Ray. 91p $6.50 Oxford
799.24361 Grouse Agr46-334

"An account, both poetic and scientific, of how our native partridge lives, breeds, and dies. Since the author is a man and not a bird, a good part of his book is devoted to approved methods of bagging this magnificent resident of our uplands and forests. Illustrated with drawings and color plates." New Yorker

Kirkus 14:414 Ag 15 '46 60w

New Yorker 22:147 D 14 '46 60w

Reviewed by Stanleigh Arnold

San Francisco Chronicle p3 D 1 '46 100w

"The sheer beauty of this book—the careful wording of its essays, the liveliness and authenticity of its shooting stories, the woodsy character of its illustrations—all this imparts the sort of exhilaration one sometimes feels on entering a friendly room in which a bright hearth fire furnishes the only heat and great armfuls of autumn leaves and wild asters the principal decoration. A well seasoned, gentle quality pervades it all, a quality derived from long experience afield; from deep love of the grouse themselves, of dogs and of hunting companions; from genuine concern over the future of this fine North American bird." G. M. Sutton

+ Weekly Book Review p38 D 1 '46 900w

HALL, VERNON. Renaissance literary criticism; a study of its social content. 260p $3 Columbia univ. press [20s Oxford]

801 Literary criticism

A45-4414

"After sketching the social background of Renaissance Italy, France and England, Hall studies the literary theories of these countries in turn, showing in the case of each how social and political convictions and prejudices affected the contemporary views on language, genres, decorum, the role of the poet and function of poetry. . . To uphold these various interpretations, the author has assembled a weighty collection of quotations in Italian, French, English and Latin. Taken out of context, the initial hypothesis of this work seems innocent enough: 'The thinking of the critics, based upon an acceptance of the social hierarchy then existing, was dominated by the aristocratic viewpoint.' From this start, Hall shows how social thinking patterns lay behind not only such fundamentals of Renaissance literary theory as decorum, sublimity of style, word choice, ivory-towerism and the humanistic ideal of learning, but even such elements normally devoid of 'social significance' as metrics, rhyme and genres." N Y Times

"It is a pity that this book, so instructive, so well written, so observant, and so reasonable, should have adopted a wearisome plan. . . It seems also unfortunate, again in the light of the excellence of the author's ability and of his workmanship, that the work, which is an interesting and important piece of exposition, should have been cast to such a degree in the form of an argument. . . Those interesting and significant things do not need to be argued, for they are an obvious consequence of the monarchical governments and societies of the age, are legacies from ancient and medieval times, and are perfectly expressive of the current social thought of the Renaissance. There is no occasion for surprise or controversy. What has been said may sound ungracious but it is not so intended. Modern students need to know the very things that are presented in this book, which is certainly learned, sagacious, and intelligent." Hardin Craig

+ — Am Hist R 51:493 Ap '46 850w

"In publishing this work Columbia University Press, which sponsored the pioneer studies of Spingarn and Baldwin, continues to corner the market on Renaissance criticism. This volume compares favorably in scholarship and imagination with its two predecessors. It is rich in challenging generalizations and hypotheses. The author has read and culled widely from Plato to Veblen. Some Aristarchs will charge that this social interpretation emphasizes disproportionately one facet of Renaissance literary thinking. The present reviewer, however, is still too impressed by Dr. Hall's able documentation to support that charge." R. J. Clements

+ N Y Times p14 O 21 '45 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p116 Mr 9 '46 480w

HALL, WALTER PHELPS. Iron out of Calvary; an interpretative history of the second World war. 389p maps $4; student's ed $3 Appleton-Century

940.53 World war, 1939-1945

46-6378

Brief history of World war II for the layman. It details the events leading up to the war, economic background, nationalism and its satellites, and loss of faith in liberalism. Reading list. Index.

"Prof. Hall deserves special credit for handling the problems of political interpretations so judiciously. These problems, which are indispensable to an understanding both of the origins and of the progress of the war, are analyzed without passion or partisanship. The accounts of Spain and of China in the '30s are masterly. . . His analysis of such tricky subjects as the first Finnish-Russian war and the fall of France are clear and balanced. The viewpoint is liberal and internationalist but hardly ever sentimental or doctrinaire." A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.

+ Book Week p4 S 1 '46 500w

Bookmark 7:8 N '46

Current Hist 11:401 N '46 90w

"Highly instructive, entertaining and well written. Hall is professor of history at Princeton and author of several historical volumes." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 71:1048 Ag '46 140w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates

Nation 163:703 D 14 '46 500w

Reviewed by Russell Maloney

— N Y Times p41 O 13 '46 500w

"We who have our own times to explain must make the most of evidence now available, as Mr. Hall has done in this concise, well-ordered book. Inevitably a reflection of the intellectual climate of the early postwar period, it is nevertheless the work of one of our most competent historians and offers a valuable summary and analysis of the past twenty years." P. H. Belk

+ Sat R of Lit 29:15 N 23 '46 800w

Reviewed by W. G. Tyrrell

Social Educ 10:328 N '46 450w

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek

Social Studies 38:41 Ja '47 350w

"A forceful style keeps [the narrative] moving briskly, maintaining a good balance between diplomacy and war though covering only the broadest aspects of military economics. As a trained historian he properly distinguishes between what is important and what is merely colorful. . . . Serviceable maps accompany the text; there is an excellent, critical bibliography, and a good index."

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:315 D '46 280w

"The best short history of the war which has appeared, either in America or in Britain. Its virtues are judiciousness, balance and lucidity: its inadequacies are those imposed by limitations of space or of available information." H. S. Commager

+ Weekly Book Review p14 S 15 '46 1250w

"The enormous, confused, and unruly material has been disciplined into a single coherent narrative, which is not only manageably brief but also surprisingly detailed in facts and variegated in the many different aspects of the great complex—political and economic as well as strategic and operational—which are brought under review. . . . If one has a quarrel, it is, perhaps, with the description 'interpretative' in the subtitle. The author has worked the surface too closely to get very far down into the interpretation of the great underlying trends and forces; one even misses that kind of analysis of the major patterns of policy and strategy which recent material is now making possible." Walter Millis

+ — Yale R n s 36:348 winter '47 750w

HALL, WILLIAM NORMAN. Watch the kitten grow [pictures by Ruth Carroll]. $1 Crowell

46-4170

Picture book for the very young. Pictures are graduated in size from small to full page, keeping pace with the kitten's growth.

"Both entertaining and instructive for the very youngest." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p14 My 26 '46 90w

"The very young child gains a satisfying sense of growth from pictures which reflect the appealing moods of kittenhood."

+ N Y Times p18 Mr 31 '46 60w

HALL-QUEST, MRS OLGA (WILBOURNE). How the Pilgrims came to Plymouth; ill. by James MacDonald. 115p $2 Dutton

973.22 Pilgrim fathers—Juvenile literature 46-4157

Story of the Pilgrim fathers, from the time they planned to leave England in 1607, thru their stay in Holland, up to the establishment of their settlement in Plymouth. For third and fourth grades.

Booklist 43:38 O 1 '46

"The author writes simply with details that are well-chosen to make the picture clear and to answer the questions that readers from 8 to 11, are likely to ask. Unpretentious as the narrative is, it succeeds in showing the amazing courage and endurance of this determined, devoted group of men and women." A. T. Eaton

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 O 31 '46 180w

Kirkus 14:324 Jl 15 '46 80w

"Recommended for supplementary school use and for the young reader interested in early American history." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 71:1131 S 1 '46 70w

"This book contains much of interest and value, but it lacks the detail and color which appeal to most children of the middle years, and it has less action and characterization than would be expected by many adolescents. The illustrations do not add to its worth." R. A. Brown

+ — N Y Times p14 Ag 11 '46 140w

Reviewed by K. S. White

New Yorker 22:146 D 7 '46 80w

Reviewed by M. W. Berry

San Francisco Chronicle p13 N 10 '46 70w

"Though, as the phrase goes, 'it reads like a story,' it sticks closely to facts and brings out a sense of the spirit of that memorable enterprise. . . . The voyage is convincingly real; the book ends when explorers from the ship have made the three expeditions and the main body of settlers comes ashore to build and to stay. The pictures bring out the chief incidents." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 S 8 '46 230w

Wis Lib Bul 42:135 O '46

HALLERAN, EUGENE E. Shadow of the badlands. 236p $2 Macrae Smith co.

46-1437

Western story.

Booklist 42:266 Ap 15 '46

Kirkus 13:479 N 1 '45 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p24 Mr 17 '46 80w

Wis Lib Bul 42:115 Jl '46

HALLIDAY, BRETT, pseud. See Dresser, D.

HALLIDAY, EVELYN GERTRUDE, and NOBLE, ISABEL TILTON. Hows and whys of cooking. 3d rev ed 328p ill $3.50; text ed $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press

641.5 Cookery A46-2063

Revised edition of a book first entered in the Book Review Digest in 1933. "Not the usual cookbook but an illustrated exposition of the principles and technique of cooking which should be helpful to the novice. Partly rewritten, with some additional recipes." (Booklist) Includes chapter on meal planning. Index.

Booklist 42:301 My 15 '46

"Everyone interested in good food—whether teacher, research worker, or producer—will rejoice that this fine book has been enlarged and brought up to date. Much of the material of the first edition is retained, evidence of the soundness of that information. One point which will be of concern to many, however, is the relatively large amount of water used in cooking some of the fresh and frozen vegetables." G. E. Vall

+ J Home Econ 38:366 Je '46 300w

"Housewives who have learned cooking by the trial and error method will find this book of immeasurable value. They will find themselves using the recipes—or their old favorites—with confidence and ease." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p26 Je 16 '46 270w

HALPERIN, SAMUEL WILLIAM. Germany tried democracy; a political history of the Reich from 1918 to 1933. 567p $3.75 Crowell
943.085 Germany—History 46-2655

"Author, associate professor of history at University of Chicago, presents detached view of Weimar republic, from its rise in 1918 to its collapse in 1933. His scholarly work comes as relief after so much propagandistic trash has been written on the subject. Book is based on wide range of printed material; does not contain exciting 'revelations.' Halperin is less interested in cultural and social history than in sequence of political developments which he describes in lively fashion. Supplements well books like Villard's German Phoenix." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Veit Valentin
Am Hist R 52:121 O '46 600w

"A timely and thought-provoking contribution." R. G. Neumann
+ Am Pol Sci R 40:803 Ag '46 750w

Reviewed by David Karno
Book Week p4 My 26 '46 180w
Booklist 42:314 Je 1 '46

"The straightforward and informative narrative is mainly based on well-established facts. In his evaluation of events, the author is not always convincing." E. S. P.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 My 22 '46 190w

Current Hist 11:49 Jl '46 100w
Foreign Affairs 25:342 Ja '47 50w

"Mr Halperin is an experienced teacher and lecturer, and manages to bring clarity to a highly complex subject and period, making a great mass of material comprehensible to the layman. The book has a great deal to offer, but loses some of its effectiveness in the author's position on the Ruhr occupation, which historians will feel he oversimplifies. There's an uncomfortably close resemblance, in the author's analysis of the results, to the German apologist's explanation of the necessity of extremism in the German military politics—rather than seeing it as part of an existing, extremist, militarist strength which took advantage of a situation that came to hand. Instead, the author charges outside causes with that growth of strength, thus playing into the hands of pro-German 'soft peace' advocates."

+ Kirkus 14:59 F 1 '46 260w

"Recommended for college and larger public libraries." F. E. Hirsch
+ Library J 71:343 Mr 1 '46 130w

"'Germany Tried Democracy' does not sufficiently explain the reasons for the provisions of the peace treaty nor the difficulties of France, who felt abandoned by America and Britain and threatened by Germany. . . . Writing with great fairness and sympathy, Professor Halperin rightly has much praise for the German Social Democrats. They sincerely strove to root in the German soil the Western ideas of individual liberty, of tolerance and of peace. . . . But the Social Democrats were never a majority in Germany, nor had they any real power. Behind the democratic facade the old spirit lived on. . . . The spirit in the Reich after 1918 was not different from that which animated it before 1914. Germany never tried democracy." Hans Kohn

N Y Times p5 My 5 '46 1150w

Reviewed by J. L. Godfrey
Social Forces 25:232 D '46 450w
Social Studies 37:288 O '46 20w

"Mr Halperin writes clearly and to the point. His book is an excellent guide through the tangle of German history in the years from 1918 to 1933. He supplies an extensive bibliography, listing the chief works on the subject. It is a striking, if unfortunate, fact that his footnote references are almost non-existent. The permanent value of this work would have been more assured had the author cared to be more generous in his documentation." Donald Derby

+ Spring'd Republican p4d My 26 '46 600w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:216 S '46 350w

HALSEY, GEORGE D. Supervising people. 233p $3 Harper
658.3124 Employment management. Foremen 46-325

"This book is intended primarily for supervisors—foremen in shops and mills, section heads in offices, assistant buyers and floor managers in retail stores—the men and women directly in charge of the workers and responsible for whether or not each individual's work is well done. It deals with the practical aspect of supervision—what have been the problems of many supervisors and tells how they have solved these problems." Publisher's note

"This is a book written for supervisors and foremen and is intended to be used as a text for foreman-training or for individual study. I suspect that it will not find wide acceptance either by foremen or by industrial training-people—not that there is anything so very bad about it, but only that it is dull and uninspired, so that reading it would be looked upon as a duty by even the most ambitious foreman." B. B. Gardner

— Am J Soc 52:281 N '46 150w

Booklist 42:196 F 15 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '46

"A textbook for supervisors, so comprehensive that it should prove valuable, although the approach offers little new."

+ Kirkus 13:538 D 1 '46 130w

Library J 71:183 F 1 '46 100w

Wis Lib Bul 42:127 O '46

HALSEY, MARGARET (MRS M. R. STERN). Color blind; a white woman looks at the Negro. 163p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

325 26 Negroes 46-6912

"Study of the color problem in America. Miss Halsey's work in a wartime canteen set her to thinking about the Negro's plight, and in her book she has reasoned out an intelligent white person's approach to the subject." New Yorker

Reviewed by J. C. Smith
Atlantic 178:176 D '46 330w

"Miss Halsey pursues a fast, readable and entertaining course that bridges the gap between science and popular myth. Her phrases, like the sharp lines of a satiric cartoon, evoke pictures that will help devastate the trite concepts white America employs to quiet its conscience." June Blythe

+ Book Week p3 O 6 '46 500w

Booklist 43:65 N 1 '46

Reviewed by M. J. McLaughlin
Cath World 164:282 D '46 450w

"Certainly the most readable book ever written about the 'color problem.' Margaret Halsey is a humorist, but she does not try to be funny about the color problem, which is one of the unfunniest things in the world. Being a good humorist, however, qualifies one for seeing through the fog of sentiment and illusion that surrounds such a topic."

+ Christian Century 63:1215 O 9 '46 90w

"We are indebted greatly to Margaret Halsey that she has made a permanent record which is wise, witty, and superbly sane of a successful experiment in human and racial relations which otherwise might be lost." Walter White
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 D 9 '46 850w

"This little book, which can be read at one sitting, and which many will find it impossible to put down till they have finished it, is probably the most original, the most convincing, and the most delightful book upon the Negro question which has yet appeared." W. L. Caswell
+ Churchman 160:17 N 1 '46 950w

Reviewed by G. H. Dunne
Commonweal 45:234 D 13 '46 450w

"A personal probe, which is also direct and dispassionate, and which—with her name as impetus—may reach a market where others have failed."

+ Kirkus 14:372 Ag 1 '46 170w

"Miss Halsey has stated, not to say reiterated, with insight, humor, and sincerity, the sound opinions of an enlightened and well-balanced individual on the Negro question. Though she can hardly be said to have shed any new light on the subject, she has certainly illuminated it with a bright one, and probably she has brought the matter to the attention of a number of persons in whose minds the question would have remained a vague, unformulated annoyance. That the book can hardly be considered a very weighty contribution to the solution of the problem is probably a small price to pay for awakening a large number of consciences." Anthony Bower

+ Nation 163:562 N 16 '46 480w

"The calm wisdom with which Miss Halsey instructed her hostesses and dealt with the bewilderment of some Negro servicemen and the indignation of many white servicemen makes an interesting and arresting book. To those who have spent some time analyzing and evaluating not only behavior in race relations but the various approaches which interracial groups employ in attempts to alleviate the problem, the book is challenging because of its approach. There is nothing particularly new about most of the material Miss Halsey presents or the conclusions she arrives at. What is new is the method of presentation and the courage, good sense and humor of the writer." St. Clair Drake and H. R. Cayton

+ New Repub 115:455 O 7 '46 1850w

"This is a straightforward, courageous and delightful book about what Americans (any American, but especially Northerners) can do to expedite the absorption of our Negro American citizens into full membership in our democracy." Margaret Mead

+ N Y Times p3 O 13 '46 1050w

"A clear-eyed, equably presented study. . . It is cleverly written, although the cleverness occasionally strikes a tinny note in this context, and at times, too, the reasoning seems strained, as when Miss Halsey advances the theory that the white man is jealous of the sexual powers of the Negro. The book is at least easy to read, which is quite an asset when you consider all the more profound but lugubrious analyses of the same subject."

+ New Yorker 22:114 O 12 '46 120w

"'Color Blind' is a book well worth reading. As to what the honestly democratic American should do about the whole problem, Miss Halsey has one excellent word of wisdom. You don't accomplish anything by just thinking, all by yourself, no matter how much you believe in destroying racial discrimination. You only accomplish something by working with others." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 S 20 '46 750w

"This is a refreshingly brave book. Miss Halsey has done a rare job of reporting an experiment in human courtesy that many people would have deemed impossible. . . Margaret Halsey has done a grand job. She has turned the record of a personal experience into a profoundly revealing social document. Also, she has done the rare thing of writing a book that is not only scientifically accurate and soundly practical but a delight to read." H. A. Overstreet

+ Sat R of Lit 29:14 O 19 '46 850w

"Miss Halsey's alert little book is in part a very realistic report of how social equality between the races actually worked at the Stage Door Canteen, and for the rest a statement, based on experience, of her belief that racial equality between whites and Negroes can be made to work—and how. Some of Miss Halsey's ideas are extreme in their implications but plausible; many are immediately and realistically practical. A few . . . are amusingly pragmatic." F. H. Bullock

+ Weekly Book Review p3 O 6 '46 750w

HAMANN, FRED. Air words; a popular aviation definition of the language flyers speak. 61p il $1.50 Superior pub. co, 2603 3d av, Seattle 1, Wash.

629.1303 Aeronautics—Encyclopedias and dictionaries. English language—Slang

46-17649

A compilation of the slang used by fliers and airplane workers, with four pages of abbreviations added. The compiler is in the publicity department of the Boeing aircraft company.

"The infantry probably will not think much of this book but for the wives and mothers of fliers it will be a handy volume in helping them to keep up with the conversation."

Book Week p4 My 12 '46 50w

"As a usual thing, dictionaries like cook-books, almanacs and railroad timetables, are not to be read from cover to cover in a single sitting. This small, streamlined dictionary of what Mr. Hamann calls 'the language fliers speak' is a notable exception. From the first definition (A.B.C.—a student flying permit) to the last one (Zombie—a pilot who doesn't know why he is, nor does anyone else) it is a matter of only sixty-one rather small pages. And at no place in that small compass is there the slightest sign of the academician dragging his scholarly feet." Frederick Graham

+ N Y Times p12 J1 14 '46 410w

HAMILTON, ELIZABETH. The C-circus; il. by Michael Ladd. [32p] $1.50 Coward-McCann

46-22497

The author of The P-Zoo has made this new word-play book about a circus, where everything must begin with C. Even three kittens who apply for entry are refused until they grow into cats.

"Though not quite as much fun as its predecessor—perhaps chiefly because all such stunts lose something with repetition—little children will enjoy the alliteration." K. S. White

+ New Yorker 22:132 D 7 '46 60w

"Drawings that have a good deal of humor show the animals, the food, Mrs. Smith, and her three daughters. The type is large and clear and cover and end-papers are in a cheerful, Christmas-y red." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:43 N 9 '46 160w

HAMILTON, KAY. Doctor on Elm street. 272p $2 Macrae Smith co.

46-4288

A woman doctor buys the practice of a discouraged young country doctor, and even against prejudice makes a success of it.

Kirkus 14:154 Ap 1 '46 120w

"Kav Hamilton's case history is pleasant but on the sedative side . . . Miss Hamilton assumes that there is still a strong prejudice against women in the medical profession, which is perhaps a somewhat dated idea." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p25 Je 23 '46 180w

Wis Lib Bul 42:151 N '46

HAMMERSTEIN, OSCAR. Carousel; a musical play by Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II. 178p il $2.50 Knopf

812

46-25086

Text of the successful Broadway musical, which is based on Molnár's Liliom.

Book Week p10 My 26 '46 140w

Booklist 42:244 Ap 1 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '46

Kirkus 14:85 F 15 '46 20w

Library J 71:760 My 15 '46 30w

"'Carousel,' made into an operetta from 'Liliom,' by Oscar Hammerstein II, with music by Richard Rodgers, is almost as great a hit in the theater as 'Oklahoma,' by the same pair. But it lacks the happy inevitability of that earlier work. The scene is shifted to Maine, which gives it a synthetic quality at the very start, and, while Mr. Hammerstein, who is both deft and conscientious, has kept the story line and woven his lyrics out of the situations, neither his book nor Mr. Rodgers' music has the requisite romantic lift combined with earthy realism to justify the transfer of 'Liliom' into operetta." W. P. Eaton

+ Weekly Book Review p20 Je 23 '46 140w

HAMMOND, WILLIAM GARDINER. Remembrance of Amherst; an undergraduate's diary, 1846-1848; ed. by George F. Whicher. 307p $3 Columbia univ. press

B or 92 Amherst college A46-2203

William Gardiner Hammond was a Newport boy who entered Amherst in 1846 as a sophomore. In later life he practiced law in Brooklyn for a time, studied in Europe, and later went west where he became one of the leading lights in law education. This volume contains excerpts from his diary kept during five terms at Amherst and gives an entertaining picture of undergraduate life and activities a hundred year ago.

"For the Amherst antiquarian there are many sidelights on the village life with its lyceum lectures, its cattle shows, its hospitable homes and their gracious inhabitants. And to read Hammond's appreciation of the qualities of his classmate, Julius H. Seelye, warms the heart of one who remembers that great college president. . . The editor's notes at the end of the volume, especially the detailed references to obscure books and articles to which Hammond alludes, are a source of particular interest to a student of the period." M. T. Bingham

+ Am Hist R 52:144 O '46 310w

Current Hist 11:232 S '46 90w

Reviewed by Ordway Tead

Sat R of Lit 29:26 S 14 '46 380w

"With the patient industry and bonanza instinct of a veteran Forty-niner, George Whicher, who has long been prospecting around the Emily Dickinson lode, has turned up a rare nugget. . . As a revelation of what American undergraduates thought and did in the period before the Civil War it is authentic and unique." W. G. Avirett

+ Weekly Book Review p16 Je 16 '46 350w

HANCOCK, RALPH. Opportunities in Latin America. 278p maps $3 Essential bks.

330.98 Latin America—Industries and resources. Latin America—Commerce 46-3645

An analysis of industrial and economic conditions in the twenty Latin American republics, picturing trade opportunities for foreign countries, especially the United States. Each country is treated as to social welfare, transportation and communication, industrial power, agriculture, manufacturing, etc. No index.

Booklist 42:312 Je 1 '46

"The book's style is lucid and simple, representing the best in good reporting. An innovation in bookmaking is a section, immediately up front, of symbol-studded maps of each nation, its characteristics and resources. Unfortunately lacking is an index. Political comment is not absent. Rather, the book is better rounded than most popularizing books on Latin America. No other single book offered this reviewer more enlightenment on the Good Neighborhood today." R. K. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 17 '46 360w

Current Hist 11:230 S '46 100w

Foreign Affairs 25:349 Ja '47 40w

Kirkus 14:143 Mr 15 '46 180w

"Splendidly organized handbook." A. B. Lindsay

+ Library J 71:755 My 15 '46 120w

"This book will have considerable value for exporters and investors who are unfamiliar with the South American field and can be stimulated by a perusal of these categories into a further and more detailed study of specific opportunities. Opportunities undoubtedly exist." Charlton Ogburn

+ Sat R of Lit 29:21 J1 13 '46 900w

"Mr. Hancock attempts to describe [the] great Latin American bid for industrialization and the economic background of it. But somehow he bogs down in his statistics and fails to breathe the drama of living reality into them. Also, he ought to know better than take some official pronouncements without the proverbial grain of salt. . . Opportunities in Latin America' will undoubtedly arouse the reader's interest in those opportunities, while not quite telling him what they are. But even the arousing of interest may serve a useful purpose." H. T. De Sa

Weekly Book Review p30 My 19 '46 650w

HANLIN, TOM. Yesterday will return. 253p $2.50 Viking

46-7344

A young coal miner, with little training but good instincts, comes to a small Scottish mining town. He lodges with an elderly shopkeeper and his handsome, widowed daughter. Young Jamie falls in love with Mima, despite her none-too-good reputation in the village. Then a former lover of Mima's returns to the village, and the rivalry of the two men carries to the violent ending.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Book Week p16 N 17 '46 320w

"Effective in its characterization, more popular in its plot, with the same poignant picture of a Scottish mining town—this is still for a limited audience."

+ — Kirkus 14:330 J1 15 '46 210w

"There is much in Mr. Hanlin's novel which falls below the subtle conception of a woman's personality. Much of his book seems to have been hurried. Its language is diffuse and slangy. The plot is complicated to real confusion, and, most disturbing, Mima's returned lover (an opportunist of charming wickedness) is permitted to dissolve in an inexplicable dream of altruism. Certainly a novelist who can conceive a Mima Frazer should not dodge the necessity of writing as effectively and precisely of her life as he does of the details of mining coal inside the earth." Paul Griffith

N Y Times p22 O 13 '46 380w

"The romance in this book is an ambiguous thing at best. This is a harsh, male story of contention in a bitter world, and women have little to do with it." N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 29:26 N 9 '46 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p575 N 23 '46 230w

"Before you reach the end of the violent story, you begin to suspect that there isn't much to Mima except the 'hard core,' a prize of dubious value, scarcely worth such desperate competition. . . Mr. Hanlin's novel sacrifices life to give a performance." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p12 O 6 '46 550w

HANNA, ALFRED JACKSON. A prince in their midst. 275p $3 Univ. of Okla. press

B or 92 Murat, Achilles, prince 46-11821

A scholarly biography of Prince Achille Murat, son of Napoleon's sister Caroline, and Joachim Murat, who became King of Naples. After his father's death before a firing squad, the prince came to Florida, bought a large estate, and applied for United States citizenship. Emerson, who met the prince while in Florida, described him as "an ardent lover of truth," a "scholar," and a "noble" soul. Bibliography.

Booklist 43:116 D 15 '46

"Biographer A. J. Hanna, professor of history at Rollins College, is handicapped by generally skimpy sources, but gives tantalizing glimpses of an ex-Crown Prince wearing homespun, of tea served in a log house with Napoleonic gold spoons and damask napkins bearing the royal Neapolitan crest."

Time 48:109 N 18 '46 360w

"After a flood of fictionalized biographies of various members of Napoleon Bonaparte's family, it is a rare pleasure to read a scholar's biography of one of the less publicized of Bonaparte's nephews. . . Mr. Hanna has written a fascinating book that should appeal to a wide variety of interests: to scholars, of course, for Mr. Hanna and his wife, Kathryn T. Abbey, are Florida's leading historians; to biographers and even to many novelists who could profit by the direct narrative style; to all readers who might be intrigued by a factual story of a European prince pioneering in America. . . The illustrations by John Rae contain as much magic as the book." M. K. Rawlings

+ Weekly Book Review p4 N 17 '46 950w

HANNA, MRS FRANCES (NICHOLS). Possess me not. 353p $2.75 Feil

46-17777

The story of Erik Norgard, successful American artist, and of his love for two women, his mistress and his wife. Both women made the same mistake, however, and showed Erik they wanted to manage his life for him, and in the end they both lose him as he escapes, first from an insane asylum, and then out of the country into Mexico.

Reviewed by Jex Martin

Book Week p13 My 26 '46 250w

Kirkus 14:80 F 15 '46 130w

"The bohemianism of the book is more than a little dated. The hero comes up the hard way, via Macdougall Alley, to a spectacular New York success—but he is obsessed with the idea that only failures make great artists. He is finally reconciled to his success, but somehow both artist and author seem a little uneasy with their rationalization." Barbara Herman

N Y Times p20 My 26 '46 200w

"Miss Nichols, a Hollywood script writer, has developed her characters with considerable skill, though there is nothing particularly new in her handling of a stock situation." F. H. Bickerton

+ Spring'd Republican p4d My 26 '46 240w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p30 O 6 '46 90w

HANSON, JOSEPH MILLS. Conquest of the Missouri; being the story of the life and exploits of Captain Grant Marsh. 458p il maps $3.50 Rinehart

B or 92 Marsh, Grant Prince. Missouri river. Northwest—History. Dakota Indians 46-5151

"How the Northwest was won, told indirectly through the career of Captain Grant Marsh, river pilot. This book, written nearly forty years ago and long out of print, is practically source material on the period, since most of the story came straight from the chief character. The Captain . . . was among the first to navigate the Missouri and the Yellowstone, his wood-burning stern-wheeler supplied Custer's Seventh Cavalry . . . and he later took part in the more successful campaigns against Crazy Horse and Sitting Bull." (New Yorker) Bibliography. Index.

"The Conquest of the Missouri is not only a must on the reading list of anyone who tries to understand the controversial Custer's Last Stand but it is also an important source book for the history of this whole era in the annals of the frontier." E. S. Watson

+ Book Week p4 Ag 11 '46 500w

"The Rivers of America series pointed the way to many similar ventures by other publishers—all of which have made their contribution to a more complete understanding of our national heritage. Now the publishers of the 'River' books have rendered another service to all students of our history in the republication, after a lapse of a third of a century, of Joseph Mills Hanson's The Conquest of the Missouri." R. A. Brown

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 20 '46 360w

Current Hist 11:327 O '46 30w

"An important and readable work. . . Recommended." H. P. Bolman

+ Library J 71:976 Jl '46 90w

"Solicited as we are today by the slick, importunate style, it is a relief to read Mr. Hanson's quiet prose. He wrote this book at a time when writers didn't try so hard. His relaxed, easy writing shows how truly absorbing can be a plain action plainly told. His story has the immediacy of a first-hand account, the unmistakable flavor of a time that is past." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 4 '46 800w

"The author's style is quaint, but that just adds flavor to the book."

New Yorker 22:71 Ag 3 '46 150w

"Brisk, colorful history."

+ Time 48:104 Ag 19 '46 800w

Wis Lib Bul 42:166 D '46

HARDENBERGH, WILLIAM ANDREW. Water supply and purification. 2d ed 488p il $4.50 Int. textbook

628.1 Water supply engineering. Water—Purification 46-1541

"This is an established textbook for engineering college courses. It has a strong practical slant and is therefore used also by beginning engineers and operators of water plants. . . In this revision selected lists of references have been added to most of the chapters. There is a new, brief chapter on water for industrial uses, and minor revisions have been made elsewhere." (N Y New Tech Bks) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1939.

Eng N 136:96 My 16 '46 90w

Library J 71:486 Ap 1 '46 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:15 Ja '46

HARDY, MARTHA. Tatoosh; il. by Glen Rounds. 239p $2.75 Macmillan

634.96 U.S. Agriculture, Department of. Forest service 46-11952

In 1943 when there was a shortage of men for the Forest service, the author, a Seattle schoolteacher, volunteered for duty and was assigned to Tatoosh in the Cascade mountains. The book is her account of her experiences in housekeeping and fire watching in a glass lookout station on a lonely mountain peak.

"Her story is well worth reading, though it is somewhat longer than it needed to be." Dorothy Sparks

+ Book Week p7 D 22 '46 350w

Booklist 43:104 D 1 '46

"A slightly different angle to the usual life in the wilds story, this should appeal to those who have ever longed to get away from it all."

+ Kirkus 14:376 Ag 1 '46 110w

"Lookout Hardy has told her story well, for the most part simply. She has an eye for the grandeur of her world on the mountain, for the magnificent skies given to lookouts, and also for the savage fury of a thunderstorm in those elevated parts. She explains well and accurately the method by which she sighted fires and reported them to her Ranger. She makes the reader feel the excitement and the danger that exists in that distant column of pretty white smoke and the disaster that impends if it is not located at once and handled almost as quickly." S. H. Holbrook

+ Weekly Book Review p28 N 17 '46 650w

Wis Lib Bul 42:165 D '46

HARING, DOUGLAS GILBERT, ed. Japan's prospect; contributors: Edward A. Ackerman, and others. 474p maps $4 Harvard univ. press

915.2 Japan

A46-3061

"The nine authors of this extensive summary of the legends, economics, politics and other facets of Japanese life were all involved in the training, for the United States Army and Navy, of military government officers for the occupation. The book stems from their labors to give the young AMG candidates the background they needed. The greater part of the book is concerned with the past. It makes, however, a serious attempt to sketch broadly the pattern the authors believe should be followed in the re-education of Japan, which everyone sees as the best hope of future peace in the Pacific. It will do little good to occupy Japan for fifty years if its people remain in 1991 as they were in 1941." N Y Times

HARING, D. G.—Continued

"Here is a balanced, somewhat cautious, semi-popular survey. If the officers of the forces of occupation and a large section of the American public can assimilate and apply it, the outlook for the success of the great American testing in the Japanese Islands is not entirely somber." K. S. Latourette

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:394 O '46 600w

"This is an admirable work which has been produced by a group of men every one of whom has made a real contribution to the understanding by Westerners of Japan, past, present, and future. . . . Despite its preparation by several authorities, the work is well integrated." H. F. MacNair

+ Ann Am Acad 247:187 S '46 650w

Book Week p3 Ag 25 '46 90w

Booklist 43:14 S '46

Bookmark 7.4 N '46

Reviewed by Richard Watts

New Repub 115:52 Jl 15 '46 60w

Reviewed by Max Bickerton

New Statesman & Nation 33.17 Ja 4 '47 900w

"It is intended, quite obviously, for the serious student of Japan." Poster Hailey

N Y Times p18 Je 30 '46 320w

"This book is not only stimulating because of the wealth of knowledge displayed; it is also a hopeful book because of its underlying spirit. If our military administrators in Japan accept this spirit and act accordingly, a new type of Japanese democracy may win a decisive victory in the Prussia of the East." H. W. Weigert

+ Sat R of Lit 29:19 Je 22 '46 1100w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:217 S '46 280w

HARKINS, PHILIP. Lightning on ice. 215p $2 Morrow

46-25276

Story of ice hockey written for junior and senior high schools. Its hero is Jack Taylor, and the story follows him from his first scrub game thru his career as member of Trent High's crack hockey team.

Booklist 43:59 O 15 '46

"Jack Taylor's rise from an awkward eighth grader to triumphant captain of the hockey team is a fine, straight sports story with good values."

+ Kirkus 14.424 S 1 '46 160w

"Few boys will be disturbed by the somewhat stereotyped situations and black and white characterizations. And they—and their elders—will be pleased by the pace of the book and impressed by Jack's realization that a useful, worthy career is more important than immediate, easy glory." Bertha Handlan

+ Library J 71:1546 N 1 '46 90w

"An excellent story of ice hockey. The hero, Jack Taylor, has all the qualities that young people like in the keen competition of sport and in his relationship with other people."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:56 N 9 '46 40w

"The story moves fast and is well told. It is perhaps not so exciting or fascinating as the monumental works of Ralph Henry Barbour, but indubitably the present generation of sports-story lovers is a little more sophisticated. I think they'll like it." I. T. Marsh

+ Weekly Book Review p22 N 10 '46 140w

HARLAN, AURELIA (BROOKS) (MRS J. LEE HARLAN). Owen Meredith; a critical biography of Robert, first earl of Lytton. 292p $3.75 Columbia Univ. press [18s Oxford]

B or 92 Lytton, Edward Robert Bulwer-Lytton, 1st earl of (Owen Meredith, pseud) A46-1412

Biography of the only son of Edward Bulwer-Lytton. From his youth Owen Meredith, which Robert, first earl of Lytton, adopted as a pen name, aspired to be a poet. But his father, who was of a more material type, insisted that he turn to diplomacy. Altho he was to become viceroy of India, and was British ambassador to France when he died, it was more important to him that he was the author of Lucile. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 Mr 31 '46 270w

Current Hist 10:539 Je '46 80w

Manchester Guardian p3 Je 21 '46 180w

"What are the chances of a man who wants, terribly, to write, yet has only enough talent to succeed in writing terribly? Not too bad, perhaps; Mrs. Harlan's sympathetic and scholarly study suggests that such a person, given energy, luck, connections, and money, can manage to do fairly well in the space of a lifetime. The more the biographer quotes, to be sure, the less she is able to interest the reader in her hero's literary works. But, for all that, the story is a fascinating one: what a novel Henry James might have made of it!" Rolfe Humphries

Nation 162:605 My 18 '46 550w

"Mrs. Harlan, giving us all we need to know of Lytton the poet, has analyzed, with ample quotations, each volume of his verse. Since he divorced politics from poetry, she has purposely slighted his diplomatic career, but she has painstakingly followed, with frequent extracts from his correspondence, the origin and development of his literary ideas. Owing to this emphasis upon one side of a dichotomy, Lytton the man does not fully appear. His complicated relations with his eccentric parents, his frustrated, sensitive nature, his brilliant external career, which lay athwart great historical events, might have offered a fitting subject for a Lytton Strachey." Alan Vrooman

N Y Times p18 Mr 17 '46 500w

"Owen Meredith" is a credit to American scholarship, ranking with the best work of its kind. It is true Mrs. Harlan has had special advantages. Lord Lytton and Lady Balfour, Owen Meredith's son and daughter, have given her assistance and access to the unpublished letters and documents at Knebworth. The point is, however, that she has used these advantages with a skill and sympathy that are not always commanded by the successful investigator into sources. Her book is lively, well-arranged." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 29:20 Je 8 '46 1300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p366 Ag 3 '46 3300w

"This scholarly volume records in detail Lytton's friendship with the Brownings, John Forster, Julian Fane; it clearly indicates his poetical indebtedness to Tennyson and Browning, and his acute sensitivity to the literary currents of the age. . . . The book has been written with scrupulous, almost wearisome, attention to detail. The style is markedly academic, though not pedantic or ungracious. The biography will be chiefly interesting to close students of Victorian literature."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:83 Je '46 300w

Weekly Book Review p10 Mr 24 '46 500w

HARLIN, AMOS R. For here is my fortune. (Whittlesey house publication) 290p $2.50 McGraw

46-7191

The author is a native of the Ozark region of which he writes. His subject is life in a small Ozark town in the early 1900's, and his portrayal of the people and their customs is apparently partly autobiographical, altho it purports to be the story of the Conway family.

"'For Here Is My Fortune,' presented as a series of anecdotes concerning the Conway clan, has unmistakable autobiographical connotations. This lends the narrative immediacy and strength, in spite of the fact that the dialect at times appears to be a bit thick or awkward. One gets the impression that the exactitudes of speech may have been muffled by distance, but the situations and characters in general are recognizable. . . The serenity and plenty of Harlin's Ozark village may seem incredible to those in cities pent, but there is a large measure of truth in his picture, even though the bright rather than the dark side of the coin is consistently displayed." Jack Conroy

+ — Book Week p10 O 27 '46 360w

Booklist 43:70 N 1 '46

Kirkus 14:354 Ag 1 '46 140w

"The story would gain strength if more quietly written. However, it is pleasant reading, and Mr. Harlin obviously knows his hill people, in all their humorous kindness and calm intensity. He is on surer ground with them in the fine finesse of the turkey hunt, and the lusty fist fights than he is in their heights of human drama. Nevertheless, the book has a certain warmth of feeling, and it is good story telling—with its weaving of the growth of a people and a town true to the time and place." A. P. Hannum

+ — Weekly Book Review p22 N 24 '46 430w

HARLOW, ALVIN FAY. Steelways of New England. (Railroads of America ser) 461p il $3.50 Creative age

385 Railroads—New England 46-175

History of New England railroads, stressing the fact that New England was the originator of several important aspects of railroading: the first railroad in America, which was a horse-operated line out of Quincy; the first design for a sleeping car; the first vestibule train; and the first serious job of railroad tunneling. Partial contents: The first railroad; The dawn of private enterprise; The birth of the Boston & Maine; The Fitchburg and the Great Bore; The forty years' war in Vermont; Concord and discord in New Hampshire; From Kittery to 'Quoddy; New England, mother of railroads. Bibliography. Index.

"Only incidentally does it discuss the social, economic, and political consequences for the region of the coming of the railroads. For this the author can scarcely be blamed as it was not within the scope of his work. More serious from the standpoint of the reader is the complete absence of maps which would have helped even the native New Englander. On the other hand, the book is admirably illustrated. Although the study is lacking in footnotes, an extensive bibliography indicates thorough and painstaking research." W. R. Waterman

Am Hist R 52:154 O '46 700w

Reviewed by R. E. M. Whitaker

Book Week p6 Ja 27 '46 700w

Booklist 42:195 F 15 '46

Nation 162:325 Mr 16 '46 90w

"Unquestionably the greatest lack of the book is maps, for not a single map of any kind appears. The reader should have an atlas at his elbow unless he has an intimate acquaintance with New England. The omission of maps is particularly regrettable in a work which in other ways is so excellent." R. E. Riegel

+ — New Eng Q 19:255 Je '46 700w

"Mr. Harlow has painstakingly gathered together the facts of early railroading in New England. His book will be of value to the student of New England life. But his book will, I think, make little appeal to the general reader. New England history lacks the pageantry, amplitude, the sense of risk and excitement which mark the history of the South and West. New England always plays it safe, sometimes too safe for its economic welfare, as in the case of its failure to grab control of the New York Central." Horace Reynolds

N Y Times p23 Ja 27 '46 550w

"A thoughtful, well-documented, and generally skillful chronicle of the extraordinary combination of public-spiritedness and chicanery that attended the birth of the New England railway systems."

+ New Yorker 22:99 F 16 '46 70w

"The book is the most scholarly achievement so far of Mr. Harlow's long and versatile career. To the large body of real railroad enthusiasts, who make the study of origins a hobby, Mr. Harlow's book will probably be a must. As a lure to the casual general reader into the mystery and adventure of this phase of the national history, it is not a complete success, though there are enough excellent and, in their way, fascinating illustrations to tempt the outsider, at least into scanning and selection, if not to a cover-to-cover reading." Roger Burlingame

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:16 F 23 '46 1300w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:119 Je '46 190w

"There is more in this book of the genealogy of railroads and about the brasshats than of the men who operated the lines—I mean the engine and train crews, the station agents, baggage masters. I should have liked more about these men; and in the chapters on the dinkies I could not find the name of the Woodstock of Vermont, for fifty years the most successful of all of the two-by-fours. But just about everything else is included in these closely packed pages. Mr. Harlow has done a book that kept one Yankee reading all night with intense interest, and for this reviewer that is good enough. The old pictures and prints, and a few new ones, are excellent. So is the extensive bibliography." S. H. Holbrook

+ Weekly Book Review p2 Ja 27 '46 1200w

HARMON, NOLAN BAILEY. Famous case of Myra Clark Gaines. 481p il $3.50 I.a. state univ. press

B or 92 Gaines, Myra (Clark) Whitney, Clark, Daniel 46-7076

A documented account of one of the most famous lawsuits ever tried in the United States. The author tells the story of Myra Clark Gaines and her sixty-year lawsuit (1835-1895) to clear her mother's name and win for herself a vast New Orleans property. In telling the story of Myra a great deal of early New Orleans history is also recorded. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 S 1 '46 290w

Current Hist 11:327 O '46 70w

"The author is to be congratulated for his exposition of various intricate legal points in language understandable to the non-legal reader. This adeptness on the one hand, plus an adequate documentation and bibliography on the other, make the book acceptable to scholars, lawyers, and the general reading public alike."

Harvard Law R 59:1022 JI '46 240w

Kirkus 14:335 JI 15 '46 170w

"Interestingly written, reads like a novel and although fantastic is nevertheless a true account. Published as nonfiction, limited appeal." L. R. Etzkorn

Library J 71:1125 S 1 '46 140w

"This romantic tale is told in a romantic way by Mr. Harmon, for the general reader; it is no solemn recital for the historian or the lawyer. It is an interesting tale and should stimulate some readers to match their wits against those of Myra and the best American lawyers and judges of the nineteenth century." W. B. H.

+ N Y Times p38 S 15 '46 450w

"The tracing of all this complicated litigation and legal maneuvering should make 'The Strange Case of Myra Clark Gaines' a dull story. Parts of it are dull, but the unusual interest of this story, which the author has based carefully on records and earlier printed accounts, survives. Attempts, especially in the earlier parts of the book, to enliven the characters by the fictional methods of retrospective thought reading and surmising of incidents are clumsy and unconvincing. Myra, however, stands out forthright, determined, indomitable, and even attractive in her chief role in what is said the Supreme Court once dubbed 'the most remarkable case in the records of our country's courts.'" J. P. Wood

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:26 S 7 '46 700w

"From its very nature the book is doomed to a regrettably limited audience, but it will remain as a potential pleasure for those who like to explore the fringes of their country's history." R. F. H.

Springf'd Republican p4d S 1 '46 700w

HARMON, N. B.—Continued

"A fascinating account of a fabulous legend of America's yesterday." Lorine Pruette
+ Weekly Book Review p10 S 8 '46 1100w

HARNAN, TERRY. Signal for danger. 192p $2
Doubleday 46-4358

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p8 Je 2 '46 100w
Kirkus 14:161 Ap 1 '46 60w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p35 My 26 '46 100w

"Politically, this story of how Mark Regan bought a small town paper and proceeded to clean up corruption and murder is almost naive, particularly in its oversimplified happy ending. But the action along the way is lively and interesting; and the theme of native hate movements is always worth presenting in so superficial a form." Anthony Boucher
+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 Jl 4 '46 100w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p17 Je 2 '46 130w

HARPER, FLOYD SPRAGUE. Mathematics of finance. 327p $3.25 Int. textbook 511.8 Arithmetic, Commercial 46-8469

"This text explains the development and use of over a hundred equations used in calculating problems involving interest and discount rates, annuities, insurance, bonds, depreciation, sinking funds, and amortization. There are worked-out examples and over fifty sets of exercises for developing skill in computation. The subject is so presented that anyone with a background of college algebra can use the book."
N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:1627 N 15 '46 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:43 Jl '46

HARPER, FRANK. Night climb; the story of the skiing 10th. 216p $2.50 Longmans 46-8275

A novel based on fact. It is the story of the Tenth mountain division, trained for mountain climbing, and their activities in the Italian campaign when they broke the stalemate which held the Allied troops from the Po valley.

Reviewed by Rufus Oldenburger
Book Week p6 Ja 5 '47 200w
Kirkus 14:476 S 15 '46 210w

"No special demand is anticipated but larger libraries should have this." G. D. McDonald
Library J 71:1464 O 15 '46 140w

"'Night Climb' is the latest example of the lucid writing of the talented skier Frank Harper. . . Throughout the novel our skiing companion, Harper, makes the reader feel the rigors and hardships of mountain training and warfare." Frank Elkins
+ N Y Times p20 Ja 5 '47 230w

HARPER, MARTHA REBECCA (BARNHART). Red silk pantalettes; decorations by Betty Morgan Bowen. 228p $2.25 Longmans 46-6029

Story of life in Punxsutawney, Pennsylvania, in the 1850's, written for teen-age girls, and based on stories of the author's grandmother. The heroine is a fifteen-year-old girl, the oldest of seven children, whose dream of some beautiful red silk pantalettes for herself was based on the costume of a circus rider who once stayed at her father's hotel.

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p14 S 26 '46 170w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 22:468 N '46 100w

"Sparkling local color, lively family relations and some very sweet young girls round out this pleasant story."

+ Kirkus 14:349 Ag 1 '46 140w

Reviewed by Gertrude Andrus
Library J 71:1131 S 1 '46 120w

"Pennsylvania life of yesterday is so skillfully presented in this novel that today's 'teen-age girls will identify themselves with the generous, lovable heroine and share her happiness in the surprise ending." Rosejeanne Silfer
+ N Y Times p22 S 22 '46 190w

Sat R of Lit 29:56 N 9 '46 90w

"Entertaining throughout, this story for girls in the earlier teens should be read also by people who wish to put family chronicles into a form as interesting to children as to themselves." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 S 22 '46 190w

HARPER, WILHELMINA, comp. Where the redbird flies; stories from the southeastern states; ill. by George Avison. (Our states in story) 277p $2.75 Dutton 46-2487

Regional anthology containing stories, some historical, some modern, about Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida. For grades five to eight.

Book Week p12 Je 2 '46 200w

Booklist 42:284 My 1 '46

"Good library, school and gift material."
+ Kirkus 14:149 Mr 15 '46 120w

"Good for reading aloud and to introduce the stories from which these selections were made. Recommended for 5th to 8th graders." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 71:668 My 1 '46 100w

Reviewed by Mrs C. F. Bolln
San Francisco Chronicle p9 N 10 '46 150w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p6 Jl 14 '46 280w
Wis Lib Bul 42:89 Je '46

HARRIMAN, JOHN. The magnate. 448p $2.75
Random house 46-6027

Story about a financial wizard who set up a vast public utilities empire, which his son tried to increase. The time is the 1920's.

"Partly reminiscent of his latest book, The Career of Philip Hazen (1941), this is again a book about men and money, blunt, brazen (with sometimes unnecessary amorous annotations), and overlong. (Public Library caution)."

Kirkus 14:183 Ap 15 '46 170w

"Needlessly scatological, much too long, involved and often tedious novel." R. E. Kin-gery

— Library J 71:978 Jl '46 90w

"It is as though the author had grimly determined to omit nothing from his story of those years; and, while this technique does not destroy plausibility, it does take the edge off the story of the individual characters. Nor has the author been quite coherent in his exposition of the father-son feud that is the basis of his plot. Yet the whole does give an accurate and suspenseful picture of that haunting era." Kenneth Fearing

N Y Times p12 S 8 '46 270w

"A well-organized, straightforward novel. . . Mr. Harriman writes with an intelligence and simplicity that give to his re-creation of an era a clarity that complex social analyses often lack. Even the Wall Street idiom, which would probably bore you in real life, takes on a certain historical interest."

+ New Yorker 22:70 Ag 24 '46 100w

"On the surface a novel with so many unsympathetic characters and a plot weighed down with the machinery of financing a vast utilities combine might seem too forbidding, but Mr. Harriman is able to bring these creatures to life and to give their dubious quest for wealth a compelling fascination." Harrison Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 29:35 S 21 '46 400w

Spring'd Republican p4d Ag 11 '46 50w

"This is a first-rate and highly readable story in the large American tradition, always intelligent and credible, and, it seems to me, essentially sound at the core for all its touches of restlessness and jumpiness in technique. Mr. Harriman will put on weight with the success (which I believe will come) of 'The Magnate.'" F. T. Marsh

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 25 '46 850w

HARRIMAN, PHILIP LAWRENCE, and others, eds. Twentieth century psychology; recent developments in psychology. 712p $6 Philosophical lib.

150 Psychology 46-3195

"The method is to present sample articles which represent the work of contemporary American psychologists. A few of these articles are reviews of the work done by many scientists. Most of them are reports of particular research projects, or original essays in theory. The great majority of the articles are reprinted from the scientific journals; a few appear here for the first time. For this reason, the book will be of special interest to readers who, lacking ready access to the psychological journals of this country, wish to have at hand a well-chosen sample of what is being done by psychologists in the United States." U S Quarterly Bkl

"This volume of collected papers is not intended even for intelligent laymen but for professional students of psychology. For them it is of value that 39 articles from many journals are bound between the covers of a single volume." R. R. Grinker, M.D.

+ Book Week p12 Mr 3 '46 180w

"The title of this volume is misleading. There is here no survey of psychology everywhere throughout the twentieth century. There is little attempt to survey anything but psychology in the United States during the present decade. Since the United States happens to be at present the country most active in psychological research, and since recent progress has been great, the book is nonetheless of considerable interest. And within this more restricted field, it has great merit."

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:136 Je '46 240w

HARRIS, MRS BERNICE (KELLY). Janey Jeems. 306p $2.50 Doubleday

46-5987

Records the story of a long and happy marriage of two North Carolina mountaineers. They were the upright, hard working Jeems West, and his loving, intelligent, loyal Janey.

"It seems to me that there is as much kidding and laughter in the South as anywhere in the United States. Not a glimmer of it got into this book." Helen Woodward

— Book Week p2 S 29 '46 380w

Booklist 43:17 S '46

Reviewed by F. X. Connolly

Commonweal 44:628 O 11 '46 330w

"Bernice Harris can write; her characters, her situations are real; she has a sense of regionalism (the Carolina mountains and the Negro hill people). Her handling of her story is at no point a race tract—but straight story."

+ Kirkus 14:279 Je 15 '46 140w

"Perhaps no writer has caught the idiom of rural Carolina more exactly than Mrs. Harris. Not only the dialogue but the narrative and descriptive passages make use of it. The outsider will encounter words and phrases strange to him, but all have a rightness and Elizabethan flavor that only increase the charm of this novel." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 11 '46 900w

"Faulknerians had better be warned that Mrs. Harris's novels about Southern poor whites have nothing to recommend them except a clean, simple style, humor, warmth, and humanity. . . What happens isn't either exciting or important, but Mrs. Harris makes it very moving."

+ New Yorker 22:67 Ag 10 '46 120w

Reviewed by Jane Volles

San Francisco Chronicle p6 D 1 '46 200w

"The way of life depicted here is neither softened nor brutalized; it is a realistic, deepened folklore that actually happens. The form of the novel, which is that of the Southern idyl without the evasion or the sentimentality commonly accompanying the type, is a refreshing departure from the manner of much recent fiction."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:281 D '46 120w

"Mrs. Harris's novel is cut in its own generous original pattern, straight out of life, and its form is dictated by the materials she uses. And if the novelty and poignancy of the Jeems family story tapers off into quietness as the years go by . . . that is only the way life is: made exciting in its early and middle years by incessant challenge from without; turning reflective at the end, devoted to savoring and assimilating what has gone before. Mrs. Harris offers it all to you here in 'Janey Jeems.'" F. H. Bullock

+ Weekly Book Review p2 Ag 11 '46 900w

Wis Lib Bul 42:132 O '46

HARRIS, LAURA. Heydays and holidays; il. by Grace Paull. [68p] $1 Garden City pub. co.

394.26 Holidays 46-1463

Simple text and colored pictures explain holidays, famous birthdays, and some church festivals for very young readers. Partial contents: New Year's day, Lincoln's birthday, St Valentine's day, Passover, May day, last day of school, labor day, the first day of school, Columbus day, armistice day, etc.

"It is a book of fun as well as information."

+ Book Week p22 Je 2 '46 100w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p9 O 29 '46 70w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '46

"A cheery, bright almanac of all the days that call for special celebration."

+ Kirkus 14:197 Ap 15 '46 80w

"Because of a dearth of holiday material suitable for younger readers, this gay almanac will receive a hearty welcome. . . Grace Paull's illustrations in color and black and white make the book entertaining as well as informative. Board covers. Will have to be rebound for libraries." Margaret Miller

+ Library J 71:828 Je 1 '46 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p7 Ap 28 '46 150w

Wis Lib Bul 42:76 My '46

HARRIS, MARK. Trumpet to the world. 242p $2.50 Reynal

46-3135

Story of a young Negro, following him thru his childhood and youth to manhood, his education, his marriage to a white girl, his Army service, to the time his book is published and he is waiting for trial for having struck a white man, an officer who had struck him first.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Book Week p4 Mr 31 '46 450w

Kirkus 14:24 Ja 15 '46 170w

"Veracious and depressing human document; recommended but best handled with care." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 71:281 F 15 '46 140w

"Just what Mr. Harris intends to prove by all this is not clear. Certainly, he has made no real attempt to explore the individual problem he has created. Eddie Mae's money insulates her from consequences from start to finish. . . Even [with Willie Jim] the insulation plays a part: Willie Jim has only to send a wire to New York, and money, or a lawyer, appears on the next page to bail him out of scrapes." C. V. Terry

N Y Times p30 Ap 14 '46 500w

HARRIS, MARK—Continued

"Probably the most outstanding feature of Mr. Harris's novel is his ability to combine a profound sympathy for the group and the problems of the group with a genuine insight into the individual mind and emotion, never losing sight of either. As a result, there is an excellent balance between the strong, carefully examined characters and the more numerous, almost anonymous ones who wander through his story. Willie Jim is startling, is clear, is the individual—his story alone is important—but at the same time he is the chorus, pronouncing and reiterating his hard-learned democratic lesson." Nancy Groberg

+ Sat R of Lit 24:13 Ap 20 '46 800w

"In the field of protest literature, Mr. Harris's compact, sympathetic but essentially shadowy tale is notable principally for its easy, reportorially clear and restrained narration, with occasional didactic lapses, for its inversion of the non-symptomatic 'Strange Fruit' theme and for the absence of a single lynching. Whether the burgeoning of true love between a girl of one of South Carolina's old families and a dark-skinned Negro occurs more frequently in the South than do lynchings (three, I believe, in 1945) is for statisticians somehow to decide. But it is doubtful that, outside of literature, an increase in the one or a further decrease to the vanishing point of the other will presently contribute much to the solution of the elemental problem." Hodding Carter

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Ap 14 '46 700w

HARRIS, SEYMOUR EDWIN. Inflation and the American economy. 559p $5 McGraw

332.414 Inflation (finance). World war, 1939-1945—Economic aspects 46-11295

"Companion book to author's Price and Related Controls in the United States. Its many tables and charts give a comprehensive statistical picture of our war and postwar economy. Book includes an examination of the inflationary gap in theory and application; a discussion of the validity of our index numbers as a precise measurement of price change and an examination of the contribution of rising wages, profits and farm prices to rising wages in general." Library J

Booklist 42:276 My 1 '46

Foreign Affairs 24:749 Jl '46 30w

Library J 71:346 Mr 1 '46 80w

"Professor Harris has turned out another instalment in his impressive succession of economic texts. The present volume combines a competent recapitulation of price movements during World War II, a skilful analysis of the longer-run inflationary and deflationary elements in the American economy, and a somewhat less successful account of price tendencies in the current reconversion period." Leo Barnes

+ Nation 162:350 Mr 23 '46 750w

"A work from which both scholar and layman can profit. It is in fact a major sourcebook on war and postwar problems. With more than 200 tables and charts providing a statistical framework, Professor Harris presents thoroughgoing analyses of resources, manpower, money and prices, taxes, wages and profits."

+ New Repub 114:102 Ja 21 '46 180w

"The author has brought together in convenient form a wealth of information concerning America's wartime economic situation. Perhaps the casual reader will find the array of statistics somewhat confusing because of their abundance, but the careful student will appreciate the clear and comprehensive analysis. The author's theories are indicative of much of the current economic thinking. They will be accepted by many and will be attacked by others, but all will agree that Professor Harris has made a significant contribution to the literature of inflation and that he has performed a most valuable service in calling our attention to the necessity of powerful preventive medicine if we are to halt the cancerous growth of post-war inflation." A. G. Buehler

+ Pol Sci Q 61:270 Je '46 900w

"It is perhaps the most comprehensive and fully documented contribution yet published on the price aspects of our war and post-war economy. . . . No subject such as this can be read with ease, nor intelligent conclusions be quickly arrived at; the book is, however, quite readable, although no pretense is made of reducing it to a popular style."

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:34 Mr '46 260w

HARRISON, JOSEPH BARLOW; MANDER, LINDEN A., and ENGLE, NATHANIEL HOWARD, eds. If men want peace; the mandates of world order. 292p $2.50 Macmillan

341.04 Peace. International cooperation. World politics 46-2085

"Divided into four parts, the volume presents first the problem of the maintenance of peace. Here, the collapse of world order, the problem of security, regional organization and the international law of the future are discussed. Secondly, political and human rights are considered. Under this broad topic several exceptional articles are found, including 'The Problem of Dependencies,' 'National and International Aspects of Race,' and 'An Anthropological View of Colonial and Race Questions.' Part Three is concerned with economic and social welfare and contains excellent chapters on such subjects as monetary policies, cartels and commodity control schemes, labor, and the promotion of physical and social welfare. Finally, under 'The Cultural Basis of World Order' very valuable essays are found that consider, among other subjects, certain psychological postulates for peace, education, the arts and letters, science and technology, religion, nationalism, and the moral basis of peace." Scientific Bk Club R

Reviewed by R. C. Snyder

Am Pol Sci R 40:807 Ag '46 650w

Reviewed by R. N. Schwartz

Book Week p19 Mr 31 '46 360w

Booklist 42:314 Je 1 '46

"We must indeed, as every thoughtful person knows, work today for one world, or we shall be left with none at all. In that effort this modest volume can play a useful part." J. D. Squires

+ Christian Century 63:560 My 1 '46 700w

Current Hist 10:537 Je '46 70w

Foreign Affairs 25:160 O '46 10w

"An inclusive, learned, well-written book—comfortably free of the 'ifs'—looking at the world as it is and going on from there."

+ Kirkus 13:539 D 1 '45 180w

"Not intended as original research, but clear, forthright presentation of sober progressive thinking. Highly recommended for public and educational libraries." H. H. A. Bernt

+ Library J 71:180 F 1 '46 140w

Reviewed by Bernard Brodie

N Y Times p25 Jl 21 '46 1250w

Reviewed by L. M. Goodrich

Pol Sci Q 61:302 Je '46 600w

Scientific Bk Club R 17:2 F '46 350w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 21 '46 220w

"This book is in itself proof of the wide rally of scholars to the defense of civilization. For these twenty-four teachers who write on peace, political organization, human rights, economic policies and culture in a world order constitute a 'branch' of the Universities Committee on Postwar International Problems begun by Ralph Barton Perry at Harvard in 1943, long before the atomic bomb fell. Though the subjects they cover are many and some points of view are familiar, that does not affect the validity of what they have to say." Harry Hansen

+ Survey Q 35:130 Ap '46 900w

"The volume should be of value to the general reader interested in problems of international affairs, as well as to college classes for collateral reading. The book is not sufficiently comprehensive or systematic to be of use as a basic text."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:127 Je '46 170w

Reviewed by Frances Witherspoon
 Weekly Book Review p24 Ap 14 '46
 800w
 Wis Lib Bul 42:83 Je '46

HARRISON, SHELBY MILLARD, and ANDREWS, FRANK EMERSON. American foundations for social welfare; Includes a directory of 505 foundations. 249p $2 Russell Sage

360 Foundations, Charitable and educational. Endowments 46-4626

"A study of the types of 'foundations' that have been organized for the promotion of social welfare in various directions, their financial and administrative problems, and their present trends. A descriptive directory of 505 foundations and agencies is included." (Christian Century) Index.

Booklist 42:344 Jl 1 '46

Christian Century 63:723 Je 5 '46 60w

Current Hist 11:511 D '46 30w

School & Society 63:367 My 18 '46 10w

Social Studies 37:286 O '46 40w

"This book will be welcomed by students of foundations, especially by that large and vigorous segment known as fund-raisers. . . One word of caution. If you have a grudge against foundations, possibly because they seem to be more generous with polite declinations than rude dollars, don't pick up this volume in the hope of an emotional purge." D. P. Reed

+ Survey 82:196 Jl '46 500w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2 350 D '46 160w

HARROLD, CHARLES FREDERICK. John Henry Newman. 472p $3.50 Longmans
 B or 92 Newman, John Henry, cardinal 45-9046

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"In general Mr. Harrold shows maturity and breadth, grasps both the technical problems and the wider issues, and sheds a steady light on many different aspects of Newman's work. I found him least complete on Newman's political ideas; there are some interesting implications here he does not cover. On theological questions Mr. Harrold claims to be just an amateur, but actually in this field as in others he proceeds with accuracy, ease, and sureness. His book is thoughtful and solid, a valuable contribution." W. O. Aydelotte

+ Am Hist R 51:498 Ap '46 280w

"The volume is not a biography of Newman and avoids psychoanalysis, without the use of which Newman cannot be understood. Hence, the study 'is what it is'—a dramatic, intensely interesting, occasionally exciting, often provocative description of Newman's career and compositions, a good instance of the art of balancing, very favorable to the celebrated convert to Roman Catholicism but lapsing into special pleading that is far from convincing to the outsider. Newman remains an enigma." C. H. Moehlan

+ Christian Century 63:303 Mr 6 '46 1200w

Reviewed by F. J. Moore
 Churchman 160:15 F 1 '46 360w

"In this study Harrold affectionately and industriously takes Newman's mind apart and never quite succeeds in getting it back together. The fault is not altogether Harrold's. An intellect like Newman's, which falls back on the irrational when it desires, is certain to suffer much if analyzed in detail. Newman's mind, brilliant in its parts, capable of producing exquisite passages of highly logical prose, lacked unity. Hence Harrold undertakes too much when he attempts to convince us of Newman's 'unfailing and relentless powers to expose inconsistent thinking' and to make out a case for Newman's career as 'a proof of the possibility, within that [Roman Catholic] Church, of a combination of dauntless intellectual inquiry with childlike claimlessness and devoted faith.'" C. R. Sanders

+ J Religion 26:218 Jl '46 450w

"It is impossible not to be aware of how painstaking, balanced, careful, and sound this evaluation is; yet it is equally impossible not to feel that it has the effect of leaving Newman's thought inorganic and remote, and this despite Professor Harrold's own insistence on its vitality and relevance." Lionel Trilling

+ Nation 162:132 F 2 '46 200w

Reviewed by George Simpson

Social Forces 24:363 Mr '46 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p26 Ja 11 '47 400w

"The world, which is perennially fascinated by Cardinal Newman, ought to grant an unusual welcome to this peculiarly sensitive appreciation of his work and personality. Like him, it has many facets and hues, treating him as a defender of the Faith, preacher, teacher, historian, novelist, poet, literary stylist, master of the art of controversy, and above all as autobiographer."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:97 Je '46 200w

HARTLEY, EUGENE L. Problems in prejudice; with a foreword by Gardner Murphy. 124p pa $2 King's crown press [13s 6d Oxford]

301.1532 Tolerance. Race problems. Minorities A46-4357

"This small volume is, as expressed by Gardner Murphy who writes the Foreword, 'characteristic of the trend toward the experimental and quantitative in the study of social psychology'. The source material for the study was students in several eastern colleges, including one Negro institution, with the idea that 'life histories and community studies may serve to show where race friction reaches its maximum and where it is inconsequential or altogether lacking.' The economic factor is found influential but not all controlling. The inclusion of psychological factors, utilized in the light of modern psychiatry, goes more to the root of prejudice." (Churchman) Bibliography. No index.

Reviewed by Louis Guttman

Am J Soc 52:283 N '46 900w

Reviewed by A. W. Taylor

Churchman 160:17 S 15 '46 270w

School & Society 63:448 Je 22 '46 30w

HARTMAN, GERTRUDE. Builders of the old world. (History on the march) 468p il maps $1.80 Heath

909 History, Universal—Juvenile literature 46-12789

Textbook for junior high schools covering the history of mankind from prehistoric times to the discovery of America.

Booklist 42:249 Ap 1 '46

"The shortcomings of a book, written and illustrated as well as this one, may be found less in the book itself than in the fact that there is small need for such a book in the emerging elementary-school curriculum. However, if the need for a true understanding of the world beyond our borders and for an understanding of our cultural roots which bind us to it is to influence the curriculum more than it has, we must include generous servings of world history on the social-studies menu. Whether or not this should take the form of a survey course at the intermediate-grade level is a matter for the careful consideration of our curriculum experts. Those who decide affirmatively will find in Gertrude Hartman's book a superlative example of the kind of textbook which will be needed." R. H. Anderson

EI School J 47:174 N '46 800w

"Gertrude Hartman's agreeable style is well known and her scholarship is unquestioned. Instead of using pictures from many different sources the publishers have secured fresh illustrations, all from the hand of Marjorie Quennell, whose background and feeling for history have been ably proved in her own books. The maps, too, are well drawn and adequate." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:208 My '46 160w

HARTMAN, GERTRUDE—Continued

"The introduction by Allan Nevins would stir even an adult to read on and vouches for the standard of this series. Those who remember Miss Hartman's books, 'These United States and How They Came To Be' and 'The World We Live In,' know her ability and her alert angle on history teaching. Such a book as this account of the 'Builders of the Old World' surely will lure many pupils to read on." L. S. Bechtel

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Mr 31 '46 320w

HARTWELL, MARJORIE. Animals of Friendly farm. [Il. by the author]. [30p] $1 Watts, F. 46-18714

Large sized picture book for preschool children, made up of pictures of animals on a farm with brief text describing their activities.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p7 Jl 7 '46 100w

"A nice reliable farm book."
+ Kirkus 14:274 Je 15 '46 130w

Reviewed by M. F. Cox
Library J 71:1054 Ag '46 70w

Reviewed by Leone Garvey
San Francisco Chronicle. p8 N 10 '46 80w

HARVARD UNIVERSITY. Committee on the objectives of a general education in a free society. General education in a free society; with an introd. by James Bryant Conant. 267p $2 Harvard univ. press

370.973 Education—U.S. Education—Aims and objectives A45-4180

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"President Conant in his introduction to this volume suggests that it might well have been entitled, 'A Study of American Education.' Certainly, it is required reading for anyone engaged in this field; and it can be read with profit by a large portion of the thinking public. Those who have been somewhat bewildered by what has been going on in the schools and the colleges for the past generation will find some well-considered answers here. . . . It is a frank statement, but not hyper-critical; it is logical, but with a minimum of special pleading; and it is well written. It will grow in stature with the passage of time." J. E. Pomfret

Ann Am Acad 243:182 Ja '46 400w
Bookmark 7:5 Mr '46

"These suggestions are good approaches to the complete concept of coherent education, but they are after all mere approaches. The authors make a passing bow to a position which they dare not acknowledge as the full and ultimate solution: the unified system of the Roman Catholic colleges which hold 'the conviction that Christianity gives meaning and ultimate unity to all parts of the curriculum, indeed to the whole life of the college. Yet this solution is out of the question in publicly supported colleges and is practically, if not legally, impossible in most others.' The measure of the Report's failure is the distance between that quotation and the Committee's solution. Certainly the common values to be obtained from general or liberal education can bind men together, but they must be true values. Catholic colleges employ the practical solution which this report fails to give: scholastic philosophy and the Catholic religion give that common body of truth and that sane outlook which constitute the best education in a free society." J. H. Fichter

Cath World 163:85 Ap '46 850w

"In face of the present misgivings about traditional educational practices and, more deeply, about scientific humanism, it was to have been hoped that the faculty members of our oldest and most famous university could have given us an inspired and enlightening glimpse ahead. What they have supplied, however, is largely a work of scholarship, a summing-up of what has already been thought and done. They aimed at, and achieved, reasonableness. But the fresh insight, the original and creative leadership we are looking for, are still to be found." N. M. Pusey

+ Library Q 16:162 Ap '46 2350w

Reviewed by E. R. Groves

Social Forces 25:219 D '46 3300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p525 O 26 '46 1850w

"The 'Harvard Report' is already exerting a profound effect upon college curricula. All over the country men and women are sitting on other committees, some adopting the Harvard scheme hook, line, and sinker, others imperiously refusing to adopt any part of it because it is a Harvard scheme, still others attempting to make other schemes for general education which will be like this one but will sound as if they were not. For the benefit of American education, I suggest that each of the dozen members of this distinguished committee publish his own minority report, expressing his sincere convictions, indicating to what extent he as an individual takes exception to the report which he as a committee member presented to the Harvard faculty and to the world. The 'Harvard Report' has found a wide audience, as it well deserves to do. These twelve minority reports, I believe, would find an even wider audience, and might well bring about a true Renaissance in American education." Marjorie Nicolson

Yale R n s 35:535 spring '46 2000w

HARVILL, H. L., and JORDAN, PAUL ROE. High-pressure die casting; a design guide for engineers. 130p il $5 H. L. (Red) Harvill mfg. co. 2223 E. 37th st, Vernon, Calif.

621.9 Dies (metal working) 45-5621

"Although this manufacturer's publication deals chiefly with the cold chamber high pressure process of die casting, particularly the techniques developed around the Harvill die-casting machine, there is a good deal of basic information and practical 'know-how' in it that will interest anyone concerned with die casting or the design of parts to be die-cast. Alloys suitable for die casting, the construction of dies, design of parts for die casting, the machining, finishing and inspection of die castings are all treated. The book is thoroughly illustrated, and there is a six-page glossary." N Y New Tech Bks

Library J 70:891 O 1 '45 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:6 Ja '46

HATHAWAY, MRS KATHARINE (BUTLER). Journals and letters of the little locksmith; il. by the author. 395p $3.75 Coward-McCann

B or 92 46-8343

Chapters in the autobiography of the author of The Little Locksmith (Book Review Digest 1943), with edited selections from her letters, which together complete the picture of her life begun in her first book. The author had intended to write three autobiographical volumes, but she died on Christmas eve, 1942, just before her first volume was published.

"Her reputation is considerably enhanced by the publication of this record of a spiritual odyssey. To me it is far more moving, more honest and fresh, than the overburnished 'Little Locksmith.' The episodes in Paris and the Haute Savoye have some of the qualities of the best contemporary writing: the characters (she too) come alive; the sensual and emotional perceptions glow with a warmth akin to Katharine Mansfield's. The talent that produced a literary freak like 'The Little Locksmith' emerges here as a dynamic and creative mind." Robert Halsband

+ Book Week p1 D 22 '46 1100w

Booklist 43:154 Ja 15 '47

"First thirteen chapters are as delightful as The Little Locksmith, having been written in the same delicate yet discerning style. Remainder of the book comprises journals and letters set down apparently with no thought of their publication. They are the rich sources from which author fashioned her earlier book. . . . Recommended as a supplement to her other book." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 71:1539 N 1 '46 120w

"I think many readers will weary of the immense amount of space taken up in these pages with the record of highly personal emotion and of the author's intense preoccupation with it. One wants to cry: 'Oh, forget it, and think about something else.' . . . She was certainly no more preoccupied with self than was Marie Bashkirtsev, and she was probably less morbid; yet I think she wears the reader more because she has hitched her wagon to a smaller star. Of course, one does not mean by this that there are not many penetrating and sensitive observations in the book. And it is only fair to add that one's objections grow weaker toward the end, as one comes to feel that Mrs. Hathaway is growing spiritually to the time of her death." Edward Wagenknecht
— + N Y Times p10 D 29 '46 650w

"Although Mrs. Hathaway was more than normally thrust in upon herself and thus reduced to interpreting people, objects, and events from a strictly personal viewpoint, there are signs in these letters of her potential capacity for objective writing. . . . Despite her small output, from her books there emerges the bright, stark personality of a woman intellectually and emotionally complete." Virginia Peterson
+ Weekly Book Review p7 D 15 '46 1000w

HATTSTROM, H. A. Golf after forty; photographic ill. by W. B. Baxter. 160p $2 Garden City pub. co.

796.352 Golf 46-25059

Advice on the flatfoot manner of playing golf for the older and stouter player. Photographs illustrate each step of the instructions on putting and driving. The author is pro at the Elmhurst (New York) country club.

Booklist 42:223 Mr 15 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 J1 '46

Spring'd Republican p4 F 4 '46 300w

HAUSER, PHILIP MORRIS, and LEONARD, WILLIAM RAMSDELL, eds. Government statistics for business use. 432p $5 Wiley

311.3973 Statistics. U.S.—Statistics 46-4997

"An authoritative guide to the current statistical services and publications of the national government that are useful to business. It contains fourteen chapters on specific fields of governmental statistical activity such as manufacturing, minerals, agriculture, international trade and payments, prices, housing and construction. Each chapter is the work of one or more experts connected with a government agency, usually the agency whose statistical work is described in the chapter." (N Y New Tech Bks) Bibliography. Index.

Library J 71:346 Mr 1 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:30 Ap '46

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:203 S '46 280w

HAUSMAN, LEON AUGUSTUS. Field book of eastern birds; with six plates containing ninety-four birds and bird heads in full color and over four hundred drawings by Jacob Bates Abbott. 659p $3.75 Putnam

598.2 Birds—U.S. 46-5123

"The book covers the territory east of the Mississippi river and the west shore of Hudson bay. The first section is a field key to bird families with cross reference to the descriptions of each bird. Descriptive notes are compact but adequate. Small black-and-white drawings illustrate most of the descriptions. Includes both land and water birds and, for a field book, is comprehensive." Booklist

Booklist 42:361 J1 15 '46

Bookmark 7:6 N '46

Christian Science Monitor p23 N 9 '46 140w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 J1 '46

"A standard book for use and reference."
+ Kirkus 14:145 Mr 15 '46 60w

"There is a great deal to praise in this latest field guide to birds of the Eastern States. Its obvious advantage over predecessors is that each species is allotted a separate page, thus allowing written material of considerable detail to be placed directly under a line-cut of the bird in question. . . . Another advance over Peterson's guide—for it is Peterson's book to which Mr. Hausman's will inevitably be compared—is a systematic division of common birds according to dominant colors appearing in the forepart of the main text. . . . The line-cuts heading the pages are drawn so as to show the relative size of each species within a family. But however excellent the drawings may have been in the original, in reproduction they are so small that their usefulness is limited. . . . The written part of the text is fine, superior because of its detail to Peterson's, if not quite so thorough as Chapman's. The lengthier treatment has necessarily caused the book to grow to considerable size, yet even so it is much lighter than Chapman's guide and can be carried about with no trouble." E. B. G.
+ — N Y Times p16 O 13 '46 320w

Spring'd Republican p6 J1 10 '46 270w

"The sections on characteristic habits and habitat are especially useful and well done. That on field marks might well be shortened to terse listing of the marks themselves. All in all, it is to be hoped that further editions of this work will be shorter, with illustrations more or less to scale throughout, and with more color-plates, especially of difficult immature and winter plumages of wood warblers, shorebirds, etc." G. M. Sutton
+ — Weekly Book Review p21 S 15 '46 450w

HAVIGHURST, WALTER. Land of promise: the story of the Northwest territory. 384p $3 Macmillan

977 Northwest, Old 47-30019

Historical panorama of the Old Northwest Territory, which is approximately the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, and part of Minnesota. This is not a formal history, but rather a rediscovery of the land and the men and women who settled it. Maps on endpapers. Index.

Reviewed by S. K. Workman

Book Week p2 D 22 '46 360w

Booklist 43:153 Ja 15 '47

"The author has a real knack for story telling and the most vivid parts of the book are the stories of the men and woman who opened and settled this region. There should be considerable regional interest in this book, but mainly it's recommended for libraries, reference reading."

+ Kirkus 14:376 Ag 1 '46 120w

"Readers of the author's Long Ships Passing: the Story of the Great Lakes will find this the natural and expected complement, in the same tradition. Here again is rich understanding and ability to portray, in broad effect yet intimate illustrative detail, successive sweeps of the opening of the region, and its human lore. . . . Highly recommended." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 71:1712 D 1 '46 110w

"Walter Havighurst has already told the story of the upper Mississippi and of the long gray oreboats which convey such tremendous cargoes of hematite and copper from Lake Superior to Lake Erie. And his earlier books reveal his characteristic blending of historical and statistical data with fresh personal observation. That combination is even more effective in 'Land of Promise.' One can only regret that the book did not appear in 1937 during the official commemoration of the passage 150 years before of the famous Ordinance of 1787." J. T. Flanagan

+ N Y Times p8 D 29 '46 850w

"Mr. Havighurst has done well by his country. He has read much in its history, and he has also been around, something only too few historians trouble to do. Hence he tells us not only the story of Sault Ste. Marie but also how the Soo goes today, how it looks and feels. . . . The author had a tremendous problem of selection, for his is a story that could occupy five volumes such as this and still be inadequate. And for his framework he has selected very well. . . I could have wished, in such a good book, he had given less attention to Johnny Applesseed, an estimable man who has been turned into a bore by constant magazine pieces; and I think Harmony, Ind., both old and new, has worn pretty thin. . . It is not fair, however, to quarrel over selection, especially in a book so well organized and written as this one." S. H. Holbrook

HAVIGHURST, WALTER—Continued

+ — Weekly Book Review p7 D 15 '46 1250w

HAWES, ELIZABETH. Hurry up, please, its time. 245p $2.50 Reynal

331.88 Trade unions. Labor and laboring classes—U.S. 46-8082

Records the author's experiences as a member of the Education department of the United automobile workers' union—which is generally regarded as a "problem child" among C.I.O. unions.

"Liberals will be distressed and reactionaries delighted with the picture of timidity and dissension in the unions which she presents. Perhaps the most arresting, and in some ways disturbing, thing in her book is her description of Walter Reuther as a 'glib fence-straddler,' a politician who 'works 365 days a year for himself' and seeks the good of the union only so far as it conduces to his own. . . Reactionaries will gain little comfort, however, from her over-all view. There are brains in the labor movement, there is religious devotion and a full consciousness that the unions can achieve their objectives only through political action" Bergen Evans

Book Week p3 D 29 '46 320w

"This curious little work is perhaps best treated as a unique type of mystery, in which the reader's object is to discover the point of the book. The title seems to present a clue, of course, and after you Hurry Up and read the volume you do discover that It's Time to fight for socialism. But there is nothing about socialism in the book except for a few remarks at the end expressing the author's unqualified and unanalysed indorsement. . . I do not profess to have discovered the point of the book, but since all mysteries are supposed to have a culprit, I pick Reynal and Hitchcock" Robert Bendiner

— Nation 164:50 Ja 11 '47 550w

"Elizabeth Hawes paints a striking picture of industrial America, from the underside. It is a very competent picture. . . Miss Hawes has written an extremely good book. Some time she will write a much better one, when she rejects the principle of speed-up in the work of the mind as she has in the work of the machine." Alvin Johnson

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 12 '47 1150w

"I approached this book with the liveliest expectation that Miss Hawes would contribute richly to our understanding of the trade union movement. I had hoped that from her lively account we could get a true understanding of the social and economic nature of a union, its methods of operation and its value to society. Instead, it seems to me, she has focused attention upon its most superficial and meretricious aspects. Perhaps there are more union representatives than I realize—or have known—who conform to the types she describes. But Miss Hawes apparently has run into a surprisingly large number of strange characters, pre-occupied with sex, and concerned with the trivial manifestations of the social change that has been taking place." E. M. Herrick

Weekly Book Review p14 D 29 '46 850w

HAWKINS, DEAN. Headsman's holiday. 256p $2 Cur: 46-17426

Detective story.

"Despite the gruesome details of the crimes, there is a good bit of fun in the story." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p32 Je 9 '46 150w

"'Headman's Holiday' has a vivid and amusing final sequence on a Florida Island, but up to that point the details of a series of decapitations make pretty dull slogging." Anthony Boucher

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p10 J1 4 '46 40w

"Fair"

Sat R of Lit 29:36 Je 15 '46 20w

"The reader who likes his murders gory and exciting will thoroughly enjoy 'Headman's Holiday.' . . As always in a Dean Hawkins mystery tale, 'Headman's Holiday' is well written and will keep the armchair detective guessing to the end of the last chapter." E. H. Dexter

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 9 '46 200w

HAWKINS, GEORGE ANDREW. Thermodynamics. 436p $4.50 Wiley

536.7 Thermodynamics 46-7270

"This textbook is intended for use in either a two-semester, or, with certain omissions, a one-semester course in engineering thermodynamics. Besides the usual material on the laws of thermodynamics, ideal gas laws, energy and entropy, and combustion, there has been added supplementary material designed to make the subject clearer. . . Although heat transfer is not considered part of thermodynamics, the author includes an elementary introductory chapter on this subject because he believes it to be helpful information for the thermodynamics engineer. There are problems at the end of each chapter and a short list of references after some chapters, for the benefit of those who wish to go deeper into the subject." N Y New Tech Bks

N Y New Tech Bks 31:49 J1 '46

Reviewed by James Stokley

Weekly Book Review p38 O 27 '46 150w

HAWKINS, QUAIL. Too many dogs; il. by Kurt Wiese. [57p] $1.50 Holiday

46-7276

Hank wanted a dog or a bicycle for his birthday, and a dog it was. And soon there were too many dogs, and some of them had to be sold But that made the bicycle a possibility.

Booklist 43:105 D 1 '46

"A slight story, greatly enlivened by Kurt Wiese's illustrations, but one that will fill a need for books for eight- to ten-year-old boys" Elizabeth Johnson

Library J 71:1209 S 15 '46 70w

"Miss Hawkins' work shows definite progress; her use of modern language without degenerating into an over-abundance of slang is to be particularly commended. With plot, action, humor and surprise, 'Too Many Dogs' should be popular with a wide variety of ages and help fill that ever-present void for more 'dog' stories." Constance Mitchell

+ San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 10 '46 200w

"To many young readers this book will be a series of delighted chuckles. Kurt Wiese has done full justice to its contagious humor in his illustrations." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:47 O 19 '46 160w

Weekly Book Review p34 N 10 '46 450w

HAWKINS, REGINALD ROBERT, ed. Scientific, medical, and technical books published in the United States of America, 1930-1944. . . prepared under the direction of the National research council's Committee on bibliography. 1114p $20 Bowker

016.5 Science—Bibliography. Medicine—Bibliography. Technology—Bibliography 46-2936

"A selected list, prepared under the direction of a committee of experts under the editorship of the chief of the Science and technology division of the New York public library. The first printing has been made available by the Department of State as an official document for distribution in Central and South American countries. Full bibliographical information, classified arrangement, followed by directories of state agencies and publishers. Elementary textbooks and books on social science are not included." Booklist

Booklist 42:292 My 15 '46

"A must book for all large technical libraries." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 71:762 My 15 '46 140w

"No other work gives an equally comprehensive cross-section of important recent technical literature, and no other goes so far in appraisal of the books listed. . . One praiseworthy feature is the consistently high character of the material included; almost every book is of real technical value." E. H. McClelland

+ Library Q 16:361 O '46 550w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:13 Ja '46

"This outsize volume will be welcomed by librarians, scholars, teachers and technical workers in the fields covered." T. L.

+ N Y Times p33 My 26 '46 250w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:261 S '46 270w

HAWLEY, RALPH CHIPMAN. Practice of silviculture. 5th ed 354p $4 Wiley

634.95 Forests and forestry Agr46-292

"A college text on the principles of forest management for the continuous production of timber crops. It deals both with the cutting of a stand and the securing of natural and artificial reproduction of the growth. The comparative merits of clearcutting, seed-tree, shelterwood, and coppice methods of treatment are discussed; and good procedures in thinning and pruning, slash disposal, and the control of cuttings to avoid logging waste are described. Practical methods are clearly described in considerable detail, hence the book should be as useful to persons directly concerned with the management of timber stands as it is to forestry students. Advances in practice since the previous edition (1937) have been incorporated in this revision and references at the end of the chapters, brought up to date." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 43:135 Ja 1 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1627 N 15 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:40 Jl '46

HAWTHORNE, HILDEGARDE (MRS J. M. OSKISON). Westward the course; a story of the Lewis and Clark expedition 280p $2.50 Longmans

Lewis and Clark expedition—Juvenile literature 46-6482

Fictionized account of the Lewis and Clark expedition, giving a detailed account of this hazardous journey of the early 1800's. The story of the individuals of the expedition includes the adventures of two young members, Harry Whitcomb and George Shannon. For grades seven to nine

Booklist 43:59 O 15 '46

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 14 '46 270w

"The story of Sacajawea, the Bird Woman, can hardly be told too often and Hildegard Hawthorne tells it anew in this fine historical story."

+ Horn Bk 22:354 S '46 200w

"Excellent background and reference book."

+ Kirkus 14:389 Ag 15 '46 90w

"The helpfulness of Sacajawea to the expedition and her courage and loyalty will make the book appeal to girls. Recommended." Nelle McCalla

+ Library J 71:1720 D 1 '46 100w

Reviewed by Maude Adams

—Library J 71:1720 D 1 '46 100w

Reviewed by L. R. Hanna

San Francisco Chronicle p9 N 10 '46 230w

"One need have no hesitation in giving this, one of the most significant records in the history of the United States, to young people. It is an authentic, swift-moving, interesting story. Miss Hawthorne has taken it largely from the diary and letters of William Clark. He is the outstanding character. His vitality, courage, and resourcefulness will have a strong appeal to boys who like men who are equal to the things that challenge them." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:45 O 19 '46 200w

School & Society 64:120 Ag 17 '46 30w

"Although written with clarity, a certain amount of vividness and an appreciation of the subject, the book probably will appeal more to the boy with an historical turn of mind than to the average reader." E. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 22 '46 90w

Wis Lib Bul 42:171 D '46

HAWTHORNE, NATHANIEL. Short stories; ed. and with an introd. by Newton Arvin. 422p $3 Knopf

46-3911

Contains twenty-nine of Hawthorne's short stories, with a scholarly introduction by the editor, in which he studies the genesis of the tales, and the psychological peculiarities of the author.

Booklist 42:365 Jl 15 '46

Christian Science Monitor p22 O 12 '46 180w

"A capable revival of the American origins of short fiction, that has its place on all library shelves."

+ Kirkus 14:155 Ap 1 '46 130w

Reviewed by Harry Levin

N Y Times p1 Je 16 '46 1650w

"It is pleasant to find a book of this sort in which the anthologizer is worthy of the anthologized. 'Hawthorne's Short Stories' contains an interesting and attractive selection from a department of Hawthorne's work which, when explored, sometimes proves disappointing; and a critical introduction which is absolutely a triumph of its kind." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 22:107 Je 8 '46 180w

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ag 18 '46 100w

"One good reason to welcome this collection is that it is accompanied by Professor Arvin's introductory essay on Hawthorne as moralist and artist. In a dozen succinct and suggestive pages he comments on Hawthorne's reading, his language, his sensibility, his imagination, his human insight." Walter Havighurst

+ Sat R of Lit 29:15 Jl 6 '46 650w

"Contains the best of the somber New Englander's writing in this form." D. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 2 '46 600w

"Glimpses are about all one can get of the coy genius in these stories and sketches. But they are as good an index as any to the color and quality of his haunted mind."

Time 47:102 Je 17 '46 800w

HAYCOX, ERNEST. Long storm. 296p $2.50 Little

46-5157

Oregon and especially Portland in Civil war days is the scene of this story. Portland then had a population of five thousand, and a total of fifty-five saloons. The copperhead organization called Knights of the Golden Circle was trying to dominate Portland with its gangster methods. Captain Adam Musick, of the Daisy McGovern, fighting for his rights on the river, is the leading character.

"What a book of action! Haycox retails the blow-by-blow of a bar room brawl with the loving care that Rex Beach lavished on the climactic fight of 'The Spoilers.' And the author's description of Adam Musick's Daisy would be a pretty appendix to that classic, 'Lloyd's Steamboat Disasters'. Haycox's steamboat race is somewhat milder than the Natchez and Robert E. Lee stories; but it's as vivid as anything this side of tri-dimensional television can be. Ever and anon gore drips, men drop on the board sidewalks or bubble away under the slackwater. But this is the way it was. . . There is no pasteboard in this novel. If the lithographs are gaudy, it is because the times are garish." E. D. Branch

HAYCOX, ERNEST—Continued

+ Book Week p4 Ag 4 '46 450w

Booklist 42:365 J1 15 '46

"Haycox is providing solid fare with each book and this continues his interest in the Northwest."

+ Kirkus 14:110 Mr 1 '46 170w

"The romantic passages are characterized by a great terseness of dialogue and a wariness of approach. Mr. Haycox is at his competent best, however, when tempers are rising and fists are closing, and once the first blow is struck he wades in with some masterly graphic description which should afford a satisfying interlude for readers who are tired of the temporizing in world affairs today." Mary McGrory

+ N Y Times p10 J1 21 '46 410w

"'Long Storm' is rough and realistic, without the mock-heroics that too frequently inflate adventure narratives." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p14 J1 21 '46 150w

Wis Lib Bul 42:132 O '46

HAYCRAFT, HOWARD, ed. Art of the mystery story. 545p $5 Simon & Schuster

809.3 Fiction—History and criticism. Detective stories (books about) 47-30017

A collection of critical essays, bibliographical notes, parodies, and miscellaneous items, all about the methods, the materials, and the significance of the mystery novel or the mystery short story.

"An exceedingly valuable addition to the literature about the detective story. . . From a thousand arguments Haycraft has selected a telling half hundred and presents them with sound and temperate commentary. The consequence is a document spacious, impressive and fascinating, lively and happily self-conscious. It is a collection enormously useful and certainly as indispensable to the library and the scholar as it should be absorbing to the more casual reader, fond or not fond of detective stories. To the former it stands as a stimulatingly self-critical battle of criteria. To the latter it will serve as the apologia of a literary form long held suspect as subliterary and meretricious and still suffering, in spite of its great popularity, from the snobbery of the falsely refined." James Sandoe

+ Book Week p4 D 15 '46 500w

Booklist 43:152 Ja 15 '47

"There is no end to the variety of material on detective fiction, which will—and should be—welcomed by the vast audience of readers. For there is not only unusual information, but worthwhile comment and criticism, and an inclusive coverage of the high standards that mystery fiction has and can, achieve. Excellent compendium of crime lore."

+ Kirkus 14:379 Ag 1 '46 180w

"This is a good book for those who have read so much detective fiction that they now want to read about detective fiction. It constantly reminds you of pleasures past and suggests rereadings and mentions possible delights one has missed. . . The book is bulky, but well balanced; there was bound to be some repetition. As an old believer I might also add that a proper attitude toward Sherlock Holmes implies a proper attitude toward the mystery story as a whole. Because the fact is that more than half of his short stories and all but one of his long fictions aren't very good. But those that are have a kind of artificial elegance, an almost wrong-headed manner, which an unprejudiced reader will find irresistible. If he is so bemused that he can't detect the weakness of the rest of the 'canon,' he is fit for Mr. Wilson's contempt. If he reads, but uses discretion, he is the right reader for 'The Art of the Mystery Story.'" Gilbert Seldes

+ N Y Times p1 D 22 '46 1100w

"Haycraft is not only a meticulous collector of material but also a notable editor. This anthology is no hit-or-miss job, but a carefully constructed whole which manages to cover, in one essay or another, every aspect of criminous fiction which might possibly interest the scholar of the future or the casual reader of the present." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 12 '46 700w

"Bigger, if not better than its predecessor, containing much of the best and some of the worst that has been said and thought on the subject, 'The Art of the Mystery Story' will tell you all you need to know, perhaps more than you ought to know, concerning detective and mystery tales. The strongest appeal of the collection should be to those who care deeply about the concoction of such items, rules for same, yea, even the bibliography thereof, as discussed by a wide variety of experts in their special world. . . All told, 'The Art of the Mystery Story' is just the thing for whodunit fanciers of scholarly tendencies, especially those of sober cast. Certain articles of comic intention do not come off very well; one can never be sure of what those tongue-in-cheek professors mean, if anything." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p13 D 29 '46 800w

HAYDON, JULIE. Every dog has its day; designed and ill. by Fritz Willis. 120p $1.50 Rodd 636.78 Dogs—Legends and stories 46-1050

"In this little book of a day in one dog's life Julie Haydon's pen joyously and amusingly follows her small wire-haired terrier through just one routine day so vividly that one sees little Maxim in all her gay puppy life and vicariously revels in the companionship of such an enticing bit of dog. As Maxim plays her game of life, her mistress records with veracity all the hits, strikes, "and even the 'errors,' so happily that the book is truly a love letter to her dog." Springfield Republican

"Only admirers of the saccharine, or supporters of sentimentalized dog homes, will have any truck with it." Peter Quinn

+ Book Week p6 Ja 20 '46 150w

"Because of its truiness to life and the affection stamped on every page, dog lovers will enjoy Julie Haydon's 'love letter to her dog'." E. H. Dexter

+ Springfield Republican p4d D 23 '45 180w

HAYES, ALFRED. All thy conquests. 295p $2.75 Howell, Soskin 46-7864

Novel of war-time Rome, in which an actual happening is the focal point. It is the dramatic rise of a petty Fascist hoodlum, who finally became a S.S. lackey. When justice caught up with him later the mob refused to let the law take its course, and they lynched him.

Reviewed by Ben Kartman

Book Week p7 D 1 '46 230w

"Alfred Hayes, gifted American poet who served with the United States Army in Italy, has written a penetrating, truthful and compassionate novel of that unhappy country. It is a story without the superficialities of many GI reports of skylarking in liberated and conquered lands. Mr. Hayes' Italians are real Italians, not caricatures. I would guess that sensitive Italians would agree that these portraits are honest and accurate, just as I know that Italians have been outraged by other recent portrayals of their people by Americans, even when these portrayals were meant to be sympathetic." Howard Taubman

+ N Y Times p5 N 17 '46 850w

"The author, in a beautifully written, expertly constructed novel, illuminates with cruel brilliance, through the behavior of half a dozen characters—American and Italian—a few months of the Allied occupation of 'liberated' Rome. Mr. Hayes, unlike so many of today's young novelists, does not try to ram any political creed down your throat. He is content to portray, with wit, eloquence, and innumerable pointillist touches, a group of despairing, revengeful, cynical Italians and some irresponsible, lecherous, and homesick American soldiers. An admirably unpretentious first novel that shows a sharp talent."

+ New Yorker 22:130 N 16 '46 120w

"A truthful and compassionate job of story-telling." William Hogan
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 D 9 '46
800w

"This book fulfills the basic requirement of a novel: it is good reading from cover to cover. The scene is laid in liberated Rome, about which the author is well qualified to write, as he served in Italy with the American army. But he has a much more important qualification: he knows how to write." L. G. White

+ Sat R of Lit 29:17 D 28 '46 750w

"A brilliant first novel about war-time Rome." J. D. Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p4 N 3 '46 1100w

Reviewed by Orville Prescott

Yale R n s 36:381 winter '47 270w

HAYES, MRS FLORENCE (SOOY). Burro tamer; il. by Manning deV. Lee. 299p $2.25
Random house

46-25277

Story of a burro and his young owner living in New Mexico. Ricardo is a descendant of the early Spaniards of the Southwest. The boy is determined to surmount such irritations as school and farm work, in order to train his wild burro in time for the Santa Fé fiesta. For grades five to eight.

Booklist 43:59 O 15 '46

"This is spirited and tender and has fine family and human values."

+ Kirkus 14:347 Ag 1 '46 90w

"Both boy and burro are humorists at heart, though the burro seems more consciously so than the boy. The Fiesta of Santa Fe has its part in the story, as does the school life and family life of the region. For boys from eight to twelve." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 71:1466 O 15 '46 100w

"The author displays humor, restraint and lightness of touch. Every character has personality, including Panchito as he goes his charming, rascally way, wrecking schoolroom and garden and wearing the flowered hat of Aunt Rosita. Ricardo himself readers of 10 to 14 will find as likable and human as the boy next door." F. S.

+ N Y Times p52 N 10 '46 140w

Weekly Book Review p32 N 10 '46
300w

HAYES, JOHN EDWARD ROLLINS. Nature of patentable invention, its attributes and definition, 183p $5 Addison-Wesley

608 Inventions. Patent laws and legislation
46-506

"A revision of the author's Invention; Its Attributes and Definition (1942). The work is of interest to inventors who understand patent claim terminology and to patent attorneys. Much of the text of his third edition has been rewritten and expanded, and many new cases are cited in illustration. Some of the material has been rearranged under new chapter headings. A Table of Cases has been added, but the book still lacks an index." N Y New Tech Bks

"Of necessity there is heavy going for the reader unfamiliar with the subject. However, the reviewer, for one, gained an immeasurably clearer conception of patents and their meaning from this carefully considered and experienced brief by an unquestioned authority. Examples quoted from specific cases are particularly interesting and clarifying. The book is surely to be recommended for study by anyone who undertakes invention, for by this clear understanding much time, money, and grief will be saved. Perhaps in the long run it is an excellent investment, in the light of usual fees of good patent attorneys." G. L. Clark

+ Chem & Eng N 24:1444 My 25 '46 450w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:980 J1 '46 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:11 Ja '46

HAYNES, WILLIAMS. Southern horizons. 316p $2.75 Van Nostrand

338.4766 South—Industries and resources.
Chemical Industries. Chemurgy 46-1952

"Southern resources developed by Southerners is the theme of the book. Southerners are reappraising their natural resources in terms of chemical values." Book describes the 'silk-worm colony' in Texas, ramie, tung oil, naval stores, the work of the Cotton Council and of Government Southern Regional Laboratory. Author describes and relates major raw materials, development and progress and suggestions for use of TVA power in the South." (Library J) Index.

"Curiously jumbled but readable volume." Willard Shelton

+ Book Week p12 Mr 24 '46 200w

Booklist 42:242 Ap 1 '46

Christian Science Monitor p10 J1 27
'46 180w

Kirkus 13:557 D 15 '45 110w

Library J 71:346 Mr 1 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:21 Ap '46

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:203 S '46 240w

HAYS, HOFFMAN REYNOLDS. Takers of the city. 376p $2.75 Reynal

46-4248

Historical novel, the scene of which is Mexico in the sixteenth century. The edict of the king of Spain has freed the natives, but the Conquistadors have continued in their attempts to enslave them. Bartolomé de las Casas, the Apostle of the Indies is the central character.

"So much is in this abundant book, so many threads spun in the first half to be interwoven in the second half, that the author's dextrous planning appears as much a triumph as his incisive style. And it is difficult to speak of 'minor' characters when each character is etched so sharply." E. D. Branch

+ Book Week p1 My 5 '46 1300w

Cath World 163:476 Ag '46 100w

"A fine exposition of the work and efforts of Bishop Bartolomé de las Casas and of his noble and devoted Dominican friars. . . . Scenic descriptions are excellent and one would almost feel that the author had lived in the land as it was then. The novel falls in the creation of its central personages, Ricardo de la Fuente, the young Spanish dandy who has to flee to the Indies because of some love affair, and Lucita, his Indian mistress who is of royal blood. They do not seem to live and the reader is anxious to pick up again the threads of the more serious historical narrative." L. V. Vila

+ Commonweal 44:602 O 4 '46 400w

"This is well handled history"

+ Kirkus 14:81 F 15 '46 210w

"Only when [las Casas] comes upon the scene does the story rise above a scenario in technicolor. Author has more sympathy with the Spanish missionaries than some older historians, Prescott for example, yet he seldom rises to the power that might be expected from this intensely dramatic period of history. Recommended for libraries with liberal funds and historical novel clientele." Julia Sabine

Library J 71:586 Ap 15 '46 100w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 114:909 Jo 24 '46 200w

Reviewed by James Pierce

N Y Times p6 Ap 28 '46 650w

"Mr. Hays knows his period so well and brings in so much unfamiliar material that he almost convinces you that his novel is a good deal better than it is. Actually, in spite of some unusual pages about a bishop who champions the rights of the Indians, this is just our old friend the popular historical novel, with scholarly touches."

New Yorker 22:110 My 4 '46 100w

Reviewed by P. H. Bickerton

Spring'd Republican p4d My 19 '46
300w

Time 47:102 My 13 '46 500w

HAYS, H. R.—Continued

"The massive figure of Las Casas and his siege of the city, woven of genuine historical episodes more romantic and exciting than any poet's or novelist's imaginings, completely overshadow the fictional hero and his fictional concerns. The author possesses the novelist's fertility of invention necessary to bring the story repeatedly to the point of tension and climax. He is also a poet, which is fortunate, for without a sense of poetry it is impossible to convey the wonders of the New World just stirring the European imagination, or the quality of the ancient Indian culture in which the relations between man and nature are all omen, symbol and ritual drama." B. D. Wolfe

+ Weekly Book Review p3 My 19 '46 550w

HAYS, SUE BROWN. Go down, death. 198p $2 Scribner

46-4803

Detective story.

"This is Mrs. Hays' first published novel. She has succeeded admirably in creating an atmosphere of terror and suspense." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p26 Je 2 '46 140w

"Lively, if none too credible." L. G. Offord. San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 7 '46 60w

Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 7 '46 180w

"The author is a member of the foreboding sodality and displays quite a knowledge of mystery gadgets in general. For those who crave news of the Old South every so often." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p17 Je 2 '46 90w

HAYWARD, NORRIS L. Contractor's legal problems. 175p $2.50 McGraw

692 Building—Contracts and specifications 46-7015

"Legal pitfalls in the construction business are highlighted in this series of brief, colloquial sketches. Each incident portrays a specific legal problem arising from strikes, fires, theft, leases, mortgages, insurance, bids, options and the like. Each case is based on an actual court ruling and concludes with a short quotation giving the substance of the decision. The author makes no pretensions of having written a treatise on the legal aspects of the contracting business. Rather the book is a collection of case histories that will serve to warn contractors of some of the legal technicalities that they must be on guard against in the conduct of their businesses." (N Y New Tech Bks) No Index.

"Although the book is written for construction men, references to decisions are included so that a lawyer can quickly find the legal reports covering each case."

Eng N 137:127 N 14 '46 120w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1332 O 1 '46 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:37 Jl '46

HAYWARD, PERCY ROY. Young people's prayers; religion at work in life; il. by Chester Bratten. 82p $1.50 Assn. press; Revell

264.1 Prayers. Youth—Religious life 46-760

"A collection of prayers on many subjects of special interest and concern to young people. For example, there are prayers for the new year, for true friendship, for times of play, to be saved from overattention to self; to be saved from 'the blues,' on making the team, for the first job, a dawning love, the first day at college, for joining the church. These are some sample subjects of the 73 prayers the book contains, each with an appropriate Bible text or reading." Springf'd Republican

"Unconventional prayers, with no straining after unconventionality but written with awareness of the actual needs and interests of young people and in language neither cheap nor stilted."

+ Christian Century 63:19 Ja 2 '46 30w

"If I had a teen-age boy or girl I would get this book at once. . . Dr. Hayward's 'Young People's Prayers' can be an invaluable aid to pastors, teachers, and parents." W. F. Thompson

+ Churchman 160:18 Mr 1 '46 100w

"The book could be well used both for young people's church groups and for individuals in their private prayer life. It also makes excellent devotional reading, as each prayer with its accompanying text forms a basis for meditation as well as for prayer itself." D. J. Campbell

+ Springf'd Republican p6 F 1 '46 360w

HAYWOOD, CAROLYN. Penny and Peter; il by [the author]. 160p $2 Harcourt

46-21128

A sequel to Here's a Penny (Book Review Digest 1944). Penny is adopted and his parents decide to adopt Peter, too. The story is of the adventures and mishaps which follow the two of them. For grades two to four.

Booklist 43:59 O 15 '46

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p8 Ja 14 '47 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '46

"Simple, good-natured, might-be-true adventures."

+ Kirkus 14:492 O 1 '46 90w

"Recommended" M. M. Smith

+ Library J 71:1467 O 15 '46 70w

"The parents enjoy these happy mishaps as much as the children do; it is a family one is glad to find at the end of the book in possession of a summer cabin." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 S 29 '46 180w

Wis Lib Bul 42:154 N '46

HAZARD, JOSEPH T. Pacific crest trails from Alaska to Cape Horn. 317p il $3 Superior pub.

917.9 Mountains—Pacific coast Mountaineering 46-7246

"A bird's-eye view of hiking, climbing, and camping opportunities in west coast ranges the length of the Americas. With information on climates, terrain, and gear for each region, the author combines historical and personal anecdotes. Will appeal to all hikers and climbers, but especially to those looking for new fields. No index." Booklist

Booklist 43:99 D 1 '46

"The historical, personal and geographic approaches in this book have resulted in a happy mixture, a personalized guide book with only two specific objections. The first is the confusing use of different type sizes and different margin spaces, often with no real justification. The other is the lack of an appendix, rather a surprising omission in view of the practical use to which the book may well be put." Stanleigh Arnold

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 D 20 '46 400w

HAZLITT, HENRY. Economics in one lesson. 222p $2 Harper

330.1 Economics 46-5937

"An introduction to economics based on the conviction that the shortest and surest way to an understanding of this science is through analysis of the economic fallacies most popular today, and particularly of the central error from which they stem." (Publisher's note) No index.

Booklist 43:7 S '46

"In spite of [some] shortcomings, the book is very readable and can be well recommended." F. J. Weiss

+ Chem & Eng N 24:2412 S 10 '46 350w

"If one does not agree with all his judgments, he probably will with most. The book is brief, it is virtually two dozen editorials, it is easy reading, and it renders a public service by saying a lot of things that ought to be said that are just common sense" F. W. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 20 '46 440w

Current Hist 11:329 O '46 70w

Eng N 137:112 S 5 '46 120w

Kirkus 14:269 Je 1 '46 170w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:79 Ja 1 '47 70w

"The book is full of prejudiced judgments. . . Nobody could be more wholehearted than he in describing the evils of inflation. Yet in a neighboring chapter he denounces governmental price control and rationing after a war. He seems to detect no inconsistency in these two positions. . . At many points he is firm about the desirability of increasing production, and indicates that he knows it has increased in the past and may increase in the future. Yet any enlargement of the volume of purchasing power at any time, whether by governmental borrowing or credit expansion, seems to him 'inflationary.' . . Underlying every other defect of Hazlitt's view is his misunderstanding of human motivation." George Soule

New Repub 115:202 Ag 19 '46 2150w

Reviewed by John Chamberlain

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 4 '46 1700w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 9 '46 750w

"The recipe for this book is simple: exhumate Herbert Spencer's 'Social Statics,' written in 1892, disguise with a wash of Wicksteed's scientific laissez-faire, adulterate freely with modern reactionary political prejudices à la von Mises—and you have 'Economics in One Lesson.'" T. J. Kreps

— Sat R of Lit 29:15 S 28 '46 1400w

"Stimulating, thought provoking, and interesting. The 'conservative' will be delighted with this book; others, including those who may be slightly contemptuous of it, will find much to think about."

+ U S Quarterly Bk 1.278 D '46 200w

HEADLEY, ELIZABETH. Date for Diane; with ill. by Janet Smalley. 264p $2 Macrae Smith co.

46-21403

Diane is fourteen, and this is the story of her sophomore year in a small town high school. For teen-aged girls.

"A Date for Diane, gets first place as a school story. It is written with skill, sympathy, and an abundant humor which laughs with, but never at, the fourteen-year-olds." Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 178:166 D '46 140w

Booklist 43:72 N 1 '46

Kirkus 14:297 Jl 1 '46 100w

"We can recommend this story for the light-hearted perception with which it treats those first suspenseful days of dates and dances." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 5 '47 240w

"A good story and an honest picture of a girl's problems."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:58 N 9 '46 50w

HEALY, RAYMOND J., and MCCOMAS, J. FRANCIS, eds. Adventures in time and space; an anthology of modern science-fiction stories. 997p $2.95 Random house

Short stories—Collections 46-7121

Thirty-five stories in which the authors try to visualize the world of the future, when space ships made of rehyllium X go off into space to visit planets with names like Prxl, and nuclear fission is accepted as a matter of course.

Booklist 43:102 D 1 '46

Kirkus 14:183 Ap 15 '46 100w

Reviewed by Paul Griffith

N Y Times p5 S 1 '46 450w

"This sort of thing, which of course derives from Jules Verne, is known to the initiate as science fiction. If you haven't been exposed to it before, it will scare the daylight out of you, or maybe just depress you."

New Yorker 22:104 S 7 '46 120w

"It's a fine, large collection of the best fiction written on such matters as rocket ships, nuclear fission and a lot of other matters which most people called 'superman stuff,' until it all began to come true." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 13 '46 80w

"This collection should appeal beyond the circle of fans to any reader with curiosity and imagination, who will find here prophecy (sometimes already come true), fantasy, satire, and (occasionally) fascinatingly off-beat psychological and literary values." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 22 '46 120w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Sat R of Lit 29:30 N 23 '46 800w

"This well selected anthology will be a treasure to the 300,000 monthly readers of the science-fiction magazines and a revelation to readers who find their usual escapes from reality beginning to pall." Gerald Wendt

+ Weekly Book Review p45 N 24 '46 800w

HEAPS, LEO. Escape from Arnheim; a Canadian among the lost paratroops 159p il $3 (12s 6d) Macmillan

940 542 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, Canadian. Arnheim, Battle of, 1944 [46-3780]

The author was one of the two Canadians with the First British paratroop battalion which spear-headed the Arnheim airborne expedition. This account is of his part in the operation, his capture by the Germans, and his escape.

"An important and graphic documentation of one phase of the late war. Written in a plain, factual, often jerky style, it sometimes leaves the non-military reader bewildered by the apparent confusion and aimlessness, the disconnectedness, of military operations. But that, no doubt, is exactly the impression the actors themselves must have had at times" C. M.

+ Canadian Forum 26:238 Ja '47 170w

"This is a simple, unaffected story by a young man who candidly admits that the Canadian Army found him something of a problem child while he was in training in the Dominion, but who found an outlet for his natural talents in this unconventional kind of war." F. S. Adams

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 4 '46 600w

HEARD, GERALD. Eternal gospel. 234p $2 Harper

201 Religion—Philosophy. Christianity and other religions 46-7575

"Gerald Heard, who belongs in the field of pure religious research, here asks and answers some of the questions facing the modern world. The five interrogations are 'What Is Sex?' 'What Is Property?' 'What Is Force?' 'What Is a Promise or One's Word?' and 'What Is Death?' They are answered in three ways, by the Decalogue, by the law of Equity and by what Mr. Heard calls the Spiritual Law of Love. Heard believes that we must return to religion. But he also believes that it must be a contemporary religion for our own age, though it must be based on the true religion which has always existed. He shows this by careful research into the past." San Francisco Chronicle

"Ever since Gerald Heard wrote The Emergence of Man he has been occupied with the inner life of man. In that earlier book he discussed the evolution of the race on the psychological level, the rise of consciousness and the exercise of spiritual faculties. In most of his later books he has taken up aspects of the psychosociological life and shown how man has responded to, and explored, his spiritual environment. The present work is a continuation of that theme, albeit with renewed insight. . . Although this book moves much in the realm of theory, its purpose is practical."

HEARD, GERALD—Continued
J. D. Martin

+ Christian Century 63:1344 N 6 '46 700w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle
Commonweal 45:238 D 13 '46 330w

"The first part of the book, after a definition of the Eternal Gospel, is an absorbing and fresh reconstruction of man's evolution in consciousness since he lost the natural instinctive balance of the animal. Some of this reconstruction, as he himself says, is from a bone here, a skull there, but enough remains to build the whole form with more than probable accuracy... Mr. Heard's section on money, his thoughts on modern psychology, his analysis of war, and his treatment of Sacramentalism are all carefully reasoned and important." G. R. S.

+ N Y Times p34 S 15 '46 950w

Reviewed by M. D. Brown
San Francisco Chronicle p17 O 20 '46 160w

HEATTER, BASIL. Dim view. 256p $2.50
Farrar, Straus

46-11812

A first novel, by the son of a well-known radio commentator. The hero is a naval lieutenant in command of a PT boat; the time, the recent war. The story opens in a hospital in Northern Australia, where Masters has been sent to recover from a wound received in action along the New Guinea coast. The story, told partly in flashbacks, describes Masters' struggles to get back into action, and his final battle which puts him completely out of the war.

"Basil Heatter's 'The Dim View' is the best novel to come out of the war so far. That's a very flat statement, but it's that kind of a book." Clinton Textor

+ Book Week p3 N 24 '46 420w

Booklist 43:117 D 15 '46

"It's a 'dim view' of life and the chances of survival and war—but it is well done. Tough—a man's book—the public libraries won't like it. But Basil Heatter is a writer to watch."

+ Kirkus 14:397 Ag 15 '46 180w

"Tough-minded, direct and often bitter, but mature and moving." R. E. Kingery

Library J 71:1625 N 15 '46 90w

"Mr. Heatter's tale, stripped of the sentimental accretions introduced as a concession to popularity, has been acted out countless times in real life. It is an archetypal experience that all but tells itself. Once the reader comes to terms with Mr. Heatter's astonishingly short sentences, so short that they suggest stammers rather than complete thoughts, the inherent force of the drama makes itself felt. Realizing what a very good thing Mr. Heatter had to work on, it is regrettable that he did not stick to the less spectacular third person, according to the memorable tradition of Tolstoy and Arnold Zweig." E. B. Garside

+ N Y Times p16 N 17 '46 1050w

"Basil Heatter's 'The Dim View' is neither a very great nor a very original novel. Basically, it is no more than a rewrite of what Hemingway did much better when he told the story of Frederic and Catherine. The hero is a rather traditional, and slightly dull, young man... The other characters are shadowy, most of them more like carelessly drawn caricatures than people... And yet, there is considerable merit in Mr. Heatter's novel. No other piece of writing that I know has so clearly and frankly caught the talk of fighting men, Anglo-Saxon fifth and all; despite the overtones of Hemingway, no other recent book has told so moving and complete and satisfying a love story; no novel about the Pacific war has explained quite so well the fact that can now be admitted, namely, that the war in Europe was a more satisfactory war to fight." Merle Miller

+ Sat R of Lit 29:17 D 14 '46 600w

"Tinged with bitterness and marred by some fictitious gingerbread, 'The Dim View' is, nevertheless, an intense and honest book. Its author is another of the promising young novelists who were too busy to write before V-J Day and whose war stories are only now coming from the presses." Richard Match

Weekly Book Review p12 N 17 '46 750w

HEBERDEN, MARY VIOLET (CHARLES L. LEONARD, pseud). Murder cancels all debts. 218p $2 Doubleday

46-2916

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p10 My 5 '46 130w
Kirkus 14:82 F 15 '46 60w
N Y Times p34 Mr 31 '46 120w

"Miss Heberden can write good mysteries without using Desmond Shannon, her popular hard-boiled sleuth, as she proved some time back with 'To What Dread End.' Desmond is absent again, his place taken by a satisfactory fellow from Naval Intelligence, who shines in a bunch of the horriddest people ever assembled under this author's tent. Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p33 Mr 31 '46 300w

HEBERDEN, MARY VIOLET (CHARLES L. LEONARD, pseud). Pursuit in Peru. 254p $2 Doubleday

46-4735

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p8 Jl 14 '46 160w

"No Kilgerrin story is ever wanting in excitement and violent action, and this is no exception." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p26 Je 23 '46 180w

"Good thriller."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:52 Je 22 '46 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p18 Je 16 '46 140w

HEDLEY, GEORGE PERCY. Christian heritage in America. 177p $2 Macmillan

280 Sects. U.S.—Religion 46-5546

Based on addresses delivered at Mills college. It is a series of discourses on the major religious groups in America, explaining their differences, history, and how each has contributed to religion as a whole. Two studies have been added to the original lectures: those dealing with Eastern orthodoxy and American revivalism. The author says: "I have not attempted to discuss the more decisive departures from the general pattern, such as Mormonism and Christian Science. As yet they are derivatives of, rather than contributory to, the main stream of American Christianity; and their stories are so complex as to require exhaustive treatment if any." Index.

Am J Soc 52:380 Ja '47 10w

"Scholars and students of church history will find it superficial, but the book is not written for them, but rather for the general religious public in an attempt to explain how and why the different religious groups came into being, and what contribution each is making to the religious life and thought of America."

+ Kirkus 14:100 F 15 '46 170w

"This book is dynamic and hortative and deserves wide reading." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 71:1048 Ag '46 120w

"It's my guess that this little volume will do as much to help forward the unity among all Christians in America as it does to explain the differences between Christian groups for those who want to know." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 22 '46 650w

HEGARTY, EDWARD J. Building a sales training plan. 198p $2 McGraw

658.8 Salesmanship 45-10506

"This book offers rules to follow in building and operating a successful sales training program. Based on a popular series of articles appearing in Printers' Ink, the book not only discusses basic sales training principles, but gives specific suggestions drawn from wide field experience for putting these principles into practice. Covers all of the recent developments in the training field, such as new methods for training military personnel, and shows how these innovations may suggest to the sales manager or training director fresh angles for meeting his sales training problems." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 42:222 Mr 15 '46

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:56 Ja 1 '46 80w

HEGGEN, THOMAS. Mister Roberts; II. by Samuel Hanks Bryant. 221p $2.50 Houghton 46-25229

The scene is a cargo ship, which went the rounds from island to island in the Pacific. The deadly dull life the men lead is only enlivened by two things: their common hatred for the captain; and their adoration for the cargo officer and first lieutenant who is called Mister Roberts. The various episodes of the story end with the death of Mister Roberts.

"This book is vivid, unimpeachable narrative, with no holds barred. But elders with a distaste for the frankness of the sea and profanity should keep out." Edmund Weeks
Atlantic 178:148 Ag '46 360w

"The remarkable thing is that such an honest, behind-the-scenes portrayal of the Navy as it usually is—in dungarees rather than dress blues—has never been attempted. Tom Heggen, a 27-year-old ex-Navy-lieutenant, has tackled the job with a skill and assurance rarely found in first novels." Charles Roberts
+ Book Week p3 Ag 25 '46 450w

Booklist 42:365 J1 15 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '46

"Funny, to rowdy, with an undercurrent of pathos, this is straight masculine fare."
+ Kirkus 14:256 Je 1 '46 170w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 71:1050 Ag '46 100w

New Repub 115:636 N 11 '46 60w

"All in all Mr. Heggen has written a little classic. It invites reading aloud; it stirs vivid memories of other captains, other ensigns. By the chemistry of contrast, moreover, Mr. Heggen's book may remind some readers that in general, war-writing has arrived at a debunking phase." E. B. G.

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 25 '46 900w

"The leisurely narrative is told in a very few incidents, all centering about an admirable young lieutenant miserably defeated in his desire to get into the fighting. A quiet, credible story of the corroding effects of apathy and boredom on men who, in battle, might have been heroes."

New Yorker 22:70 Ag 24 '46 80w

"This book is an example of the postwar writing we've been waiting for. Beneath the free and easy language there are solid underpinnings and a regenerative quality. In 'Mister Roberts' young Heggen, even as Sir Philip Sidney and Keats and Thomas Wolfe before him, catches at that promise made to youth of bright and lovely imperishable things. At the same time like his Mister Roberts, Heggen is 'one hell of a nice guy' and we'll be watching for his next book." Jane Volles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 20 '46 340w

"The warfare against the captain gives 'Mr. Roberts' its best subject and provides some amusing bits. Obviously the men needed someone or something to blame for their unhappiness. Obviously the petty and weakly hard-swearing captain had earned their contempt. The pranks played on him as the only available means of retaliation against authority and its clownish representative, his comic behavior when once again he has been made ridiculous, provide the best reading in an otherwise 'authentic' but unexciting and not very perceptive book." J. P. Wood

+ Sat R of Lit 29:29 S 14 '46 600w

Time 48:100 S 2 '46 460w

"Caricature much of Mr. Heggen's story undoubtedly is. Probably no officers could be so indolent and no captain so flagrantly incompetent as those of the Reluctant. But after due allowance for retrospective hyperbole, this book still contains some of the truest and funniest writing you are ever likely to see about the wartime Navy of the greatest sea power in history." Richard Match

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ag 25 '46 950w

HEISING, RAYMOND ALPHONSUS, ed. Quartz crystals for electrical circuits; their design and manufacture. 563p II $6.50 Van Nostrand

537.2 Quartz. Pyro- and piezoelectricity 46-5120

"The book originated as lectures prepared to explain the technique of quartz crystal design and manufacture to engineers and other technical personnel of the Western Electric Company. The lectures have been revised and expanded and one paper not in the original series has been added. The result is an extensive presentation of theoretical and practical data on the applications, design and manufacture of quartz crystal for the control of electronic circuits. A few of the topics treated are: applications of quartz crystals; imperfections and inspection of raw quartz; determination of crystal orientation; sawing, grinding and lapping of quartz; fabrication and mounting of crystal units; special cuts with low temperature co-efficients. Specific details of manufacturing processes together with illustrations of machines and apparatus used in manufacturing are given in several of the chapters." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Library J 71:346 Mr 1 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:28 Ap '46

"Producers and designers of crystal resonators for use in oscillators or filters will find the entire volume authoritatively informative. Users of crystals, especially transmitter and receiver design engineers, will find the chapter on oscillators a useful review of the literature. The book suffers from a scarcity of references."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:257 S '46 230w

HEITLER, WALTER. Elementary wave mechanics. 136p $2.25 (7s 6d) Oxford

530.1 Wave mechanics

"Designed to give a brief introduction to that part of quantum-mechanical theory concerned with atomic and molecular energy levels, and with the theory of chemical valency. It can be recommended particularly to those chemists and physicists who have been subjected to the rusting effects of war work, and who desire a convenient medium for reviewing things forgotten, as well as an introduction to the more complete discussions in this field. The treatment is very compact, and since but little mathematical sophistication is assumed on the part of the reader, the arguments on the whole are of a qualitative nature even though stated in terms of the formulas of wave mechanics. The last two chapters provide a clear discussion of that form of valency theory in which molecular binding is traced to the interactions of atomic energy states; the companion theory of Mulliken and Hund in terms of molecular orbitals is largely omitted." (J Phys Chem) Index.

Reviewed by E. L. Hill

J Phys Chem 50:386 J1 '46 200w

"Of course, the subject is a technical one, and even this elementary treatment still requires a background for understanding a good knowledge of classical physics and of calculus." James Stokley

Weekly Book Review p50 My 19 '46 140w

HEKTOEN, LUDVIG, comp. Bibliography of infantile paralysis. See National foundation for infantile paralysis

HELDMAN, JULIUS DAVID. Techniques of glass manipulation in scientific research. 132p il $3.60 Prentice-Hall

542.2315 Glass blowing and working. Scientific apparatus and instruments 46-3606
 "This book is designed for the technician, the chemist, the biologist, the physicist, and all others who at some time find it desirable to repair breaks in glass apparatus or to fabricate not-too-complicated pieces of glass equipment. . . It has been the author's observation that the greatest hindrance to the successful teaching of a technical subject is language block—the use of terms familiar to the teacher or writer but foreign to the student or reader. For this reason, a glossary of terms has been included, so that the proper technical terms used in the book may be at once referred to and understood. The fundamental operations are given extra emphasis, for two reasons: (1) They are the ones most often encountered, and (2) technicians who have really mastered them are ready to try more extended manipulations with less detailed description of them. The basic principles of metal-to-glass sealing are also heavily stressed, because any book that is designed for self-instruction must leave no fundamental hiatus, whereas an incomplete textbook can be filled out by supplemental lectures and demonstrations." (Pref) Index.

"Although intended as a self-instruction guide for researchers who must do all or part of their own glassworking, this little book should serve as an excellent text for use in an organized course, and even skilled professionals should find much information of interest and value." J. L. Sheldon

+ Chem & Eng N 24:1852 J1 10 '46 300w

"[This book] is clearly written, concise, and well illustrated and shows that the writer is well acquainted with the techniques which he describes. . . The book is heartily recommended to all amateurs and scientific glass-blowers." S. C. Lind

+ J Phys Chem 50:489 N '46 100w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:761 My 15 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:25 Ap '46

Reviewed by James Stokley

Weekly Book Review p21 Ag 25 '46 140w

HELDT, PETER MARTIN. Automotive chassis (without powerplant). 583p il $6 The author, Nyack 9, N.Y.

629.24 Automobiles—Designs and construction 45-10531

"Practical book for engineers and textbook in engineering courses. Chapters on chassis layout, power required for propulsion and various parts of the chassis described with their functions, materials and design. With few exceptions production processes not included. Rules for proportion of parts in most chapters. Parts considered are frames, springs, axles, wheels, tires, drives, steering gears, brakes, universal joints, differential gears and miscellaneous parts." Library J

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 J1 '46

Library J 71:183 F 1 '46 90w

"Excellent book. . . No bibliography is provided, although it would appear that the engineers for whom the book is designed would be interested in the related literature."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 31:3 Ja '46

HELM, MACKINLEY. Matter of love, and other baroque tales of the provinces; decorations by Federico Cantù. 251p $2.50 Harper

46-7373

Fourteen short tales about life, love and death in an ancient Mexican town. The episodes are told as they appeared to an American visitor.

Book Week p13 N 17 '46 220w

Kirkus 14:357 Ag 1 '46 90w

"Expertly done. In spite of undercurrent of violence, will appeal to readers looking for relief from clamor of much current fiction." J. C. Shipman

Library J 71:1330 O 1 '46 120w

"If one loves Mexico, it is hard to write about it badly. Those who surrender to its curiously unresolved contradictions, its sweetness and violence, its misery and charm, when they come to set down what they have absorbed, seldom fail to produce a worth-while book. Mackinley Helm is no exception. In these tales of a provincial city of the north, he has allowed the spirit of the land to guide his pen." H. R. Hays

+ N Y Times p16 N 10 '46 550w

"Mr. Helm chattily records amusing anecdotes and digs up some moderately racy scandals, but he never seems to get under the skin of his provincial Mexicans and what he relates has only the flavor of second-hand gossip."

New Yorker 22:133 O 19 '46 60w

"The author calls them 'baroque tales'; they could more accurately be termed 'rococo.' He has not aimed high, but with the exception of the historical and personal anecdotes already noted, has completely achieved his modest aims. One of the stories is moving, a half dozen or more are gay and entertaining, and all but the historical narrative are done with grace and skill." B. D. Wolfe

+ Weekly Book Review p22 O 27 '46 650w

HELTON, ROY ADDISON. Come back to earth; poems. 71p $2 Harper

811

46-2202

Poems on the simple beauties and joys of the earth.

Kirkus 13:557 D 15 '45 130w

"If quiet sincerity and unpretentious love of good sense and nature were in themselves enough to make a poet, Helton's work would be important. Unfortunately they are not. His poems have many inadequacies, central to the poetic process. For one thing, Helton has been too easily pleased with the immediate verbal offerings of his mind. He has failed to exercise that strict self-criticism that eliminates the commonplace or borrowed phrase. He seems unaware of the fact that because of the long history of the English language as a literary medium the modern writer must be equipped with an uncommon impatience if he is to produce a fresh and meaningful idiom." Stephen Stepanchev

+ Poetry 68:163 Je '46 850w

"Unfortunately one feels that Mr. Helton too often speaks with a rather glib and facile sentimentality; his tone is inspirational rather than inspired. There is too much a flavor of uplift and moralizing, of consoling truisms, of easy generalities. . . Because Mr. Helton in his earlier work has shown himself capable of much better poetry than is present in this collection, one cannot help but feel impatient with the lack of distinction, both in content and expression, of 'Come Back to Earth.'" S. H. Hay

Sat R of Lit 29:11 Mr 23 '46 410w

Wis Lib Bul 42:72 My '46

HEMKE, PAUL EMIL. Elementary applied aerodynamics. 231p $3.25; to colleges $2.60 Prentice-Hall

629.1323 Aeronautics

46-3117

"This book by the Head of the Department of aeronautical engineering at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute is intended for a semester course offered to students who have a knowledge of calculus, physics and mechanics. The subjects treated include physical properties of air, flow of an ideal fluid, flow around an airfoil, viscosity effects, compressibility effect, propellers, performance of a conventional airplane, and helicopters. There are numerous problems and selected footnote references to related literature" (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:761 My 15 '46 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:3 Ja '46

HENDERSON, ARCHIBALD, ed. Pioneering a people's theatre. 104p il $2 Univ. of N.C. press [9s Oxford]

792 Carolina playmakers, Chapel Hill, North Carolina 46-27022

"The story of the Carolina Playmakers and their significant experiment in regional drama is told from various viewpoints in [this book]. . . It was in 1913 that the late Frederick Henry Koch went to the University of North Carolina, after 13 years of pioneering at the University of North Dakota. The organization he founded the following year, the Carolina Playmakers, has been a major force both in the development of regional literature and in the drive toward an authentic and integrated American theater. Some 450 plays have been written and produced by its members, among whom Thomas Wolfe, Paul Green, and many others have attained national prominence." Book Week

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 F 24 '46 100w
Booklist 42:325 Je 15 '46

Reviewed by Kenneth MacGowan
Weekly Book Review p6 My 19 '46 500w

HENDERSON, DANIEL MACINTYRE. Yankee ships in China seas; adventures of pioneer Americans in the troubled Far East. 274p il $3 Hastings house

951.03 China sea. Ships. U.S.—Commerce—East (Far East) 46-1473

An account of the United States relations with China—maritime, commercial and diplomatic—from the first legitimate trading trip of the Empress of China in 1784 to the air clippers of the 1930's. Maps on end papers. Bibliography. Index.

"An enticing, well-written history. . . It is specially recommended to the pipe-smoking male, who likes to lounge by the fireplace—or radiator—and read of the South Seas where a man could have 300 wives and—ah, wilderness!" David Karno

+ Book Week p15 F 17 '46 450w

Bookmark 7:5 My '46

Christian Century 63:627 My 15 '46 70w

"Rarely has such a mass of information been compressed between the covers of a non-technical book as is to be found in this description of the China trade." F. L. O.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 23 '46 550w

+ Kirkus 14:55 F 1 '46 180w

"Recommended for small library purchase." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 71:180 F 1 '46 140w

U S Quarterly Bk 2:119 Je '46 170w

Wis Lib Bul 42:127 O '46

HENDERSON, DONALD LANDELS. Voice like velvet; a crime novel [Eng title: The announcer]. 246p $2 Random house [8s 6d Hurst]

46-1792

Ernest Bisham, who was one of the best-liked BBC broadcasters was the man with "voice like velvet." He was also head of a respectable little suburban household. But on the side he was a very clever crook—this last known only to himself. At last, of course, he met his match.

"This setup should have all the elements for a superb suspense yarn, but somehow it hasn't, quite. Endless personal history concerned with Bisham and his family somehow contrives to get between the reader and the longed-for exploits in thievery—and the ending you may or may not find wholly incredible. While Henderson writes with charm and distinction and there are many excellent scenes, I found myself feeling rueful indeed about the book as a whole." Elizabeth Bullock

+ Book Week p18 Ap 7 '46 230w

Booklist 42:283 My 1 '46

Kirkus 13:480 N 1 '45 130w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p34 Mr 31 '46 180w

"A dismal experiment, on the whole, deemed by some very lively inside stuff on the workings of Broadcasting House in London."

+ New Yorker 22:107 Mr 9 '46 120w

"Adroit enough and reasonably well filled with action—but quite some letdown after 'Mr Bowling Buys a Newspaper.'"

Sat R of Lit 29:32 Mr 9 '46 40w

"Oh, well you can file Ernest Bisham, for such is his name, in the Raffles group, a category which never amused us much as we don't care for thieves—some complex, probably." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p26 Mr 3 '46 170w

HENDERSON, GEORGE WYLIE. Jule. 234p $2.50 Creative age

46-6709

"Jule's mother was the subject of Mr. Henderson's earlier novel, 'Ollie Miss' [Book Review Digest, 1935]. She brings up her son in Alabama with the idea that he's 'got to be somebody.' Jule learned to figure sums, to hunt, to farm and to love Bertha Mae, who worked in the home of his white boss, Boykin Keye. One day Jule got in a fight with Keye and had to run away—to New York, where he found work—dishwasher, bus boy, then waiter—found friends and women who liked him, including a college girl through whom he meets a second white friend, who battles to get him a union card so he can become a printer. After celebrating his union membership, Jule learns that his mother is dead, returns to Alabama and plans to bring Bertha Mae back to New York." N Y Times

Reviewed by Paul Bixler

Book Week p3 O 27 '46 320w

Kirkus 14:503 O 1 '46 90w

"Mr. Henderson never goes into the thoughts, impulses, emotions—in short, the workings—of his characters, except to suggest them in their speeches. You can believe their actions are true and logical, but you can't care very much because there are no evident desires, ambitions, conflicts, suspicions or anything below the surface. You just don't warm up to people without some understanding and sympathy." Hubert Creekmore

N Y Times p22 O 13 '46 600w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 20 '46 130w

"Mr. Henderson has, I imagine, tried to tell his own story, and, once in a rare while, he does it well. But, over all, Mr. Henderson's story, characters, dialogue, and plot are distressingly naive and unfortunately one-dimensional. This novel cannot be compared for example, with Richard Wright's 'Native Son.'" Merle Miller

Sat R of Lit 29:56 O 12 '46 250w

"In the first third of the book the story of Jule as a small boy in rural Alabama is told convincingly and well. Mr. Henderson's deliberate repetitiousness of style is admirably suited to the simplicities of events and honest relationships between persons. . . Unfortunately these virtues disappear as the novel goes on. Scenes intended to be major are handled with indifference and haste. The laconic dialogue, now lacking overtones of vaster meanings or the undertug of the story, comes identically from the lips of sophisticates and unsophisticates." Fannie Cook

+ Weekly Book Review p10 O 20 '46 420w

HENDERSON, LE GRAND (LE GRAND, pseud). Augustus hits the road; il by the author. 136p $2 Bobbs

46-3357

This time Augustus and his family have a mix-up with gipsies, trailer camps, and a mystery involving a counterfeiter. For ages eight to ten.

Reviewed by E. T. Dobbins

Library J 71:920 Je 15 '46 70w

HENDERSON, LE GRAND—Continued

"This is not an outstanding story by any means, and the author's illustrations are a bit on the grotesque side." M. C. M.

Spring'd Republican p4d Je 9 '46 80w

"An Augustan story as good as the earlier numbers of this popular series." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p7 Je 16 '46 220w

HENDERSON, LE GRAND (LE GRAND, pseud). Cap'n Dow and the hole in the doughnut. [48p] il $1 Abingdon-Cokesbury 46-21125

Picture-story book about the origin of the hole in the doughnut. It is a story of "down Maine" and the adventures of the brave Cap'n Dow and his crew, and the logical solution of a problem in equilibrium.

Book Week p12 N 10 '46 60w

Booklist 43:59 O 15 '46

Kirkus 14:382 Ag 15 '46 90w

"Choice bit of Americana from the Maine coast which suggests many uses: a picture book for five to seven-year-olds, story book for third- and fourth-graders and overage slow readers and a novel short-short story for telling, even to adult groups." M. M. Clark

+ Library J 71:131 S 1 '46 100w

"Lively pictures and a tersely effective prose present a rollicking bit of American folklore which 5-to-7-year olds and their elders will enjoy." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p28 O 27 '46 140w

Reviewed by Dorothy Peterson

San Francisco Chronicle p5 N 10 '46 70w

Sat R of Lit 29:44 N 9 '46 30w

"As jolly a picture-story-book for six-or-so as I've seen this long time. The pictures have the slam-bang technique of the Augustus books; they feel like the open deck of a schooner. . . There is a characteristic Le Grand twist to the tale that makes it zip right along to a loud, gay finish. It will appeal to little boys and to people whose grandmothers let them eat, as their special perquisite, the round cushiony inside bits fresh from the smoking kettle." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 S 22 '46 270w

HENDRICK, BURTON JESSE. Lincoln's war cabinet. 482p il $5 Little

973.71 U.S.—Politics and government—Civil war. Lincoln, Abraham. Statesmen, American 46-7733

Introduces each member of Lincoln's cabinet in turn and shows the part each played in the important crises which arose during the Civil war, thus making a collective biography. Index.

Reviewed by T. H. Williams

Book Week p4 N 17 '46 400w

Booklist 43:115 D 15 '46

"Factual, clear, penetrating, and absorbing, this volume makes the Civil War as close and real to the reader as the events of World War II. It is not dull and bookish; it is alive and makes delightful reading." Paul Kinlery

+ Cath World 164:376 Ja '47 500w

"This is a magnificent book. It has color, drama, detail, and conflict. It is scholarly without being either dull or pedantic. The characterizations and descriptions are superb." R. A. Brown

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 D 23 '46 750w

"'Lincoln's War Cabinet' is so superior to most of the books on American history published in 1946 that it might well be sold over a special counter devoted only to works of permanent importance." Wayne Andrews

+ Commonwealth 45:282 D 27 '46 150w

Current Hist 12:61 Ja '47 50w

Kirkus 14:480 S 15 '46 120w

Library J 71:1543 N 1 '46 80w

"Mr. Hendrick has concentrated on the crises: the decision to relieve Fort Sumter, the Wilkes affair, the titanic controversy over McClellan, the Emancipation Proclamation, the war of the Blairs on Chase, and others. It is all familiar enough, yet told with freshness and insight and, above all, judiciousness. . . There is only one criticism of the book that can legitimately be made: it is far too short. Important chapters of Cabinet history are neglected, interesting minor figures ignored, large areas of foreign and domestic policy not only unsurveyed but unglimped. A companion volume on Lincoln and the politicians is called for." H. S. Com-mager

+ N Y Times p6 N 17 '46 1100w

"A distinguished book."

+ New Yorker 22:124 N 9 '46 80w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 N 17 '46 220w

"Mr. Hendrick paints an unforgettable portrait of Lincoln's war cabinet. . . The author writes with the perspective of the reflective historian weighing the knowns, hunching the unknowns, and shrewdly characterizing the actors' personalities and motives in the struggle for control. His scholarship is unobtrusive, his style deceptively leisurely, due perhaps to the detail with which he buttresses vital points, derives imputations of motive from facts that seem unrelated until put cheek by jowl, or assesses moral responsibilities." G. F. Milton

+ Sat R of Lit 29:16 N 23 '46 1200w

"In this detailed and searching study of Northern statecraft and Union political maneuvering, Mr. Hendrick has written a bigger and, if possible, a better book than his 'Statesmen of the Lost Cause.' . . Much has been written about Lincoln's symbolic largeness of soul in inviting his political rivals to come in with him when he opened the White House door, but Mr. Hendrick has built up for the first time the full drama of this—portraying with full biographical palette the characters of these men and the precise reasons for their selection and their acceptances and their traits and ambitions, which would make Mr. Lincoln's next four years so like the career of a circus horseman 'riding Roman.'" Lloyd Lewis

+ Weekly Book Review p3 N 10 '46 1700w

HENDRYX, JAMES BEARDSLEY. Skullduggery on Halfaday creek. 271p $2 Doubleday 46-696

Western story.

Booklist 42:283 My 1 '46

Kirkus 13:535 D 1 '45 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p20 F 17 '46 60w

HENRICH, MRS EDITH. Quiet center. 73p $2.50 Sloane

811

46-23080

A first book of poems, composed of sonnets, quatrains, and rural vignettes. The author is an American, born in New Jersey, and now living in California.

"In 'The Quiet Center' Edith Henrich's delicate, and strong, sensibility has resourceful expression. . . It is remarkable for a weather-tight technique: her well-mortared verses will hold together and up under the tear and wear of years." Leo Kennedy

+ Book Week p20 D 8 '46 100w

"There is a delicately thoughtful and metaphysical quality about her poems, most successfully represented in the three opening ones 'Morning', 'Noon', 'Evening', which are exceptionally fine. After these the quantity and quality are scattered, but she has talent, and all interested in new talent should note her."

+ Kirkus 14:576 N 1 '46 100w

"The breathtaking economy of expression and the memorable wit that Mrs. Henrich brings to her celebration of a long-dead race recalled in a museum, of Sappho, of man 'that epic animal,' come from not thinking too precisely on the event. She stands at a remove from her subjects, composing neither polemic nor elegy; it is perhaps only at such a 'quiet center' that poetry of so profound yet deceptive a simplicity can be conceived." Milton Crane

+ N Y Times p46 D 1 '46 220w

HENSON HERBERT HENSLEY, bp. Bishop-rick papers. 368p $4.50 (16s) Oxford 283 Church of England 47-15589

"The Right Rev. Dr. Hensley Henson, sometime Lord Bishop of Durham, has been for half a century one of the most conspicuous figures in the Church of England. . . . During his administration of the great see of Durham a usual vehicle for conveying his opinions to the clergy of his diocese was a journal called 'The Bishoprick.' . . . Now thirty-two of [the papers which he published therein] have been gathered into this book, which is in some measure supplementary to the Bishop's autobiography, 'Retrospect of an Unimportant Life.'" Weekly Book Review

"It seems ungrateful to find any fault with a book which brings the reader into touch with a thinker so indubitably sincere and so convincingly brilliant. But if it leaves his friends slightly dissatisfied, this is because, like the rest of his published writings, it tends to emphasize only one aspect of his rich personality. It reveals the eager combatant, but it renews a longing for a book by Dr. Henson in which for once he would cease to declaim from a platform, and chat and chuckle, as only he can, from a fireside armchair." A. C. Deane
+ Spec 176:666 Je 28 '46 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p340 J1 20 '46 950w

"Most of the papers are more or less controversial; a few are more serene and two of these exhibit the author in the role of literary critic, discussing Virgil and Sir Walter Scott. But though these show that the Bishop can enjoy well-earned scholarly repose, he is more at home in the arena where his precise, hard-hitting style has been for so many years a formidable weapon." S. C. Chew

+ Weekly Book Review p14 O 20 '46 700w

HERMAN, STEWART WINFIELD. Rebirth of the German church. 297p $2.50 Harper

274 3 Germany—Church history 46-6457

"Author's pastorate in American Church Berlin concluded December 7, 1941. Acting recently for World Council of Churches he spent many months traveling all over prostrate area. As a first essential he recognizes German Church's repentance for its incomplete victory over Nazism. Getting rid of ecclesiastical officers maintained in power by Nazi State, administering relief, and many other faith-challenging tasks courageously undertaken, are symptoms of Church's rebirth. We have yet to see whether it will live. Dr. Herman lifts his subjects out of confining straits of the 'German problem' onto higher plane of ecumenical interest." (Library J) Index.

"The story of 'the rebirth of the German church' is not simply yesterday's church history written today and important to churchmen everywhere on that account. It affords as well a most interesting and perhaps unconscious commentary upon the passing policies of nations and upon war and re-education. It may be questioned whether there has appeared anywhere a more revealing story of what happened in Germany last winter." G. W. Buckner

+ Christian Century 63:1181 O 2 '46 650w

"Mr. Herman is mainly engrossed in reporting the words and deeds of the persecuted, in revealing the full details of the Nazi program of breaking the hold of the church, and in describing the hardships suffered by churchmen in the last agonizing stages of German defeat. The rebirth motif is rather suggested than developed. More will be written about the valiant struggle for Protestant Germany, but this well-documented account makes valuable reference material." H. J. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 18 '47 600w

"The author knows his Germany well, but his judgment of religious conditions in post-war Germany seems to have been colored by prejudices that may reasonably be related to the 'Teutonic' flavor of his name. . . . This reviewer admits that never has a book been written with nobler intention or with finer purpose. . . . Much has been said by Dr. Herman, and much more that should have been said has been left unsaid. Martin Niemöller's introduction is painfully stuffy, deplorably pedantic, and quite unnecessarily 'theological.'" K. M. Chworowsky

+ Churchman 160:17 N 15 '46 340w

Reviewed by C. H. Moehlan
Crozer Q 24:69 Ja '47 1500w

"A 'Must' book for all interest in the state of religion in Europe, particularly for those concerned in the post-war problems of Europe and Germany in particular."

+ Kirkus 14:496 O 1 '46 240w

Reviewed by O. G. Lawson
Library J 71:1125 S 1 '46 140w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 9 '47 300w

Reviewed by Gordon Rupp
Spec 178:50 Ja 10 '47 1100w

"This book deserves all the high praise that will be heaped upon it. In reality, it is not a book in the usual sense. Rather, it is a collection of documents painstakingly gathered, accurately analyzed, and wisely interpreted to show what has happened to the German Church. It is as keen and careful a discussion of the subject as has yet appeared." J. R. Sizoo

+ Survey G 35:416 N '46 270w

"No American visitor has returned from vanquished Germany with a richer load of pertinent information than Stewart W. Herman, who now presents the essence of his first-hand observations to the public in an enlightened little volume. It makes more exciting reading and, in some respects, offers deeper insights than the recent books of Saul Padover and Julian Bach on 'America's Germany,' because Herman knows more about the cultural and religious background of the country." F. E. Hirsch

+ Weekly Book Review p25 O 13 '46 650w

HERRICK, ARNOLD, and ASKWITH, HERBERT, eds. This way to unity; for the promotion of good will and teamwork among racial, religious and national groups. 462p il $2 Oxford bk. co. inc. 222 4th av. N.Y. 3

325.73 U.S.—Race question. U.S.—Foreign population. Minorities 46-398

"An anthology for use as textbook or for supplementary reading. Discussion questions, reading lists, and projects are grouped together in one section. The selections are for the most part very readable stories, articles, speeches, and poetry, most of them by modern writers, civic leaders, and churchmen—Pearl Buck, Wendell Willkie, Louis Adamic, Eric Johnston, Archbishop Spellman." Booklist

Booklist 42:261 Ap 15 '46

"There are enough questions and projects to satisfy the most activist. Likewise there are enough 'big names' and 'great writers' to satisfy discriminating literary taste." W. W. Brickman

School & Society 64:70 J1 27 '46 180w

"In this excellent manual the authors have created for themselves a debt of gratitude owing from teachers at all instructional levels who are concerned with education for inter-group understanding. This Way to Unity is at the same time inspirational and practical." S. N. Barnett

+ Social Educ 10:192 Ap '46 450w

HERRICK, ARTHUR DONALD. New drugs; with foreword by Austin E. Smith. 303p $4 Revere

614.35 Drugs—Laws and legislation SG46-124

"Anyone who is interested in the many ramifications of the new drug legislation—the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetics Act of 1938—

HERRICK, A. D.—Continued

will find it described here in great detail. The data range from considerations of what determines the status of a 'new' drug, how application is made, the procedure adopted in passing on the safety of drugs, and the methods used in the application for a new drug, including a statement of its components and composition, to descriptions of labeling laws, investigations necessary to determine the safety of new drugs and the legal steps taken in refusals to permit applications, their suspension and appeals. Two long appendices are concerned with the report of the Secretary of Agriculture on deaths due to elixir Sulfanilamide and the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetics Act and regulations. Two briefer appendices list state and city new drug legislation and the official rules of the Council on Pharmacy and Chemistry of the American Medical Association." (Scientific Bk Club R) Index.

"It is extremely well written, clear and concise, and it is a book that should be available for consultation at all times by everyone concerned with new drugs. It is the only book of its kind published, and it should receive enthusiastic reception." C. S. Keefer

+ Am J Pub Health 36:1070 S '46 110w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:761 My 15 '46 40w

Scientific Bk Club R 17:4 F '46 210w

"The authenticity of the book is warranted not only by the proved acquaintance of the author with his subject, but furthermore by the fact that he had his manuscript read by various experts, and even 'upon behalf of the Food and Drug Administration,' the agency responsible for the law enforcement."

+ U S Quarterly Bk 2:128 Je '46 190w

HERRIMAN, GEORGE. Krazy Kat; with an introd. by E. E. Cummings. [191p] $3.75 Holt 741.5 Caricatures and cartoons 46-6998

Collection of the best episodes in the careers of Krazy Kat, Ignatz Mouse, Offissa Pupp, and other inhabitants of that never-never land: Coconino county. There the course of true love never ran smoothly, but Krazy Kat continued faithful. The book has an introduction by E. E. Cummings.

"The book reveals again Herriman's peculiar genius for mass entertainment with simple graphic figures. He was a fantasist of top order and did much to spread a love of the whimsical throughout the country through his far-reaching medium. It took no special culture to understand Krazy Kat and the brickheaving exasperations of tough little Ignatz. George had the common touch which needed no highbrow interpretation. He made people laugh. Made them think, too, without too much puzzlement at his parodies and the ironies which carried punch without being bitter." Walt Disney

+ Book Week p3 O 20 '46 750w

Reviewed by Jacob Bean

Commonweal 45:172 N 29 '46 260w

Kirkus 14:517 O 1 '46 80w

"Krazy Kat towers above the mediocrity of its genre and is recommended wholeheartedly." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 71:1323 O 1 '46 110w

Reviewed by Richard Watts

New Repub 115:487 O 14 '46 550w

"The collecting, editing and publishing in book form of cartoons that first appeared in the daily papers and magazines has had an immense and undeserved growth. Now here between covers is the one cartoon that, this reviewer feels, has been most deserving of rescue from yellowing newspaper files. Here, in a wonderful book, are the delightful doings of Coconino County. Here is George Herriman's Krazy Kat. . . As a daily newspaper feature, the citizens of Coconino County are no longer with us. With the passing of George Herriman, the comic supplements were bereft of a certain greatness—a greatness deriving from a mixture of Higgin's India ink, eggshell Bristol board and George Herriman . . . a mixture that was a brew of the gentle gods." Frank Tashlin

+ N Y Times p6 N 3 '46 750w

"A collection of the drawings of a first-rate American artist, which also manages to survive a pretentious introduction, this time by E. E. Cummings. Mr. Cummings grips his reader by the throat, bends him over backward, and in no certain terms tells him what the story of Krazy, Ignatz Mouse, and Offissa Pupp is all about. . . But the drawings are wonderful."

New Yorker 22:119 O 26 '46 80w

Reviewed by Paul Speegle

San Francisco Chronicle p2 D 1 '46 250w

"The first thing to be said is that they recapture instantly and completely the magic spell which Herriman cast on his daily readers. For those who never knew Krazy, it may seem strange to take up a book of strips, to follow them consecutively (although, thank God, they tell no continued, plotted story). They will, however, be amply rewarded, by meeting a character out of our latter-day mythology, to me the most endearing, amusing, and captivating of them all." Gilbert Seldes

+ Weekly Book Review p2 N 3 '46 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 42:163 D '46

HERSCH, VIRGINIA (DAVIS) (MRS LEE HERSCHE). Seven cities of gold. 243p $2.50 Duell

Vázquez de Coronado, Francisco—Fiction

46-6850

Novel based on the second of Coronado's expeditions in search of gold. The central figure, Carlos, joins Coronado and makes the trek from Mexico, north into what is now Texas, and finally into the present state of Kansas. The journey in search of "the seven cities of gold," ended in flat failure, as far as gold was concerned. But Carlos had discovered something which compensated for that.

"Colorful, but without the display of action and incident usually found in the genre, and conjecturally more limited."

Kirkus 14:260 Je 1 '46 140w

"Will be enjoyed for its history rather than its style." Katharine Shorey

Library J 71:1050 Ag '46 70w

"This excellent historical novel gives a dogged explorer his due. . . It makes a breath-taking panorama, no less thrilling because the royal hands which accepted Coronado's discoveries were already too palsied to grasp their true wealth." C. V. Terry

+ N Y Times p5 S 1 '46 450w

"Many of the historical details of country and natives tend to overload the narrative, and explanatory remarks slow the action. Readers to whom the Coronado expedition is news will find interest, however, in the factual record. The story is well colored, for Carlos, the chronicler, has the gift of language comparable to that of Castañeda, the accepted historian of the expedition." E. L. Sabin

Sat R of Lit 29:26 O 5 '46 700w

"A sprightly and entertaining romance, despite the artificial quality of the plot." Jennings Rice

+ Weekly Book Review p8 S 15 '46 450w

HERSEY, JOHN RICHARD. Hiroshima. 118p $1.75 Knopf

940.544 World war, 1939-1945—Japan. Atomic bomb 46-11953

The entire August 31st issue of the New Yorker was devoted to a story about the atomic bombing of Hiroshima, as it affected six people. They were a clerk in the East Asia tin works; two physicians; an impoverished widow with three children; a German missionary priest; and the pastor of a Japanese Methodist church. The report is here printed in book form.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 179:106 Ja '47 130w

Booklist 43:85 N 15 '46

"This is not a treatise. It is a factual account, in straightforward reportorial style, of what happened in Hiroshima on the morning of August 6, 1945, and in the sad days that followed. It is John Hersey at his best." R. S. Hutchison

+ Christian Century 63:1151 S 25 '46 750w
Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '46
(Review of New Yorker account)

"Hersey has risen to the heights of impartial recording that makes this a human document transcending propaganda."

+ Kirkus 14:471 S 15 '46 240w

Reviewed by Rudolph Hirsch
Library J 71:1539 N 1 '46 140w

Reviewed by Ruth Benedict
Nation 163:656 D 7 '46 1700w

"Hersey's piece is certainly one of the great classics of the war; if it is eligible for a Pulitzer Prize and doesn't get it, the judges should go and take a Rorschach." Bruce Bliven
+ New Repub 115:300 S 9 '46 800w (Review of New Yorker account)

"Now that 'Hiroshima' has been published in book form, it will go out to an ever widening circle of all—and that means all—of us who may well 'take time to consider its terrible implications.' Nothing that can be said about the book can equal what the book has to say. It speaks for itself, and in an unforgettable way, for humanity." Charles Poore
+ N Y Times p7 N 10 '46 2150w

"Hersey draws no explicit morals in 'Hiroshima'; he is concerned entirely with clear and objective reporting. It seems to me impossible for anyone to read 'Hiroshima' without drawing morals for himself. I therefore here conclude the review of 'Hiroshima' with the remark that everyone able to read should read it, and go on to speak of the morals that I feel should be drawn from this superb bit of reporting." Louis Ridenour
+ Sat R of Lit 29:16 N 2 '46 900w

"Mr. Hersey's style is flat, deliberately, no doubt, but it remains flat. There are one or two touches that must awe the most careless reader, such as the account of the soldiers whose eyes have melted away. But in general the effect is too quiet. Mr. Hersey has scrupulously left the facts to speak for themselves, and they have not spoken loudly enough. If the style accounts for part of the excessively subdued effect, the method of narration counts for more. Mr. Hersey has made up his picture by following the fortunes of six inhabitants of Hiroshima who survived. The inevitable result is that those who did not perish occupy all the foreground, and the mounds of dead are only seen vaguely in the background."

Times [London] Lit Sup p605 D 7 '46 750w

"This is superb reporting, and its excellence has been widely acknowledged." G. W. Johnson

+ Weekly Book Review p6 N 17 '46 300w
Wis Lib Bul 42 165 D '46

HERTZ, RICHARD. Man on a rock. 188p $3
Univ. of N.C. press
301.15 Civilization. Social psychology 46-3727

"An evaluation of man's present philosophical place in the universe. The book takes its title from the poem 'Salas y Gomez' by Chamisso, in which a young man is shipwrecked on a barren Pacific island and is faced with the possibility of denying his existence by suicide or madness, or of settling his place in the universe. When, through renunciation of his individuality, he arrives at a state of grace, of oneness with the spirit of the universe, he achieves the only salvation possible." Spring'd Republican

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Ag 25 '46 360w

Reviewed by Percy Winner
Commonweal 44:99 My 10 '46 600w

"After this war even more than after the last one, many thinkers are turning toward mysticism as an alternative not only to the existing world but to the revolutions or Utopias which are suggested to improve it. Richard Hertz has written a book which may be regarded as a good example of this tendency."

George Soule

+ New Repub 115:146 Ag 5 '46 1100w

"This book is a valuable critique of the bourgeois culture which has exalted sophistication. It is a desperate yet hopeful handbook for those who would understand the mystery of the German people (the author is a nephew of the famous physicist, Heinrich Hertz and a former member of the German Foreign Office). It is a searching appraisal of the spiritless Utopias of Veblen, Lenin and Keynes. And it closes with a symphony in praise of 'the people.'" G. R. Stephenson
+ N Y Times p8 Je 2 '46 480w

"The book is rich in allusion and quotation from Catholic and eclectic reading. The argument is put with force, and with the same force the utopias without spirit and the economic philosophies based on mere things are swept aside in favor of the hope that the common man can be impregnated with a faith. This faith is not necessarily Christian, but it is spiritual." H. L. Varley
+ Springfield Republican p4d My 12 '46 480w

"It is against the framework of Chamisso's fable that Richard Hertz, nephew of the great physicist, and now an American citizen and professor at Dubuque, hurls his questions at our times with brilliance, with poetry, and not infrequently with a sort of Carlylean violence." Frances Witherspoon

+ Weekly Book Review p20 Ap 14 '46 700w

HERZBERG, MAX JOHN, and MONES, LEON, comps. Humor of America. 417p $1.60 Appleton-Century

817.08 Humor 45-9289

This anthology of American humor in prose, verse and cartoon, is intended and designed for use as a textbook for high school students. A short introductory section discusses Why we laugh. The forms that humor takes, Humor in pictures, and Women as humorists. A final section contains "exercises." Name index.

Booklist 42:296 My 15 '46

"Teachers of American literature will find many uses for Humor of America in their attempts to develop among pupils appreciation of the recreational values of reading and to improve their pupils' understanding of the cultural values of different forms of literary production." E. S. Lide

+ School R 54:57 Ja '46 600w

HESSE, ERICH. Narcotics and drug addiction [tr. by Frank Gaynor]. 219p $3.75 Philosophical lib.

613.8 Narcotics. Stimulants. Drug habit

SG46-255

Translation from the work of a German professor of pharmacology and biology. "No citations later than 1937 are given and nearly all of the references are to literature in German. British publications receive scant mention and American almost none. . . The text is chiefly concerned with the history and production and the pharmacological and therapeutic effects of narcotic drugs and stimulants. Much emphasis is placed on the demoralizing and crime-inducing effects of narcotics on the individual, and the evils of intemperance, whether in the use of the true narcotics or of the alcoholic group, are conspicuously stressed. Even tobacco is scored in a minor key. Some tests for the identification of the principal drugs are given but no quantitative methods." (Chem & Eng N) Bibliography. Index.

"The book is of greater interest to the physician and social worker than to the chemist and law enforcement individuals. The style is technical and uninteresting. Although the author and translator have failed to produce a popular book, teachers, clergymen, jurists, and others interested in public welfare could study it with profit." L. E. Warren

HESSE, ERICH—Continued

Chem & Eng N 24:2284 Ag 25 '46 300w
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 14 '46
50w

HEUVELMANS, MARTIN. Cargo deadweight distribution. 86p il $1.50 Cornell maritime

656 Stowage 46-12081

"This book is an introduction to the fundamentals of planning cargo loading in the light of weight distribution requirements. The purpose has been to deal with matters of stowage, trim and stability from the practical operational viewpoint." (Intro) Index.

Library J 71:346 Mr 1 '46 20w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:13 Ja '46

HEWLETT, JOHN HENRY. Cross on the moon. (Whittlesey house publication) 316p $2.75 McGraw

46-6302

Story of life in a rural community in Georgia, which describes the narrow, bigoted religious views of the people and the results of their ignorance and intolerance.

"Some of this book is very funny, some of it is pitiable and most of it is cruel. Only the three streams don't fuse. They are often good short stories in themselves, but they remain separate incidents. . . I'd like to suggest to the author that he do another novel entirely in the mood of the sardonic humor that is the best part of this one. It might be a more successful weapon than horror." Helen Woodward
Book Week p11 S 8 '46 340w

Kirkus 14:302 Jl 1 '46 170w

"Although dealing with a familiar theme John Hewlett approaches it with a freshness and vitality which make absorbing and provocative reading. Characterization is excellent. There is humor, much pathos, culminating in an unforgettable climax which lays bare the hypocrisy of a civilization." E. H. Kennedy
+ Library J 71:1127 S 1 '46 100w

"Cross on the Moon" is told in a slapdash, slapstick, anecdotal style, and read as farce it is often amusing. . . If [it] had stuck to its satire and burlesque, it might have done better. Mixed in with the cartooning is an element of earnest sentiment regarding the struggles of the boy Johnny Beane to live a normal adolescence in the madhouse of Leafy Grove. The two elements do not fuse." N. K. Burger
— + N Y Times p18 S 15 '46 430w

"A book born of bitterness and a desire to expose an unwholesome and potentially explosive situation to the ridicule and enlightenment that can destroy it. The reader must be prepared to be both angered and shocked. It is a book that at first glance appears to embody a great deal of lusty, primitive humor to soften its blows, but upon reflection it will be found to be the humor of despair, engendered by experiences epitomizing tragedy and social miasma." W. M. Kunster
Weekly Book Review p14 S 8 '46 750w

HEXNER, ERVIN, and WALTERS, ADELAIDE. International cartels. 555p $6 Univ. of N. C. press

338.885 Trusts, Industrial 46-1953

"Should international cartels be prohibited or socialized or subjected to controls through governmental agreements? Professor Hexner, who combines immense academic knowledge of the subject with practical experience of cartel operations, does not attempt to answer this question. Instead, believing that information should precede policy, he provides a broad survey of private international marketing arrangements as they developed in the inter-war period. More than a hundred case studies, together with the complete texts of a number of cartel agreements, make this an invaluable source-book." Nation

"Hexner has performed an important service by demanding that views as to cartels be based, not on slogans and prejudices, but on solid factual foundations. He rightly stresses the potential uses of the cartel device of cooperation among private entrepreneurs as an alternative to complete government domination of foreign trade. But many readers will take a somewhat dimmer view than does the author as to the past record of cartels and the future possibilities of preventing their use for restriction of production, price-fixing, and improper political purposes." C. H. Pritchett

+ — Am Pol Sci R 40:374 Ap '46 750w

"This book carries a title that has been particularly common in the literature of international economics during the past two decades. Dr. Hexner's contribution is, however, more than just another study in the field of international business relationships. Drawing on his earlier industrial experience in Czechoslovakia and on the fruits of considerable research since coming to the United States, the author has given us a comprehensive compendium of pertinent case material supported by careful analysis." A. E. Taylor

+ Ann Am Acad 245:198 My '46 550w

"Dr. Hexner has a very real respect for words, and writes with extraordinary precision and firmness." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 Mr 3 '46 140w

"Once in every hundred-odd factual books one finds a brilliant, scientific work from the pen of a true scholar. Such a book is the work of Dr. Hexner on 'International Cartels'. It is so carefully and accurately written that one must take pains to read it to follow the thought and understand what is written. It cannot be scanned with any satisfaction." C. O. Brown

+ Chem & Eng N 24:2108 Ag 10 '46 400w

"The book presents a clean-cut description of the cartel concept, the structure and policies of international cartels as well as their political repercussions. It should provide interesting reading to the executive and technical personnel of our chemical and related industries. It gives data on metals, chemicals, miscellaneous raw materials and manufactured goods and is recommended to both the layman and the student of chemical economics." R. S. Aries

+ Chem & Met Eng 53:300 My '46 300w

Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 20 '46 420w

Reviewed by Samuel Klaus

Columbia Law R 46:682 Jl '46 750w

"The extensive appendices give complete texts of some important cartel documents, which should be of value to legislators and students. The language is notably lucid and direct."

+ Current Hist 10:444 My '46 100w

Foreign Affairs 24:552 Ap '46 40w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:325 Je 1 '46 80w

Nation 162:325 Mr 16 '46 140w

Reviewed by B. B. Seligman

New Repub 114:252 F 25 '46 950w

Reviewed by A. D. Gayer

N Y Times p26 Je 30 '46 630w

"Professor Hexner deserves much praise for attempting this much-needed survey of the whole field of international cartel growth, policy and controversy. The table of contents, supplemented by over two hundred pages of case studies and nearly a hundred and fifty pages of valuable documentary material, seems worthy of the task; and his belief, repeated almost to the point of tedium, that judgment of policies must await more careful consideration of the facts is an earnest and necessary invitation for the writing of a host of detailed monographic studies on individual cartels or lines of cartel policies. . . Much of the argument is fuzzy, some of the arrangement lacks order, and both author and printer seem to have been careless on detail. The book appears to be a hesitating case for cartels, protected to some degree at all points of reference by the citing of at least one defendant, however objective or interested (they seem equally valid), of any accusation or defense offered. This is not objective, but merely pusillanimous. There are numerous technical errors." R. A. Brady

 — + Pol Sci Q 61:264 Je '46 1000w
 U S Quarterly Bkl 2:108 Je '46 270w

HEYER, GEORGETTE (MRS G. R. ROUGIER). Friday's child. 311p $2.75 Putnam [10s 6d Heinemann]

46-235

When Lord Sheringham stormed out of his mother's presence, after his marriage offer had been refused by a local beauty, he threatened to marry the first woman he met. Luckily she happened to be Miss Hero Wantage, a charming girl who had always loved Sherry, but who had never got to first base with his lordship. The adventures of Sherry, and his Kitten, as he renamed Hero, and three of his boon companions in fashionable Regency London are gay and amusing.

Reviewed by Arthur Meeker
 Book Week p12 F 17 '46 360w

Booklist 42:213 Mr 1 '46

Bookmark 7:15 My '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '46

Kirkus 13:533 D 1 '45 170w

"The situation, as one character remarks, is the sort generally encountered in 'trashy novels.' Happily, Georgette Heyer's story is rescued from that category by several saving graces. Miss Heyer is an old hand at creating authentic Regency settings and flavoring them with sardonic, elegantly turned eighteenth-century prose." Richard Match

+ N Y Times p20 F 17 '46 400w

"If you have followed the graceless, lumbering pace of current historical novels, this nimble, light-hearted chronicle of high London society in the time of the Regency will seem almost too good to be true. . . It is the sort of cheerful company in which you might find Bertie Wooster or some of Mrs. Thirkell's decorous county people on an unexpected bender."

+ New Yorker 22:96 F 16 '46 100w

"It is a relief to find a gay, light-hearted historical novel for a change, that is amusing to read, instead of the usual solemn, heavy-handed approach." R. C. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 29:39 F 23 '46 600w

"Some of Georgette Heyer's novels have been adroit melodrama and some have been romantic embellishments of history, but this is just an overstuffed period piece, in which the author's puppets strike poses but never strike fire." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p24 F 24 '46 180w

HIBBEN, FRANK CUMMINGS. Lost Americans; II. by John De Grasse. 196p $2.50 Crowell

571 America—Antiquities. Man, Prehistoric 46-4064

"Fascinating story of scientific discoveries of evidence of ancient man in America. These primitive hunters left characteristic flint spearheads or points from Bering Strait to South America which served as clues to hunting grounds and camp sites. Trail of Folsom points crossed that of Yuma points, finally leading to discovery of Sandia cave where Folsom man was placed in geologic time in the Ice Age by rock strata superimposed on that of earlier period containing flint points of more primitive workmanship belonging to a more ancient hunter, Sandia man." (Library J) No index.

"Mr. Hibben is eminently fitted to write this type of book because he visualizes the man and the group, who hunted the game, beyond the spear point, the ashes, and the charred animal bones. He clothes the archaeological sites with the local color of human life in the midst of abundant rains, lush vegetation, and the great Pleistocene beasts. A tinge of romance permits the reader to acquaint himself with the essential facts of the earliest American history in an entertaining manner." L. A. Wilford

+ Am Hist R 52:191 O '46 240w

Am Soc R 11:498 Ag '46 120w

Booklist 42:325 Je 15 '46

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 11 '47 110w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '46

"Specialized, but readable, and important in the field."

+ Kirkus 14:145 Mr 15 '46 130w

"Rare example of scientific material presented in excellent popular narrative. Recommended for readers enthusiastic about trail of primitive man." D. F. Lucas

+ Library J 71:755 My 15 '46 130w

"This is an unfinished story, and in a sense will remain forever unfinished, but this accounting for all the clues gathered to date and a fine fitting of them into a self-consistent picture, is more exciting than the dénouement of any merely fictional detective story. The author writes with clarity, with recognition of large implications, and a gift for popularization. The publishers, seemingly not realizing how well-written and significant a work they were publishing, have gotten it out to look like an adventure story for older boys, and there are neither photographs nor an index. The book can be read with profit and excitement by older boys, but no less so by any layman who wants a birdseye view of the methods and findings of archaeology as they apply to the story of the earliest human life in the Americas." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Times p12 O 13 '46 600w

"It was time somebody wrote this book. Discoveries of the last twenty years have built up an entirely new picture of the first human migrations to this continent. . . Yet only the few who keep up with archeological journals, or who have happened upon a lecture by a specialist, have had a chance to hear the story at all fully. It is a story that should prove exciting to many more than that. For two reasons Dr. Frank C. Hibben is one of the best qualified to tell the world. In the first place, he is an archeologist, specializing in North America, and has himself taken part in some of the exploration and discovery he tells about. In the second place, he spins a yarn that will interest even those who cannot tell one chipped flint from another." E. G. Burrows

+ Sat R of Lit 29:32 N 2 '46 1100w

"An enthusiastic, clear, and folksy tale."

K. F. Mather & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 17:1 My '46 1400w

Social Studies 38:48 Ja '47 20w

Spring'd Republican p4d Je 9 '46 500w

Reviewed by Ruth Benedict

Weekly Book Review p2 Je 23 '46 650w

HIBBEN, MRS SHEILA. American regional cookery. 354p $2.50 Little

641.5 Cookery 46-6738

Following in the main the usual cook book order and format, this volume contains recipes from many parts of the United States for soups, breads, meats, vegetables and desserts—spoon bread from Alabama, Johnny cake from Vermont and Rhode Island, turkey hash from South Carolina, lamb hash from Idaho, rice pudding from Philadelphia, and cocoanut pudding from Florida. Indexes.

Booklist 43:49 O 15 '46

"I found lots of 'specialties' fleetingly experienced in travelling and visiting—and feel that, while it is not a complete cookbook, it will add materially—and imaginatively—to the good cook's repertoire."

Kirkus 14:270 Je 1 '46 190w

Reviewed by Lois Palmer

N Y Times p33 S 8 '46 300w

New Yorker 22:102 S 28 '46 100w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p12 S 9 '46 650w

Wis Lib Bul 42:147 N '46

HICKEY, JOHN HOSFORD, and BEACH, PRISCILLA ALDEN. Know your cat. 251p
 $2.50 Harper

636 8 Cats

Agr46-6

Advice on the care of cats, and on the choice and training of a kitten, and, on different breeds of cats shown in England and the United States. Selected bibliography; Murthy's cottage (a brief biographical dictionary of cats in literature) and index.

Booklist 42:294 My 15 '46

Kirkus 14:86 F 15 '46 110w

"Manners and habits are carefully considered, along with accomplishments [and] general advice on food. The chapter on mother cats would convince any one that these authors understand their subject."

+ Weekly Book Review p24 My 26 '46 150w

Wis Lib Bul 42:112 Jl '46

HICKS, ALBERT C. Blood in the streets; the life and rule of Trujillo; introd. by Quentin Reynolds. 230p $2.75 Creative age

B or 92 Trujillo Molina, Rafael Leónidas 46-25221

An account of the life of the dictator-president of Santo Domingo, written by an American newspaperman, who has worked on The World-Journal of San Juan.

Booklist 42:364 Jl 15 '46

"Since it is admittedly propaganda, it must be judged as propaganda, not as biography. So judging, it would seem that Mr. Hick's book suffers from two defects. First of all, in the heat of his own righteous indignation, he overshoots his target. . . A second fault of the book is lack of documentation. . . Incidentally, the book is a good short-course in Latin-American politics." L. J. Trese

+ Commonwealth 44:244 Je 21 '46 370w

Current Hist 10:130 Ag '46 80w

Foreign Affairs 25:173 O '46 40w

Kirkus 14:272 Je 1 '46 170w

"Every library that has the life of Trujillo, presented to it by the Dominican Republic, will want to purchase this life of the ruler of Santo Domingo. The gift biography recommends that Rafael Trujillo receive the Nobel Prize. This account of the dictator-tyrant, written by a newspaper man, presents quite a different recommendation. . . Not a pretty story, but one that should be read by all who desire a free world." M. P. McKay

Library J 71:755 My 15 '46 130w

Reviewed by R. P. Alexander
 Nation 163:18 Jl 6 '46 1000w

"Mr. Hicks, Chicago newspaperman, has written a quick-paced account of the more outrageous aspects of Trujillo's life. As a book this is a curious achievement, half melodramatic 'quickie,' half the testimony of an indignant newspaperman who saw tyranny in action not far away from his own front door and wants something done about it. The charges made are so serious, the implications of cheap and violent dictatorship in his hemisphere are so potentially dangerous, that one wishes the volume had more substance and authority to back up its loud sounding of the alarm." Mildred Adams

+ N Y Times p28 Je 30 '46 410w

"Mr. Hicks has gathered his material with great care, but he has presented it in a confused manner. It seems plain, however, that a great deal of dirty business has been going on in the Dominican Republic."

+ New Yorker 22:94 Je 1 '46 120w

"To all those who wish information to arm themselves against the inroads of fascism in the Americas, 'Blood in the Streets' is essential reading." Wenzell Brown

+ Sat R of Lit 29:16 Je 1 '46 900w

"Mr. Hicks has done a good job in digging up the facts, often difficult to ascertain, in documenting them wherever documentation is possible, and everywhere giving names, places, dates, details, which should make it easy for the Dominican dictator and his representatives to refute, if they have the means of refutation. . . In its pages I noted only two shortcomings: the omission of any attempt to put Trujillo into perspective in the long and variegated history of Latin-American dictatorships and the lack of a serious discussion of the dilemma confronting the United States as a result of its original intervention and its present pledge of non-intervention. The book deserves a wide reading so that Americans may understand this neighbor." B. D. Wolfe

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Je 2 '46 750w

HICKS, CLIFTON. The little lion. 256p $2.50 Island workshop

46-4953

Historical novel of upper New York state and Iowa, in the 1850's to 70's. It is the story of William and Sarah Taylor and their children, but especially of Sam Taylor, who was not as large as other men, but who conquered his handicap.

"A stirring story."

+ Christian Century 63:991 Ag 14 '46 10w

"Amateurish, dull story of frontier life."

+ Kirkus 14:107 Mr 1 '46 80w

"Historical novel which is well off the beaten track. Characters human and realistic; local color and historical detail convincing and unobtrusive; story free from padding. . . Occasional skimpiness of treatment and rather abrupt conclusion suggest that a sequel might be interesting and not unwelcome." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 71:281 F 15 '46 70w

"Sam—the sensitive, rebellious child is rather well done. But Sam the success at the State university, with his courtly manners and fulsome oratory ('Begone, thou foul fiend'), comes perilously close to Tom Thumb caricature."

Richard Match

N Y Times p12 Je 30 '46 360w

HICKS, GRANVILLE. Small town. 276p $3 Macmillan

323.35 City and town life 46-8206

Granville Hicks, ex-Communist, writer, editor—an intellectual—here describes and analyses American small-town life as he has lived it and observed it in a town he calls Roxborough, New York.

Reviewed by J. T. Flanagan

Book Week p2 D 8 '46 500w

Booklist 43:150 Ja 15 '47

Christian Science Monitor p20 D 11 '46 550w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 115:766 D 9 '46 1850w

"This is a perceptive and moving book, a book not so much about a small town in upper New York State, as about what a sensitive and responsible intellectual was able to learn in that small town through several years' participation as a citizen." Margaret Mead

+ N Y Times p4 D 15 '46 850w

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ja 5 '47 250w

Reviewed by R. S. Lynd

Sat R of Lit 30:14 Ja 18 '47 1050w

Time 48:98 D 23 '46 250w

Reviewed by Ernestine Evans

Weekly Book Review p2 D 8 '46 1100w

HICKS, JOHN RICHARD, and HART, ALBERT GAILORD. Social framework of the American economy; an introduction to economics. 261p $2.50 Oxford

330.1 Economics 46-9885

"This is an American edition, based on J. R. Hicks' The Social Framework: an Introduction to Economics, first published in 1942." (Note) "In commissioning the preparation of this American version, Professor Hicks described the job as one of translation. In accordance with his very broad construction, [Mr Hart has] taken translation to include not merely Americanizing spelling, idiom, and sentence structure, and replacing some illustrations, but also bringing the book more or less into the same relation to the American literature and official statistics which the original edition has to corresponding British materials. A particular effort has been made to create a bridge between the discussion of the economic logic of national income and the concrete materials of the Department of Commerce." (Pref to American edition; signed A. G. H.) Index.

Reviewed by Bruce Knight
Ann Am Acad 244:217 Mr '46 550w

"The book is readable, informative and contains a particularly good exposition of the components of national income and national output, illustrated by United States statistics. But the dilemma that the authors sought to avoid is still existent. Now that he knows the components of the national income, the student must still have knowledge of a theory of value to digest them. If, as the authors recognize, this calls for another book, then what has been gained or saved? Obviously the trick is to give theory and fact side by side." E. A. Beder
+ — Canadian Forum 25:271 F '46 210w

Reviewed by A. L. Meyers
J Pol Econ 54:275 Je '46 460w

HIGGINBOTHAM, ROBERT EMMETT. Wine for my brothers. 243p $2.50 Rinehart 46-4127

A novel with some implications of the allegorical. It is the story of the voyage of an oil tanker from Texas to New York in January, 1942, the first trip of its crew under the black-out. The captain is a sadistic man who sets up a régime of terror on his own ship; his opposite is an able seaman called Blackie, who represents the best in the crew, and fights to better their condition.

Booklist 42:348 Jl 1 '46
Canadian Forum 26:190 N '46 70w

"After rather unpromising start and some decidedly incredible dialogue, story pulls itself together and makes its points excellently, besides developing atmosphere of dread, rage and tension. Recommended for men readers and boys of college age." E. F. Walbridge
+ — Library J 71:919 Je 15 '46 90w

"'Wine for My Brothers' is fluent and convincing. The author has been to sea. He knows what he is talking about. And if his Blackie occasionally sounds like a combination of George Santayana and the president of the National Maritime Union, it is still a good book." George Horne
+ — N Y Times p15 Jl 7 '46 400w

"The book as a whole is not exciting, and the two major characters never come to life. Mr. Higginbotham quite clearly sees in Blackie Scott's fight against Bohn man's everlasting battle for justice. If he had not based his book on allegory, Mr. Higginbotham might have written a more satisfying sea story. It is only when the author describes the life of the men of the forecastle (which he knows so well himself) that he shows both an understanding of life at sea and the ability to write about it in a manner that holds the reader's undivided interest." R. L. Allen
+ — Sat R of Lit 29:15 Jl 6 '46 400w

"A vivid first novel." Norman Ogan
+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 30 '46 180w

"It probably never really happened, but Mr. Higginbotham, who has shipped on freighters himself, writes so convincingly of ships and seafarers that one is almost ready to accept his story at face value. . . . Although Mr. Higginbotham obviously intended his novel to be more than just a story of a ship's voyage, much of its attractiveness lies in its faithful depiction of the seamen themselves." Herbert Kupferberg

Weekly Book Review p12 Je 30 '46 600w

HIGHET, HELEN (MACINNES). See MacInnes, H.

HIGHTOWER, JOHN. Pheasant hunting. 227p il $4; de luxe ed $15 Knopf 799.24861 Pheasants Agr46-282

"Reminiscences of shooting, written in a happy, unpretentious prose of the sort that wild-fowlers seem to admire. The author, a gunner of thirty years' experience on Eastern and Middle Western uplands, also includes tips on such matters as the proper length of gun barrels, how to stalk a field, and the best breeds of retrievers. Color plates and line drawings by Lynn Bogue Hunt." New Yorker

Booklist 43:97 D 1 '46
Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '46

"The novice will find a great deal to help him in 'Pheasant Hunting,' the experienced hunter will find his interest is adequately held, and the biased grouse-hunter will, upon reading this book, decide to spare a few days for pheasant this fall." R. R. Camp
+ N Y Times p20 S 29 '46 450w

New Yorker 22:115 O 12 '46 80w
San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 10 '46 210w

Wis Lib Bul 42:147 N '46

HILL, MABEL BETSY. Old house at Duck Light Cove; pictures by [the author]. 125p $1.75 Lippincott 46-5574

The girls and boys of Apple Market street are interested in restoring an old colonial house which had been deserted and the whole village turns in and helps. There is a slight mystery.

Kirkus 14:346 Ag 1 '46 80w

"Girls of eleven will enjoy this story of minutely described day-by-day doings of boys and girls their own age, and the discovery of money and jewelry under a fireplace brick and a secret room make it a 'mystery' for the younger group of readers. Recommended." K. H. McAlarney

+ Library J 71:1209 S 15 '46 90w

"It is an interesting idea and the action and continuity are smooth. The characters are less convincing. Judy Jo herself is so very, very good that she becomes a bit tiresome." M. K.

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:50 N 9 '46 100w

"Sincere and simple story of a New England village that little girls particularly will like."
+ Wis Lib Bul 42:135 O '46

HILL, ROBERT HENRY, comp. Jarrold's dictionary of difficult words. 344p $2.50 Howell, Soskin [2d ed 5s Jarrolds]

423 English language—Dictionaries 46-3009

Some fifteen thousand difficult words defined in one volume. Foreign words and phrases are included in the body of the book; only six phonetic symbols are used in addition to the alphabet.

Book Week p8 Ap 7 '46 50w

"Of the many classes of persons to whom this dictionary is said to be 'invaluable,' only the 'Cross Word puzzle enthusiasts' are likely to think their money well spent."

Christian Science Monitor p16 Ap 5 '46 550w

Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 23 '46 240w

HILL, ROSCOE R., ed. National archives of Latin America; ed. for the Joint committee on Latin American studies of the National research council, the American council of learned societies, and the Social science research council. 169p $1.50 Harvard univ. press
980 Archives—Latin America A46-1570

"There is presented here in fewer than one hundred and fifty pages, exclusive of index and introduction, the most recent information on twenty archives to the South. Under each heading are brief but thoroughly up-to-date histories of each archive, structural details about the building, regulations, duties of employees, classification of materials, lists of directors and publications. If previous accounts about each national archive have been published, reference is made to them. At least three Latin-American archives were one hundred years old when our National Archives was opened; of these—Argentina, Bolivia, Mexico—very full accounts are given, but no country is neglected." U S Quarterly Bkl

HILL, R. R.—Continued

Reviewed by W. S. Robertson
Am Hist R 51:781 J1 '46 320w
U S Quarterly Bkl 2:160 Je '46 190w

HILLYER, ELINOR. Mademoiselle's home planning scrapbook; il. by Frederick Chance. 61p $3.75 Macmillan

747 House decoration 46-1269

A series of large decorated envelopes into which clippings about house plans, decoration of various rooms, gardens, closets, etc. may be kept. There are also "10 popular small-home styles with a charting of their characteristics, advantages, drawbacks, proper climate and terrain. There are check lists to fill out which will tell you what to seek and what to shun in buying, building, renting. There is a full description of how to draw a house plan and get your ideas down on paper. There's a fine chapter on style in furnishing, another on the use of color, separate sections on lighting, fireplaces, bedrooms, livingrooms, etc. Last are scaled cutouts of standard furniture, and graph-ruled blank paper on which to place it, so that you can do layouts for your new home." (Book Week)

"The book abounds in charming 'spot' illustrations, as well as diagrams and picturings of actual procedure."

+ Book Week p8 F 3 '46 230w

"Miss Hillyer's scrapbook is a magnificent aid to the magpie habits of those who plan to build, decorate or garden. . . It's the best idea we've seen in a long time and is especially recommended to brides who will probably live long enough to find all the materials for decoration and furnishing once more easily available." Richardson Wright

+ Weekly Book Review p15 Ag 25 '46 150w

HINCKLEY, HELEN (MRS IVAN JONES). Mountains are mine. 394p $2.75 Vanguard

46-7703

"This is the story of a Mormon girl named Milly. It begins at her eleventh year when she is about to enter Salt Lake City with a wagon-train—probably around 1850—and ends when she is somewhere in her twenties and Brigham Young frees her from the horrid bonds of a polygamous marriage by pronouncing simply: 'You are as free as the water that flows.'" Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by J. T. Flanagan
Book Week p24 D 1 '46 360w

"The emotional and practical problems of polygamy treated with a sincere sympathy, give substance to this regional novel." Kirkus 14:355 Ag 1 '46 180w

"The plot maintains interest, although the end is snarled in confused motivation, failing to uphold an otherwise excellent tale of early American life and the Mormon religion. Recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 71:1206 S 15 '46 100w

"The Mountains Are Mine' is a novel of Mormons, not of Mormonism, and the distinction is important. It is the story of the humble Latter Day Saints who lived their religion, and in my opinion it is the best book of its sort which has yet appeared." Hoffman Birney

+ N Y Times p7 O 20 '46 500w

"Miss Hinckley's purpose seems to have been to bring one woman through a furnace of experience toward wisdom, pointing out by the way the triumph of faith. Actually her heroine learns nothing." Virginia Sorensen

Weekly Book Review p14 O 6 '46 350w

HIND, ROBERT RENTON. Spirits unbroken; the story of three years in a civilian internment camp, under the Japanese, at Bagulo and at old Bilibid prison in the Philippines from Dec, 1941-Feb, 1945. 291p maps $3.50 John Howell, 434 Post st, San Francisco 2
940.547252 World war, 1939-1945—Prisoners and prisons. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 46-7697

"[This] is a record of civilian camp internment experience that rates at once as a personal narration and a historic study. It is the story of how a group of nonmilitary people stood it in the Philippines as prisoners of the Japanese, from Pearl Harbor to the MacArthur liberation." Christian Science Monitor

Christian Science Monitor p15 D 14 '46 300w

"The author is not a stylist but he writes with humor and a painstaking desire to be fair and truthful. This is by far the best account yet printed of what life really was in a civilian internment camp in the Philippines, and is free from the exaggeration that is evident in so many stories in the press and the magazines." W. F. Boericke

+ Weekly Book Review p16 S 8 '46 600w

HINES, DOROTHY PALMER (MRS E. S. QUINTANO). No wind of healing. 250p $2.50 Doubleday

46-3946

The scene of this story is a sanatorium located in a village in the Adirondacks. The chief character is a young married woman, Christina Ward, who has spent several years here and is contemplating the time when, cured at last, she must return to her husband and a different kind of life.

Booklist 42:348 J1 '46

"A first novel which is, in its theme, holding—in its handling, moving."

+ Kirkus 14:154 Ap 1 '46 170w

"Since winning a short-story contest when she herself was a patient at Saranac Lake, Mrs. Hines has had many stories published. This is her first novel, and it seems to me an auspicious beginning." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p12 My 12 '46 230w

"Miss Hines has set herself the assignment of portraying emotional problems which can beset any of us, sick or healthy. This approach should have made for a very rewarding book. That it has not done so is due to the fact that Miss Hines has been unfortunate in her choice of main characters and has dealt with their problems too superficially. Her heroine is a very ordinary girl. However faithfully drawn, she fails to hold your interest. Her husband, James, is a shadow. . . At times the dialogue is distressingly poor. Her descriptions of scenery, however, are beautiful. The countryside and village come to life." Catherine Hutter

+ Sat R of Lit 29:37 Je 15 '46 800w

"Emerging from Mrs. Hines's graphic but never too clinical study of tuberculosis and its psychological symptoms are some interesting, and I should judge quite wise, suggestions for a better handling of the disease on the personality side." F. H. Bullock

+ Weekly Book Review p8 My 12 '46 700w

HINKLE, THOMAS CLARK. Blackjack, a ranch dog. 224p $2 Morrow

Dogs—Legends and stories 46-5739

Blackjack was a wild dog born on Clark Preston's brother's ranch. Clark had trained Blackjack himself, so he was a proud boy when his dog was instrumental in breaking up a pack of outlaw dogs, who were destroying stock on all the nearby ranches. For older boys.

"I suppose it is too much to hope that the man will ever learn to write—for his market seems satisfied with his spinning a good yarn."

+ — Kirkus 14:276 Je 15 '46 100w

"A usual Hinkle story—only fairly well written. Probably will be liked by those who want dog and western stories but is below average."

Ruth Hadlow

Library J 71:1132 S 1 '46 70w

"Dog lovers from 9 up will follow keenly the gentle crescendo of suspense through a series of hunts, fights and escapes to an exciting climax. If there is a certain lack of inventiveness in style and characterization, there is a compensating absence of any forced sensationalism in the simple, direct story." Frances Smith

+ — N Y Times p11 S 1 '46 140w

HINKLEY, LAURA L. The Brontës: Charlotte and Emily. 376p $3.50 Hastings house

B or 92 Brontë, Charlotte, Brontë, Emily Jane

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"Miss Hinkley's foreword contains a dismaying list of the perils that beset the critical biographer: the perils of the romantic appeal, of the dramatic rearrangement of facts, of assuming a condition that did not exist, of transferring to the subject the writer's private responses, of failing to test the assumptions of previous writers, and of seeing all things in relation to a pet theory. It is Miss Hinkley's great distinction that she has skillfully avoided all these perils and has produced a genetic study of Charlotte and Emily Brontë full of penetrating insights into the workings of the mind of genius." G. F. Whicher

+ Atlantic 177:170 Ap '46 420w

"Laura Hinkley, author of 'Charlotte and Emily,' is not out to make capital of their bleak but somehow romantic lives. Instead she wishes to 'trace and perhaps probe the processes of genius,' to show 'how and why the books came out of the lives.' It is a tough assignment, never completely to be carried out; but Miss Hinkley has a good go at it. . . Hers is an honest and serious book. Interesting and valuable in itself, it should have the effect of sending readers back to the Brontës."

+ N Y Times p7 F 3 '46 750w

"Miss Hinkley is too prone to substitute conjecture and psychiatric deduction for knowledge. Even though her inferences are labelled, they form so great a part of the text that her book cannot be considered as anything other than a personal concept of the Brontës' relations to one another, to their work, and to the world of intellect and emotion in which they lived." J. C. S. Wilson

Sat R of Lit 29:17 F 16 '46 1250w

"Miss Hinkley's full study of the Brontës has three main centers of interest; the biographical record, the sources of the characters and themes in the novels, and the quality of the novels. Although the critical evaluation of the works is at times acute, the author is perhaps most effective in her treatment of the first two subjects."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:25 Mr '46 280w

Wis Lib Bul 42:45 Mr '46

Reviewed by G. S. Haight

Yale R n s 35:546 spring '46 700w

HIRSCH, A. ADLER. Manual for water plant operators. 386p il $6.50 Chemical pub. co.

628.1 Water supply engineering. Water—Purification 46-2552

"The author is an instructor in water purification with the Sectional School on Water Supply and Sewerage, maintained by the State Department of Education of Louisiana; and this book grew out of the need for a self-instruction text to supplement the class instruction of that school. The result is a compact, up-to-date survey of water-plant chemistry and techniques that will be useful to many operators of small and medium-sized water-supply systems.

Water procurement and treatment, the distributing system, and control tests are discussed. A few practice problems are included, and there are lists of books, documents and manufacturers' literature for further reading." N Y New Tech Bks

"The author is to be commended for including a great deal of information in a brief space, in language readily understandable by the average water plant operator. Clarity of discussion, however, is at times sacrificed for brevity." F. W. Gilcreas

+ — Am J Pub Health 36:930 Ag '46 230w

"This manual is recommended for the libraries of all water treatment plants and for others interested in the practical phase of the problem." S. T. Powell

+ Chem Eng 53:297 O '46 240w

"The 'Manual,' intended as a ready reference in anticipating and solving the operator's day-by-day problems, is written in a clear concise manner understandable by technical and non-technical men alike. Detailed instructions on procedures and descriptions of processes and equipment make it particularly valuable to the smaller waterworks official and operator."

+ Eng N 136:96 My 16 '46 100w

Library J 71:486 Ap 1 '46 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:15 Ja '46

HIRSCH, LEE. Murder steals the show. 299p $2 Fell

46-2505

Detective story.

"The story is told in the ungrammatical language of Jack Keef, whose illiteracy gives the narrative a pungency which it might otherwise not have had."

N Y Times p34 Mr 31 '46 120w

"Rather confused affair with some reasonably interesting character work and a far-fung plot. Police-narrator is bluffly amusing."

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:59 Mr 23 '46 50w

HIRSCHMANN, IRA ARTHUR. Life line to a promised land. 214p maps $2.75 Vanguard 940.53159 World war, 1939-1945—Refugees.

World war, 1939-1945—Civilian relief, U.S.

War refugee board 46-7847

The story of the author's work in saving refugees during World War II. As a special representative of the United States State department, he set up headquarters in neutral Turkey, and attempted to save Jewish and other refugees in the Balkan countries, then occupied by the Nazis. Index.

"This is no thriller in the Eric Ambler sense, although there is enough intrigue to pad out a dozen spy stories. It is the chronicle of a mission and an organization of which every American can well be proud." Victor Lasky

+ Book Week p6 N 17 '46 250w

"Candid and lucidly written memoirs." Alfred Werner

+ N Y Times p32 N 17 '46 650w

"The story of his success in rescuing tens of thousands of trapped people is told with beautiful modesty, with hardly an adjective in the 230 pages; with great attention to exact facts and precise figures, and yet with undertones of warmth and humanity." Robert St. John

+ Sat R of Lit 29:14 N 23 '46 1050w

"This book has some of the flavor of an Eric Ambler story of international intrigue, with only one difference: this is true. . . This book, of course, is only one chapter in the titanic struggle. But it is an important one." B. C. Crum

+ Weekly Book Review p7 O 27 '46 1300w

HITCHENS, MRS DOLORES (BIRK) (DOLAN BIRKLEY, NOEL BURKE, D. B. OLSEN, pseud). Cats don't need coffins. 320p $2 Doubleday

Detective story. 46-5573

Kirkus 14:262 Je 1 '46 80w

HITCHENS, D. B.—Continued

"It is all skillfully done, and the end result is a tale that is almost as puzzling as it is amusing." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p26 J1 21 '46 120w

"All right, if you're addicted to cats and/or old ladies."

New Yorker 22:92 Ag 17 '46 80w

"Agreeable."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:28 J1 20 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p16 J1 21 '46 130w

HITREC, JOSEPH GEORGE. Rulers' morning, and other stories; introd. by Christine Weston. 281p $2.50 Harper

46-2489

Collection of seventeen stories about India today, written by a native of Yugoslavia who went to India in 1932 on a vacation, and decided to stay. His stories are of the Hindu, the half-caste, and the European.

"The author deserves the warmest recognition for producing a book of 17 short stories which possess a quality of daring, a restraint and sensitive appreciation of a human dilemma which challenges ordinary comprehension." Joe Fromm

+ Book Week p9 Mr 17 '46 450w

Current Hist 11:49 J1 '46 50w

"Though not a popular—or saleable—genre, these stories have quality, a suggestive awareness and acuteness which gives distinction."

Kirkus 14:6 Ja '46 150w

"Hardly have the Bombay mutiny and the bloody riots following upon that historic event subsided into a temporary, troubled quiet when this book of short stories about India comes off the press. Although the author's business with India is personal and conducted through the medium of character rather than outward event, his stories enrich our comprehension of the ominously charged emotional atmosphere in which India today lives and struggles." Adrienne Koch

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 17 '46 1000w

"For his individual characters, even when they are behaving stupidly and with complete selfishness, Mr. Hitrec preserves an understanding, if on occasion ironic, sympathy. These characters include a great variety of Indian, British and Eurasian types. Most of them are exposed to the reader through the revelation of their intimate thoughts and actions as they go about the business of their lives, a method made effective by Mr. Hitrec's intensity of perception, his fresh, lively use of English, and the way in which he incorporates the physical background of India into the action of his stories." J. J. Espey

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Mr 24 '46 700w

HIXON, ARTHUR T. Canol. 284p $2 Dorrance

46-17223

"Arthur Hixon, a former Canol worker, has evidently written this novel in defense of the bold Canadian oil project, which required the pushing of an Arctic pipe-line through six hundred miles of frozen wilderness to Whitehorse on the Alaska Highway. . . . There are four principal characters: Captain Porter Ames, dashing West Pointer; his fiancée, Ann Hubbard; geologist Flint Harper; and Judy Cartwright." N Y Times

"It would be a pleasure to report that Mr. Hixon has his fictional situations well in hand, but such is not the case." Richard Match

N Y Times p32 Je 16 '46 180w

"Mr. Hixon is much more successful in describing the immense labor involved in the project, carried out under severe conditions of weather and terrain, than in manipulating his main characters. These, a gallant West Pointer and a handsome engineer, finally triumph over Nazi and Japanese agents, win promotion and decoration and walk off with the beautiful heroines. This part of the novel is barely credible." Norman Ogan

Spring'd Republican p6 Je 21 '46 180w

HOARE, W. E., and HEDGES, ERNEST SYDNEY. Tinplate. 292p il $12 Longmans

[40s Arnold, E. & Co]

671 Tin plate

[46-873]

"Authors connected with the British Tin Research Institute give the first over-all coverage of the tinplate industry, its history in Europe and in the United States, manufacture, uses, properties, testing methods and corrosion resistance. Chapters cover hot and cold rolling, pickling, annealing, tinning, structure of tin coatings, testing, corrosion and electroplating. Fabrication not included. Some of material appeared in 'Sheet Metal Industries,' 1943. Extensive chapter bibliographies." Library J

Reviewed by H. S. Van Vleet

Chem & Eng N 24:1726 Je 25 '46 400w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:761 My 15 '46 70w

HOBER, RUDOLF. Physical chemistry of cells and tissues; with the collaboration of David I. Hitchcock [and others]. 676p $9 Blakiston

[42s Churchill]

574.19 Physiological chemistry 45-10267

"This book can be regarded as a modified and modernized version of Höber's classical Physikalische Chemie der Zelle und Gewebe, which between 1902 and 1926 went through six editions. The present book, a cooperative effort necessitated by the enormous increase in the subject matter to be treated, makes use of the specialized knowledge of several experts. It represents the most elaborate and most successful attempt ever made to treat many of the fundamental problems of general biology from the physicochemical viewpoint." (J Phys Chem) "According to the preface of this collective work, 'The subject of the book is physiology; not 'physiology from above', but 'physiology from below'. physiology as a branch of physical chemical science dealing with life as a physical, though exceedingly complex system, that may be subjected to scientific analysis like any other natural object.'" (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index

"This is a book of remarkable interest and value in many respects." J T. Fdsall

+ Am Chem Soc J 68:1677 Ag '46 800w

"Completeness in such an undertaking can never be achieved and was not attempted, as clearly stated in the preface: 'we have ignored or at least neglected in our text several important recent trends of physicochemical investigation into physiology and also older observations and conclusions, which in the meantime have been turned over into the stock of common knowledge. In this respect the book cannot claim to offer a universal information in the field of physical chemistry of cells and tissues. But it may guide to new roads into the unknown.' This goal the book achieves in an admirable way. . . . The book is certainly a must for anyone interested in linking the biological sciences more closely than has been done in the past to physics, physical chemistry, and chemistry. It also will represent a very valuable addition to any physicochemical library; it will be particularly appreciated by physical chemists interested in the borderlands of physical chemistry and biology. It is a most valuable addition to the general scientific book literature." Karl Sollner

+ J Phys Chem 50:386 J1 '46 1300w

"This summary account of the subject should be of value to all students of fundamental problems in physiology."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:249 S '46 320w

HODGSON, WILLIAM HOPE. House on the borderland, and other novels. 639p $5 Arkham house

46-7118

Four novels of the weird and fantastic written in the first decade of the twentieth century by an English author who was killed in the first World war. Contents: The boats of the "Glen Carrig"; The house on the borderland; The ghost pirates; The night land.

"My favorites are 'The Boats of the "Glen Carrig"', and 'The Ghost Pirate.' These two are sea stories. Here too is horror, but presented squarely in relation to the mechanics of ordinary life, and doubly effective in making fast the points of terror." B. V. Winebaum
+ N Y Times p20 S 15 '46 290w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 22 '46 100w

"The author's quiet manner and skill in straight narrative remove sensationalism and let what is told produce authentic gooseflesh."
+ Weekly Book Review p12 S 29 '46 230w

HODSON, JAMES LANSDALE. British merchantmen at war, the official story of the merchant navy: 1939-1944; prepared for the Ministry of war transport by the Ministry of Information, 143p il maps $1.50 Ziff-Davis

940.545 World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations. Merchant marine—Great Britain
A46-1361

"The 'official story' of the duties performed and the hardships suffered by the vessels and men of the British Merchant Navy from 1939 to 1944." (Foreign Affairs) First published in 1944 under title: Merchantmen at War.

Foreign Affairs 24:746 Jl '46 20w

"Throughout the book are excellent photographs which show with unforgettable clarity the hazards that lay at sea, and in many respects these are better than the text itself. The author, while striving to give an over-all description of his subject, has scamped pretty severely on major portions of his story. It is to be regretted that while considering the compilation of such a history the officials of the Ministry of Information did not allow more space and detail. For as it now stands the really complete story of the Merchant Navy still remains to be written." Robert Carse
+ — Weekly Book Review p41 N 11 '45 800w

HOFFMAN, FREDERICK JOHN, and others. Little magazine; a history and a bibliography. 440p $3.75 Princeton univ. press

051 Periodicals A46-17

History of the little magazine in the United States, with a wealth of anecdotal detail about some of its originators. "By 'little' magazines the authors do not mean the pocket-sized commercial products which swarm on our newsstands. They mean magazines which are (or have been) little in circulation but big in literary, critical, personal, or political pretensions—and sometimes in achievement—such non-commercial magazines as Poetry, The Little Review, transition, Horizon, Broom, The Dial, The Masses, Hound and Horn, The Partisan Review. . . . It also provides a voluminous index of magazines and personalities, and a valuable check-list of more than five hundred little magazines which have been published in the English language since Reedy's St. Louis Mirror began in 1891." (Sat R of Lit)

Reviewed by Jack Conroy
Book Week p3 Jl 7 '46 600w
Booklist 43:11 S '46

"Mr. Hoffman and Mr. Allen have done a thorough job of research. They not only give the history of the more important and typical little magazines, but offer a keen and just evaluation of the entire movement. Their account is enlivened by anecdotes of the editors and writers who made the magazines. Miss Ulrich supplies an annotated bibliography which takes up a third of the volume. This is an important book now, and will prove even more important as time passes."
+ Christian Century 63:1638 D 18 '46 210w

Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 5 '46 750w

Current Hist 11:329 O '46 70w

Reviewed by Lawrence Heyl
Library J 71:1039 Ag '46 1300w

Reviewed by Weldon Kees
Nation 163:245 Ag 31 '46 1100w

"Charts the course of the little magazines, erratic as it was, with sound perception, and—a rarity in books of this nature—the style throughout is fluent enough to mask agreeably the really exhaustive research which must have gone into its preparation. Closer students of the period than I may discover omissions and errors in emphasis; I find none of the first, and of the second only such as come well within the reasonable bounds of individual judgment. There is an excellent chapter on the interrelation of the little magazines with the development of modern poetry, and the effects, both good and bad, that resulted; and a still better section, I think, on their role in the rise of regional writing—a role which is frequently overlooked. The authors deal sensibly, too, with the latter-day problems of their subjects, which began around the middle Nineteen Thirties and were not lightened at all by the advent of the war." R. M. Coates
+ N Y Times p3 Je 30 '46 1750w

"It is not likely that many readers will turn to 'The Little Magazine' for light summer reading, but I found it the most provocative book, from a purely literary point of view, since Henri Peyre's neglected 'Writers and Their Critics,' which was published by the Cornell University Press in 1944. Mr. Hoffman and Mr. Allen, along with Miss Ulrich, have written a book that is best described by their title—a thorough, extremely painstaking history of the little magazines." Hamilton Basso
+ New Yorker 22:52 Jl 6 '46 750w

Reviewed by George Snell
San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 21 '46 700w

"This book is good for many a laugh, many a cheer, and many a snort of sheer disgust. It is a history of literary megalomania at its most sublime as well as at its most ridiculous. And it is, for the most part, completely fascinating reading. . . . This book is rich in human and literary interest yarns. . . . The text appears to have been written by different hands and is not always well blended together. The descriptions of the little magazines themselves are witty and entertaining. But the discussions of 'regionalism,' 'imagism,' and a few other topics are long-winded, pedantic, and lumpy." Roger Butterfield
+ — Sat R of Lit 29:34 Je 29 '46 1700w

Time 68 98 Jl 1 '46 1650w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:176 S '46 240w

"This is an amiable and intelligent reference work. The authors have scoured every corner of our recent literary history to write it, and add an unprecedented bibliography of American and British little magazines from 1891 to date. But they are overly defensive and cautious." Alfred Kazin

+ — Weekly Book Review p3 Jl 14 '46 2050w

Reviewed by Donald Wing
Yale R n s 36:169 autumn '46 800w

HOFFMANN, ELEANOR. Four friends; il. by Kurt Wiese. 105p $2 Macmillan

"A jolly story of four animals who ran away from their homes to escape being eaten for Christmas dinner, at least two of them. It happened in Porto Rico in the beauty of a tropical island where there is no twilight and the moon is almost as bright as the sun. There in the midst of Christmas Eve festivities when wonders happen, Pepe the pig, Bonito the parrot, Esmeralda the hen, and Nina the dog borrowed a shiny automobile and went on their travels for a day." Horn Bk

Booklist 43:173 F 1 '47

"Eleanor Hoffmann has written a most amusing story in a setting of color and enchantment. Kurt Wiese's pictures are completely in the spirit of the book."
+ Horn Bk 22:349 S '46 160w

"Many unusual adventures—all of them fun. Kurt Wiese's pictures add to the gaiety."
+ Kirkus 14:422 S 1 '46 90w

HOFFMANN, ELEANOR—Continued

Reviewed by S. J. Johnson

Library J 71:1808 D 15 '46 70w

"No one, of course, can draw a pig with more personality than can Kurt Wiese and his illustrations effectively repeat the sly humor with which the author has characterized the four friends. Young readers will incidentally gather considerable lore about a picturesque country from this diverting yarn."

E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p11 D 22 '46 230w

Reviewed by K. S. White

+ New Yorker 22:138 D 7 '46 90w

"Kurt Wiese's illustrations are as gay and funny and lovable as the story." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:60 N 9 '46 230w

HOFFMANN, ERNST THEODOR AMADEUS.

Tales of Hoffmann; ed. by Christopher Lazare; ill. by Richard Lindner. 509p $7.50 Wyn 47-915

Ten tales by the best known of the German Romanticists. "This is the first publication in modern translation of Hoffmann's famous tales." (Introduction The ten are: Mademoiselle De Scudéry; Don Juan; Antonia's song; The golden pot; The doubles; The vow; The fermata; Berthold the madman; Salvator Rosa; The legacy. Contains a biographical study of Hoffmann.

Kirkus 14:501 O 1 '46 170w

"Putting together a sampler of Hoffmann is no easy task, and on the whole both editor and publisher are to be congratulated. In his introduction Christopher Lazare re-creates with remarkable insight the thwarted, egocentric composer-painter-writer who, later on, could work only under the influence of liquor. . . It is a pity that 'The Flea' and 'The Nutcracker and the Mouseking' couldn't be included. Also a short commentary on each piece and a list of Hoffmann's works might have been helpful. But these are minor points. Since we haven't a modern complete Hoffmann edition, this collection presents the old conjurer in all his majestic sorcery." R. P.

+ N Y Times p20 D 1 '46 1050w

"Richard Lindner's many fantastic, delicate or gruesome designs are the book's chief distinction. . . There are those who will feel that all these fantasies are now somewhat overshadowed in interest by the 'biographical note,' by Christopher Lazare, with which the book begins. For this not only affords material for a psychological study such as real life rarely offers, but by including not only his literary career but also his major works as a composer indicates the close interweaving of the two in his troubled, tragic life." M. L. Becker

+ — Weekly Book Review p10 D 22 '46 550w

HOGAN, INEZ (MRS RANDOLPH BOWERS).

Nappy chooses a pet [ill. by the author]. [48p] $1 Dutton

46-2189

Nappy and his sister visit their grandparents' farm and are allowed to choose some pets. A pet show, a runaway colt, and a kitten who traces the lost colt, are part of this story for second and third grades.

Book Week p14 Je 2 '46 120w

Booklist 42:284 My 1 '46

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p9 O 29 '46 210w

Kirkus 14:148 Mr 15 '46 60w

"Not a necessary purchase." Isabel McLaughlin

Library J 71:488 Ap 1 '46 80w

Reviewed by M. C. Meehan

Spring'd Republican p4d Ap 21 '46 110w

"The pictures give a little child a wide choice in identifying animals, and the text an older person, reading it aloud, a chance to shine in sound effects." M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 21 '46 140w

HOGAN, INEZ (MRS RANDOLPH BOWERS).

Raccoon twins [ill. by the author]. [49p] $1 Dutton

46-5255

Two little raccoons followed Peter and Patsy home and one of the raccoons was captured and made a pet of by the children. But the two little animals had their ways of getting in and out of the house and it was some time before Peter and Patsy learned that they had two pets. For ages four to seven.

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p9 O 29 '46 120w

Kirkus 14:323 J1 15 '46 100w

"The simple pictures, clear wording and easy story make it engrossing even to the adult reader." G. M. Williams

+ Library J 71:1209 S 15 '46 70w

"Miss Hogan writes and draws in a style which brings quick response from children of 4 to 8." L. P.

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 18 '46 120w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 11 '46 140w

HOGGIN, HERBERT IAN PRIESTLEY.

Peoples of the southwest Pacific; a book of photographs and introductory text. 26,[69p] $5 Day

919.5 New Guinea—Native races. Solomon islands 46-7873

An anthropologist and colonial administrator, who during the war served as a lieutenant-colonel in the Australian army, has here collected some 128 photographs of the peoples of New Guinea, Guadalcanal, Buna, Lae, and other Pacific islands. In a brief introduction he describes the social organization, racial characteristics, currency, religion, etc. of these people.

"Most of the 128 excellent photographs appear as candid and not necessarily pictorial, a realistic result the author definitely sought."

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 21 '46 120w

Kirkus 14:370 Ag 1 '46 90w

"The book is expensive, but it does serve as a useful introduction to an unfamiliar land and people." Bertha Handlan

Library J 71:1547 N 1 '46 90w

"One weakness in the book is that there is no statement concerning when these photographs were taken. Very few of them suggest a war at all; there is one of 'the most decorated native in the Pacific,' Sergeant Major Vuza of Guadalcanal, and there is an unidentified New Guinea police boy who packs a modern rifle. For the rest, they might have been photographed before the war or afterward. It would have been a good idea, it seems to me, to have included some statement on this." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 S 13 '46 600w

"No matter how many pictures of Pacific islanders you may have seen during the war, and no matter if you actually lived or fought among them, Dr. Hoggin's collection still has the appeals of novelty and fidelity."

+ Weekly Book Review p14 O 27 '46 140w

HOGBOOM, AMY.

Birds and how to draw them. 39p ill $1.25 Vanguard

743.6 Birds—Pictures, illustrations, etc.

A companion volume to Dogs and How to Draw Them (Book Review Digest, 1944). There are photographs of nine different birds with short descriptions of each, and step-by-step instructions on how to make drawings of them.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p15 My 13 '46 100w

Booklist 42:249 Ap 1 '46

Library J 70:952 O 15 '45 50w

"Very useful book for all children who are interested in drawing with the added attraction of giving simple information about nine familiar birds. . . Recommended." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 71:123 Ja 15 '46 70w
Sat R of Lit 29:45 Je 15 '46 20w

HOGBOOM, AMY, comp. Boys' book of the West; il. by Richard Bennett. 419p $2.50 Lothrop

46-22918

"A collection of stories covering the whole range and development of the western part of our country from the time [of] the Spaniards . . . up to the West as it is today." (Publisher's note) Partial contents: The camp of the wild horse, by Washington Irving; Windwagon, by Stanley Vestal; Enough gold to load a pack horse, by J. F. Dobie; Kit Carson, by Vernon Quinn; Sitting Bull and his chiefs, by Shannon Garst; "Stick 'em up" by W. M. Raine; Jesse James, by W. R. Benét; The bronc twister steps up, by Will James; The two-gun man, by S. E. White; A miserable Merry Christmas, by Lincoln Steffens; The summer of the beautiful white horse, by William Saroyan; The leader of the people, by John Steinbeck.

Booklist 43:174 F 1 '47

"Good competition for the ubiquitous 'westerns.'"

Cath World 164:382 Ja '47 40w

"This reviewer cannot feel that 'The West Today' is exemplified by Lincoln Steffens, Andy Adams or William Saroyan. It would appear that the thirty-five stories were shaken from a hat and that a few cracking good yarns—such as Stewart Edward White's 'The Two-Gun Man'—fell out." Hoffman Birney
N Y Times p26 N 17 '46 230w

"The general fascination of the book shows once more that the nearer a 'Western' comes to the facts the better use it can make of them as literature. There are poems scattered among the narratives, he-man verse that goes with a swing. Older readers will undoubtedly borrow this book." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Ja 26 '47
240w

HOGBOOM, AMY. Familiar animals and how to draw them. 39p il $1.25 Vanguard 743.6 Animals—Pictures, illustrations, etc.

46-11810

A companion to the author's Birds and How to Draw Them (Book Review Digest 1946). It contains step-by-step instructions and line drawings for nine domestic animals. For grades three to five.

Booklist 43:105 D 1 '46

Cath World 164:381 Ja '47 20w

"Children who like to draw, but who need a little help will be fascinated by the pictures of the horse, cow, hen, goat, pig, etc. and the simple suggestive outlines showing the processes of drawing them." Isabel McLaughlin

+ Library J 71:1718 D 1 '46 70w

Sat R of Lit 29:66 N 9 '46 20w

HOGNER, DOROTHY (CHILDS) (MRS NILS HOGNER). Winky, king of the garden; pictures by Nils Hogner. [29p] $1 Oxford

Story of a timid scarecrow who was afraid of crows, and who enlisted the aid of his little animal friends to help him. In time the animals, plus the wind, made Winky the king of the garden.

Book Week p15 Je 2 '46 110w

"Adequate but uninspired."

Kirkus 14:222 My 1 '46 60w

Reviewed by E. T. Dobbins

Library J 71:983 J1 '46 70w

"Nils Hogner has drawn a very expressive scarecrow and Dorothy Childs Hogner has provided some good dialogue between Winky and his friends."

+ N Y Times p20 Je 9 '46 110w

Sat R of Lit 29:48 N 9 '46 50w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p7 J1 7 '46 160w

HOKE, MRS HELEN L. Grocery kitty; pictures by Harry Lees. [36p] $2 Reynal 46-3564

Story of a kitten, descended from a long line of grocery cats, who could not seem to learn how to be a good grocery kitten. Pictures and story describe Suddy's adventures and disgrace, until he finally caught a mouse.

Book Week p23 Je 2 '46 200w

Booklist 42:303 My 15 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '46

"This is Helen Hoke's best story to date."

+ Kirkus 14:125 Mr 1 '46 90w

"A charming book for cat-lovers, young and old." E. E. Frank

+ Library J 71:1055 Ag '46 70w

Reviewed by Latrobe Carroll

N Y Times p32 Ap 28 '46 60w

HOKE, MRS HELEN L. Mrs Silk; pictures by Diana Thorne. [24p] $1 Veritas

Dogs—Legends and stories 46-1555

Picture story book about a little dog and how important she was in getting the family started right in the morning.

Kirkus 13:469 O 15 '45 70w

"Beautiful, large colored drawings by Diana Thorne depict the story of Mrs. Silk and her four small glossy puppies. Will be welcomed by boys and girls from the picture-book age to ten years." A. H. McGinley

+ Library J 71:185 F 1 '46 70w

"The pictures will delight all lovers of cocker spaniels."

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 13 '46 50w

HOKE, HENRY REED. It's a secret. $12p $2.50 Reynal; 86p pa $1 Pamphlet press, 8 W. 40th st, N.Y. 18

351.74 Fascism—U.S. Propaganda, German

46-839

"Early in 1945, Winchell ran a column 'Bureau of Missing Investigations.' He 'wondered' what had happened to many promised probes. That idea gave me the lead to undertake the investigation which resulted in this book." (Acknowledgments) The author then proceeds to outline his discoveries about the facts behind sedition trials, and shows how persons in high places are involved in supporting fascism in the United States. "Mr. Hoke recommends among other things: that a campaign of education to counteract intolerance be started; that 'all ministers should stay out of political pressure groups as long as they elect to remain in their profession'; that Congressional investigations be conducted in a 'democratic and non-secretive fashion'; that a law of 'mass libel' be enacted making it as illegal to lie about races and groups as it is about individuals; that all propaganda organizations be compelled to make public their sources of income." (N Y Times)

Booklist 42:198 F 15 '46

Christian Science Monitor p16 F 13 '46
420w

Foreign Affairs 24:748 J1 '46 40w

"Mr. Hoke doesn't succeed in turning up much that is new. Nevertheless, he is to be applauded for doing the job well—and for keeping the home fires of anti-fascism burning." Daniel Schwartz

N Y Times p7 Ja 20 '46 700w

New Yorker 21:78 F 2 '46 160w

"Despite shortcomings, 'It's a Secret' helps realist Americans to the danger of post-war 'nationalism.' Mr. Hoke's book is a reminder of the grim reality that while America won the military war against Hitler, it has not won Hitler's psychological war against democracy." J. R. Carlson

+ Weekly Book Review p10 F 24 '46 900w

HOLAND, HJALMAR RUED. America, 1355-1364; a new chapter in pre-Columbian history. 256p il maps $4 Duell

973.13 America—Discovery and exploration
46-6880

"Continuing his record of early Norse settlers in America, begun in Westward from Vinland, the author offers credible proof that the Newport tower of Newport, R.I., was built by Norsemen probably from Greenland. He also elaborates on the theory that Norse explorers traveling south from Hudson bay crossed Minnesota and attempted to reach Vinland from there by traveling east." Booklist

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p3 S 29 '46 700w

Booklist 43:33 O 1 '46

"Whatever the experts may decide in the future, there can be no doubt now that Holand has thus far done more than any other individual to dispel the fogs surrounding the early explorations of America. Even if later historians can prove that he is substantially wrong, his book asserts a high claim to being a masterly mosaic of fact, legend, and logic. One of its chief virtues is that, despite its scholarlyness, it can be enjoyed by any intelligent, historically curious American. If it turns out to be mistaken history, it at the very least stands now as one of the keenest, most satisfying detective stories to be found." R. G. Berkelman

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 O 4 '46
600w

"Pure research on a highly specialized subject, this is scarcely designed for a general audience."

Kirkus 14:319 J1 1 '46 120w

"Mr. Holand, who very plainly has strict notions of scholarship, may not be too highly complimented if his book is compared with a well-written detective novel. All the same, the comparison is to the point. His analysis is tightly stitched and cross-stitched. The subject-matter is inherently dramatic. Details are handled with precision and economy." E. B. Garside

+ N Y Times p58 D 1 '46 800w

Time 48:106 S 9 '46 1100w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:316 D '46 240w

"Readers who seek intellectual adventure will find in Mr. Holand's book a thrilling story, well authenticated." Frederick Pohl

+ Weekly Book Review p21 O 13 '46 490w

Wis Lib Bul 42:149 N '46

HOLBERG, LUDWIG, baron. Four plays: The fussy man, The masked ladies, The weathercock, Masquerades; tr. from the Danish by Henry Alexander; pub. for the Am-Scandinavian foundation. 212p $2.50 Princeton univ. press

839.812

"The American-Scandinavian Foundation issued translations of several of Holberg's plays some years ago. They now issue four more, translated by Harry Alexander, and with an introduction by Professor Oscar Campbell, of Columbia, who ranks Holberg as 'one of the world's great writers of comedy.' When Holberg wrote, the Italian Impromptu comedy was still flourishing, and Molière was still a fresh influence. He came back to Denmark and devised his plays for an unsophisticated Danish audience on these models, but leaning much more heavily on the commedia dell'arte." Weekly Book Review

"These comedies doubtless occupy a place of some importance in a study of the history of Scandinavian literature but, like many English plays of the same period, they give the impression of being third-rate imitations of Molière."

Christian Century 63:1441 N 27 '46 70w

"Highly recommended." George Freedley

+ Library J 71:1714 D 1 '46 40w

"Holberg was a brisk and cheerful writer, with copious inventiveness for farcical situations, but so far as these translated plays disclose he did not reach anywhere near to the significance of Molière's best work, nor anywhere near to the style of English Restoration comedy. Holberg's plays, one fears, are chiefly interesting historically now, at any rate outside of Denmark." W. P. Eaton

Weekly Book Review p32 N 3 '46 180w

HOLBERG, MRS RUTH (LANGLAND). Captain John Smith: the lad from Lincolnshire; il. by Ava Lisbeth Morgan. 181p $2 Crowell
B or 92 Smith, John—Juvenile literature 46-7875

Fictionized biography of Captain John Smith which pictures him from his boyhood in Lincolnshire, England, to his death in 1631. For ages eleven to fourteen

Booklist 43:138 Ja 1 '47

"This is unusual historical material which schools, libraries and young boys will find interesting, for the dramatic story includes glimpses of English and continental life in the 16th and early 17th centuries."

+ Kirkus 14:347 Ag 1 '46 100w

"Recommended for ages 11-14. Illustrated in black and white by Ava Morgan. Should be quite popular." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 71:1468 O 15 '46 30w

Sat R of Lit 29:69 N 9 '46 20w

HOLBROOK, STEWART HALL. Lost men of American history. 370p il $3.50 Macmillan

920 U S —Biography. U S —History
46-7135

An anecdotal and debunking study of some historical events and personages in our history, ranging from the introduction of log cabins by the Swedes in 1638 (not the English) to a few well-chosen facts about H. L. Mencken Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by W. A. S. Douglas

Book Week p2 N 3 '46 600w

"Brisk, arresting and amusingly written." Lloyd Lewis

+ Book Week p4 D 29 '46 70w

Booklist 43:100 D 1 '46

Reviewed by Wayne Andrews

Commonweal 45:282 D 27 '46 160w

Current Hist 12:60 Ja '47 50w

"This is rapid fire, infectious collecting from pleasant imbecilities and startling figures to patterns of genius and unorthodox prophets. Extensive extravaganza with plenty of fresh and entertaining material."

+ Kirkus 14:339 J1 15 '46 120w

"A fascinating book." Rudolf Hirsch

+ Library J 71:1126 S 1 '46 100w

"A wonderful book about several score wonderful Americans."

+ New Repub 115:929 D 30 '46 200w

"Unabashed journalism is Mr. Holbrook's style—perhaps usefully and happily so, since a prodigious array of personalities from the early Pilgrims to a well-known vitriolic latter-day saint, H. L. Mencken, crowd the pages of this lively harangue." Adrienne Koch

+ N Y Times p7 O 27 '46 900w

"Mr. Holbrook has deviated from the familiar beats, and his fascinating book might well start a trend in historical writing, like the debunking movement of twenty years ago."

+ New Yorker 22:126 N 9 '46 90w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 31 '46
950w

Social Studies 38:48 Ja '47 20w

"This is Mr. Holbrook's best book so far, which makes it a good book indeed." Bernard De Voto

+ Weekly Book Review p3 O 27 '46 1650w

HOLDEN, RAYMOND PECKHAM. Selected poems. 267p $3 Holt

811

46-6915

"Gathered from the writings of 30 years, . . . In forms orthodox, in practice a disciplinarian, the poet will delight those who are impatient with the looser fashions of verse which are cultivated by newcomers to this trade. Nature, love, death and daily living are his themes, and his poems tight, compact with no word out of place." Book Week

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
+ Book Week p14 N 3 '46 90w
Kirkus 14:453 S 1 '46 90w

"The progress Mr. Holden has made in technical skill by pruning, snipping, and balancing each word and line has finally resulted in his paring his art down to a flexible handicraft." Richard McLaughlin

Nation 163:589 N 23 '46 210w

"Mr. Holden's poems, like those of Matthew Arnold, are concerned chiefly with moral and ethical issues and their complexity. His poems recommend themselves to serious students of poetry and of life, for their play with systems of thought and such obtruse concepts as liberty and necessity cannot but provide a rich experience." Marguerite Young

+ N Y Times p22 O 6 '46 550w
San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 10 '46 100w

HOLDING, MRS ELISABETH (SANXAY). Innocent Mrs. Duff; a novel of suspense. 199p $2 Simon & Schuster

46-1078

A story of suspense rather than detection, in which the reader follows the course of events as a bored and snobbish middle-aged husband plans the murder of his beautiful young wife.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p8 F 24 '46 320w
Booklist 42:300 My 15 '46
Kirkus 13:534 D 1 '45 170w

"As one who read Mrs. Holding's Invincible Minnie in the twenties and still remembers it as a hair-raising experience, I know she can do better than this."

— New Repub 114:294 F 25 '46 90w

"The waiting for the inevitable retribution constitutes the suspense element in this novel. Its chief fault is that the other characters in it are not so well integrated as is Jacob Duff, or are their motives made sufficiently convincing." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p20 Mr 3 '46 180w
New Yorker 22:92 F 23 '46 100w

"Swiftly accelerating downward course of lost weekendish gent described in scenes packed with hair-trigger action and hard-to-bear suspense. A beautiful job!"

+ Sat R of Lit 29:42 F 23 '46 40w

"Seems to us that Mrs. Holding, on past performances as well as the present, thoroughly deserves the fits her publishers are throwing about 'The Innocent Mrs. Duff.' They call it a 'suspense novel,' further defining it as a 'novel of crime and punishment rather than crime and detection,' and we may add that there's a little detection in it, too, or what about McGinness and Levy? We hope, as they do, that it may appeal to many readers besides the regular fans, to whom it is our duty to report that they won't find it so awfully different from Mrs. Holding's other fine mysteries." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p22 F 24 '46 270w

HOLLAND MARTY. Glass heart. 192p $2 Messner

47-758

Mystery story

"As a detective story 'The Glass Heart' is deplorably indifferent to the rule of fair-play; the principal clue we are told, is a pattern of sound, but that and all of the other evidence is sprung on us with the accusation." James Sandoe

— Book Week p4 D 22 '46 90w

"Neat and nasty business successfully shown up."

+ Kirkus 14:311 J1 1 '46 90w

"This is not precisely a detective story, although it deals with murder. Actually it is the story of the reformation of a small-time crook, and a very odd reformation it is. . . The author has succeeded in making this strange story both interesting and convincing." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p18 D 15 '46 120w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
San Francisco Chronicle p11 D 22 '46 40w

Sat R of Lit 29:28 D 21 '46 40w

"Miss Holland is successful in spots as she follows a fairly tough routine about double murder in a Hollywood house of horror, scorning the ladylike ways of most feminine bafflers, as she did in her earlier 'Fallen Angel.'" Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p20 D 15 '46 100w

HOLLAND, RAYMOND PRUNTY. Good shot! a book of rod, gun, and camera [photographs] by Bob and Dan Holland [text by] Ray Holland. [314p] 150pl $6 Knopf

799.084 Fishing. Hunting. Photography of animals *Agr*46-262

A collection of fishing and hunting snapshots taken by Robert and Daniel Holland, with commentary by their father, former editor of Field and Stream, and author of a number of books on shooting and game fishing.

Booklist 43:97 D 1 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '46

"'Good Shot!' is one of the few volumes on outdoor photography that this reviewer would classify as 'great.' The Hollands, en famille, had a grand time collecting the material, and the American sportsman will lose no faith in the hallmark." R. R. C.

+ N Y Times p45 O 20 '46 400w

"As a former editor of Field and Stream magazine, Ray Holland is eminently qualified to put out a volume of this sort. It is the kind of book which sportsmen envy until they possess and cherish once they own. It will make an excellent Christmas gift from one hunter or fisherman to another—if the buyer can manage to part with it." Stanleigh Arnold

+ San Francisco Chronicle p3 D 1 '46 200w

"This is by far the most interesting of all books on hunting and fishing to have been published for many a moon." Wilbur Forrest

+ Weekly Book Review p32 O 27 '46 230w

HOLLAND, RAYMOND PRUNTY. Now listen, warden; il by Wesley Dennis. (Countryman press bk) 136p $1.75 Barnes, A.S.

46-5158

Humorous tales collected by the author during his experiences as a sportsman and game warden.

Booklist 42:366 J1 15 '46

"These sporting tales of law violations in hunting and fishing are backgrounded by a real appreciation of the sports themselves. . . [Here is] humor and adventure in smooth going narrative."

+ Kirkus 14:211 My 1 '46 150w

"An outdoorsman's book, an illustrated collection of hunting and fishing stories, with a rare combination of humor and punch bound to bring a raft of chuckles from anyone who ever knew a game warden." Leo Marceau

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Je 9 '46 200w

HOLLIS, ERNEST VICTOR. Toward improving Ph.D. programs; prepared for the Commission on teacher education. 204p $2.50 Am. council on educ.

378.1553 Colleges and universities—Graduate work. Degrees, Academic 45-9893

"Dr. Hollis, now principal specialist in higher education in the U.S. Office of Education, was occupied for four years in making, on behalf of the Commission on Teacher Education, the investigations which resulted in this book. Its first chapter is [a] survey of the rise of graduate work in American universities and the natural history of the Ph.D. degree. The next two chapters are statistical studies of the degrees conferred and the occupations of their holders in the decade 1930-40. . . Chapters 4-6 record the opinions of employers and graduates. . . In the last chapter, the author gives well considered suggestions for the improvement of the Ph.D. program." Christian Century

HOLLIS, E. V.—Continued

Christian Century 63:273 F 27 '46 370w

Reviewed by A. K. Banks

J Home Econ 38:603 N '46 210w

"This reviewer in two books and four articles on the subject has been one of the most frequent and caustic critics of the doctorate as it now stands. He personally recommends Dr. Hollis's book as an outstanding and invaluable study on a subject in which there is a growing demand for a thoroughgoing reform." Carroll Atkinson

+ School & Society 64:207 S 21 '46 1450w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:40 Mr '46 160w

HOLMAN, HUGH. Slay the murderer. 215p $2 Mill

46-803

Detective story.

Kirkus 13:535 D 1 '45 60w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p31 F 17 '46 140w

"An unpretentious but convincing job."

+ New Yorker 22:99 F 16 '46 80w

"Good grade."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:42 F 23 '46 40w

"If Mr. Holman has a weakness, it's fancy verbiage as employed in the opening pages and thereafter in spots." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p22 F 24 '46 90w

HOLMAN, HUGH. Up this crooked way; a Sheriff Macready detective story. 211p $2 Mill

46-8413

Detective story.

Kirkus 14:438 S 1 '46 90w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p35 Ja 12 '47 140w

"Routine, but pleasantly unpretentious." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 24 '46 50w

"Fair."

Sat R of Lit 29:40 N 30 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p20 D 15 '46 90w

HOLMES, OLIVER WENDELL, 1841-1935. Touched with fire; Civil war letters and diary of [the author]; ed. by Mark DeWolfe Howe. 158p $3 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 U.S.—History—Civil war—Personal narratives. A47-364

"The letters in this book, all of them addressed to the author's family, were written at the front between May, 1861, and July, 1864, when young Holmes decided that he had had enough and done enough, and returned to Boston, much against his father's wish. Like most letters written during a war, these are rather meagre, but they do convey some of the character of the fighting and more of the character of the future Supreme Court Justice." New Yorker

Booklist 43:168 F 1 '47

"Mr. Mark DeWolfe Howe, who is at work on a biography of the Justice, discovered a packet of letters and two diaries which Holmes wrote during the three years of his active service. Holmes had already sifted them out and destroyed what he did not wish to survive. Mr. Howe has edited them with a minimum of comment and with excellent annotations. The letters . . . are brief and sketchy, but they are terrifically in earnest, even when they are most elaborately casual. They make a valuable, a fascinating record, not only of a crucial chapter in the life of Holmes but even more of the mind of his generation and the impact upon it of organized slaughter." Perry Miller

+ N Y Times p4 D 1 '46 1100w

"An interesting little book."

+ New Yorker 22:144 D 14 '46 140w

"No one who knows Justice Holmes's speeches can afford to miss this little volume. In his preface Mark Howe, the editor, explains that in 1942 Justice Holmes's literary executor appointed him official biographer. This wholly unofficial biographer here applauds, officially, a scholarly job of editing. And applauds even more the discovery and publication of what is indubitably for all Holmesians, one of the most exciting books of the year to come." C. D. Bowen

+ Weekly Book Review p1 D 29 '46 1300w

HOLT, STEPHEN. Wild palomino. 151p il $2 Longmans

Horses—Legends and stories 46-3969

Story of a boy and the horse which he captured and later won for his own at a rodeo. For older boys and girls.

"There are breathless moments just short of disaster, there is good western background and there are some unusual characters in this gripping story of a great horse and a gallant young rider." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:270 Jl '46 90w

Kirkus 14:70 F 1 '46 80w

"A run-of-the-mill western which, nonetheless, will have an appeal for boys and girls who like horses and the west." G. E. Joline

Library J 71:983 Jl '46 70w

Reviewed by Dorothy Hamilton

San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 10 '46 80w

"A horse story with a difference, leading to a satisfactory climax through successive thrills, this tale of a beautiful silver-and-gold wild stallion and the part it played in saving the Twin Anchor Ranch should be given to boys before they are caught by the stereotyped excitement of the mass production Western. What goes on here goes fast, but its thrills are real."

+ Weekly Book Review p16 My 19 '46 410w

HOLTON, EDITH AUSTIN (ELIZABETH ALDEN HEATH, pseud). Time and the hour. 310p $2.75 Putnam

46-4904

Family chronicle which follows five generations of Cape Code Penningtons. Beginning with Captain Asa Pennington who retired from the China trade in the early 1800's to found a family and look after the family fortunes, the story ends five generations later with the best of the later Penningtons returning to reclaim her birthright.

Booklist 43:17 S '46

Kirkus 14:159 Ap 1 '46 190w

"As a study in Yankee fanaticism and rigidity, 'Time and the Hour' is painstaking, thorough and somewhat tedious. It is most convincing as a picture of how insupportable life can be in a family where the purse-strings and the idées fixes are in the same hands." Mary McGrory

+ N Y Times p14 Je 23 '46 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Jl 28 '46 150w

"The old fashioned kind of novel that used to be known as a 'nice clean story,' complete with thwarted Penningtons, a loyal and privileged retainer (female) happy in spite of the bar sinister, and assorted young love, star-crossed or happy according to the necessary plot specifications. The salt spray is considerably diluted but the atmosphere is wholesome and pleasant." L. S. Munn + — Springf'd Republican p4d Je 30 '46

 300w

Reviewed by George Conrad
 Weekly Book Review p10 J1 7 '46 320w

HOMES, GEOFFREY, pseud. See Mainwaring, D.

HONEY, WILLIAM BOWYER. Dresden china; an introduction to the study of Meissen porcelain; with sixty-one plates illustrating 175 pieces. rev ed 223p $5 D. Rosenfeld, 403 Rice bldg, Troy, N.Y.

738 Dresden pottery 46-6202

American edition of a work first published in England in 1934 (Book Review Digest 1935). "In this edition, Mr. Honey has revised the text in some respects, particularly in connection with the Hausmalerei. Otherwise, the plates and subject matter are substantially the same as in the original work." (Prefatory note to the American ed)

Booklist 43:55 O 15 '46

"This is a definitive work on the eighteenth century Meissen Manufactory, an authoritative history and critical evaluation of its art, artists and productions. It is by a famous expert and provides student collectors with a section on marks. It is moreover eminently readable, something not always to be said of scholarly monographs."

+ Weekly Book Review p29 O 13 '46 270w

HONIG, PIETER, and VERDOORN, FRANS, eds. Science and scientists in the Netherlands Indies; a review of research and exploration in the Netherlands Indies; prepared under the auspices of the Board for the Netherlands Indies, Surinam and Curaçao. 491p il $4 Chronica botanica

509.91 Scientific research. Netherlands Indies A46-1331

"This excellent book is made up of articles, original or reprinted, by some seventy-five authors on a wide variety of topics related to the growth of science in the Netherlands Indies. The earliest of these is an excerpt from The Malay Archipelago by Alfred Russel Wallace, published in 1869, and the most recent a collection of notes on the work of such bodies as UNRRA, the Central Depository Library for the Netherlands in New York City and the Institute of Pacific Relations. There are articles on the history of rubber production, cinchona cultivation and the chemistry of tea as well as upon botanical gardens and a discussion of paleontological research since Dubois' discovery of Pithecanthropus erectus. Several travel accounts and impressions by distinguished visitors broaden the scope of the work from a purely technical field and convey something of the color and charm of the islands." Canadian Forum

"The volume is a frank attempt by the Netherlands Government to publicize what Malaysia owes to the science and culture which their regime has fostered. . . Irrespective of any such justification, it certainly can be said that this volume affords a wealth of interesting information, presented in a convincing and attractive form, about a part of the world which merits our closest scrutiny." A. B. Lamb

+ Am Chem Soc J 68:347 F '46 700w

"This book will appeal especially to the scientific worker who intends to visit the Far East but it will also be a valued possession of the interested layman, because of its wealth of information and the thoroughness and care with which it has been prepared and edited. It is well printed and generously illustrated by early prints, photographs, maps and vignettes. A supplement gives an impressive list of the scientific institutions, societies and research workers in the Netherlands Indies." Alan Creighton

+ Canadian Forum 26:21 Ap '46 500w

"Although the editors deny any intention of presenting an encyclopedia, they have very nearly succeeded in doing so and have compiled a work of greatest value to everyone interested in the products or the development of the East Indies. It might even excite and attract as immigrants many of that keen-minded sort who would delight in promoting the development of resources now latent." D. H. Killeffer

+ Chem & Eng N 24:702 Mr 10 '46 300w
 Foreign Affairs 24:756 J1 '46 30w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
 Library J 71:1129 S 1 '46 120w
 N Y New Tech Bks 31:30 Ap '46

HOOK, SIDNEY. Education for modern man. 237p $2.75 Dial press

370.1 Education 46-3574

"Mr. Hook approaches education from a point of view represented most explicitly by John Dewey but in general to be defined as experimental, democratic, and secular. He feels, and quite properly, that discussions of liberal education have been of late too much in terms of a dogmatic metaphysics and an equal dogmatism as to required and elective curricula. He thinks that education should be reconsidered in terms of the discoverable nature of man, not as defined a priori, but as revealed by scientific inquiry and always with reference to the needs of the society in which we are actually living in the twentieth century. Particularly the social assumptions regarding liberal education need to be reexamined, as do the alleged finalities of the line between vocational and liberal education which many allegedly liberal educators take for granted." (Nation) Index.

Reviewed by Wendell Johnson
 Book Week p5 Ap 21 '46
 Booklist 42:293 My 15 '46
 Current Hist 11:49 J1 '46 100w

Reviewed by M. W. Gross
 J Philos 43:629 N 7 '46 3300w
 Kirkus 14:171 Ap 1 '46 100w

"For college libraries and those serving large school systems." Thelma Brackett
 Library J 71:584 Ap 15 '46 90w

"Mr. Hook has written a sensible little book and a much-needed one in which he rescues the discussion of education from the rarefied and somewhat snobbish atmosphere in which it has in certain quarters been carried on and from the unrealistic isolation from society in which the whole enterprise of learning and teaching has been conceived. . . The reader is recommended to Mr. Hook's excellent chapter on The Good Teacher, where he permits himself a little less dialectic and controversy, a little more enkindling eloquence, than generally marks the book. Himself a notably good teacher, his account of such a rarity is both exciting and true talk." Irwin Edman

+ Nation 162:476 Ap 20 '46 1000w

Reviewed by Jerome Nathanson
 New Repub 114:840 Je 10 '46 1150w

"Mr. Hook has put his finger, it seems to me, upon the profound fallacy of most of the current attempts to 'reorganize' higher education. All these attempts, whether at Chicago or in the Harvard report, St. John's College or 'courses in the humanities,' suffer from looking backward too much. They suffer also from a preoccupation with 'western Europe,' as if that continent, which has wrecked itself, were somehow the home of superior wisdom. Mr. Hook insists that the present and the future are, or ought to be, the primary concern of education. I think the weakness of his book is that he does not sufficiently allow for the damage that technological education is doing to the concept of civic obligation, but I feel that, if he is not on the side of the angels, he is at least on the side of the United Nations. I found his book rather exciting reading." H. M. Jones

+ — N Y Times p6 My 26 '46 1000w
 New Yorker 22:110 My 18 '46 100w

HOOK, SIDNEY—Continued

"Those who enjoy the human individual will like 'Education for Modern Man' all the more for its crotchets and aggressions, its petulance and its boyish earnestness. And even severe impersonalists will have to admit that Mr. Hook has the qualities of his defects." Eric Bentley

Sat R of Lit 29:22 Ap 20 '46 1100w

School & Society 63:232 Mr 30 '46 20w

"Far-reaching in its implications, this book is a contribution to the present controversy over higher education in America."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:210 S '46 260w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard

Weekly Book Review p10 Ag 11 '46 1250w

HOOLE, WILLIAM STANLEY. Anti-bellum Charleston theatre. 230p $3.50 Univ of Ala. 792 Theater—Charleston, South Carolina 46-27318

"Mr. Hoole's book on the ante-bellum Charleston theatre takes the record from 1800 (where Eola Willis stopped) to 1861. In a smaller way, it is like Odell's 'Annals of the New York Stage,' because it is complete and accurate, a work of painstaking and scholarly research, and hence of real value to theatrical historians." Weekly Book Review

"Hoole's book offers to the specialist in theatrical history complete listings of the plays presented in Charleston from 1800 to 1861 and of the actors and playwrights. His work is outstanding in this field however, for its constant attention to other aspects of the life of the city—business, journalism, etc—so that the theater is seen in relation to its background and holds real interest for the general reader." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 Ag 11 '46 310w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

+ Weekly Book Review p40 N 17 '46 130w

HOOVER, CALVIN BRYCE. International trade and domestic employment. (Committee for economic development. Research study) 177p $1.75 McGraw

337 U.S.—Commercial policy 45-8573

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945

Foreign Affairs 24:349 Ja '46 110w

Reviewed by D. B. Marsh

J Pol Econ 54:463 O '46 900w

"Since the treatment of the problem is couched in simple nontechnical language, the layman need have no qualms about plunging into these turbid waters. Under Dr. Hoover's expert guidance he will emerge a wiser citizen of his own country and the world." A. D. Gayer

+ N Y Times p28 Je 23 '46 550w

"This concise book for the general reader, one of the research studies of the Committee for Economic Development, very ably and usefully outlines and evaluates the more important international economic problems facing the United States as they appeared in the spring of 1945. The reviewer has little quarrel with both analysis and recommendations." F. A. Southard

+ Pol Sci Q 61:133 Mr '46 750w

"This is the fifth in a series of research studies prepared under the auspices of the Committee for Economic Development. In non-technical language, this brief volume presents in clear and logical steps the procedures believed necessary to enable the United States to participate adequately in increased world trade and the maintenance of world peace."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:35 Mr '46 240w

HOPE, BOB. So this is peace; pictures by Lew Glanzman. 208p $2.50; 84p pa $1 Simon & Schuster 817 46-8032

The author of I Never Left Home here gives us his words of wisdom and humor on the subject of peace, in which he arrives at the conclusion that thus far peace has not succeeded.

"He is still king of low comedy, and at the same time he manages never to slip into distasteful vulgarities nor petty meanness. Somehow we don't think that the rise of Claghorn's satire and Kaye's pantomime and double-talk have cut Hope's audience materially."

+ Kirkus 14:441 S 1 '46 200w

"So This Is Peace," at its best, is a gag-strewn recital of his tours and his troubles as a microphonic comedian. Gag follows gag in soggy profusion. There are gags about Wacs, gags about Bing Crosby, gags about Hitler, gags about shortages, gags about Truman. So endless and uninterrupted is this succession that more than once the reader would be relieved at the intrusion of a rhymed commercial. Tricked out on the screen with exotic décor, handsome leading ladies and the shred of a plot, Hope creates a great and often amusing commotion, both in his vehicle and at the box office. Even on the air, where his ingratiating voice, his foils and his sponsors lend variety to his material, Hope is no slouch by the rules of either Hooper or Gallup. But in cold, unadorned type, he gets pretty soporific." Richard Maney

N Y Times p22 N 10 '46 1800w

Reviewed by George Baker

Sat R of Lit 30:13 Ja 18 '47 600w

"This is the book we would take with us on a desert island, because it opens so smoothly in the middle that it could be used as a pillow, although it possesses no other soporific virtues. And it would be a rare desert island that hasn't been visited by Mr. Hope as a wartime and post war entertainer. He has delivered his fast humor by fast plane to every place on the globe that boasts a runway big enough to land a laugh." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p30 N 24 '46 390w

HOPKIN & WILLIAMS, limited, London. Organic reagents for organic analysis. 175p $3.75 Chemical pub. co.

543.8 Chemical tests and reagents. Chemistry, Organic 46-1049

"This work is similar in arrangement to the same firm's Organic reagents for metals (4th edition, 1943). A number of reagents found by experience to be most useful in organic analysis are presented and approximately the following information is given for each one: Name, chemical formula, molecular weight, analytical applications, properties, directions for the preparation of derivatives, and literature references. Melting points of derivatives are given in classified tables at the end of the volume. In addition, the book contains a preliminary discussion of analytical procedures for the main classes of organic compounds." N Y New Tech Bks

"Even though the experienced organic analyst will be familiar with the general content, nevertheless, he will find useful information here and there, and a helpful bibliography. It is to be regretted that the authors did not include one good method for the preparation of each reagent. Many otherwise well stocked laboratories will be found to lack many of these compounds." W. F. Whitmore

+ Chem & Eng N 24:2412 S 10 '46 600w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:762 My 15 '46 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:5 Ja '46

HOPLEY-WOOLRICH, CORNELL GEORGE. See Woolrich, C.

HORAN, MRS KENNETH (O'DONNELL). Papa went to Congress; il. by Susanne Suba. 206p $2 Doubleday

917.53 Washington, D.C.—Social life and customs. O'Donnell, James 46-331

Lively memoirs of a Michigan family in Washington during the Cleveland administration. Papa was a handsome man, given to making speeches on the rural free delivery bill. Mama who was pretty as a picture and had the smallest waist in Michigan, prepared to take Washington society by storm. Adding to the excitement were two of Mama's sisters: the pretty one whose chief claim to fame was her ability to get rid of her current husband if she saw someone she liked better; and the plain one whose guiding ambition was woman suffrage. The author has built up these memoirs from stories her mother told, and from letters she wrote to "papa's" paper back in Michigan

"The book is done in that gently facetious style, at once omniscient and naive, which a grownup may adopt when pretending to be writing as a little girl, and Mrs. Horan has indubitably struck one of those golden nostalgic notes bound to echo in American hearts wherever they may beat." Edith Roberts

Book Week p7 Ja 20 '46 450w
Booklist 42:181 F 1 '46

"If not measuring up to the Clarence Day tradition, it is at the same time clean in its fun-making. . . One misses the tenderness which made the Clarence Day volumes unforgettable, but, then, Kenneth Horan is evidently more interested in the fantasy of exaggeration than in a realistic and tender picture. The quaint pen-sketches by Susanne Suba, by the way, are humorous and most delightful." Millicent Taylor

+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 Ja 21 '46 480w

Kirkus 13:485 N 1 '45 80w

"There may be readers who will enjoy this slightly sentimental, slightly humorous, altogether conventional account of life during a mauve era in Washington. From the first page to the last, however, the performance does not quite ring true. The humor is of the patented variety. The characters are entirely stock characters, with no individual traits and very little social significance. The writing is not saturated with the color of life itself." Marguerite Young

— N Y Times p10 Mr 3 '46 600w

"These little memoirs are hard to believe at best, but this one has two strikes on it before it begins. The story is told by Mrs. Horan and her sister as they 'remembered' those far-off days and gay times. But, as the author states that neither she nor her sister was born until ten years after Papa went to Washington, it all becomes a little confusing. Mrs. Horan calls the maneuver a 'bold literary privilege,' and bold is certainly the word for it."

New Yorker 21:90 Ja 12 '46 130w

Reviewed by Mary Ross

Weekly Book Review p4 Ja 13 '46 650w

Wis Lib Bul 42:44 Mr '46

HORIZON (periodical). Horizon stories; chosen by Cyril Connolly. 289p $2.50 Vanguard [8s 6d Faber]

46-2867

Collection of twenty short stories reprinted from the magazine Horizon. Partial contents: In the square, by Elizabeth Bowen; The saint, by V. S. Pritchett; The wages of love, by Rhys Davies; Crossing the Atlantic, by Diana Gardner; "Ivanhoe," by L. P. Smith; Interment of a literary man, by Philip Toynbee. Fifteen of the stories were contained in a volume with the same title published in England in 1943.

"Most of the stories are marked by a high degree of competence and some by a measure of power, but all are rather thin-blooded and remote in comparison with the contents of those American magazines considered representative of new trends in writing or of the unorthodox and untrammelled in fiction." Jack Conroy

+ — Book Week p15 Ap 7 '46 320w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle
Commonweal 44:266 Je 28 '46 520w

Kirkus 13:581 D 1 '45 150w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling
Nation 162:483 Ap 20 '46 1000w

Reviewed by James Stern
New Repub 114:629 Ap 29 '46 650w

"Though the average is highly impressive, there is no absolutely great work here. William Sansom's strange, symbolic story, 'The Long Sheet,' is the most powerful and intense item; it has a strong, dry, meaningful poetry in it. Edward Sheehy's 'Prothalamion' stands out as a sharp and thorough study of hypocrisy. Antonia White's 'The Moment of Truth' seems both sturdy and subtle work." Richard Sullivan

+ — N Y Times p3 Ap 7 '46 500w

"The English magazine Horizon provides a collection of twenty stories, most of which are pleasing, though not particularly memorable."

New Yorker 22:116 Ap 13 '46 120w

"'Horizon Stories' do not number among them any that will be long remembered for their own sakes. They are a little too well bred for that. Yet they are not too well bred to make excellent reading." Kenneth Fearing

+ — Weekly Book Review p12 Mr 31 '46 700w

HORN, EDWARD NEWMAN. Faster, faster. 215p $2.50 Coward-McCann

46-2672

A fantasy and satire on modern life. In it a young man named Harry Bachus returns from the war in the Pacific with some strange notions about life and love. He takes over a roadhouse called The Hill, and the rest of the story describes the impact of Harry's dionysian philosophy on the town and the people in it.

Reviewed by R. J. Bender

Book Week p10 Mr 17 '46 400w

"A story more than a little remindful of 'South Wind,' with its many characters who are decidedly in favor of living, with its bishop who suddenly sees that the Church might well have some of this new vigor, and with its moments of extreme violence. Mr. Horn, in paying attention to his original plot, often overlooks his characterization and the matter of his readers' credulity. But because his approach to his thesis is light and his writing often as lively as Harry Bachus's exploits, 'Faster Faster' also happens to be quite a lot of fun." William Kehoe

+ — N Y Times p12 Mr 10 '46 260w

"Probably much more fun to write than to read."

New Yorker 22:100 Mr 16 '46 120w

"Like any fantasy, this tale of a soldier, who had his moment before Valhalla, demands that you enter into it, accepting an innocent-eyed young Bacchus on the hard-surfaced highways of the United States. If you do, in addition to the grace and sparkle of the writing, you will find delicious nonsense and a good deal that is not nonsense, though quite probably the American Legion would think otherwise." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p24 Mr 10 '46 850w

HORNBERGER, THEODORE. Scientific thought in the American colleges, 1638-1800. 108p $1.50; pa $1 Univ. of Tex, Austin 12, Tex.

507 Science—Study and teaching. Colleges and universities—U.S. A46-1632

"The extent and character of scientific studies in the college curriculum are an interesting index to the place of scientific thought in the culture of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. The chief scientific study was 'natural philosophy' (elementary physics), plus such practical applications of science and mathematics as surveying and navigation." Christian Century

"Hornberger's book is singularly unpretentious and sensible in its approach to its subject, well planned and most completely written: an example of thorough scholarly study which will well reward the attention of the general reader." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 Mr 17 '46 220w

"An interesting chapter in the history of American education."

+ Christian Century 63:307 Mr 6 '46 70w
Current Hist 11:330 O '46 30w

HORNBERGER, THEODORE—Continued

"Only in the final chapter does the author get anywhere close to a discussion of the history of ideas, but ten pages are hardly sufficient to do justice to the question of scientific thought in the colonial college. All of which suggests that Dr. Hornberger would have done better had he entitled his book, 'The Attitude of the Colleges to Science,' to use his own phrasing (p. 4), or, better still, 'The Teaching of Science in American Colleges up to 1800,' a more precise description of the content. There are copious notes, mostly chosen from secondary sources, a fact which makes the book more useful to the student than to the specialist." W. W. Brickman

School & Society 64:467 D 28 '46 450w
Spring'd Republican p6 F 19 '46 420w

HORNEY, KAREN, ed. Are you considering psychoanalysis? 262p $3 Norton

131.34 Psychoanalysis Med47-12

A symposium by six practicing psychoanalysts which answers such questions as What is a neurosis? How long does analysis take? What does it cost? How do you choose an analyst? What does he do at analytical sessions? Will analysis really help? etc. Index.

"A book which dissipates doubts, clarifies a science still dark to many, and which should be of particular value today."

+ Kirkus 14:509 O 1 '46 110w

Reviewed by John Storck

N Y Times p25 D 15 '46 380w

"A well-written and well-planned book."

+ New Yorker 22:132 N 16 '46 80w

"In an age when neuroses seem to be no less prevalent than the common cold, here is a timely and valuable book." R. O'B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 D 1 '46 180w

HORNING, JOHN LANDES, and MCGINNIS, GEORGE CRAWFORD. Open door to chemistry; 11. by Helen Armstrong. 86p $2 Appleton-Century

540 Chemistry—Juvenile literature 46-2148

Short discussion of some of the basic principles of chemistry, with thirty-one simple experiments which can be performed in a home laboratory. For grades six to nine.

Booklist 42:267 Ap 15 '46

"Fathers and sons will vie with each other to be the first to complete any one of the 30 experiments, and will learn much in the process." H. F. Griswold

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 13 '46 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '46

"Of interest to the young amateur chemist, but the rather dull format and unglamorous illustrations will not convert any readers not already interested in the subject. Competent handling for school and library uses."

+ Kirkus 14:37 Ja 15 '46 110w

"With simple equipment and this book, very young children in the grades can make a laboratory of their own for all these fascinating experiments and have fun doing them. The illustrations by Helen Armstrong are excellent. A glossary of new words appears in the back." Nelle McCalla

+ Library J 71:668 My 1 '46 90w

HOROWITZ, MRS CAROLINE. Boy's treasury of things-to-do. 93p il $1.25 Hart

790 Amusements. Handicraft 46-25125

Describes how to make things out of safe and inexpensive things found in most homes. Contains easy to follow diagrams. Some of the material was originally included in A Child's Treasury of Things-to-do (Book Review Digest, 1945.)

Booklist 42:304 My 15 '46

Reviewed by B. K. Finn

J Home Econ 38:667 D '46 30w

"Librarians and parents will find it useful in planning parties for children." M. M. Smith
+ Library J 71:668 My 1 '46 60w

Reviewed by Nina Schneider

N Y Times p20 Je 9 '46 40w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 4 '46 30w

HOROWITZ, MRS CAROLINE. Girl's treasury of things-to-do. 93p il $1.25 Hart

790 Amusements. Handicraft 46-25126

Simple things for girls to make and do. The materials used are all things found in the ordinary home. Includes some games.

Booklist 42:304 My 15 '46

Reviewed by B. K. Finn

J Home Econ 38:667 D '46 30w

Reviewed by E. W. Turpin

Library J 71:828 Je 1 '46 30w

Reviewed by Nina Schneider

N Y Times p20 Je 9 '46 40w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 4 '46 30w

HOROWITZ, MRS CAROLINE. Little girl's treasury of things-to-do. 93p il $1.25 Hart

790 Amusements. Handicraft 46-25127

"Collection of things to make with inexpensive materials to be found in every home. The diagrams are easy to follow, and the directions clearly and simply written. The variety of activities suggested should appeal to girls from six to nine." Library J

Booklist 42:304 My 15 '46

Reviewed by B. K. Finn

J Home Econ 38:667 D '46 30w

Reviewed by Dorothea Dawson

Library J 71:763 My 15 '46 50w

Reviewed by Nina Schneider

N Y Times p20 Je 9 '46 40w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 4 '46 30w

HOROWITZ, MRS CAROLINE. Young boy's treasury of things-to-do. 93p il $1.25 Hart

790 Amusements. Handicraft 46-25128

"Here are numerous suggestions of things boys will enjoy making or doing. In every case the materials to be used are inexpensive and are found in every home. They include games for the individual child as well as for groups. Some are especially designed for the invalid. Well illustrated. For ages six to nine." Library J

Booklist 42:304 My 15 '46

Reviewed by B. K. Finn

J Home Econ 38:667 D '46 30w

Reviewed by V. W. Schott

Library J 71:763 My 15 '46 70w

"An especially good collection of things to do with inexpensive, safe materials. Fresh ideas, sturdy end-products, colorful clear diagrams, and excellent type distinguish these books." Nina Schneider

+ N Y Times p20 Je 9 '46 40w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 4 '46 30w

HORSFALL, JAMES GORDON. Fungicides and their action; foreword by David Fairchild. 239p il $5 Chronica botanica

632.952 Fungicides 46-1063

"Many important phases of pest control, some of which are often inadequately treated or ignored by plant pathologists who write articles or books aimed to give advice on what to do and how to do it, are here surveyed. Although such detailed procedures as spray schedules, cook-book recipes, and the like are omitted, the theories underlying them are brought up to date and discussed. For example, the treatment of the dosage curve is most valuable to the modern plant pathologist, with the accompanying discussion of such topics as coverage, deposition, tenacity, drain-off, antagonisms and phytotoxicity. . . . A bibliography of about five hundred titles, authors, and general indexes complete the work." U S Quarterly Bkl

"This is the first attempt to bring together many of the newer concepts on fungicides, the mechanism of their action and philosophy of evaluation, and the result has been on the whole very successful. The typical informal style and smiles of the author may surprise some, but are interesting. . . . The book is essential to all fundamentally concerned with fungicides. It is an excellent source book and perhaps best of all, by reason of the many controversial issues raised will stimulate further research on fungicides and their action." S. E. A. McCallan

+ Am Chem Soc J 68:728 Ap '46 260w

"The author has succeeded well in his novel treatment of this field of inquiry, a field in which he is thoroughly familiar by virtue of his numerous original contributions and previous general reviews. This book will be indispensable to investigators of fungicides and also of plant protectants in general, though it makes no pretense of treating fungicides for several important but special purposes such as wood and textile preservation, and soil disinfection." Freeman Weiss

+ Chem & Eng N 24:100 Ja 10 '46 450w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:825 Je 1 '46 10w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:68 Mr '46 200w

HORSLEY, TERENCE. Soaring flight; with an introd. and app. by Roel I. Wolfson. 326p il $4 Current bks. [16s Eyre]

629.13333 Gliding and soaring 46-6891

British book on gliding technique, which contains essential knowledge for skillful aviation, and on glider clubs. Index.

Book Week p27 N 24 '46 120w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '46

"Well written and beautifully illustrated book on soaring and gliding by an experienced glider pilot." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 71:825 Je 1 '46 20w

"The author manages an extremely readable exposition of the basic techniques of soaring, which are, of course, the same the world over. He intersperses this with accounts of his own personal flight experiences and also with quoted adventure-reports of other British soaring pilots; and altogether he captures the thrills of silent flight more vividly than anyone else has yet done in the small literature of the subject." Wolfgang Langewiesche

+ Weekly Book Review p34 O 27 '46 240w

HOSKINS, ROY GRAHAM. Biology of schizophrenia. 191p $2.75 Norton

616.8982 Dementia SG46-212

"The first half of the book is 'concerned primarily with the nature of normal man as related to the schizophrenic psychosis and to the over-all pattern of deviation from normality that constitutes the disorder as seen objectively and as reported subjectively.' The latter half is devoted primarily to an account of 'researches at the physiologic-metabolic level,' prosecuted during the last eighteen years at the Worcester State Hospital. . . . Dr. Hoskins is a research associate in the Harvard Medical School and director of research of the Memorial Foundation for Neuro-Endocrine Research and of the Worcester State Hospital. This latest contribution from his pen is based upon the Salmon Memorial Lectures delivered by him at the New York Academy of Medicine in November, 1945." (Scientific Bk Club R) Bibliography. Index.

"A most excellent summary of the past studies and future problems involved in attacking this devastating condition. . . . 'The Biology of Schizophrenia' is a far cry from the mass of psychiatric writing that has recently flooded the market. It requires concentrated effort to digest the large amount of factual data that is most ably presented. This book should be of value to physicians and ancillary workers in both the fields of psychiatry and biology; and in addition it should aid the thoughtful families of those suffering from the distressing condition." H. A. Rusk

+ N Y Times p33 Ag 11 '46 800w

"Although the title of this book might suggest that it is a highly specialized treatise intended only for the limited number of professional workers in a single, narrow field, the perspective of its author is so broad and the abnormalities with which it deals are so common that it is in reality a book of quite general significance and widespread interest. In fact, the first chapter contains a presentation of the fundamental concept of emergent evolution that has rarely been equaled for depth and breadth of insight, clarity of diction, and cogency of thought. On the other hand, it is definitely not a 'popular book,' to be easily read by the 'man in the street.'"

+ Scientific Bk Club R 17:3 J1 '46 480w

Reviewed by E. R. Groves

Social Forces 25:101 O '46 130w

HOSLETT, SCHUYLER DEAN, ed. Human factors in management. 322p $4 Park college press, Parkville, Mo.

658.3 Employment management 46-6810

"This book . . . brings together carefully selected studies which ordinarily would be unavailable to most executives. . . . The book is divided into three parts. Part I, 'The Executive and the Organization,' is divided into two sections, namely, (A) The Nature and Conditions of Leadership and (B) Training Leaders in Human Relations. . . . Part II is entitled 'The Worker and the Organization.' It also is divided into two sections, namely, (A) Studies in Human Relations and (B) Facilitating Adjustments Through the Counselling Method. Part III, 'Critiques,' contains articles on such subjects as The Psychology of Participation, Anthropological Engineering, Industry and the Community, and Psychological Studies of Employee Morale." Ann Am Acad

"Considering the limitations of space under which the editor worked, he has succeeded in making generally excellent selections. No one attempting to select the most significant material from a rather broad field of knowledge is likely to do so to the complete satisfaction of all readers." Victor Karabasz

+ Ann Am Acad 248:270 N '46 340w

Reviewed by H. J. Owens

Book Week p6 N 24 '46 400w

School & Society 65:32 Ja 11 '47 10w

HOUGH, DONALD. Camelephamoose. 209p $2.50 Duell

46-6382

A farcical story about some returned soldiers who try to make a living and reestablish communications with their well-meaning but apathetic friends and relatives. Their efforts are sometimes hilarious, sometimes pathetic.

Book Week p5 S 15 '46 230w

Booklist 43:17 S '46

Kirkus 14:260 Je 1 '46 230w

"Surprisingly successful, but not everybody's meat." R. E. Kingery

Library J 71:1050 Ag '46 100w

"Sometimes the story slows down a little, sometimes the humor skids into the slapstick, even the juvenile (though the language never does!); but, first to last, many a reader will find here many a chuckle, many a thought to ponder." N. K. B.

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 11 '46 550w

"When Mr. Hough is not dragging in his political beliefs, he is funny in an unpretentious, easygoing way."

New Yorker 22:90 Ag 17 '46 70w

"Because he is a good technician, the author tells his story entertainingly and well. But he isn't writing his book just for the sake of tale-telling. He has something to say. He uses the camelephamoose quite broadly and simply as a symbol. Here is something new, representing the struggle, the 'pattern of hope, disappointment and effort' which is the pattern of the life of the returned soldier, at least for a while." J. H. Jackson

HOUGH, DONALD—Continued

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 19 '46 500w

Reviewed by R. M. Morgan

Springf'd Republican p4 S 7 '46 230w

"The complications are bizarre, and the plot becomes almost as hybrid as Bill's amalgamated mammal. Mr. Hough's symbolism has point to it, but animal cracker allegory is hardly his metier." George Conrad

Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 11 '46 390w

HOUGH, DONALD. Darling, I am home. 176p $2.50 Norton

940.531817 World war, 1939-1945—Moral aspects. Civilization 46-6945

In an open letter addressed ostensibly to his wife, but actually to his fellow citizens, the author of Captain Retread, Camelephamoose, etc., reviews his experiences in two world wars and estimates the value of our victories to ourselves and the world.

Reviewed by Clinton Textor

Book Week p16 D 8 '46 230w

Kirkus 14.372 Ag 1 '46 140w

"An earnest plea for plain speaking and honesty in domestic and international affairs. Harsh words, but interesting and true, in this time of sorely needed clear thinking." W. A. Kalenich

Library J 71:1205 S 15 '46 90w

"Mr. Hough is a sincere man, one who calls a spade and even an atomic bomb by their right names and often in the same sentence. A professional writer, he is reputed to have a warm, friendly touch when dealing with matters like the Wyoming mountains ('Snow Above Town,' 1943). But 'Darling, I Am Home,' which he bills as an 'exposure of one man's mind,' is a self-conscious piece of scrutiny both of self and nearly everything else; it is a rambling, fussy, confused tract which asks everything from why do people attend baseball games to why is Norman Corwin so young?" Austin Stevens

N Y Times p18 O 20 '46 500w

"Donald Hough is not a profound or constructive thinker, but he is an eloquent one, and his conclusions in a time of confusion and falsity have a very healthy ring." Niven Busch

+ Sat R of Lit 29:18 N 9 '46 650w

HOUGH, LYNN HAROLD. Meaning of human experience. 367p $3 Abingdon-Cokesbury

121 Experience 46-12

A long, philosophical essay by the dean of Drew Theological Seminary. "Dean Hough's basic thought is that man achieves full stature only by combining the humanistic tradition with the teachings of the Gospel in a synthesis that provides for the culture of both mind and heart and that recognizes the Incarnate God as the Supreme Arbiter of life." (Commonweal)

"Admirers of Dean Hough will find much cause for gratification in this latest book. It consists of many variations on the central theme, announced on the first page of the text, that 'the human is the significant.' Garnished with clever turns of phrase, illustrated in numerous thumbnail sketches of pivotal persons in the human adventure, and supported by not a few crisp insights of great suggestiveness, the book itself embodies its main contention, for it is both richly human and assuredly significant." Roger Hazelton

+ Christian Century 63:423 Ap 3 '46 850w

"With range, depth, and insight, Dean Hough deals briefly and helpfully with many subjects. Steeped as he is in both classical and Biblical traditions, using a personal idealism as the philosophical key to opening many doors, he is able to identify partial truths and point to a wholeness which many lesser men cannot see. . . It is an evangelical humanism for which Dean Hough stands, something very different from most formulations of Christianity today, something foreign to the approaches of a Tillich or Niebuhr and lacking in the social imperatives of a more community-minded Christianity. It is a highly sophisticated personalized evangelicalism which will appeal to civilized people." R. C. Miller

+ Churchman 160:15 F 1 '46 220w

"Impressive as are Dr. Hough's own erudition and evident devotion to our Lord, the Catholic will experience difficulty with a number of the positions taken in the book. Thus in the section on 'The Nature of the Real,' one hesitates to accept that personal idealism which is the solution of the author; in the treatment of the Hebrew and Christian Scriptures, one looks in vain for definite affirmation as to the objectivity of God's inspiration." H. G. J. Beck

Commonweal 43:461 F 15 '46 260w

"This critic is happy to turn Dean Hough's challenging work over to the reader with the hope that he will give it the careful attention it deserves, and attempt to find this reviewer wrong on all the negative points. . . These points involve, in the main, factors of literary organization. Perhaps they are inevitable in view of the evolution of the volume from a series of university lectures. They limit, although they by no means void, the significant value of Dean Hough's contribution to modern religious literature." E. V. Diller

Crozer Q 23:277 J1 '46 2000w

Reviewed by E. S. Brightman
J Religion 26:136 Ap '46 550w

HOUGHTON, WALTER EDWARDS. Art of Newman's Apologia; pub. for Wellesley college. 116p $2.50 Yale univ. press

B or 92 Newman, John Henry, cardinal A46-372

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"Prof. Houghton of Wellesley College has given this work its first really searching critical examination. His analysis is firm and just, his presentation inclusive. This is a very valuable addition to the literary study of Newman." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 Mr 10 '46 70w

"It is the chief virtue of Mr. Houghton's essay that it marshals supporting evidence for the long-standing conviction that the Apologia is a masterpiece not only of self-revelation but of conscious art. It is the chief fault of his essay that in emphasizing Newman's art he overstates his case and Newman's art seems perilously like artifice." J. J. Reilly

+ Cath World 163:182 My '46 550w

"As an analysis and appreciation of Newman's prose style, this adds much to the vague expressions of admiration which are so frequently heard and goes far toward justifying them. In the last section, and especially in the chapter, 'Did Newman Tell the Truth?' the author is on more controversial ground and has little to contribute to the inquiry into the veracity of Newman's picture of his own personality and mental processes, a theme which others have investigated more critically."

+ Christian Century 63:145 Ja 30 '46 90w

"The centenary of Newman's conversion to Rome has produced several new books on the great cardinal, but none more interesting and valuable than this. . . This is a book of only a hundred and twelve pages, and no one reading the Apologia should be without it." F. J. Moore

+ Churchman 160:15 Mr 15 '46 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p26 Ja 11 '47 370w

HOURLANI, ALBERT H. Syria and Lebanon; a political essay [pub. for the Royal inst. of int. affairs]. 412p maps $5 (18s) Oxford

956.9 Syria—Politics and government. Lebanon—Politics and government

"The impact of Western civilisation on Arab society is the motif of Mr. Hourani's book.

Mr. Hourani sees these two countries, with their Christian and Mediterranean associations, as the natural links between East and West. Coming from a Christian Lebanese background himself he perhaps underestimates the gulf between the Moslem masses of Syria and European ideas, but that is not to grudge him his hopeful conclusions. For the rest he provides the first compact history of Syria and the Lebanon with much new material from French archives." Manchester Guardian

"In this book the reader has a broadly helpful analysis of the political problems of one of the critical areas in world affairs." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 Ag 18 '46 220w

Foreign Affairs 25:347 Ja '47 90w

Manchester Guardian p3 J1 3 '46 140w

"Though Syria is only part of the Middle East, the problems vary little from country to country. Mr. Hourani's careful analysis can serve as a guide to all of them. Less gracious and personal in style, it is more substantial and objective than Miss Freya Stark's 'The Arab Island.' Together these two books furnish the best informative material on the recent changes in the Middle East which the present war has produced." Hans Kohn

+ N Y Times p18 S 22 '46 900w

Reviewed by R. H. S. Crossman

New Statesman & Nation 31:475 Je 29 '46 160w

"Mr. Hourani has his own convictions, but alike in analysis and synthesis he displays an absence of prejudice and a regard for the other man's point of view. His is an acute, yet a reflective, mind, which has tried to empty itself of passion and can see serenely the difficulties and even the defects of the Arabs. That his account is accurate is possibly the least of its merits; what is more notable is its stimulating quality." Kenneth Williams

+ Spec 176.432 Ap 26 '46 700w

"Mr. Hourani has written a book which no student and no statesman concerned with Middle Eastern affairs can afford to neglect. . . The documentation is excellent, and both the index and the maps leave nothing to be desired. The only criticism which can be directed against the book is its failure to cover the events of the last twelve months."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p208 My 4 '46 900w

HOUSTON, NOEL. Great promise. 502p $3 Reynal

46-3136

"Until Sawyer Bolton attends the McKinley Inaugural, she is the more or less frustrated daughter of a North Carolina business man. . . But from the moment Sawyer sets foot in Washington things happen fast. . . She marries a tin-horn gambler, accompanies him to the Oklahoma territory, sees him shot to death by an irate 'sucker,' wins the most valuable piece of land in the government lottery, becomes the unofficial queen of the newly created town, falls into disrepute, and winds up with the man she wanted all the time, as her 'fancy' house goes up in flames." Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by Bernard Malamud

Atlantic 178:158 S '46 240w

"If there are any ethics of the writing racket, the author should be sued for depriving the pulps of their hottest item in years." Ralph Peterson

Book Week p22 Ap 14 '46 600w

"Cut out the bawdy scenes and obscene dialogue and you'd have galloping motion picture material in melodrama genre. As a novel it seems ridiculously overwritten, trite, banal and boring."

— Kirkus 14:4 Ja '46 230w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p3 O 18 '46 90w

N Y Times p34 Ap 14 '46 180w

"Despite its undue length and overmeticulous detail, however, this is surface story-telling. We hear of the thoughts and feelings of the heroine, her clothes and household furnishings, we watch her in a large variety of activities, but the massed minutiae of her existence never add up to a whole. The sudden shifts in her character, like the sudden shifts in her fortunes and her love affairs, seem to depend wholly on blind chance and the author. However, as a picture of what happened when our last frontier was opened up, when have-nots and con men rushed in to build towns overnight, the novel possesses validity. And it will probably hold the interested attention of plenty of tired business men on vacation." Frances Gray

Sat R of Lit 29:39 Je 22 '46 410w

Reviewed by Kate O'Brien

Spec 177:494 N 8 '46 140w

Times [London] Lit Sup p517 O 26 '46 200w

"Noel Houston's 'The Great Promise' has its virtues and its faults. On the credit side, it is brimming with vitality, enthusiasm and a healthy expansiveness. However, its tempestuous story seems to have run away from the author's ability to keep pace with it. . . In spite of the express train speed of his story, Mr. Houston has done a good job with his heroine. She never ceases to be a fairly understandable woman and the chief value of 'The Great Promise' lies in her stature as a very human young lady." W. M. Kunstler

+ — Weekly Book Review p8 Ap 7 '46 360w

HOWARD, ELIZABETH METZGER. Before the sun goes down. 378p $2.75 Doubleday

46-25021

Description of life in a small Pennsylvania town in 1880. All sections of the town are visited from the mansions of the Albrights and the Sargents, to the huts of Mudtown where the Negroes lived. Altho the story is told in terms of the two leading families, the doctor is the one thru whose eyes we see the lives of these people. The doctor belongs to the upper classes, but he is a tolerant man, and all humanity passes before his understanding eyes.

"Remarkably rich in warmly human content, 'Before the Sun Goes Down' is equally distinctive for its unusual structure. It is constructed very much like a movie scenario. . . The suspicion is almost irresistible that Elizabeth Howard set out deliberately to design a novel that would read like a motion picture—even down to the detail of making Dr. Dan Field talk and look and act for all the world like Walter Pidgeon. But whether she did it with one eye on the M-G-M award, or simply from a passion for artistic creation, she achieved a literary form that is likely to precipitate a bumper crop of imitations. She has figured out a mighty effective way to tell a story, not wholly original, of course, but the polish she has given to an old idea makes a difference that makes a difference. The book is not without imperfections, and probably there are more who will call it good than there are who will call it great. While it contains some of the finest writing to be found in recent novels, it does contain, also, some uninspired lines, some type-worn phrases, and a few characters sketched too lightly to be well remembered." Wendell Johnson

+ — Book Week p1 Ja 27 '46 1700w

Booklist 42:200 F 15 '46

Cath World 163:93 Ap '46 150w

"The author's heart is in the right place in preaching tolerance and understanding; but one wonders as she goes on and on in her repetitive sentimental prose covering the lives of these people (particularly their sex lives) if she isn't emphasizing the scandal angle for scandal's sake. There's great difference between her handling of small town secrets and the handling of similar subjects in 'Winesburg, Ohio' and 'Our Town.'" P. T. Hartung

+ — Commonweal 44:221 Je 14 '46 450w

"It's not great literature—it is overwritten and padded and labors the point at times. But it is alive. And the people—for the most part—breathe."

+ — Kirkus 13:496 N 15 '45 210w

HOWARD, E. M.—Continued

"Toward the end the good doctor seems a bit too much the deus ex machina. This is the only major fault that can be found with a very capable first novel, rich in story interest and, I believe, destined for wide popular acceptance." N. B. Baker

+ — N Y Times p6 Ja 27 '46 750w

Reviewed by Nancy Groberg

Sat R of Lit 29:34 Mr 2 '46 700w

Time 47:95 F 4 '46 480w

"This is a thoroughly comfortable story in its affirmation of the bad in the best of us, good in the worst of us, and so on. Like the description of the town by the Albright who forsook it, it has the conventional brightness and warmth of a chromo and the pleasant predictability of a snow-fall in a glass paper-weight." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Ja 27 '46 700w

Wis Lib Bul 42:46 Mr '46

HOWARD, JOHN TASKER. Our American music; three hundred years of it. 3d ed rev & reset 841p il $5 Crowell

780.9 Music—History and criticism 46-5438

"In 1939, when Our American Music had been in circulation for eight years, two supplementary chapters were added to tell briefly of the developments and the many new composers that had appeared in that comparatively short time. And now, after six more years, it is not only desirable, but necessary, to revise the book completely, to adjust certain viewpoints to changing conditions, to re-evaluate, to add to the discussion of composers included in the original volumes the many works they have composed more recently, and also to include the several hundred composers who became recognized after 1931." (Pref to 2d rev ed) Bibliography. Index.

Christian Science Monitor p15 S 14 '46 90w

"This reset third edition is a little better but not enough; expanded but not always improved. The historical, perspectiveless view of the works of Billings for example, should have been entirely replaced. Instead a few sentences have been added at the end of the old material which wasn't quite new in 1929. Later, the book has been brought up to date somewhat more satisfactorily. Not the best of all possible histories of American music but practically the only one. It should be in every American library." Leonard Burkat

Library J 71:918 Je 15 '46 100w

HOWARD, JOSEPH KINSEY, ed. Montana margins; a state anthology. 527p $4.50 Yale univ. press

978.6 Montana. American literature—Collections A46-6034

An anthology of poetry and prose, all about the state of Montana, which covers the period from Indian days to the present. Selections were made from the works of novelists, poets, newspapermen, soldiers, explorers, and even untutored writers. The only criterion was that the writer must know his subject. Chronological table. Index of authors and acknowledgments.

"The production of regional books goes on steadily, attaining new standards. To my mind, 'Montana Margins: A State Anthology' is the best of the many regional anthologies recently published: as the editor of two such books, I may venture to speak with some conviction. . . All in all, 'Montana Margins' is emphatically a book to be read with delight in all parts of the country, a book that will claim without question a permanent place in every collection of best books about American life." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p10 N 17 '46 700w

Current Hist 12:62 Ja '47 30w

"Some of the writing is pretty bad; but all of it has the breath of vitality, the call of the west."

+ — Kirkus 14:450 S 1 '46 120w

"It is not all of Montana. Glaringly omitted is the dire effect on Montana's social, political and educational life of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company, which in its time has run the State by methods scarcely credible to an outsider. One could have wished too for a chapter on the fantastic feud between William Andrews Clark and Marcus Daly, the copper titans. And Montana's savage political wars, as reflected in journalistic slugfests that gave and asked no quarter, were surely worth a glance. Still, the merits of 'Montana Margins' so greatly outnumber its minor faults that there is no point in quibbling. It will stir in old Montanans a nostalgia for the great mountains, the lonely plains, the magnetic, nervous air of Butte. It should open the eyes of the many others who somehow have never got around to learning much about the third largest and surely one of the most fascinating of the States." James Fuller

+ — N Y Times p5 D 15 '46 650w

"Montana has never before been so thoroughly represented in a single book; I doubt if any Western state has been. It makes an excellent approach to the West as a whole. It is a product of regional thinking at its best, the effort to declare and interpret the truth about the way people live and have lived in a particular part of the country, as a result of all the forces that shaped the region. And also it contains a few specimens of the lower-grade regionalism that impairs a good deal of recent Western writing—a rapt, self-conscious intensity, an arty effort to evoke the universal from the exceedingly minute. I trust that Mr. Howard has included them as a warning to the little groups." Bernard De Voto

+ Weekly Book Review p2 D 22 '46 1000w

HOWARD, KENNETH SAMUEL. How to solve chess problems; il. with one hundred twelve modern problems by American composers. 171p $2.50 McKay

794.1 Chess

45-9218

"This book is intended primarily for the average solver of chess problems; particularly for the one who would like to learn some definite procedures which will enable him to solve with greater certainty and rapidity. For those who have never solved problems, or have done so only occasionally, there is a preliminary elemental section." (Pref) The second section of the book has 112 illustrative chess problems, selected from those either contributed to or reproduced in American Chess bulletin from 1935 to 1945.

Booklist 42:262 Ap 15 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p4 Ja '46

HOWARD, PETER. Ideas have legs. 184p $2.50 Coward-McCann [7s 6d Muller]

248 Oxford group

46-7228

An English writer, a former member of Parliament, who was at one time a brilliant Fleet street journalist, describes his own change of heart and outlook due to the Oxford movement. "His message is that there can be no panacea for world peace other than a universal reaffirmation of Christian doctrine, a message he expresses with a nice balance of intellectual and emotional persuasion. His special targets are all materialistic tenets of whatever derivation." (N Y Times)

Kirkus 14:268 Je 1 '46 120w

"Partially autobiographical, this book is persuasive crusading for moral rearmament." G. W. Hill

Library J 71:1126 S 1 '46 80w

Reviewed by James Lyons

+ N Y Times p35 S 29 '46 470w

HOWARD, ROBERT ERVIN. Skull-face, and others. 474p $5 Arkham house

46-7119

A collection of short stories, mainly reprinted from the magazine Weird Tales, dealing with the occult and supernatural, with fantasy and horror. The author was a Texan who committed suicide in 1936 at the age of thirty.

"The hero-literature of the pulps and the comics is symptomatic of a profound contradiction. On the one hand it is testimony to insecurity and apprehension, and on the other it is a degraded echo of the epic. But the ancient hero story was a glorification of significant elements in the culture that produced it. Mr. Howard's heroes project the immature fantasy of a split mind and logically pave the way to schizophrenia." H. R. Hays

N Y Times p34 S 29 '46 600w

"In a minority among fans, I must confess that Robert Howard seems to me the least worthy of permanency of all the pulp writers that Arkham House has enshrined between covers (and a petulant little outburst against reviewers in the editor's preface doesn't improve my mood. If you care for subtlety or artistry in your terror, Howard is not apt to be your meat. But for rousing blood-and-thunder action, he'll do very nicely; and the memoirs by H. P. Lovecraft and E. Hoffman Price present the author as almost as curious a psychological study as Lovecraft himself." Anthony Boucher

— San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 22 '46 80w

HOWARD, WALTER LAFAYETTE. Luther Burbank, a victim of hero worship. 520p il pa $3.75 Chronica botanica

B or 92 Burbank, Luther 46-4033

"Not a conventional biography, but an attempt to present certain aspects of Burbank's character and his activities in horticulture and in business without either the adulation of earlier days or the derision of some scientists' criticisms. Admitting the man's shortcomings, the author still believes he was victimized by others. A valuable feature of the book is a listing and appraisal of Burbank's products. This list is condensed from a bulletin of the Agricultural experiment station, Berkeley, California. For large or special libraries." Booklist

Booklist 42:327 Je 15 '46

"Dr. Howard has performed a public service in defending Burbank's fame while chopping down the tall tales about him. Though he has less literary skill than many who have written about Burbank, his work, as a whole, towers above that of all the others. It shows that what biography needs is a few more pomologists." Robert Simpson

+ N Y Times p45 S 15 '46 950w

HOWE, CONSTANCE BERESFORD. See Beresford-Howe, C.

HOWE, HELEN HUNTINGTON. We happy few. 345p $2.75 Simon & Schuster 46-17066

Picture of life among a small group of Harvard professors and their wives, before and during World war II. An Idaho reformer, a man of fine caliber, but not too polished, is introduced into the rarified atmosphere, for contrast.

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 JI '46

"A nicely styled, neatly scored portrait of the intelligentsia, which takes off and takes down the exclusive circle of enlightenment of Boston and the Cambridge campus, and features the best of the talent portrayed in the earlier, more emotional The Whole Heart."

+ Kirkus 14:111 Mr 1 '46 210w

"Interesting story." J. L. Ross

+ Library J 71:758 My 15 '46 70w

"It is in the first half of her book, when Miss Howe is concentrating on the embattled culture of her small section of New England, before she introduces her heroine to the enlarging experience of the great West, that she manages not only to be most entertaining but also to suggest the most mature and universal meanings. . . Miss Howe's novel falls apart in the middle and the break, it seems to me, is the result of a fault not so much of narrative structure as of basic idea." Diana Trilling

+ Nation 163:50 JI 13 '46 1150w

New Repub 114:941 JI 1 '46 50w

"[The author] portrays the inner circle of the Harvard faculty with such skill at talking its special language, at playing its elusive game of intellectual ping-pong, that the reader can well understand how Dorothea, wife of a distinguished member of the faculty, enjoys her own proficiency and makes of the game what is, to her, a full life. Miss Howe satirizes the intellectual snobbery, the hot-house preciosity, the elaborate personalities of Dorothea and her friends. The sarcasm would not be so telling did she not convey, expertly, the snob-appeal of being exclusive." Frederica Weeks

+ N Y Times p5 JI 7 '46 650w

"The author's style is sharp rather than witty, and her treatment of her subject is occasionally penetrating and always moderately diverting."

+ New Yorker 22:77 Je 29 '46 110w

"We Happy Few" will remain a permanent addition to the list of novels that skilfully and with some cruelty dissect a woman's nature. It is the second step of a career as promising as any other woman writer's in this country." Harrison Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 29:9 JI 20 '46 850w

Springf'd Republican p4d JI 14 '46 400w
Time 48:100 JI 15 '46 450w

"Miss Howe is a better novelist here than she was in 'The Whole Heart'. Though there is less feeling in this book, its content is harder and firmer and her skill has greatly increased. She does not ask why academic life—for what she complains of is not a Harvard monopoly—erodes courage and integrity, but she is excellent and sometimes magnificent in rendering the surfaces of that erosion. She has wit, malice, and dexterity in full measure, and the first half of her novel, which is in her proper medium, is as good as anything that has come out of New England in two generations." Bernard De Voto

+ Weekly Book Review p2 Je 30 '46 900w

"Miss Howe has produced an extremely entertaining novel—one that should make any reader examine his own soul with a preliminary shudder. But Miss Howe's loathsome heroine reforms (after many trying tribulations, it is true) and she fails to make one believe in this ending." Orville Prescott

+ Yale R n s 36:191 autumn '46 480w

HOWE, MARK ANTONY DE WOLFE. The tale of Tanglewood; scene of the Berkshire music festivals; with an introduction by Serge Koussevitzky. 101p il $2 Vanguard

785 Berkshire symphonic festivals 46-6037

The historian of the Boston Symphony orchestra here tells the story of the origin and progress of the Berkshire Symphonic music festivals, explaining Nathaniel Hawthorne's early sojourn at Tanglewood. Illustrated with photographs. Contains the programs of all the Symphonic festivals. Index.

Booklist 43:31 O 1 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '46

Kirkus 14:169 Ap 1 '46 110w

"This little tribute will probably be a welcome souvenir to many people of rewarding afternoons and evenings of great music and fine vistas." Howard Taubman

+ N Y Times p27 Je 30 '46 650w

Theatre Arts 30:556 S '46 40w

Reviewed by Harriet Whicher

Weekly Book Review p12 Je 16 '46 850w

Wis Lib Bul 42:147 N '46

HOWE, QUINCY. Years of wrath. See Low, D.

HOWE, THOMAS CARR. Salt mines and castles; the discovery and restitution of looted European art. 334p Il $3.50 Bobbs 940.53187 World war, 1939-1945—Art and the war. Art—Europe 46-11820

An account of the author's work as a member of the staff of art experts who searched out and identified the European art treasures stolen by the Nazis.

Reviewed by D. C. Rich
Book Week p2 D 1 '46 500w
Booklist 43:116 D 15 '46

"This is fascinating material, and to anyone informed and interested in the subject of the recovery of the looted art treasures of Europe, it will be fascinating reading. The average reader, however, will find that the author—a 'museum man' before he is a writer—has missed the dramatic values of the incredible story."

+ — Kirkus 14:573 N 1 '46 110w

"Almost a diary in treatment, this book is effective as an eye-witness story." W. G. Dooley

+ N Y Times p5 N 24 '46 700w

Reviewed by Alfred Frankenstein
San Francisco Chronicle p13 N 24 '46 500w

Reviewed by F. H. Taylor
Weekly Book Review p6 D 22 '46 700w

HOWELL, VIRGINIA. Who likes the dark? with pictures by Marjorie Thompson. $1.50 Howell, Soskin

A picture book for little children, designed to counteract any fear of the dark a child might have.

"So often small children go through a phase of fearing the dark. 'Who Likes the Dark?' is a friendly, charmingly written book which will help dispel that fear. . . Marjorie Thompson's lovely pictures add to the illusion so that most anybody would begin to like the dark."

+ Book Week p8 N 11 '45 150w

Booklist 42:230 Mr 15 '46

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p9 O 29 '46 70w

"A soothing book for the nursery age, telling drowsily of resting and dreaming, of soft night sounds and little animals which go abroad in the country, of twinkling lights in the city." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:131 Mr '46 80w

"This is the most successful book in this field that has come my way."

+ Kirkus 13:523 D 1 '45 110w

Reviewed by Gertrude Andrus
Library J 71:347 Mr 1 '46 70w

"A fine book to read aloud before bedtime, a pleasing one to look at, this should cure any small child's fear of the dark. . . A book to sharpen a child's awareness of his world and then send him content to bed." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p24 F 3 '46 80w

"This is one of the so-called 'adjustment' books, trying to adjust the very small child to some condition that might be frightening. It is a nice job, and not too obvious." Phyllis Fenner

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Mr 10 '46 90w
Wis Lib Bul 42:47 Mr '46

HOWES, JANE. Slow dawning. 268p $3 Herder
230.2 Roman Catholic church—Doctrinal and controversial works 46-6461

"Jane Howes gives us, in [this book], an account of her nine-year pilgrimage to the baptismal font. That she is a wife and mother, with a university background, are the only biographical facts that emerge from her book. It is an odyssey that takes us, hurdle by hurdle, over the difficult course that stretches from agnosticism to faith." Commonweal

Reviewed by B. L. Conway
Cath World 164:282 D '46 400w

"It is a singularly good piece of work, even in a field of literature that has been blessed with many fine apologies. Jane Howes's style has a down-to-earth intimacy, and her examples have a pin-point acuteness that are reminiscent of C. S. Lewis at his best—with-out that gentleman's uncertainties."

+ Commonweal 44:605 O 4 '46 200w

HOWIE, EDITH. Band played murder. 243p $2 Mill 46-21745

Mystery story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Book Week p12 N 17 '46 50w
Booklist 43:133 Ja 1 '47

"Pretty thin fare, but good enough entertainment. . . A reasonable enough solution." Kirkus 14:437 S 1 '46 90w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p48 N 17 '46 100w

"Colorful, unassuming and pleasant." Anthony Boucher
+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 10 '46 50w

"Fair." Sat R of Lit 29:32 D 14 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p40 O 27 '46 120w

HOWIE, EDITH. No face to murder. 281p $2 Mill 46-872

Detective story.

Booklist 42:227 Mr 15 '46

Kirkus 13:480 N 1 '45 60w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p22 Ja 13 '46 150w

"Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:26 Ja 12 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p18 Ja 20 '46 150w

HOWSON, ROGER. His excellency, a trustee, and some other Columbia pieces. 272p $2.50 Columbia univ. bkstore, 2960 Broadway, N.Y. 27

378 Columbia university 46-750

"This little book is a collection of one hundred and thirteen sketches embodying as much data and details as is humanly possible about Columbia's past and present. Mr. Howson seems to have left no stone unturned; he covers practically every phase channelling the origins of the university's various departments, offices, services and societies in an exceedingly neat and engaging manner." (Commonweal) The selections are a by-product of a proposed anniversary history of Columbia university and were put together for publication in the Columbia Alumni news.

"The book is written with ease, concisely and unpretentiously. His method is primarily anecdotal often with a pleasing dash of humor. . . Because most of what he writes about is handled so well one can only wish that Mr. Howson had organized his book more as a chronicled story of Columbia than as a series of essays which are in no sense sequential. This is technical, of course, but for me, it destroyed a sense of continuity and balance that the book might otherwise have possessed." L. A. Collins

+ — Commonweal 44:51 Ap 26 '46 490w

School & Society 63:87 F 2 '46 20w

HOYNINGEN-HUENE, GEORGE, II. Mexican heritage; text by Alfonso Reyes. 136p $7.50 Augustin

917.2 Mexico—Views 46-5344

"Mr. Hoyningen-Huene, photographer who has practiced successfully on Egypt and Greece, now turns his camera, with intense selectivity, on the interiors and exteriors of Mexican churches, peasant houses, and baroque mansions, contrasting them with shots of Aztec relics, jungle vistas, and so on. The result brings out vividly the mixture of savagery and religion, the barbarous and the baroque, that is Mexico." New Yorker

Booklist 43:52 O 15 '46

New Yorker 22:60 J1 6 '46 100w

"There has been no more knowing camera in Mexico or more revealing photographic record than this." B. D. Wolfe

+ Weekly Book Review p4 S 1 '46 450w

HUBER, EDDIE, and ROGERS, NORMAN G. Complete ski manual; how to begin, how to improve, how to excel. 137p il $3 Prentice-Hall

796.93 Skis and ski running 46-11999

"Helpful suggestions for buying and caring for skis in addition to sking instructions for beginners. Illustrated by photographs and sketches. Useful even to the expert skier because it contains good reference material on the history of sking." (Booklist) Glossary.

Booklist 43:104 D 1 '46

"Frank and to the point, and illustrated with photographs."

+ Kirkus 14:337 J1 15 '46 90w

Reviewed by Frank Elkins

N Y Times p20 Ja 5 '47 90w

San Francisco Chronicle p8 D 1 '46 30w

HUBERMAN, LEO. Truth about unions. 87p il pa $1 Pamphlet press

331.88 Trade unions 46-25069

"A clear account of the structure and functions of unions, and of the opposition they face, by a pro-union writer. Includes a directory of unions and their approximate membership in 1944." Booklist

Reviewed by Justin McCarthy

Book Week p2 Mr 10 '46 400w

Booklist 42:221 Mr 15 '46

Reviewed by J. L. Harrington

Canadian Forum 26:66 Je '46 550w

Reviewed by Harlan Trott

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 16 '46 240w

Reviewed by Francis Downing

Commonweal 44:290 J1 5 '46 390w

"There is a fine chapter on strikes and their causes. In the space allowed, the handling is necessarily superficial, but the author has successfully simplified the subject."

+ Kirkus 14:64 F 1 '46 270w

Reviewed by I. F. Stone

Nation 162:222 Mr 16 '46 210w

"Mr. Huberman writes very clearly and simply—sometimes perhaps a little more simply than he needs to, though that is hardly for a professional economist to judge." P. M. Sweezy

+ New Repub 114:452 Ap 1 '46 400w

"Mr. Huberman's book, an admirable piece of popular writing, is admittedly pro-union, but then it would seem to be an integral part of his theory that a pro-union stand is the only possible one for anybody who knows the whole truth about unions."

+ New Yorker 22:86 Mr 2 '46 80w

"Leo Huberman, with labored yet necessary simplicity, has written a well illustrated book urgently needed to promote clear thinking about trade unions. . . . Those who have been misinformed about the legal status of the unions and cherish the illusion that unions are too powerful, and those who shout for punitive anti-union laws whenever their personal comfort and plans are interfered with by strikes, would all be helped by this clearly written exposition of the cases for unions." Mark Starr

Sat R of Lit 29:20 My 11 '46 1450w

Spring'd Republican p6 Mr 9 '46 300w

"With so much that is good and valuable in his book, this reviewer only regrets that Mr.

Huberman has not been more objective in his treatment of the material. So often the friends of labor weaken their good case by overselling it. Persons who have followed closely the increasingly full and objective reporting of labor news by an important segment of the press will regret the indiscriminate attacks upon the press which run throughout the book. Mr. Huberman's argument for unionism is good, but he detracts from it when he repeatedly accuses the press of 'completely false and distorted treatment of labor news.'" E. M. Herrick

+ Weekly Book Review p14 Mr 31 '46 850w

HUBLER, RICHARD GIBSON. I've got mine. 216p $2.50 Putnam

46-2498

Story of a party of marines landing on a Pacific island during World War II. Three of them are given the task of locating and removing a French settler. The Japanese close in and the party is rescued by Army Rangers.

Reviewed by Jex Martin

Book Week p3 Mr 31 '46 320w

"On a par with the average 'western' thriller." J. A. Sohon

Library J 71:406 Mr 15 '46 70w

"Richard Hubler, captain, United States Marine Corps . . . has earned some kind of special citation for being the first to introduce a girl theme into this particular forsaken corner of the war. In so doing, above and beyond the call of his story, he has distinguished himself for almost completely destroying a book that appeared, for the first sixty pages at least, to have been a sincere effort. If 'I've Got Mine' be a trend in Pacific war stories, beware of the fair things that will pop from the caves of Iwo Jima to help the marines take Mount Suribachi." Austin Stevens

+ N Y Times p20 Ap 7 '46 400w

"Captain Hubler's is not a pretty picture, but unfortunately it is a true one—one that had to be faced every day by our Pacific soldiers. It is a good thing that someone has finally told the story." A. C. Fields

+ Sat R of Lit 29:35 My 4 '46 400w

"'I've Got Mine,' written by a captain in the marines, is an adventure story pure and simple, but it has a truthful ring that is lacking in many more pretentious war books." Herbert Kupferberg

+ Weekly Book Review p18 Ap 7 '46 550w

HUDSON, WILLIAM HENRY. Tales of the gauchos; stories; comp. and ed. by Elizabeth Coatsworth; il. by Henry C. Pitz. 251p $3 Knopf

46-891

Stories selected from the works of W. H. Hudson, which include extracts from Far Away and Long Ago, A Little Boy Lost, The Purple Land, Green Mansions, Idle Days in Patagonia, and The Naturalist in La Plata. A brief introduction by the editor gives the background of Hudson's early life in Argentina.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p14 My 26 '46 150w

"It is this reviewer's opinion that the stories will for the most part, be of little interest to children and that young people will prefer reading the complete books. The format is misleading both as to age and subject appeal. Recommend examination before buying for children's room."

Booklist 42:230 Mr 15 '46

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 22:212 My '46 240w

"Elizabeth Coatsworth has made the selection and edited the material for this volume, but the stories seem uneven in appeal for this age level. There are tales of drama, humor, adventure, fantasy, observation; there's a good deal of writing with the philosophical unreal quality which is definitely more adult in appeal. The illustrations by Henry C. Pitz are stunning—it's a beautiful piece of book making, though the action quality in drawings and jacket might be misleading and indicate this as a collection of adventure stories primarily."

HUDSON, W. H.—Continued

+ — Kirkus 14:39 Ja 15 '46 180w

"A discriminating selection. . . The book is well designed, but the illustrations are too vivid to catch the spirit of the tales." Dorothy Dawson

+ — Library J 71:409 Mr 15 '46 140w

"Among the many anthologies published for young people these days it would be difficult to find one more thoroughly justifiable and more completely desirable than this collection from the writings of the naturalist, Hudson. . . It is not a book for every young person, but thoughtful boys and girls, alert to the wonders of the natural world in which they live, will be entranced." R. T. Bond

+ N Y Times p26 Ap 7 '46 500w

"Elizabeth Coatsworth has done a fine piece of editing in her selection and arrangement of these stories by the great English naturalist. . . Her arrangement achieves a continuity that takes us straight into the spirit and atmosphere of the Argentine and its birds and beasts and people. Whether he writes as a naturalist, a novelist, or a recorder of his own memories, Hudson's clarity and beauty are the same. One can read with the same delight and absorption his 'meditation' on the dragonfly and the swift action and mystery of Nino Diablo." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:42 Mr 9 '46 700w

"Elizabeth Coatsworth has made a discriminating selection which might well lead the boy or girl lucky enough to find it straight into the wonder and eerie charm of Hudson's complete works." Margaret Scoggins

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Mr 17 '46 320w

HUENE, GEORGE HOYNINGEN. See Hoyningen-Huene, G.

HUESTON, ETHEL (POWELSON) (MRS E. J. BEST). Please, no paregoric! 239p $2.50 Bobbs

46-6105

Story dealing with the problem of the Returned Soldier and how Wade Bradwell's family and friends attempted to solve it, with and without Wade's help.

Book Week p8 O 20 '46 90w

Booklist 43:53 O 15 '46

Kirkus 14:278 Je 15 '46 180w

"The family-style humor is strictly homespun, and the romance for Wade is of the stereotyped variety. But the story is engagingly good-natured and will probably be heartily enjoyed by many families who have restless ex-soldiers on their hands. Miss Hueston's implied lessons on how to handle the unrehabilitated veteran should prove salutary." B. S.

+ N Y Times p27 Ag 25 '46 320w

Reviewed by R. M. Morgan

Spring'd Republican p4d S 8 '46 180w

"Ethel Hueston has written a sane and salutary novel. The touch is light but the theme is real. As an antidote for all the colicky treatises which the public has swallowed, 'Please, No Paregoric' is good medicine." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p11 S 1 '46 230w

HUFF, DARRELL. The dog that came true; ill. by Connie Moran and Diana Thorne. (Whittlesey house publication) 59p $1.25 McGraw

46-3163

A little boy dreams of a certain dog until the dog seems alive to him. Eventually his dream comes true.

Book Week p23 Je 2 '46 220w

Booklist 42:303 My 15 '46

Kirkus 14:126 Mr 1 '46 60w

"While some grown-ups may feel that William's imagination worked overtime, children will understand. It was lucky for William that his parents did." Phyllis Fenner

+ — N Y Times p14 Ap 21 '46 80w

"It's a good book for young children, and may do a good turn to a number of dogs seeking homes."

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Ap 14 '46 60w

"If ever you knew a boy who wanted a dog so badly it was like an ache in the bones to want him so; if ever you yourself wanted one that way when you were little, and everybody else thought you were ungrateful not to be satisfied with what you had, the suspense, tenderness and final happiness of this little story will strike you as completely true to life. It might be as well not to give it to a little boy like this, unless there is at least hope that he will some day have a dog. As for a boy with one, he will understand."

+ Weekly Book Review p12 My 19 '46 320w

Wis Lib Bul 42:89 Je '46

HUGGINS, ROY. Double take. 240p $2 Morrow 45-11149

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p8 Ja 20 '46 140w

"A smart spoken toughie, almost too complicated."

— Kirkus 13:480 N 1 '45 80w

"A shrewder detective might have arrived at the result earlier and with less damage to himself, but Bailey does the best he can with the brains his author gave him." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p30 Ja 20 '46 150w

"Scarcely distinguished, but well plotted enough to satisfy admirers of this sort of thing."

+ New Yorker 21:80 Ja 19 '46 60w

"High grade tough-un."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:26 Ja 12 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p18 Ja 20 '46 80w

HUGHES, MRS DOROTHY BELLE (FLANAGAN). Ride the pink horse. 248p $2.50 Duell 46-7903

A young crook known as Sailor arrives in Santa Fe at fiesta time for the purpose of getting even with a man who had double-crossed him in Chicago. Two people try to turn Sailor from his meditated revenge, but are unsuccessful and the result is disaster.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Book Week p15 N 3 '46 280w

Kirkus 14:504 O 1 '46 90w

"In this excellent novel Dorothy Hughes has given us a sympathetic study of the development of a criminal." I. A.

+ N Y Times p34 O 27 '46 230w

"Mrs. Hughes has sensibly gone back to mixing chills with excellent local color after her recent unsuccessful experiment with a straightforward mystery."

+ New Yorker 22:120 O 26 '46 80w

"Nobody but Dorothy Hughes can cast suspense into such an uncanny spell, and she's never done it better." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 24 '46 70w

"Rewarding terror-tale."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:44 N 2 '46 60w

"All readable, picturesque and puzzling, with the emphasis on toughness most of the time. This might seem an odd thing for Miss Hughes to be doing, but the results are more convincing than most of the hard-boiled stuff by her male rivals, maybe because she has thought Sailor out instead of just dumping a synthetic 'guy' into the hopper." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p40 O 27 '46 300w

HUGHES, MRS LORA (WOOD). No time for tears; decorations by Edwin Earle. (Life-in-America ser) 305p $3 Houghton

B or 92 Nurses and nursing 46-1227

Life story of an American nurse, whose determination to help suffering people began when she was a child, living on the Kansas prairies. Her work has called her to California, Honolulu, Montana, and Alberta. At seventy she planned to retire to own home in the Puget Sound country, but she was summoned to be supervisor of a Red Cross hospital unit, during the war.

"Wonder and compassion have filled the life of Lora Hughes. The collaboration of her friend Nell Macgregor is sensitive without being literarily pretentious. This is no book for those curious folk who would vicariously suffer the plush ailments of society-fagged females. The $64-word 'allergy' doesn't appear in the book. . . This modest, forthright and humorous account of a grand American woman and nurse is as refreshing as a cool summer breeze from across her own beloved Puget Sound." Robert Traver

+ Book Week p10 Mr 17 '46 450w

Booklist 42:246 Ap 1 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '46

Commonweal 43:656 Ap 12 '46 40w

"Told with a lively, warm appreciation of people and situations. There is inspiration here and testimony of a job well done and a crowded, rounded life."

+ Kirkus 14:15 Ja '46 200w

Reviewed by Lucy Greenbaum

N Y Times p26 Ap 14 '46 600w

"It will be surprising if this book is not as well accepted as Dr. Heiser's 'Odyssey'; it has the same warmth and simplicity and richness of episode. It is a nurse's Odyssey. . . It is full of American color, profound in the simple manner—we'll say it is a good book and not try to say how magnificently good it is." Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 29:46 Mr 30 '46 700w

Reviewed by Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Mr 17 '46 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 42:59 Ap '46

HUIE, WILLIAM BRADFORD. Case against the admirals; why we must have a unified command. 216p $2.50 Dutton

359 U.S. Navy department. U.S. War department. Aeronautics, Military 46-2135

"A strong plea for the unification of our armed forces. Author, who has written two books on the Seabees and The Fight for Air Power, presents quite an array of facts to prove his thesis. He shows how both the Army and Navy selfishly crippled the Air Corps so that we had no air power at all when Hitler began his try for world supremacy. He points out many examples of wastefulness due to lack of consolidation. And he directs our attention to the struggle for command position which still continues to the detriment of national security." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by F. S. Marquardt

Book Week p4 Ap 7 '46 650w

Booklist 42:276 My 1 '46

"A bitter denunciation of the old-line Maginot-minded admirals who have obstructed progress in warfare and the trend toward a united command in order to preserve Navy prestige. . . Very controversial—often weak in supporting his arguments—but probably will create talk."

Kirkus 14:117 Mr 1 '46 190w

"Thoughtful, timely book." H. G. Kelley

Library J 71:483 Ap 1 '46 130w

"Having warned the reader that he is a crusader, Mr. Huie . . . quite obviously felt no necessity to present a balanced report. . . That is not to say that Mr. Huie does not make a plausible case for his side, which is that of unification and particularly is the side of the Army Air Force. . . But the fault was not all on one side by several fathoms. . . Many mistakes were made in military matters in the years between the two World Wars. Many mistakes were made in the fighting of the last one. . . The Navy is responsible for many of them. But not all, by any means. . . But a book such as 'The Case Against the Admirals' does little to clarify the present issue of unification. Because of its biased nature and its many inaccuracies of fact and its implausible deductions, it may even have the opposite effect. Sincere advocates of unification would do well to disavow such intemperate attacks." Foster Halley

N Y Times p3 Mr 31 '46 1400w

"The author has weakened his case by strident italics and a great rattling of exclamation points. His book, even before publication, roused the Navy Department into distributing to the reviewers a letter that answered a number of Mr. Huie's charges but not, it must be said, his major indictments."

New Yorker 22:117 Ap 13 '46 200w

"Mr. Huie's main plea is for unification of the armed forces. . . It is a point well taken, as one Harry S. Truman has so recently testified, and the fact that the author has failed to cross a few t's and dot a few i's and has misspelled a few names here and there doesn't invalidate the case. . . Although Mr. Huie could have made his case more accurate and hence airtight, the author nevertheless does make his case." Robert Neville

+ Sat R of Lit 29:8 Ap 27 '46 700w

"The question stands in less need for public discussion than before the invention of the atomic bomb rendered vast fleets of bombing planes obsolescent, but there is room for consideration of the whole question in an atmosphere of reason and empiricism. There is less room for the discussion in the tone normally adopted by such people as Seversky, and no room at all to consider it in the manner of his bad-tempered, unfair, and inaccurate book. . . Mr. Huie makes very little contribution even to his own side." Fletcher Pratt

— Sat R of Lit 29:8 Ap 27 '46 800w

"A difficult book to appraise fairly because, in some ways, it is a bad presentation of a good case. . . The navy department, possibly with not the greatest wisdom on its part, has reacted angrily to Mr Huie's criticisms and has distributed statements calling attention to his inaccuracies. This has proved powder for Mr Huie's gun, for it has given valuable advertising to his book and to his counterblasts. But without entering into the facts of this dispute between navy department and author, it may be pointed out as possibly significant that there are other mistakes and inaccuracies which the department has ignored." R. H.

Springf'd Republican p4d Je 16 '46 300w

"William Bradford Huie is on a rampage. With stinging, verbal whips he lashes out against Army and Navy practices and faults which have angered him. One or two of his targets are dead horses, but alive or dead they receive his vehement contempt and condemnation in a book which is certain to stir up indignant controversy in high military circles. . . 'The Case Against the Admirals' is discursive, somewhat rambling, now and then lacking in proper emphasis. The Navy Department is already in arms against what it calls 'errors' in the book. Nevertheless, the subjects discussed should be seriously considered because American citizens and their representatives in Congress must decide whether the Army and Navy are to be modified, reformed or amalgamated in order to perform their functions more effectively." P. J. Searles

Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 14 '46 1000w

HULL, HELEN ROSE. Hawk's flight. 280p $2.50 Coward-McCann

46-25099

Study of four marriages, which treats of the effects of the partners upon each other. All four couples are neighbors, living on the Ridge in Connecticut. The central figure is a career woman, whose husband was a distinguished psychiatrist, and who has herself owned and operated a clinical laboratory.

HULL, H. R.—Continued

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock
 Book Week p5 Ap 7 '46 450w
 Booklist 42:282 My 1 '46
 Bookmark 7:16 My '46
 Cath World 163:475 Ag '46 200w

Reviewed by H. S. Taylor
 Library J 71:484 Ap 1 '46 130w

"This is that rare novel today, a character study uncluttered by political or ideological overtones. . . Helen Hull has drawn her characters with skill and restraint. Her writing is cool and perceptive. Despite its intricate technique, the pace of the book is smooth. But this is not a book in which pace—or even plot—is the author's primary concern. Miss Hull's leisurely style gives her characters time and space in which to develop, and their thoughts and reasons for action, more than their actions, are her interest. 'Hawk's Flight' is a well-realized, sensitive, even distinguished novel." Catherine Maher

+ N Y Times p12 Ap 14 '46 360w

"Miss Hull is a skilled hand at weaving the relations of upper-middle-class American families, yet her characters are not only dull but seem to have no meaning outside their own small, socially correct circle."

New Yorker 22:116 Ap 13 '46 50w

"It would seem less a stacking of the cards to support the contention that so few marriages are successful if Miss Hull had let at least one of these couples make the grade without catastrophe. . . Miss Hull is an accurate and perceptive observer of human behavior, particularly in American family life of the higher than middle bracket, intellectually; and economically. And she has handled her complex plot with great dexterity and precision. For all its intricacy, there is no confusion." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 29:13 Ap 27 '46 650w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 14 '46 300w

"Miss Hull's gift for actuality clothes the story with the circumstances and every-day events of the lives of people whom we ourselves would accept as interesting and, all in all, pleasant. . . 'Hawk's Flight' is an outstanding novel in design because of the clarity and suspense with which Miss Hull encompasses twenty years or more and the interactions of more than a dozen lives. It has the incisiveness of her earlier books and greater warmth and flexibility. It adds a distinguished story of American family life to the considerable list that already stands to her credit." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ap 7 '46 600w
 Wis Lib Bul 42:87 Je '46

"Hawk's Flight is both clever and provocative." Orville Prescott
 + Yale R n s 35:767 summer '46 230w

HUME, EDWARD HICKS. Doctors East, doctors West; an American physician's life in China. 278p il $3 Norton

B or 92 Physicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Medicine—China SG46-2

"Far more than an American doctor's autobiography of his life in China, this engrossing book is the epitome of an era. Its pages hold the story of those years when 'westerners were beginning to try to understand Chinese medical thought and when China was beginning to recognize the need of the Western approach to scientific medicine.' It is, moreover, the story of the development at Changsa, in Hunan Province, of Yale-in-China—or the 'Hsiangya enterprise,' the name signifying the joint, co-operative venture of Chinese and Americans to establish a university that would include a properly equipped medical college, nurses' school, and hospital." Scientific Bk Club R

Reviewed by I. Davidsohn
 Book Week p6 My 5 '46 400w
 Booklist 42:298 My 15 '46
 Bookmark 7:12 N '46

"The narrative is full of interesting, and sometimes exciting, incidents. It provides a remarkable inside view of the Chinese revolution.

Its great value is that it illustrates the process of achieving understanding between the Eastern and Western mind."

+ Christian Century 63:842 Jl 3 '46 280w

"'Doctors East, Doctors West' breathes the soul of poetry on its every page: a simple, uncritical sympathy for the spirit and egotism essential to man fumbling among unfamiliar superstitions." E. L. Keyes

+ Commonweal 44:124 My 17 '46 260w

Foreign Affairs 25:172 O '46 30w

Kirkus 14:93 F 15 '46 160w

Reviewed by Eleanor Lattimore

+ N Y Times p7 My 5 '46 1250w

"'Doctors East, Doctors West' is not of much historical or political importance, and its medical facts are intentionally exiguous, but it will, I think, give vast pleasure and some instruction to anyone who reads it. It is written by a man who has nice literary manners. It is extremely modest. It is, indeed, a simple and exciting treatise upon the truth of its last sentence:—'Only those can enter effectively into her life who approach China's citadel by the way of friendship.'" George Dangerfield

+ Sat R of Lit 29:7 My 4 '46 1600w

"The comments on Chinese family, official, and communal life are keen and sympathetic. The anecdotes are amusing, pathetic, and sometimes exciting. If there were enemies, the friends outnumbered them; often the hostile became stanch adherents. Dr. Hume muses on some of his good friends—they came from every walk of life and every economic stratum. By his tact and his medical skill, he proved a truer ambassador than many political figures."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 17:2 My '46 480w

Reviewed by Frederick Reinstein

Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 4 '46 420w

"'Doctors East, Doctors West' will prove invaluable in giving an insight into Chinese culture, habits, and mentality, upon knowledge of which depends any real comprehension of the country." J. B. Grant, M.D.

+ Survey G 35:332 S '46 230w

Time 47:108 My 13 '46 400w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:288 D '46 300w

"Unlike most laymen who have had something to say in print about Chinese medicine, and who delight to tell of some of the absurd or disgusting remedies that figure in the Chinese pharmacopoeia, Dr. Hume's attitude was characteristically friendly and sympathetic toward his native colleagues of the old school; and he was rewarded by the discovery that they had known for centuries—millenniums even—some things which he thought were the original observations of his preceptors in college." Rodney Gilbert

+ Weekly Book Review p3 My 5 '46 1600w

Wis Lib Bul 42:85 Je '46

HUMPHREYS, JOHN R. Vandameer's road. 297p $2.75 Scribner

46-1795

This story is partly an account of the fantastic imaginings of a nine-year old boy, partly a realistic picture of life in a middle western community where the boy's parents are looked upon with dislike and suspicion. The reasons for the suspicions of the neighbors are gradually unfolded in this story of the Hendersons, queer bearded Showell, his half demented wife Ruth, their eldest boy Vince, and the little one, Jorg.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Book Week p8 Mr 17 '46 150w

Kirkus 14:42 F 1 '46 210w

"Unfortunately Mr. Humphreys is lacking in the craftsmanship of fiction. He tells his story awkwardly, and his prose fluctuates from the pseudo-poetic to the banal. Jorg's fantastic adventures lose effectiveness because they are not seen through the eyes of a child, but are palpably the imaginings of an author striving to be 'different.' Despite occasional bits of accurate observation and flashes of insight into character motivation, this is an unsuccessful first novel." Alan Vrooman

+ N Y Times p12 F 24 '46 270w

"The denouement is elaborate and satisfying. The appliqué of fantasy and romance on the stern Michigan scene is most skillfully accomplished. The little boy's imaginings, partly from conscious experience, partly from his subconsciousness of realities, and partly from the literary subconscious are amusing, pathetic, and generally superb." Phil Stong
+ Sat R of Lit 29:19 Mr 2 '46 320w

Reviewed by Richard Match
Weekly Book Review p8 F 24 '46 700w

HUMPHREYS, ROBERT ARTHUR. Evolution of modern Latin America. 176p maps $3 (7s 6d) Oxford

980 Latin America—History 46-8003

"This little book, which originally took the form of lectures given at Cambridge in the spring of 1945, is designed as an introduction to the modern history of Latin America. . . Its purpose is to examine the evolution of the Latin American states since the achievement of their independence, in the light of changing political, social, and economic conditions, and to interest the student of politics and history in that evolution. The footnotes, and the brief Note on Sources, are intended to serve as a guide to further reading." (Pref) The author is reader in American history in the University of London.

"It is possible to disagree with the emphasis that Mr. Humphreys has given to certain events or to their causes but, since he is an able and honest historian, he makes no claim that his interpretation is the only possible view of things. The result is a fascinating survey which should be of great value as standard introduction to the subject. It also contains a useful bibliographical guide."

+ New Statesman & Nation 32:345 N 9 '46 300w

"A timely and most valuable contribution to the literature on Latin America." K. G. Grubb

+ Spec 176:328 Mr 29 '46 700w

"Dr. Humphreys is to be congratulated on a volume which does credit to British scholarship. Not often is so much accurate and judiciously selected information put into such small compass and still less often is such compression achieved without the sacrifice of grace of style. This is a model text-book exactly suited to the needs of a time when historical teaching is called upon to broaden its scope, but it is also a penetrating study well worth the attention of the general reader afraid of losing his way amid the perplexities of Latin-American politics."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p183 Ap 20 '46 850w

HUNGERFORD, EDWARD. Men of Erie: a story of human effort. 346p il $3.75 Random house

385 Erie railroad 47-231

Chronicle of the Erie railroad from its earliest beginnings in 1829 to the present. It is more an account of the construction and operation of the road, and the men connected with it, than of its financial difficulties. Illustrated with old prints and maps. List of presidents of the line, bibliography, and index.

"Railroad addicts—and there are many outside the operating field—will enjoy this new Hungerford book."

+ Kirkus 14:510 O 1 '46 120w

"Recommended." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 71:1624 N 15 '46 140w

Reviewed by Ruth Teiser

San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 19 '46 250w

"Although Mr. Hungerford's book must of necessity lean heavily on the work of Edward H. Mott, to whom he gives graceful credit, the volume gains added authority because Mr. Hungerford is himself an old Erie man, having in 1905 founded an employees' magazine for the road. . . Mr. Hungerford, who has written excellent, if none too critical, histories of the Baltimore & Ohio, the New York Central and other systems, has done right by Old Faithful, telling its story in some detail and with loving care. . . The volume contains many good prints and photographs, old and new, and several maps, the one of the Erie's entire territory being far too crowded for easy reference."

Stewart Holbrook

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ja 5 '47 1100w

HUNGERFORD, EDWARD. Pattern for a railroad for tomorrow, 1960; with special il. by James Carr [and others]. ltd ed 323p maps $5 Kalmbach pub. co. 1027 N 7th st, Milwaukee 3

385 Railroads—U.S.

46-78

In fiction form this book tells the story of an American industrial leader of the future, one William Wiggins, who fathered the American railroad system known as the United States Railroad. The story, covering the years from the close of the Second World war to 1960, is based on the past, and present—and possible future—history and conditions of American railroading.

"'A Railroad for Tomorrow' is remarkably inclusive and shows well the author's speaking acquaintance with the railroads' major posers. Whether or not it offers really adequate solutions to specific problems remains to be seen. Its main plan, a consolidated national railroad, seems possible only in a book or under a State controlled system. Mr. Hungerford protests frequently that it is possible under free enterprise, given strong enough leadership. Workable details are not given, however, and there is no point in quibbling over the practicality of a Utopian ideal." Ruth Teiser

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 5 '46 750w

"To anybody interested in railroads and railroading this is an informative book. It is also a provoking book, because it is really three volumes in one, and they are so commingled that they leave the reader at times breathlessly confused. . . [However] this is an interesting if ill-arranged and none too well digested book. The reader will have to sort out the three parts, but each of them is worth reading. No doubt by 1960 much of the book will excite a smile, but some of it may be regarded as authentic prophecy." Allan Nevins

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:42 Ap 20 '46 1150w

HUNT, ALEXANDER. Wagner: il by Andre Dugo. (Hyperion music ser) 48p $1.75 Duell B or 92 Wagner, Richard—Juvenile literature 46-4936

A brief biography of Richard Wagner, written for children from the ages of eight to fourteen.

"A briefly summarized account of details in Wagner's life most likely to interest younger children is here related by an able music critic." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:275 Jl '46 40w

Kirkus 14:253 Je 1 '46 40w

"Another delightful music biography in the Hyperion Music Series. Author, an eminent musician, has created a vivid and sympathetic portrait of Wagner's amazing life and contribution to music." S. J. Robinson

+ Library J 71:983 Jl '46 70w

Reviewed by Lois Palmer

N Y Times p14 Jl 7 '46 50w

Reviewed by Grace Stevens

San Francisco Chronicle p13 N 10 '46 80w

Weekly Book Review p8 Je 7 '46 60w

HUNT, BARBARA. Sea change. 270p $2.50 Rinehart

46-4799

An evil and possessive woman is the heroine of this novel of New England in the 1820's. Lucy Overby determined to marry Esteem Mathias even though she had to buy the ship he wanted to get him. When Esteem sailed away to China she followed him in thought. When he wrote of his love for other women

HUNT, BARBARA—Continued

Lucy took to witchcraft, and in her desire to regain possession of him sunk to unbelievable depths. The end is stark tragedy.

"'Sea Change' is diverting horror, fantasy—that refreshing catalyst that reading occasionally requires. But it is not one of the really superior supernatural tales." Elizabeth Stewart

Book Week p8 Ag 11 '46 410w

Booklist 43:17 S '46

Kirkus 14:204 My 1 '46 180w

"Fascinating first novel of sinister, evil woman reminiscent of Ellen in Leave Her to Heaven. . . Recommended for readers interested in vampire tales." E. F. Kelly

+ Library J 71:978 J1 '46 70w

"At times 'Sea Change' comes close to being a sort of handy handbook of 'Black Magic for Beginners.' This may be because the author takes her material too hard. . . This is too bad, for Miss Hunt really has something on the ball. She has a good story, and a lot of it is agreeably hair-raising. She will do better when she takes time out from ghost studies—and pays more attention to the technicalities of ghost stories." Jane Cobb

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 25 '46 600w

"Fascinating occult details (including a fine description of a Sabbath) embedded in careless scholarship." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 22 '46 50w

"There is enough irony and detachment in Miss Hunt's recital of these extraordinary events, set in 1820, to suggest, if you insist on some factual basis for fiction, that Lucy's hallucinations, and not occult powers, are responsible for what happens. In any case, the story is briskly told and with considerable felicity of style. Especially remarkable are the scenes in which Lucy makes her mystic travels into space and time. This is reading paced to hold your interest on the hottest, most listless day." Stephen Stepanchev

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 18 '46 360w

HUNT, FREDERICK (JOHN FITZGAY, pseud). Royal twilight. 317p $3 Roy pubs. [9s 6d Rich]

Carlos II, king of Spain—Fiction. Maria Luisa de Orleans, consort of Carlos II, king of Spain—Fiction [46-22553]

Historical novel of Spain in the seventeenth century. It concerns the intrigues which revolved around the young wife of the idiot King Carlos, intrigues in which the kings and queens, princes and princesses of many countries played their parts.

Booklist 43:53 O 15 '46

Kirkus 14:309 J1 1 '46 150w

"Perfect novel for the tired business man. Recommended for small libraries." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 71:1127 S 1 '46 100w

"At first glance this technicolor novel may look like another 'Black Rose.' Actually it is the work of a diligent historian steeped in the intricacies of seventeenth-century politics. . . Quite obviously the author has worked hard to find a spot for every last bit of his detailed knowledge in order to create what is known as authentic atmosphere. In addition to endowing the customs and manners of his characters with scores of overwrought particulars, he tries to restore their seventeenth-century speech, and even carries its style into his own narrative." Robert Pick

Sat R of Lit 29:28 S 21 '46 300w

"You should not look here for a study of the relationship between the intrigue-ridden court and the starving populace at the palace gates. The rioting commoners stay at the gates, and that's that. And if you dislike an imitation seventeenth-century style you may be irritated by Mr. Fitzgay." Stephen Stepanchev

Weekly Book Review p12 S 29 '46 450w

HUNT, GEORGE PINNEY. Coral comes high: with a foreword by Alexander A. Vandegrift; drawings by the author. 147p $2 Harper

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Pelew islands. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American. U.S. Marine corps. 1st division

46-2844

An account of the part played by a rifle company under the author's command in the assault on Peleliu during September, 1944. Out of his company of 235 men only 78 were alive forty-eight hours later. This is an almost blow-by-blow account of the action.

"This thoroughly realistic and superlatively readable book is the kind that might be written by any number of Americans who waded ashore under fire when storming Japanese-held Pacific isles—if they had the gift of style comparable to Captain Hunt's. . . The book can be recommended to anyone who is not squeamish about blood and muck."

+ Cath World 163:381 J1 '46 100w

Foreign Affairs 25:340 Ja '47 30w

Kirkus 14:86 F 15 '46 90w

"Were it possible to recapture at once the most perilous episode and the most imperishable memory in the history of an infantry company, this, I imagine, is the kind of book that would result. Captain Hunt is that rara avis among military commanders, a man who sees battle in the idiomatic terms of human experience. . . Having witnessed most of the battle from his command post, Captain Hunt had the sense of being not only an observer but, as commander of the company, a prime agent in the drama. Almost nothing that happened escaped his notice; what he did not witness in person he has carefully pieced together from interviews with survivors. The result is a vivid re-creation of a two-day nightmare." D. D.

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 7 '46 320w

"Captain Hunt has described the hell endured by himself and his men on the Point with simplicity and feeling. . . The strength of the book lies in the ability of the author to write with modesty and to give a factual report of what occurred, without adding the trimmings of the public relations people which so often adorn a war story." R. A. Low

+ Sat R of Lit 29:46 Ap 20 '46 550w

Time 47:108 My 6 '46 220w

"Captain Hunt writes with vigor, intensity, deep emotional feeling and understanding of men who doggedly suffer and die without a whimper. His is a truly fine narrative." P. J. Searles

+ Weekly Book Review p3 My 5 '46 500w

HUNTER, RUTH. It fell upon a day. 242p $2.75 Scribner

Character study of a girl who grew up in New York and Chicago in the '20s. Her relationship with her book-loving, ineffectual father is the central point of the story.

Book Week p5 N 24 '46 90w

"This is slow-paced realism, softened by a father-daughter attachment and sympathetic characterization. A sociological novel lacking the documentary harshness."

Kirkus 14:528 O 15 '46 140w

"Rachel, whose gushy philosophizing threatens to make her a white-collar Pollyanna, is rescued from that fate by her plausibility and her good sense. And a story which is plotted very thinly is saved from triviality by the author's expert and exuberant use of local color. Miss Hunter apparently is close to her material; with sincere intent she has attempted to show that life for the poor and the underprivileged, while it may not be beautiful, need never be dull." Mary McGrory

+ N Y Times p30 N 17 '46 480w

"Ruth Hunter writes of the drab side of Chicago with fidelity, but not much flavor." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p44 D 8 '46 110w

HURD, CHARLES. The veterans' program; a complete guide to its benefits, rights and options. (Whittlesey house publication). 287p $2 McGraw 355.115 Veterans—Employment. Veterans—

Laws and legislation 46-631

"Explicit explanation of the veterans' rights for bonus, job preference, education both technical and liberal, hospitalization, general and specific disability and problems relating to readjustments in civilian life." (Library J) Contains 355 questions and answers. Index to questions.

Booklist 42:208 Mr 1 '46

Bookmark 7:5 My '46

"The most clean cut and comprehensive handbook on every phase of the veteran program—of utmost value to any veteran or veteran counselor."

+ Kirkus 13:554 D 15 '45 180w

Library J 71:346 Mr 1 '46 50w

"Once in a very great while it is a pleasure to report of a book that it has an immediate dollar-and-cents value for millions of readers. This is a large order. Nevertheless, Mr. Hurd's guide to the benefits, rights and options of the veterans' program fills it pretty much to the letter so well, indeed that it merits the widest possible distribution. Not only will ex-service men and women profit by its reading, but also officials of high and low degree within the Veterans Administration and those in the many other bureaus active in some phase of the program." E. B. G.

+ N Y Times p22 Je 23 '46 650w

"There is nothing in Mr. Hurd's book not already available from various sources, but he has achieved a great deal in his job of assembly, compilation, and summation into one volume the answers to many of the headaches and heartaches of today." G. B. Erskine

Survey 82:304 N '46 600w

"Mr. Hurd does not deal with any veterans' problem as such, but has written an outline of the rights and benefits provided for under current Federal and state legislation. He has attempted to simplify an extremely complicated set of legislative and administrative rules. He has oversimplified some of these questions, however, and in doing so left gaps. But his basic idea is good. . . 'The Veterans' Program' is clear, concise and well organized. Unfortunately the book is already dated. In view of the recent amendments to the law, a noted substantial portion of the information is now inaccurate and untrue." J. N. Feldman

+ Weekly Book Review p24 Mr 3 '46 270w

Wis Lib Bul 42:57 Ap '46

HUROK, SOLOMON. Impresario; a memoir [written] in collaboration with Ruth Goode. 291p il $3 Random house

B or 92

46-25185

Reminiscences of the Russian-American opera, ballet, and theater manager. With the assistance of a collaborator he describes his experiences of the past thirty-odd years, during which time he managed such famous artists as: Pavlova, Chaliapin, Isadora Duncan, Marian Anderson, Markova, Danilova, Lichina, and Dolin. Illustrated with photographs. No index.

Atlantic 178:156 Jl '46 270w

Reviewed by Bentley Stegner

Book Week p8 Je 2 '46 700w

Booklist 42:327 Je 15 '46

+ Kirkus 14:63 F 1 '46 150w

"Chronicle without too much perception. No story with such characters could be uninteresting, however. Recommended for theater, music and dance collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 71:483 Ap 1 '46 110w

"This new book [was] written with the skillful help of Ruth Goode. But, unfortunately, Mr. Hurok hasn't told all; he hasn't even begun to tell all. It is true that Mr. Hurok takes you behind the scenes and tells a lot about great names like Feodor Chaliapin, Anna Pavlova and Isadora Duncan." Howard Taubman

+ N Y Times p7 My 26 '46 1100w

"An autobiography of sorts, in which Mr. Hurok generally lets his stars carry the burden. It's just as well, for Mr. Hurok is neither a writer nor adept at picking someone to do his writing for him. The book is really just a chain of anecdotes—some good, some so-so. . . Many fine photographs."

New Yorker 22:95 Je 15 '46 80w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 18 '46 370w

Reviewed by Bernard Sobel

Sat R of Lit 29:15 Ag 17 '46 1000w

Theatre Arts 30:556 S '46 40w

"A gay and gusty guide for those who could do with a few clues on how to cope with the artistic temperament should they collide with it. . . A good salty book is Hurok's 'Impresario.'" Richard Maney

+ Weekly Book Review p2 Je 2 '46 800w

HUSE, HOWARD RUSSELL. Reading and speaking foreign languages. 128p $2 Univ. of N.C. press

407 Languages, Modern—Study and teaching 45-10357

"In this book the author offers suggestions for placing foreign-language instruction on a scientific basis and for eliminating an enormous waste of student time and effort." (School & Society) Bibliography. Index.

"An excellent book on one of the liveliest and most important fields of educational debate today." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 Ag 4 '46 70w

School & Society 62:391 D 15 '45 40w

HUSZAR, GEORGE BERNARD DE, comp. Anatomy of racial intolerance. (Reference shelf) 283p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

323.1 Race problems. U.S.—Race question 46-2984

Reprinted articles on various phases of race prejudice, its causes and remedies. Does not follow usual procedure of books in this series, in that it has articles only on one side of the question: it does not have articles favoring intolerance. Bibliography.

Booklist 42:301 My 15 '46

"At last, a 'Reference Shelf' book with arguments on only one side of the question! No voice is here raised in favor of intolerance, but there is a varied and admirable collection of materials helpful in the understanding and eradication of it."

+ Christian Century 63:529 Ap 24 '46 70w

Wis Lib Bul 42:111 Jl '46

HUTCHINS, FRANK, and HUTCHINS, MRS CORTELLE. Thomas Jefferson; decorations by Janice Holland. 279p $2.50 Longmans

B or 92 Jefferson, Thomas 46-6236

Biography of Thomas Jefferson written for older boys and girls. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn BK 22:472 N '46 120w

Kirkus 14:327 Jl 15 '46 80w

"A readable but scholarly biography of Jefferson for young people. . . Recommended as must reading for American history students." Nelle McCalla

+ Library J 71:1719 D 1 '46 100w

"The reason for this biography's excellence lies in a combination of factors. The authors have read widely and deeply in the literature of both man and period. They weave into the story of Jefferson's life a wealth of accurate and colorful information about his associates and the conditions under which he lived and worked. They see their subject as a warm, human personality—not as a cold, emotionless

HUTCHINS, FRANK—Continued

figure in history—and they succeed in passing on to the 'teen-aged reader their own understanding and appreciation." R. A. Brown
+ N Y Times p26 N 3 '46 200w

Reviewed by Eleanor Breed
San Francisco Chronicle p2 N 10 '46 200w

"The authors of this biography have very adequately covered the salient features of Thomas Jefferson's life and work. Their book gives evidence of sound scholarship and a good sense of proportion." R. A. B.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:67 N 9 '46 400w

"Relates the story of Jefferson's life in an interesting and lucid manner."

+ School & Society 64:120 Ag 17 '46 30w
Social Studies 37:336 N '46 10w

Spring'd Republican p4d S 22 '46 120w

"The appearance of so good a full-length life among books for older young people, is more than welcome, and the fact that it is quite good enough to serve as a stimulating introductory work for an intelligent adult, makes that welcome stronger." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 S 8 '46 320w

HUTCHINSON, PAUL. The new Leviathan. 233p $2 Willett

261.7 Church and state 46-3882

"Discussions on the relations of church and state. The author, a Protestant editor, sees a trend toward totalitarianism in the increasing number of ways in which individuals look to the state for security and protection, and urges the Christian church to reassert the influence of Christianity as the basic philosophy of Western democracy." Booklist

Booklist 42:324 Jo 15 '46

"It is a scholarly, Christian reporter's description of the contemporary world's search for a pattern of life and society that will give a measure of security and peace to mankind. The result is one of the most disquieting books to be presented to our bedeviled day. Better than any other effort, it points out in simple and unmistakable terms where we as a country and as Christian churches are heading. . . Christian ministers and laymen will want to make this book their constant companion as they seek to find their way in the turbulent world in which we must do our thinking and our living." Harold Bosley

+ Christian Century 63:752 Je 12 '46 950w

"Paul Hutchinson is an excellent writer. Of his several books this is, from a writer's standpoint, his best." A. W. Taylor

+ Churchman 160:17 O 1 '46 360w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '46

"A first-rate book about the most vital issue of our time. In almost every sense this is a book to be read by Catholics as well as by Protestants, even though it would be truly amazing if a Protestant editor said nothing to offend Catholics. One can take exception to his acceptance of Lehman's version of the foreign policy of the Vatican, to his analysis of the Spanish affair, and to his insistence that public funds should never be diverted to parochial schools. But all these matters cover but a few pages and have little bearing on the important thesis of the book." W. J. Marx

+ Commonweal 44:264 Je 28 '46 460w

Foreign Affairs 24:745 Jl '46 20w

Reviewed by J. H. Nichols

J Religion 26:306 O '46 300w

"Few will agree with all of Dr. Hutchinson's arguments, many will violently disagree with some of them, but all broad minded religionists will find him stimulating."

Kirkus 14:196 Ap 15 '46 250w

"Here is the old issue of Church and State, argued with fierce intensity, documented with abundant first-hand material from the thought and life of our time, adorned with relevant historical facts." J. H. Holmes

+ Weekly Book Review p14 Ag 11 '46 360w

HUTCHISON, KEITH. Rival partners: America and Britain in the postwar world. 262p $2 Macmillan

382 U.S.—Commercial policy. Great Britain—Commercial policy. U.S.—Economic conditions. Great Britain—Economic conditions 46-710

A survey of economic and commercial policies of Great Britain and the United States as they are influenced by and affect each other. Author is an Englishman who has lived long in the United States and is a contributor to both the Nation and the New York Herald Tribune.

"While the book is addressed principally to a non-technical audience, it would repay reading by many economists who have not made a special study of the problems involved." Saul Nelson

+ Am Econ R 36:428 Je '46 800w

Reviewed by G. L. Kirk

Am Pol Sci R 40:991 O '46 130w

Reviewed by R. H. Heindel

Ann Am Acad 245:182 My '46 550w

Reviewed by W. F. Morse

Book Week p2 F 17 '46 450w

Booklist 42:221 Mr 15 '46

"Mr. Hutchison is one of the editors of the New York Nation. Born and educated in England, he worked for Clement Attlee and the Labor movement before coming to the United States in 1925. His book is a very illuminating analysis of the economic relations of Britain and the United States." F. H. Underhill

+ Canadian Forum 26:20 Ap '46 500w

Reviewed by Albert Viton

Christian Century 63:942 Jl 31 '46 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '46

Current Hist 10:444 My '46 100w

"This is a sound, quite unemotional examination of the economic relations between Britain and the United States."

+ Foreign Affairs 24:748 Jl '46 100w

Harvard Law R 59:641 Ap '46 350w

Reviewed by Stuart Chase

Nation 162:264 Mr 2 '46 1050w

"This reader, who inclines to quail just a bit before the mysteries of international finance, found Rival Partners a generally absorbing and clarifying work. The book's major weakness, which must be blamed on Father Time rather than on the author, is that it stops just short of the arrival of the Keynes mission in Washington." Denis Plimmer

+ New Repub 114:194 F 11 '46 900w

"Mr. Hutchison is admirably qualified to discuss this subject, and, by virtue of his gift for clear dispassionate analysis, he has produced in 'Rival Partners' a book which could well serve as a model for the exposition of politically overcharged economic problems." Elizabeth Simon

+ N Y Times p8 F 17 '46 1050w

"A thoroughly well-meaning book, obviously written with thought and care by a man to whom the problems were of more than purely intellectual concern." I. deVegh

+ Pol Sci Q 61:316 Je '46 300w

"Of no other country in the world can it be said with so much truth as of the United States that the foundations of world peace and plenty must be laid in our own backyard. It is this thesis that Mr. Hutchison maintains eloquently and persuasively. I commend it especially to all those who are disposed to listen to the balderdash of Bilbo or the irresponsible ranting of Rankin on the British loan." P. H. Odegard

+ Survey G 35:175 My '46 1100w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:109 Je '46 280w

"It is encouraging to note that Mr. Hutchison is a moderate Leftist who wants to convert ordinary Americans rather than browbeat them. This book makes a good start on a hard task." Crane Brinton

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Mr 17 '46 900w

Wis Lib Bul 42:71 My '46

HUTTER, CATHERINE. On some fair morning. 403p $3 Dodd

46-7189

Story of the relations between Poland and Germany during World War I and for some time after it. The central character is the broad-minded American born wife of a German nobleman who owns a large estate in Poland.

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers

Book Week p12 N 3 '46 360w

Booklist 43:70 N 1 '46

"In spite of many slow and lengthy passages, dramatic situations are not lacking and the story forges along to a magnificent climax. In any context Elsa would have been a memorable heroine: patient, generous, democratic, simple (in the best sense), fundamentally moral (in her recognition of evil). It is only disappointing to realize that her faith in the individual was as lacking in rational (i. e., Christian) foundation as the faith she abhorred in the enslaved souls about her." M. E. Evans
+ — Cath World 164:278 D '46 360w

"Polish characters are sympathetically drawn; Germans, with bitter intensity. Realistic, but neither earthy nor crude. Heartily recommended." L. R. Miller

+ Library J 71:1207 S 15 '46 70w

"The story is handsomely dressed with colorful costumes and picturesque settings. It flits back and forth across oceans from one capital to another before it finally settles down in Middle Europe, and its political polemics are no heavier to take than those a husband hands out to his wife at the breakfast table. The tale is spun as adroitly as a web; you sit fascinated—watching the passing parade of yesterday, Lincoln's Presidential campaign, a reception for the Prince of Wales at the Academy of Music in New York, Albert Ballin's nurturing of the fledgling Hapag, a chromesque romance, a girlhood in Staten Island, the yacht-studded opening of the Kiel Canal, another romance that makes you say, 'This is it!' and before you know it the web has been spun." Florence Crowther

N Y Times p15 O 6 '46 800w

"If Miss Hutter meant to recommend the 'American way' she should have been more lucid. What we get is, essentially, a picture of world turmoil as precipitated mainly by German politics, and a characterization of the German as an obsessed and relentless nationalist, an incorrigible menace on the civilized scene. There are moments when Miss Hutter's writing becomes extremely awkward, when her people are not convincing, and the chances are that without the highly significant material and the special detail, she would not hold her reader very long. As a piece of fictional writing the book fails, and we are left, essentially, with a detailed statement of what is generally already known." N. G. Chaikin

— Sat R of Lit 29:52 O 12 '46 700w

"Miss Hutter has produced a timely novel and an admirable character in Elsa von Zeiritz, a spirited, intelligent, and remarkably level-headed American woman." Stephen Stepanchey

+ Weekly Book Review p10 S 29 '46 500w

HUTTON, BUD, and ROONEY, ANDREW A. Story of the Stars and stripes. 240p $3 Rinehart

940.5305 Stars and stripes (periodical)

46-767

"Breezy account of the G. I. newspaper of World War II which started in the London Times building as a weekly and later, as a daily, followed the troops to the various fronts. The writers—co-authors of Air Gunner—are mostly interested in the zany staff members and the book is full of amusing anecdotes about them. Despite the Front Page atmosphere, the serious side of this huge enterprise is well covered: its organization and circulation problems; its difficulties with censors, Public Relations and Orientation officers; and its ways of getting combat news." Library J

Booklist 42:211 Mr 1 '46

Bookmark 7:11 My '46

"Servicemen and newspapermen are almost certain to enjoy 'The Story of the Stars and Stripes'—and most civilians also will find chuckles and interest in the history of 'Joe's paper.'" H. S. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 F 20 '46 600w

Kirkus 13:541 D 1 '46 130w

Reviewed by H. G. Kelley

Library J 71:180 F 1 '46 120w

Reviewed by Charles Poore

N Y Times p4 F 17 '46 1300w

"The volume may contain just a little too much loving preoccupation with the tipsy antics of the staff (after all, in or out of uniform, a drunken newspaperman is a drunken newspaperman) but it is lively and informative and ranks, like the same authors' 'Air Gunner,' as one of the very good war books."

+ — New Yorker 22:97 F 16 '46 120w

"Some more careful historian may later attempt to tell the complete story of all the wonderfully exciting and successful editions of The Stars and Stripes. Bud Hutton and Andy Rooney have, meantime, written a short volume filled with usually accurate tales of some of those editions and of the mad young enlisted newspaper men who proved that free journalism is possible even in the tradition-ridden, discipline-conscious U.S. Army." Merle Miller

+ Sat R of Lit 29:14 F 23 '46 1050w

"Bud Hutton and Andy Rooney, staff members, are perhaps still a little too close to the paper to see it objectively, but they tell an entertaining story studded with personalities and anecdotes, and enough of the technical and human difficulties involved, to make an adequate record."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk1 2:176 S '46 120w

"In their natural excitement over the paper's achievement, the authors give quite a lot of time to telling how 'mad' and 'fabulous' their staff was. It was no more so, fundamentally, than any other newspaper staff, but the conditions of publication were unusual, to say the least; and you can forgive the boys their Hecht-MacArthur complex—as well as the strangled quality of some of their prose. I take it that the book was done in a hurry. It is full of little inaccuracies about matters beyond the eyewitness knowledge of the authors, who do not seem to feel as responsible to their readers here as they were in war time." John Lardner

+ — Weekly Book Review p3 F 17 '46 850w

HUTTON, CLARKE. Picture history of Britain. 62p $2.50 Houghton [8s 6d Oxford]

942 Great Britain—History—Juvenile literature 46-25151

Presents English history in colored pictures and brief text, from the days of the cavemen to World War II.

Book Week p18 Je 2 '46 130w

Booklist 42:320 Je 1 '46

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 15 '46 180w

"Stimulating introduction to more formal history." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:271 Jl '46 80w

Kirkus 14:241 My 15 '46 160w

"Simple text and bright pictures will be welcomed by children and librarians as an introduction to English history which has long been needed. Was written for English children and published in England a year ago." Dorothea Dawson

+ Library J 71:919 Je 15 '46 80w

"The succession of kings and queens—hopelessly confusing in more serious histories—is like a list of characters in a play, with the part of each so distinctly labeled as to be remembered vividly. Social changes such as the Magna Carta, the Industrial Revolution, the Free Trade Act are described in such terms that young readers will exclaim 'Oh, that is what they were' and older readers will say,

HUTTON, CLARKE—Continued

'Well, I never understood that so clearly before.' . . . This is a book which from 8 up has no age limitations. Parents and teachers will appreciate the understanding way it tells history to children." L. M. Palmer

+ N Y Times p28 My 19 '46 200w

"To all American children English history should be an essential part of the story of their own country, so closely are the two related. . . . This book has a very real significance. . . . The idea and the general plan of this book are so good that it seems ungrateful to offer any adverse comment. But will not a little child need more than these brief captions can give? And will not an older boy or girl want more?" M. C. Dodd

+ Sat R of Lit 29:31 J1 13 '46 240w

+ Weekly Book Review p10 My 19 '46 300w

Wis Lib Bul 42:116 J1 '46

HUTTON, GRAHAM, Midwest at noon. 350p
$3.50 Univ. of Chicago press
917.7 Mississippi valley A46-1352

The author, an Englishman, came to the American midwest in 1937, where he spent the next five years as director of the Office of British Information. His book embodies his impressions of the life of our middle west, and is a comparison of that life with life in other parts of the United States, or Europe. Index.

+ Am Hist R 51:776 J1 '46 260w

"His book is one of the most understanding and appreciative analyses which the Midwest has ever received from the hand of a foreigner. . . . 'Midwest at Noon' is neither as profound an analysis of American political institutions as Bryce's famous work nor is it as sprightly and urbane a piece of writing as D. W. Brogan's recent 'The American Character.' The book is needlessly repetitious and about one quarter too long. Nevertheless, Hutton's remarks are accurate, shrewd and penetrating." J. T. Flanagan

+ Book Week p3 Ap 14 '46 700w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 Ap 28 '46 340w

Booklist 42:264 Ap 15 '46

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 13 '46 900w

"The book is a good one. Mr. Hutton's claim for his work is very mild; merely a record of personal impressions, he says, not written to wound or annoy. Actually his book is well above the average traveler's record and he may feel quite certain that after reading it his friends in the Midwest won't go away mad. . . . Because this is a good book (a better one, for example, than Mr. Denis Brogan's recent work about Americans), it is a shame that some accidental things may keep it from getting about as much as Mr. Hutton and his publishers would like. The jacket and make-up of the book give it the unfortunate air of being a new public school textbook, a circumstance that can only arouse chilling memories in people idling through bookstores. And the more athletic reader who gets into the book is sure to think Mr. Hutton's prose slow going in places." John Broderick

+ Commonweal 44:75 My 3 '46 450w

Current Hist 10:130 Ag '46

Foreign Affairs 25:165 O '46 80w

"Thorough and penetrating study of America's great midwest region. . . . Accurate and dependable, a source book for the special reader or for reference. For larger libraries." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 71:584 Ap 15 '46 100w

Reviewed by A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.
Nation 163:48 J1 13 '46 650w

"In the course of discovering what the Midwest isn't, Mr. Hutton has given us a penetrating analysis of what it is. I think his book will stand for a long time as a brilliant study of America and Americans." Robert Lasch

+ New Repub 114:811 Je 3 '46 1100w

"One of the most interesting books on America that have appeared in the last ten years.

It is not the usual book on America by an Englishman partly because Mr. Hutton is not just a usual Englishman, but mostly because his experience in America is unusual both in its extent and its location." John Morton

+ New Statesman & Nation 32:488 D 28 '46 550w

"For all the serious scholarship, good taste and good humor with which this Britisher writes about the Middle West, he has had the wisdom to flout the smug axiom, 'Comparisons are odious.' What travel book was ever worth publishing unless it compared its subject with the rest of the world? . . . Candid, honest, Hutton has written a book that will be the text for many an argument and many a college course. He insists he was treated with great courtesy while in the midlands, and he hopes it will not be said of him, now that it is spring and he [is] back in Britain, what Senator Thomas Hart Benton said of De Tocqueville, 'He must have kept bad company when in the United States.'" Lloyd Lewis

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 14 '46 2500w

Reviewed by Eric Sevareid

Sat R of Lit 29:23 Je 8 '46 1550w

"This is a warm book, impregnated with kindness; the book of a person who looks back on a place where he has worked hard, done a good job, won many friends and sees it under a friendly glow. Mr. Hutton is not uncritical about the region where he spent five of the last eight years, but there are moments when one feels that if he had still to go on living there, and was nevertheless free to open his mind, the tone might not be quite so genial. . . . At the same time, he has, indubitably striven hard to draw a balanced picture, and it is one that deserves the most attentive study, since he knows, as do few either outside or inside of the United States, what he is talking about when he seeks to anatomise the Middle West." M. A. Hamilton

+ Spec 177:618 D 6 '46 850w

Reviewed by R. L. Parker

Survey G 35:331 S '46 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p624 D 21 '46 1050w

"The result of his observations and study is a book highly to be recommended for general reading and for standard reference. It is a basic primer of the subject, and reading of it gives a broad background of information for the study of more specialized books on the region. An adequate but insufficiently detailed index is provided."

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 2:217 S '46 220w

"Mr. Graham Hutton comes close to miracle with this book. 'Midwest at Noon' is a book of analysis and generalization, grounded in history and personal acquaintance, interpretative but supported by exhaustive factual knowledge, sound, sympathetic, on the whole too favorable in its judgments—in short a book obviously impossible for a foreigner to write and improbable for any one. If it is not the best book ever written about the Middle West that undertakes to be comprehensive, I cannot name the one that is." Bernard De Voto

+ Weekly Book Review p3 My 12 '46 1700w

Wis Lib Bul 42:85 Je '46

HUXLEY, ALDOUS LEONARD. Science, liberty and peace. 86p $1 Harper; pa 50c Fellowship of reconciliation (N Y)

604 Technology. Science. Civilization

46-2123

A suggested solution of the problem of the atomic bomb, and an analysis of the political consequences of the wrong type of control of applied science.

Reviewed by Sterling North

Book Week p2 Mr 17 '46 500w

Booklist 42:294 My 15 '46

Reviewed by Leopold Infeld

— Canadian Forum 26:65 Je '46 900w

Reviewed by R. D. Potter

Chem & Eng N 22:3106 N 25 '46 250w

Reviewed by F. L. Strickland

Christian Century 63:839 J1 3 '46 490w

- Reviewed by W. L. Caswell
Churchman 160:15 Mr 15 '46 420w
Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '46
- Reviewed by Anne Fremantle
Commonweal 44:197 Je 7 '46 550w
- "This brilliantly written booklet outlines a problem which is based upon a doubtful premise and then offers a solution which has contradictory implications. It is a small epic of confusion," Eugene Ayres
— Crozer Q 23:294 Jl '46 700w
Foreign Affairs 25:161 O '46 30w
- "As a thinker, Huxley is never too thorough, conclusive, or even persuasive; here the argument is overridden—with no practical counter-balance."
— Kirkus 14:28 Ja 15 '46 180w
- Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:825 Je 1 '46 70w
- Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Nation 162:402 Ap 6 '46 1850w
- Reviewed by George Soule
New Repub 114:512 Ap 15 '46 120w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:47 Jl '46
- Reviewed by P. W. Bridgman
N Y Times p3 Mr 24 '46 2000w
- "Some of this essay is a recapitulation of the essential ideology of 'Ends and Means,' his most clear-headed political book; some of it rather mystically inveighs against such things as the centralization of modern life, nationalist thinking, and materialism. All of it is stimulating."
+ New Yorker 22:101 Mr 16 '46 100w
- Reviewed by L. N. Ridenour
Sat R of Lit 29:28 Ap 20 '46 1000w
- "Aldous Huxley is generally known as a novelist and a philosopher, but he was nurtured in an atmosphere of science. Brother of Julian Huxley and grandson of Thomas Huxley, he could hardly escape the impact of scientific habits of mind. Certainly in this profoundly discerning essay he reveals himself as a clear thinker, courageous enough to 'follow the facts to whatever abyss they may lead one.'" K. F. Mather & others
+ Scientific Bk Club R 17:2 Ap '46 320w
- "This is not a hopeful book, for Mr Huxley is well aware of the fact that it would not be easy to change what has become our cultural pattern—the will to power—nor to convince man of his imminent danger to the extent of taking any action. He has, however, presented from a new angle a problem with which an increasingly number of people are to-day concerning themselves." C. K. Bausman
Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 21 '46 550w
- Reviewed by Harry Hansen
Survey G 35:131 Ap '46 600w
- "No scientist can read this fervent plea without being moved. In the Federation of American (atomic) Scientists it should be a call to prayer and for a religion that makes science the servant of humanity, not the master. In the American Association of Scientific Workers it will be a call to action. But the American Association for the Advancement of Science will, no doubt, calmly proceed to advance science." Gerald Wendt
+ Weekly Book Review p4 Mr 17 '46 550w
Wis Lib Bul 42:112 Jl '46

HYDE, HARFORD MONTGOMERY. Mexican empire; the history of Maximilian and Carlota of Mexico. 350p il $5 (18s) Macmillan
B or 92 Maximilian, emperor of Mexico.
Charlotte, consort of Maximilian, emperor of Mexico [46-4646]

A retelling of the attempt of Napoleon III to make a monarchy out of Mexico. The book is essentially a biography of the instrument of Napoleon's efforts: Maximilian, for a brief period Emperor of Mexico, and of his pitiful wife, Carlota. Index.

Reviewed by R. B. Nye
Book Week p1 Jl 7 '46 1600w

"Colonel Hyde is never dull. He is chiefly anxious to arrive at the facts and to present an objective record; but he is always alert to the human angle. Thus Maximilian and Carlota, whose fate was no less tragic than her husband's, stand clearly before us; and the drama of their star-crossed lives needs only to be told, as it is here, quietly and exactly, to strike us as one of the most touching of those 'sad stories of the death of kings.'" Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 1 '46 600w

"It is written in a pedestrian way, without attempt to delight the reader, but it is competent and honest, sparing us the romantic frills. . . This is a book without faults, though also without outstanding virtues, and its publication would have been quite welcome in the days of unlimited paper." A. J. P. T.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 1 '46 240w

"Mr. Hyde belongs to the impersonal school of biography, to whom facts are more important than opinions. He presents his accumulation of knowledge in an orderly narrative with the minimum of comment. . . Mexican Empire is an admirably solid book for serious reading; and there is plenty of stimulus to the imagination in some of the queer things Mr. Hyde has unearthed." Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 32:12 Jl 6 '46 950w

New Yorker 22:83 Jl 13 '46 100w

"The story is well-balanced, with materials wisely selected on the whole. The author scrupulously refrains from fictionizing, never stepping into his characters' shoes, or attributing thoughts or feelings. He quotes frequently directly or indirectly, from the vast personal and official correspondence of the couple, and appears to have a documented source for nearly every statement in his book. His restraint, plus a slightly Victorian style, makes less spirited reading than in the lively (but often factually erroneous) 'Phantom Crown.'" Elizabeth Fagg

+ Sat R of Lit 30:10 Ja 18 '47 1000w

"This is a readable book on one of the maddest adventures of nineteenth-century European politics. . . The story is told with admirable industry," and a copious quotation of original texts," Salvador de Madariaga

+ Spec 176:384 Ap 12 '46 500w

"Colonel Montgomery Hyde brings to the story of Maximilian and Carlota a sober approach and scholarly method which it has not always received at the hands of their biographers. He leaves it largely to the imperial couple and their European contemporaries to tell their own story. The consequence of this unobtrusive method is that the approach is predominantly European. Apart from the limitations which this imposes, the task could scarcely be better done, and the author has well deserved the centenary prize which the publishers have awarded him."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p289 Je 22 '46 4000w

"The history of the Western Hemisphere holds no stranger nor more tragic tale than the Mexican interlude of Emperor Maximilian and his empress, Carlota. . . It has remained for the English historian H. Montgomery Hyde to retell it on the basis of fresh study of the sources, with a conciseness which sacrifices no essential detail, with a sensitivity which makes his book the most readable and satisfying that has appeared." Hubert Herring

+ Weekly Book Review p4 S 1 '46 1550w

I

IDELL, ALBERT EDWARD (PHILLIPS ROGERS, pseud). Stag night. 230p $2.50 Prentice Hall

46-4512

One night in every year the male members of a country club put on a stag dinner and entertainment. This book covers that evening from kitchen to the banquet room, and from the dressing room to the footlights.

Kirkus 13:548 D 15 '45 130w

IDEAL, A. E.—Continued

"This book is trash. Its sensational subject is legitimate material for any writer, but in handling it 'Phillips Rogers' has seen no need for intelligence or taste or the skill to make it interesting. Not even the greatest female curiosity could push half-way through its monotonous cheapness." Paul Griffith
— N Y Times p28 Mr 10 '46 200w

"The program is described in perspiring prose that tries to be torrid, but—like the last veil—it doesn't come off." Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p34 Mr 31 '46 90w

IKONNIKOV, ALEXEI A. Myaskovsky; his life and work; tr. from the Russian. 162p $2.75 Philosophical lib.

B or 92 Miaskovsky, Nicolai Yokovlevich

"Nikolai Yakovlevich Myaskovsky, who will be sixty-six years old next April, is the outstanding contemporary representative of the conservative school of Russian music represented by many of the prechments of Rimsky-Korsakov and by the music of such minor men as Glazunov, Glière and Rachmaninoff. . . . The present book is by way of being a trial balance. It is straight Marxist criticism and gives twenty-four pages to the composer's biography, fifty-six to a listing and description of his works, thirty-one to an analysis of his technique and ten to an exuberantly laudatory summing up. Twenty-four pages of a somewhat disjointed appendix describe 'Myaskovsky's Music During the Great Patriotic War,' and there is a catalogue of his works through 1943. There is no index." Weekly Book Review

"The author draws on personal knowledge of his subject and includes a good deal of material available otherwise only in Russian." C. K. Miller

Library J 71:1540 N 1 '46 120w

Reviewed by Herbert Weinstock
Weekly Book Review p24 N 24 '46 280w

INGERSOLL, RALPH MCALLISTER. Top secret. 373p maps $3 Harcourt

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Campaigns and battles. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 46-25096

"After service in Africa, described in The Battle Is the Payoff [Book Review Digest, 1943], the author was assigned to the General staff corps, assisted in the planning of D-day operations, and did liaison work between the staffs of Bradley, Montgomery, and Eisenhower. This is his story of the secret planning, the military politics, the conflicts of personalities, and the strategy of the invasion—a behind-the-scenes view that does not minimize mistakes, obstructionism, muddling, while testifying to the skill and determination that brought off a great invasion. The drive across France and into Germany is covered in less detail. The author, writing now as a civilian, is very critical of the British; his book is outspoken, well written, and very readable. End-paper maps and small maps." (Booklist) Index.

"The main faults of this book are those inherent in a subjective analysis of events by a participant whose viewpoint was necessarily limited and prejudiced. The accounts of the landing in Normandy and of the concentration camps, however, are done with considerable reportorial skill." R. C. Loehr
Am Hist R 52:105 O '46 480w

"It is not quite enough to say that this book illustrates the ancient adage that 'a little knowledge is a dangerous thing.' It would be better to say that it illustrates how very dangerous a little knowledge may be when combined with a pronounced bias." G. F. Eliot
— Ann Am Acad 247:191 S '46 600w

"Mr. Ingersoll is an old hand at viewing-with-alarm, and this volume is in some respects as strident and belligerent as a PM editorial. On the other hand, Ingersoll is a superb reporter. In his earlier books, Report on England and The Battle Is The Pay-Off, he proved that he could handle the raw stuff of which combat narratives are made. Top Secret contains some of the most exciting military journalism of the war." E. M. Earle

+ — Atlantic 177:162 Je '46 1500w

"No one will question Mr. Ingersoll's skill as a reporter, and few will deny a substantial element of truth behind his most controversial assertions in Top Secret, but thoughtful readers will question his scale of relative values and the conclusions he reaches so confidently. It is obvious that he can know only a part of the relevant facts and that his opinions are colored by prejudice." R. E. Danielson
— + Atlantic 178:146 Jl '46 120w

"The first verdict to render on this new book by Ralph Ingersoll is that it makes dramatic, irresistible reading. From beginning to end it is geared to the urgency and speed of the events it describes, and, since Ingersoll is both a first-rate reporter and an experienced editorialist, the result is a narrative which most people will have a lot of trouble laying down. . . . But this is a book of strong words, of highly flavored and colored opinions and of intense personal convictions. Its author is not the man to pull punches, even when there is nobody else in the ring with him, and most of the time there is a whole crowd in there. It deserves a very wide reading, not alone because it is exciting and fresh in its approach, but also because it sounds as though its author were right a good part of the time." William Sloane

+ — Book Week p1 Ap 21 '46 2050w

Booklist 42:263 Ap 15 '46

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley
— Cath World 163:276 Je '46 700w

Reviewed by Paul Hutchinson
Christian Century 63:657 My 22 '46 800w

"Perhaps the best conclusion is that we are really still in the reporting stage of the war. But, of course, as the memoirs pile up we can proceed to more definitive judgments. When that time comes, 'Top Secret' will be a provocative gadfly, if not a source book." E. D. Canham

Christian Science Monitor p12 Ap 24 '46 700w

"This fascinating story of the preparation for and finally the invasion of the European continent is an excellent addition to a library on World War II. Though always exciting reading, it should not be swallowed whole." B. A. Foster

+ — Churchman 160:14 My 15 '46 180w

"This reviewer is not qualified to compare the technical competence of 'Top Secret' with a classic like, say, Liddell Hart's military history of World War I. One predicts, however, that if it is not made required reading for our future generals at the 'Point,' it will at least be read by generations of Plebes and/or First Classmen, with much profit. Ingersoll makes of military writing a fine art. The word for it is virtuosity." H. J. Bresler

+ Commonweal 44:217 Je 14 '46 700w

Foreign Affairs 24:747 Jl '46 70w

"Sure to achieve controversy, this has, even in its anti-British bias and corrosive criticism, definite vitality and compelling readability." Kirkus 14:164 Ap 1 '46 210w

Reviewed by H. S. Taylor

Library J 71:584 Ap 15 '46 140w

"Make no mistake about it: Mr. Ingersoll has written one of the most brilliant and provocative books about the war that has yet appeared. It is unlikely that anything so brutally frank and so violent will be published in a long while. . . . A reviewer's task does not end with setting down and appraising an author's main thesis, however. The way in which he argues it, his temper, the judgment he brings to the assessment of complex events, is of the greatest importance. . . . That Bradley, the author's chief, was the most brilliant of the Anglo-American leaders is hardly to be doubted; that Montgomery is a very unpleasant egotist and an overrated soldier is also true. But the case against the British is written with such crackling, even sneering violence and with such rash judgment in technical matters that the real force of the book is diminished. It is impossible not to believe that the drive in this book derives not only from his perception of a cardinal fact but from less rational, emotional sources." Ralph Bates

+ — Nation 162:694 Je 8 '46 1450w

Reviewed by W. H. Hale

New Repub 114:664 My 6 '46 1000w

"Mr. Ingersoll writes in the 'Now It Can Be Told' and 'Reputations Ten Years After' tradition, except that he has formed his judgments in ten months. His book will make some people angry, some thoughtful and sad, others iconoclastic. It will leave few readers indifferent, for it is an exciting book with almost no dull pages. There are passages which are vivid in description, including some (such as those describing the backwash of war) which require a strong stomach to digest. . . . But in asserting that after the Ardennes, Bradley virtually lost confidence in General Eisenhower and in the latter's headquarters, SHAEF, and ignored or sabotaged the Supreme Commander's orders and directives, he is making a serious charge against both Bradley and Eisenhower which will need more documentation than is to be found in this book." E. M. Earle

+ — N Y Times p1 Ap 21 '46 2350w

"Of all the writers in the services, Ingersoll was best situated to gather material for this kind of book. . . . There is enough in 'Top Secret' to keep the military historians battling for a long time. I hope that during this period only historians will battle. Personally, I'm a Bradley man, but I don't think Bradley is nearly as sore as Ingersoll." A. J. Liebling

New Yorker 22:101 Ap 20 '46 2250w

"Mr. Ingersoll encourages us to see that the Western Front campaign of 1944-5 was won chiefly by General Omar Bradley's superb work in the field. That judgment will receive wholehearted support from a host of observers who beheld Bradley's great achievements in the planning and in the performance. So will the author's praise of other American field commanders, such as Patton, Hodges, Simpson, and Devers, whom Mr. Ingersoll particularly notes. But a large part of this new study of the war in the west, this time dealing for the first time with the planning and administration of the vast Overlord operation, dwells not merely on the tender subject of who won this war but on the still tenderer subject of who did not win it (other than Hitler, that is). Mr. Ingersoll's favorite candidate is Field Marshal Montgomery, against whom he directs the severest criticisms that have thus far come to public attention. . . . There is a great deal in 'Top Secret' which has not been top secret, and that includes some of the best passages. Yet it is inescapable that the reader who has for years been reading of field operations, and never of staff considerations which were not publicly discussed in wartime, will chiefly peruse Mr. Ingersoll's observations and appraisals of these mysteries. He will perhaps ask if the author's observations are sufficiently complete, and hence if the conclusions are in good perspective, or whether there is too frequent and intense focussing upon men and things Mr. Ingersoll dislikes." M. S. Watson

Sat R of Lit 24:8 Ap 20 '46 2000w

"An exciting, cogent and powerful report by the newspaper PM's war-going editor on the invasion of Normandy and the battle for western Europe. Mr. Ingersoll proved his worth as an observer in 'The Battle Is the Pay-Off,' a splendid account of the contest for North Africa, and while 'Top Secret' is war as seen from the slightly higher elevation of the general staff corps, it provides the best overall picture to date of the campaign that destroyed the German army in the west." R. F. H.

+ Springfield Republican p4d Ap 21 '46 700w

"Earnest, shrill World War II history as interpreted by the editor of Manhattan's earnest, shrill daily tabloid PM. . . . There is some straight history in the book, some of it of first interest. But not since the days of Quincy Howe's England Expects Every American To Do His Duty has anyone tried to tie a fancier assortment of knots in the British lion's tail. Stalin and Molotov could hardly have made a balder plea for the U.S. to ditch the British." Time 47:102 Ap 22 '46 300w

"The description of the Allied invasion of Normandy and the advance through France and across the Rhine marks Top Secret as excellent military history seldom equalled for sustained interest and for sound emphasis on the essential. Mr. Ingersoll has, however, strong convictions about men and events, and is not content to describe objectively one of history's greatest military campaigns. He attempts an interpretation and evaluation of political and military strategy and personalities for which the data are as yet entirely inadequate."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk1 2:218 S '46 210w

"It must first be remarked that this outpouring is not based on irresponsible third-hand information. Mr. Ingersoll, who worked in G-3 (Plans and Operations) for 12th Army Group, had the opportunity to be well acquainted with the issues and events he writes about. And one's objection is not to his broad account of events, but to his interpretation of them. . . . I would not quarrel with Mr. Ingersoll's picture of Bradley. In fact, most British S. H. A. E. F. officers I knew used to regard him as the ablest strategist of them all (though I suppose Ingersoll would dismiss this opinion as some tricky British maneuver). . . . As for Montgomery, the best informed and most heartfelt denunciations of the Field Marshal I have ever heard came from British officers (more maneuvers, perhaps). Even Mr. Ingersoll admits that 'no man was personally more distasteful to them than Monty.' The more serious criticism has to do with Mr. Ingersoll's conception of national policy. . . . If Mr. Ingersoll wanted to raise these issues, he should not have batted them down with a glibness of which even a 'PM' editor might be ashamed." A. M. Schlesinger

Weekly Book Review p1 Ap 21 '46 2150w

Wis Lib Bul 42:85 Je '46

"Mr. Ingersoll is most convincing in spot descriptions, particularly of the establishment of the Normandy beachheads or the Ardennes Bulge, where he was an eyewitness. It is newspaper reporting, not history, and done with a large broad stroke which either leaves out or misrepresents some details. In contrast, the other theme of the book—the high strategy of the European campaign from 1943 to 1945—is so badly handled that it is worse than useless. Its first weakness is the scanty or vague materials used to make the many judgments in the book, as for example, the judgments that Bradley was the great general of the war and that the reputations of Eisenhower and Montgomery were undeserved. . . . Such a book as 'Top Secret' (which will have many successors) complicates rather than helps the basic search for what actually happened." T. C. Mendenhall

+ Yale R n s 35:745 summer '46 350w

INGPEN, ROGER. One thousand poems for children. See Sechrist, E. H.

INGRIM, ROBERT. After Hitler Stalin? (Science and culture ser) 255p $3 Burce pub. 940.5 World politics. Nationalism and nationality 46-7766

"Another alarm book about the intentions of that man in the Kremlin, by a former Austrian newspaperman who sees in Soviet Communism an efficient and menacing extension of the concept of the nationalist state which came into being in France with the Revolution. He goes rather thoroughly into nineteenth-century history to document this belief and comes to the conclusion that the present party-state in Russia in no way differs from the recent party-state in Germany." (New Yorker) Index.

"Mr. Ingram's particular virtue is a very happy synthesis of good journalism and scholarly knowledge, an art practically lost in our generation. Although writing in a foreign language he shows a remarkable ability in finding le mot juste; thus his book makes not only interesting but also smooth reading. As a companion volume to a textbook in Modern European History it should be owned by every college if not by every college student." E. V. Kuehnelt-Leddihn

+ Cath World 164:275 D '46 700w

New Yorker 22:135 O 19 '46 120w

INNES, MICHAEL, pseud. See Stewart, J. I. M.

INSTITUTE FOR RELIGIOUS STUDIES, Jewish theological seminary of America. Civilization and group relationships. See MacIver, R. M.

INSTITUTE FOR RELIGIOUS STUDIES, Jewish theological seminary of America. World order. See Johnson, F. E., ed.

INSTITUTE FOR RESEARCH IN BIOGRAPHY. Who's important in medicine. See Who's important in medicine

INTERNATIONAL, THIRD. Blueprint for world conquest; as outlined by the Communist International, with an introd. by William Henry Chamberlin. 263p $3.50 Human events, inc, 608 S Dearborn st, Chicago 5

335.4 Communism 46-7178
"This handsomely printed and sensationally titled book presents material well known to students of communism: the theses and programs of the Second and Sixth World Congresses of the Communist International which were held in Moscow in 1920 and 1928. It lets these official documents speak for themselves." N Y Times

Cath World 164:285 D '46 250w

"This is the Communist Mein Kampf. It is as clear a statement of principles and as definite a declaration of war against every system but its own as was Hitler's famous work, which the world thought could not mean what it said because it was so utterly frank. . . Since the book itself is simply a reprint of official documents, this presentation of it does not need to be much more than the quotation of significant passages without note or comment. Sometimes it is possible to misrepresent the general purport of a book by quoting extracts that are not typical and that are outweighed by the main argument. The reader can either take the reviewer's word for it that this is not true in this case, or he can read the book and find it out for himself." W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 63:1567 D 25 '46 700w

"The volume does not fill a very important gap for the American reader. It does not give a documentary survey of the forces shaping Soviet policies. Chamberlin mentions correctly that there is a difference in the tactics of Trotsky and Stalin. And he correctly points out that the reprinted documents are the expressions of judgments by Bukharin and Zinoviev as well as by Stalin, Manuilsky, etc. But why were Bukharin and Zinoviev executed? There were and there are not only personal, but political conflicts among Soviet leaders. I agree fully with W. H. Chamberlin in opposing sentimental pro-Soviet explanations of Russian policies as purely defensive, etc., just such an attitude requires carefully prepared and edited books. 'Blueprint For World Conquest' does not reveal the sources of Soviet influence in the present world. I regret that a man such as W. H. Chamberlin lent the authority of his name to this enterprise." Waldemar Gurian
— Commonweal 45:357 Ja 17 '47 420w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

N Y Times p55 N 17 '46 800w

"William Henry Chamberlin, in a long introduction, says that these papers must convince democratic minds that the rulers of Russia are determined to spread their doctrine all over the earth at some future date. The theory is worthy of note and so are some of the specific tactical programs outlined in the book, but none of it is really news."

New Yorker 22:134 O 19 '46 140w

INTERNATIONAL law of the future; postulates, principles and proposals. (Carnegie endowment for int. peace. Division of int. law. Studies in the adm. of int. law and organization) 196p $2 Carnegie endowment; Columbia univ press [12s Allen, G]

341 International law

"A book which offers in 167 pages the postulates, principles, and proposals arrived at in many meetings of American and Canadian judges, lawyers, professors, and other men of reputation, competence, and experience in international affairs." (Nation) "The book is primarily in terms of 'legal duties' which states owe to each other and to the community of states to promote world peace, collaboration and welfare. The proposed community of states parallels the United Nations, but possesses less comprehensive machinery for dealing with international disputes and acts of aggression; it is universal and would be opposed to Churchill's Anglo-American Alliance. All states—not alone those involved in a dispute—would be equally and vitally concerned with dissolving disputes and preserving peace." (Columbia Law R)

Reviewed by George Jaffin

Columbia Law R 46:506 My '46 800w

"The principles and proposals set forth are useful prolegomena to the happier age of mankind, but jurists, no matter how eminent they may be, are as little able to create the international law of the future as midwives to create the babies which they help to bring into the world." Rustem Vambery
Nation 162:406 Ap 6 '46 350w

IPAT'EV, VLADIMIR NIKOLAEVICH. Life of a chemist [his] memoirs; ed. by Xenia Joukoff Eudin [and others] tr. by Vladimir Haensel and Mrs Ralph H. Lusher. (Hoover lib. on war, revolution, and peace. Publication) 658p il $6 Stanford univ. press [33s 6d Oxford]

A46-5547

B or 92
"Historians will be indebted to Professor Vladimir Ipatieff—pioneer in high pressure catalysis—for pausing in the midst of a busy scientific life to assemble this [account] . . . of the rise of Russian chemical industry from the days of the Czar to the years of the Soviet. No one is better qualified to do so than he. As head of the Russian chemical warfare during World War I, as director of the entire chemical industry under the Soviet Government until 1926, and for three years thereafter liaison consultant to Germany, Mr. Ipatieff writes with authority. His eminence brought him into close contact with Imperial and Soviet leaders, political and scientific; and he relates in a familiar vein his meetings with these historically great." (U S Quarterly Bk1)
The editor's notes, arranged alphabetically, give information on persons, organizations starred in the text. Index.

Book Week p31 N 10 '46 40w

Reviewed by T. L. Davis

Chem & Eng N 24:2844 O 25 '46 450w

"One marvels at his recollection of people, places, and events as they follow through his memoirs in swift chronological succession. The record adds a new facet to Russian history that holds special interest for chemists and chemical engineers." H. C. Parmelee
+ Chem Eng 53:274 D '46 300w

"Vivid, personal account. . . He reveals himself as a man of strong character and intense feeling, denouncing in scathing terms political blunders against science, paying tribute to his scientific friends, and expressing bitter contempt for incompetent chemists amongst his fellow countrymen. His observations are those of a trained, analytical, scientific mind, and the document is by its nature unique."

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 2:289 D '46 190w

IRISH, WILLIAM, pseud. See Woolrich, C.

IRVINE, HELEN DOUGLAS. See Douglas-Irvine, H.

IRVING, ALEXANDER. Bitter ending. 216p
$2 Dodd

46-4462

Detective story.

New Repub 114:942 J1 1 '46 60w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p26 Je 2 '46 140w

New Yorker 22:96 My 25 '46 110w

"Very good."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:44 My 25 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p16 Je 9 '46 140w

IRWIN, MRS INEZ (HAYNES). Women swore revenge. 248p $2 Random house

46-7071

Mystery story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Book Week p13 O 20 '46 50w

Kirkus 14:333 J1 15 '46 80w

"Despite the sensational nature of the disclosures that are made before the mystery is solved, the story comes nowhere near living up to the promise of that first paragraph." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p40 O 13 '46 120w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 13 '46 70w

"Worth reading."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:30 O 26 '46 90w

"Out to frighten you plenty Mrs. Irwin gives you the complete works right up to the active climax, which may be overfilled just the tiniest bit. Her new story is meatier than most puzzle tales, easy on the ear, complex but lucid." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p28 S 29 '46 170w

ISHERWOOD, CHRISTOPHER. Memorial; portrait of a family. 294p $2.75 New directions [Ts 6d Hogarth]

[32-14444]

"A reissue of this novel, out of print since the thirties, about an ineffectual English county family and some of their friends during the unsettled years after the first war." New Yorker

Reviewed by E. D. Branch

Book Week p12 D 8 '46 500w

"The fragmentary episodes, half-depicted characters, unresolved situations all aim to evoke a memory of the bewildering chaos of the twenties. In this sense the book is an appropriate memorial to that brecciated era. The title refers specifically to the memorial erected at Chapel Bridge to the dead of World War 1, a scene which constitutes one of the more distinctive passages in the book. . . No review of this book should fail to mention Chapter 1, section V, which relates the attempted suicide of Edward Blake. In this blood-spattered scene the author effects a triumph of realism with economy and precision. You fell as if you had put a bullet maladroitly through the roof of your mouth. As writing there is nothing else in the book to equal it." Charles Duffy

Commonweal 45:284 D 27 '46 400w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling

Nation 163:702 D 14 '46 30w

Reviewed by E. R. Mirrielees

N Y Times p7 N 24 '46 1000w

New Yorker 22:142 N 30 '46 40w

"In the writing, and by that I mean both the style and the information, of 'The Memorial,' there was no disappointment for me, but I do have a dispute with Mr. Isherwood over the form, which is by way of saying that there is almost no form whatsoever. I cannot believe that he deliberately set out to confuse and irritate the reader by so shuffling his scenes and his chronology as to make them bewildering, but if not, he has achieved virtually the same effect in innocence." John Woodburn

Sat R of Lit 29:15 D 14 '46 1150w

Reviewed by Lloyd Morris

Weekly Book Review p6 Ja 5 '47 1150w

ISHERWOOD, CHRISTOPHER, ed. Vedanta for the western world; with an introd. by [the editor]. 452p $3.75 Marcel Rodd co, 7621-23 Sunset blvd., Hollywood 46, Calif.

181.4 Vedanta

46-25052

"The philosophy of the Vedas, the ancient Indian religious scriptures, is explained and discussed in a group of essays by contemporary English, American, and Indian writers. The dominating note is a challenge to materialism and an emphasis on the need for a spiritual experiment. Among the English writers are Aldous Huxley, Gerald Heard, John Van Druten, and the editor. The essays appeared originally in the periodical Vedanta and the West." Booklist

"Regardless of what a reader may think of Oriental mysticism 'Vedanta for the Western World' deserves considerable respect and careful reading. Both its English and Indian writers have something to say, something to believe in. That in itself is something in a day when so many authors know only capitalistic despair or blind Marxian mysticism and have abandoned the Judaeo-Christian ideals." J. O. Supple

+ Book Week p14 F 24 '46 650w

Booklist 42:220 Mr 15 '46

Kirkus 13:500 N 15 '45 200w

"Mr. Isherwood is careful not to claim that all the material in the book belongs to the Vedantic tradition. The quality of the contributions varies widely—from the clarity and precision of Huxley's 'The Minimum Working Hypothesis' and his essays that later appeared as parts of 'Grey Eminence' and 'Time Must Have a Stop' to casual musings whose only connection with Vedanta lies in a vague mysticism. It must be said, however, that the proportion of good and informed writing is very high. The book lives up to its title. For the Western reader interested in the universal aspects of Indian thought, from its highest to its simplest expression, this is a lively and well-balanced introduction." Denver Lindley

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 14 '46 900w

New Yorker 21:99 F 9 '46 120w

"This is indeed an admirable primer for all who know that Yoga is something other than the light-hearted practice of a few (possibly reducing) exercises, yet who did not know with which of the many books about it they should begin." Anne Fremantle

+ Weekly Book Review p16 My 12 '46 550w

ISHVANI (MRS EDWIN HAMILTON). Bro-caded sari. 205p $2.75 Day

B or 92 India—Social life and customs

46-25231

Autobiography of the Indian dancer, Ishvani, picturing her childhood in a wealthy home in Bombay, her short-lived marriage, and her divorce. Her story closes as she departs for Europe, accompanied by an adored older sister. The account of her rise to fame as a dancer, her later life in America, and her marriage to an American, are not included.

Reviewed by Martha Read

Book Week p34 D 1 '46 280w

Booklist 43:15 S '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '46

"In all its gentleness and simplicity, this is a revealing picture of Indian life, in one small segment."

+ Kirkus 14:218 My 1 '46 170w

"Recommended." Katharine Shorey

+ Library J 71:976 J1 '46 120w

"Ishvani writes with humor but also with a real understanding of the differences between cultures. Her book gives the most intimate glimpses of life in a Muslim family, and though she does not generalize, yet she conveys the impression of an entire civilization and its traditions as they affect the men and women of contemporary India." Marguerite Young

ISHVANI—Continued

+ N Y Times p7 S 29 '46 600w

Reviewed by Marvin Sargent

San Francisco Chronicle p12 S 15 '46 200w

"This rambling book is not deep reading. As an autobiography it is too vague, as a narrative too inconsistent. Its twofold charm is the author's regret for a life which, if she had let it, might have stifled her, and the variegated color which that life yields even from a distance. Only Miss Ishvani ought to have remembered that writing, like her own art of dancing, is performed according to rules." J. G. Hittrec

Sat R of Lit 29:29 Ag 17 '46 700w

"Writing with humor and at times with compelling insight, Ishvani makes the story of her early years in India a most appealing one." M. L. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 11 '46 650w

"Ishvani gives beautiful portraits of both her father and of Raschid, her husband, whom she renounced. She succeeds in doing what she set out to do, to convey her love and longing for her native land, for her family, and the childhood memories shared with them. She makes us wiser and more sensitive, and grateful for the lifting of her sari veil." Ernestine Evans

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ag 4 '46 900w

IVERSON, ANDRINA. Gifts of love 275p $2.50 Farrar, Straus

46-8000

Character study of a neurotic young woman, whose inferiority complex kept her from believing in her husband's love for her. Her struggle to believe in that love makes the central theme of the book.

Book Week p12 N 24 '46 140w

"A family story well told, slow moving, not likely to be in popular demand." Mary Clark Library J 71:1207 S 15 '46 70w

"This book reads like the work of a thoroughly serious but obviously not developed writer. It leaves one with the feeling, indeed the hope, that perhaps next time the author may achieve more completely, more truly, and more commendably her chosen purpose." Richard Sullivan

+ — N Y Times p22 D 1 '46 450w

"This [is a] tortuous novel. Miss Iverson has talent and sincerity, but I found her confused and anguished heroine more irritating than interesting." S. H. Hay

Sat R of Lit 29:34 N 30 '46 500w

IVINS, WILLIAM MILLS. Art and geometry. 135p $3 Harvard univ. press

701.1 Art, Greek. Space perception. Geometry. Perspective A46-5993

"Seen in perspective, art, science and philosophy are expressions of the same basic institutions. Author bases this readable study of space institutions on the antithesis between Greek and Western conception of space and on great advances in geometry and perspective which have synchronized with great developments in art." Library J

"By using geometry as a foundation for his theory, and by relating it to art in the particular as well as the general, a wholly readable text results. The fact that this book is stimulating, and packed with quotable and challenging statement, is a tribute to its author." R. A. Florsheim

+ Book Week p6 N 24 '46 400w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1715 D 1 '46 70w

— San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 10 '46 150w

J

JABOTINSKY, VLADIMIR. See Zhabotinski, V. E.

JACKSON, CHARLES REGINALD. Fall of valor. 310p $2.75 Rinehart

46-6208

"John Grandin, university professor, and his wife spend pre-summer school vacation at Sconset, each hoping that it will bring them together again. They meet Captain Hausman, epitome of the Marines, and from there story develops with less facility, tightness and sureness, but more terror than The Lost Weekend and ends with Grandin, 'a valor-ruined man' still in love with his wife but also with the Captain." Library J

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

— Atlantic 178:150 D '46 240w

"Jackson, in writing this book, knew that he was foregoing lucrative subsidiary earnings from radio, movies, book clubs, serialization. It has been said in some quarters that he purposely chose a sensational theme in order to cash in on the morbid interest in his work stimulated by 'The Lost Weekend.' Not only will he fail to cash in; 'The Fall of Valor,' besides being one of the best books I've ever read, is one of the least sensational." A. C. Spectoraky

+ Book Week p3 O 6 '46 1300w

Booklist 43:53 O 15 '46

"The topic is one which might be discussed to the profit of a good many readers, were the treatment scientific and decent, but this book is neither. It is not scientific because it confuses the normal and the abnormal in a way that can easily do irreparable damage to sensitive minds by provoking unreasonable fears, stimulating unanswerable questions, and leaving personalities defenceless against notoriously destructive impulses. . . . He uses language which not even the most hardened reviewer would dare to quote in the pages of a respectable magazine—the kind that civilized people, even in our present outspoken era, never employ. Perhaps the book will be a best seller. The writer certainly has a gift for clever dialogue. He can sustain interest in an every day conversation or a landscape. All the more reason why he should be censured for having done something which must be classed as unprofitable to everyone," concerned, except himself and his publisher."

— Cath World 164:283 D '46 240w

Reviewed by Francis Downing

+ Commonweal 45:74 N 1 '46 800w

Kirkus 14:356 Ag 1 '46 220w

"Subject, and especially bluntness of presentation, limit library use. Read before purchase." R. F. Klinger

Library J 71:1207 S 15 '46 100w

"In writing a story of this kind Mr. Jackson has set himself a task which is extremely difficult on two scores. He has the initial problem of making the evolution of Grandin's homosexuality, and Ethel Grandin's reactions to it, psychologically convincing. Then he has the problem of making his study something more meaningful than a case history. For, after all, scientific literature is full of psychologically sound records of the homosexual neurosis, and if we are to read Mr. Jackson's novel rather than a textbook, it must be because its study of disease will tell us about more than disease, enlarging beyond the usual limits of a case history our understanding of the world in which illness exists. 'The Fall of Valor,' however, seems to me to miss fire on both these counts." Diana Trilling

Nation 163:450 O 19 '46 1600w

Reviewed by Frederic Wertham

New Repub 115:458 O 7 '46 1200w

"'The Lost Weekend' explored the alcoholic consciousness as it had never been explored before. 'The Fall of Valor' must face stiffer competition. Obviously, it will be widely read. Such embarrassed discussion of an embarrassing subject has an uncomfortable, reminiscent fascination even for the psychologically sophisticated. But such cases have been studied with exhaustive particularity in the professional journals. More to the point, a number of important imaginative writers have not only shared John Grandin's peculiarity, but in recent decades have dealt with it at great length in literature. . . . Charles Jackson, for his second novel, has hit upon a subject that has been treated by experts. Such an expert, in the precise sense of the word, Mr. Jackson quite obviously is not happily for himself, and unhappily for 'The Fall of Valor.'" R. G. Davis

N Y Times p14 O 6 '46 1850w

"What has been done here by Mr. Jackson is, however, so far as I know, something which has not been done before and something which perhaps needed doing. He has made homosexuality middle-class and thereby removed it from the privileged level on which Gide and Proust had set it. 'The Fall of Valor' thus suffers from a handicap that 'The Lost Weekend' did not have. But it does, like its predecessor, create apprehension and suspense. One used to feel about the characters of Hemingway that their nerves were just about to give way, that they were hanging on the edge of a precipice. The characters in Charles Jackson's novels are already falling over the precipice." Edmund Wilson

New Yorker 22:118 O 5 '46 1000w

"As for the novel and how it's done, Mr. Jackson who is an enormously able writer has handled his theme exceedingly well. Of necessity he has written a 'slow' novel in comparison with 'The Lost Weekend'; after all, the things that happened to the hero of that first book involved action, while what happens to Grandin, with the exception of the final horrible scene, happens inside him. But, given the theme, the author has conducted his story with a good deal more delicacy than you might expect. Further, he seems to have taken pains to investigate the psychological background of such matters. Some psychiatrists might disagree with some details; I don't know about that. But in the main, authorities to whom I have talked about the book say that his premise is sound enough, and that Grandin's ruin might have come about just that way." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 3 '46 700w

"Lacking the suspense and the continued excitement of 'The Lost Weekend,' Charles Jackson's second novel is a finer and a more skillful work than the first." Harrison Smith
+ Sat R of Lit 29:12 O 5 '46 1350w

"Author Jackson has a plausible clinical grasp of the excruciating predicament of these people, and he prepared his revelation with conscientious care. But the book is not remotely comparable to Thomas Mann's Death in Venice, a calm, classic, immensely artful treatment of a similar theme."

Time 48:108 O 7 '46 340w

"Mr. Jackson tells his story swiftly, cleanly, humanely, without a word of psychoanalytic jargon, making no explanations that are not implicit in the action. The speculative reader, however, may draw from the tale two conclusions which the author himself does not draw. The first is that the homosexual component present in all men may have been aroused and overdeveloped in John Grandin partly because his marriage was a bore and a failure—rather than the other way round. . . . The second feeling some readers are likely to have is that John Grandin's disease is not a hateful aberration (as our Victorian grandfathers—and contemporaries—would have it) but is rather somehow connected with a larger and more pervasive disease of our own time, a universal failure of nerve." Clifton Fadiman

Weekly Book Review p7 O 6 '46 1200w

JACKSON, CHARLOTTE E. (COBDEN). Round the afternoon; pictures by Leonard Weisgard. [63p] $2 Dodd

46-8668

A little girl, left in charge of a "sitter," gets bored when her guardian goes to sleep. She goes out in the garden to visit her pet rabbit, finds he has tunneled his way out of his cage, and follows him into a nearby wood. After a series of little adventures the two are glad to go home. For ages four to seven.

"An exceptionally attractive book, lavishly illustrated and set in large, clear type, this slight story will please young children who revel in the everyday doings of other children." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p11 D 29 '46 160w

"The book has a quiet succession of pleasant incidents that make it good bedtime reading, and its pictures, in mild and soothing colors, have the same quality." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 D 15 '46 150w

JACKSON, MRS KATHRYN, and JACKSON, BYRON. Farm stories; with pictures by Gustaf Tenggren. 91p $1.50 Simon & Schuster 46-25058

"Fifty original stories and poems, resplendent with bright pictures, make a generous panorama of barnyard, pasture and orchard for the picture book age and beginning readers." N Y Times

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p19 Ap 7 '46 180w

Booklist 42:230 Mr 15 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '46

"A collection of 50 brand new stories, which will be welcome substitutes for parents who have gone stale on the true and tried favorites. They aren't sparkling stories, but they are competent and moderately good reading, and the farm settings have a special appeal."

+ Kirkus 14:104 F 15 '46 180w

"Enchantingly and profusely illustrated on every page. Stories are lively, amusing, and varied, and the interspersed poems are gay and pleasant but chief distinction of the book lies in its illustrations." E. M. Gordon

+ Library J 71:668 My 1 '46 70w

"Even though some of the stories are really only sketches they are all full of zest and fun, and the lulling verses are especially good. The arrangement of text is occasionally confusing but the pictures are in Mr. Tenggren's merriest vein."

+ N Y Times p30 F 17 '46 90w

Reviewed by K. S. White

New Yorker 22:132 D 7 '46 40w

Spring'd Republican p4d F 10 '46 120w

"The style of the text might be boring if you had to read it all at once, but you won't have to. These authors know young, non-reading children, and are full of invention that meets their varied moods." L. S. Bechtel

+ -- Weekly Book Review p8 Mr 31 '46 370w

JACKSON, ROBERT HOUGHWOUT. Case against the Nazi war criminals; opening statement for the United States of America by Robert H. Jackson, and other documents; preface by Gordon Dean. 216p $2 Knopf

341.3 War crimes—Trials. World war, 1939-1945—Atrocities 46-1527

"The long, passionate opening statement delivered by Justice Jackson at Nuremberg last November, in which he arraigned the Nazi head men before a newly created bar of world justice. . . . The book is illustrated, and other documents bearing on the case are appended." New Yorker

Reviewed by Willard Shelton

Book Week p3 F 24 '46 700w

Booklist 42:221 Mr 15 '46

"As a result of the inevitable protractedness of the Nürnberg trial, not only has public interest in the process waned perceptibly, but there also is the real danger that its essential feature will get lost from sight in the mass of details. The Case Against the Nazi War Criminals' is the best means by which to avert this danger. The book puts the trial into proper perspective as 'a practical effort to utilize International Law to meet the greatest menace of our times—aggressive war.' May it please the peoples—all the peoples—to throw their weight behind this effort." E. S. P.

JACKSON, R. H.—Continued
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 1 '46 800w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '46
Foreign Affairs 24:751 J1 '46 30w

"In legal circles, this is a Must Book. The layman who is profoundly interested in the details of procedure—the charges made by Justice Jackson for the American delegation against the Nazi war criminals—will be interested in reading the complete text of which, only PM I believe, published more than a digest."

+ Kirkus 14:27 Ja 15 '46 180w

"Jackson's statement, which runs to a little less than half of the book's 200-odd pages, does not seek to gloss over the great issues of justice and wisdom which underlie the theory and the actual conduct of the trial. He faces these issues candidly and tells the court and the world, and the latter probably not just incidentally, why the victors decided to proceed with this kind of trial. He also makes clear a point of perhaps some importance which seems to be equally clear even to those who deprecate the trial; namely, that these 20-odd defendants have not had their individual life expectancies shortened by so much as a day by reason of being put on trial." J. S. Dickey

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 3 '46 1950w
New Yorker 22:106 Mr 9 '46 80w

"The publisher has performed a public service in bringing out 'The Case Against the Nazi War Criminals.' The opening statement by the American prosecutor, Robert H. Jackson, the agreements that formed the legal basis for these trials, and the text of the indictment itself all form a part of a useful permanent record." Lewis Mumford

+ Sat R of Lit 29:13 Mr 16 '46 1600w

"All three of these papers are 'must' reading for the scholar. Justice Jackson's opening statement should be 'must' reading for every literate citizen. It is a document of majestic force and inexorable conviction—and it is exciting reading. . . . It is regrettable that Mr. Dean's enthusiasm should befit Justice Jackson's high accomplishment by claims of credit for what was done before the Justice came into the case." M. C. Bernays

+ Survey G 35:172 My '46 700w
U S Quarterly Bk1 2:229 S '46 250w

Reviewed by Walter Lippmann
Weekly Book Review p1 F 17 '46 1600w

JACOBSON, CARL ALFRED, ed. Encyclopedia of chemical reactions. 5v v 1 804p $10 Reinhold

546 Chemical reactions. Chemistry, Inorganic (46-822)

"A monumental work has been undertaken. It is proposed to publish a series of volumes that will contain all, or nearly all, published chemical reactions, described briefly and expressed in equation form. Volume I, now available, contains the published reactions of eight elements: Aluminum, antimony, arsenic, barium, beryllium, bismuth, boron and bromine. The entire system is alphabetically arranged first as to formulas of reactants and next as to reagents." Chem & Met Eng

Reviewed by G. S. Forbes
Am Chem Soc J 68:1678 Ag '46 350w

"This volume is unquestionably a valuable addition to the reference literature of inorganic chemistry. Subsequent volumes of the series should be eagerly awaited by workers in the field." A. J. Ihde

+ Chem & Eng N 24:1132 Ap 25 '46 300w

"Value of the finished encyclopedia is obvious. Chemical engineers and chemists will refer to it in conjunction with all sorts of industrial and theoretical research work."

+ Chem & Met Eng 53:283 F '46 150w

Library J 71:346 Mr 1 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:4 Ja '46

U S Quarterly Bk1 2:161 Je '46 220w

JAGENDORF, MORITZ ADOLF, comp. 20 non-royalty one-act ghost plays. 308p $3 Greenberg

812.08 46-8626

Anthology of one-act ghost plays, all of which may be given without payment of royalties. Partial contents: The Dilly dehaunting agency, by M. A. Taylor; Your rooms are ready now, by C. G. Greene; The happy ending of a gruesome ghost, by Maurice Reonde; The headless horseman, by M. Hunterton; The ghost of Caesar's hair, by Eric Welff; Dark walkers, by M. Bella; Ghost a la mode, by Irving Simon; The vacant room, by Maria Moravsky; Two ghosts are better than one, by Francis Rider; Ghosts on strike, by Mabel Harmer; The return of Michael Conley, by W. E. Cox.

"The plays offer all kinds of ghosts, serious, weird, amusing, farcical."

+ Book Week p48 D 1 '46 70w

Booklist 43:172 F 1 '47

"Recommended for school and small public libraries as well as drama collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 71:1714 D 1 '46 30w

"A Pennsylvania Dutch play by Marion Wefer has a slight charm. As for the other 19—do you remember high school assemblies?" A. B.

San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 24 '46 30w

JAMES, HENRY. The American scene. new ed 501p il $5 Scribner

917.3 U.S.—Description and travel

A reprinting of a book previously published in 1907. It is the result of Henry James' first visit to his native country in many years, and contains his impressions of the parts of America he knew best, or traveled thru at that time. This edition also contains an introduction by W. H. Auden; three excerpts from Portraits of Places; and photographs of some of the places visited.

Booklist 43:55 O 15 '46

"In addition to Mr. Auden's introduction, two other features of this edition must be mentioned. By way of supplement, three sketches are included from James' early book, 'Portraits of Places.' They offer an interesting opportunity to compare his immature Pateresque manner with his latest completely individualized style. The other feature is the series of nearly a score of delightful photographs of streets, houses, squares, and monuments showing scenes in the cities where James gathered his impressions as they were when he knew them. In some cases, the dates are only approximately correct: Fifth Avenue, for instance, obviously shows a phase about a decade before James' visit; but generally they supplement the text in a charming fashion." S. C. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 O 12 '46 850w

Reviewed by Philip Burnham
Commonweal 45:36 O 25 '46 5000w

Reviewed by J. C. Ransom
Nation 163:650 D 7 '46 1450w

"W. H. Auden's preface adds distinction to what is already a classic work of its kind. He has interesting things to say about Henry James and a good deal of interest to say about himself. Not least, it is significant to find that he has, if only half-consciously, penetrated through the flat surface of the America of which he is aware down to the America that James himself could not refrain from loving. . . . Rereading Henry James is to have all over again the sense of his immense power of persuasive penetration." H. J. Laski

+ New Repub 115:599 N 4 '46 1050w

"The American Scene' is a brilliant and provoking book and, except for a brilliant and provoking introduction by W. H. Auden as well as one or two minor differences, it is the same book that appeared in 1907." Harvey Breit

+ N Y Times p22 O 27 '46 1150w

"The American Scene' is one of the best books about modern America. Scribner's and Mr. Auden are much to be thanked for having dug it up." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 22:94 S 28 '46 1650w

Reviewed by Ruth Teiser
 San Francisco Chronicle p12 S 29 '46
 310w
 Time 48:110 S 16 '46 650w

JAMES, NEILL. Dust on my heart; petticoat vagabond in Mexico. 310p $3 Scribner 917.2 Mexico—Description and travel
 46-25228

The "petticoat vagabond" describes her four years in Mexico, where she went intending to stay six months to learn about the Otomies, who live on the Central Mexican plateau. During her residence there she investigated two volcanoes and was injured twice, but without spoiling her love for Mexico. Index.

Reviewed by Jex Martin

Book Week p3 J1 28 '46 300w
 Booklist 42:363 J1 15 '46

Christian Science Monitor p14 S 21 '46 50w

"The charm of the book lies in the zest and energy with which its author relates the smallest details of Mexican Indian life. She went to the usual places, but she also went to a lot of other places that regimented tourists do not see. . . Her book will not tell you how to get where, or what to carry to ward off volcano ash or the common dysentery. In an earlier era she would have delighted the Tuesday sewing circle with her gay account of intimate tribulations in their own village. Now that modern life permits her the luxury of wider horizons she makes possible for them vicarious enjoyment of her travels in the same spirit." Mildred Adams

+ N Y Times p18 J1 7 '46 600w

"Don't get the idea Neill James is just another lady who has written a travel book about Mexico. She has, and a nice, probing and revealing one. But she is also a kind of tough female Richard Halliburton, seeking peace in the most peculiar fashion, and in spite of elaborate precautions, getting into more jams and having worse luck than any traveler since Ulysses." William Hogan

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 J1 8 '46 850w

"There is nothing frilly about her vigorous, vivid descriptions of these encounters. If her adventures make other Mexican vacations seem pale, it must be remembered she goes to lengths to which most folks won't go—even people like herself who purposefully take trips to write about them. . . 'When once the dust of Mexico has settled upon your heart, you can't then find peace in any other land,' is the proverb inspiring her title. Miss James manages to shake a little of this dust which has settled on her own heart onto the heart of the reader." Elizabeth Fagg

Sat R of Lit 29:33 O 5 '46 650w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 4 '46 550w

"Despite its excellence the book has minor errors. The United States Embassy in Mexico City was not our largest in any world capital but was second to our London post. The Mexicans get their fine teeth from the lime in their tortillas, not from the corn as she claims. And I believe that the Indian Institute would correct her statement that the Otomies are Mexico's poorest Indians for there are tribes in the tropics that are even worse off. Yet if you are an adventurer of either mind or heart you will enjoy traveling in this book with Miss James through Indian Mexico. And if you are a tourist with ample time and enough curiosity to leave the highways, you may share with her some of the 'foreign' quality that she discovered there." Betty Kirk

+ Weekly Book Review p3 J1 7 '46 900w
 Wis Lib Bul 42:129 O '46

JAMES, PRESTON EVERETT. Brazil. 262p
 11 maps $2.75 Odyssey

918.1 Brazil 46-1264

"This book [is] a reprint of the sections on Brazil from the author's Latin America [Book Review Digest, 1942] with facts brought up to date and new material added, [and] is both comprehensive and contemporary. Forty-four legible maps and many excellent photographs supplement the text." Ann Am Acad

"Although one may not in every instance agree with the author's conclusions, the layman and the student of Brazilian affairs will find James's analysis of Brazilian problems and potential development both informative and provocative." C. F. Jones

+ Ann Am Acad 247:195 S '46 600w

Foreign Affairs 24:757 J1 '46 30w

"Because the style is so good, I could not help wishing that the author would be a little less reckless with geographical technical terms, as if this otherwise popular book were addressed only to fellow-geographers. We could do with a little less of interfluvies, escarpments, diabases, xerophytic shrubs, introduced without definition or glossary. . . And because the book tells so much about Brazil it is a pity the author's aims did not go farther: more political history (economic history there is aplenty) and more of the formative ideas by which these men live." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 31 '46 750w

JAMES, SELWYN. Man of Brittany. 326p
 $2.50 Simon & Schuster 46-1080

A story of the resistance movement in Brittany. The principal character is a middle-aged peasant who in defense of his daughter kills a German officer and becomes a hunted man.

Reviewed by Martin Savelle

Book Week p5 F 17 '46 450w

Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 4 '46 550w

Reviewed by Mary Clark

Library J 71:181 F 1 '46 70w

"Mr. James is almost too careful a writer; he pays so much attention to the particulars of his characters, to their reactions to one another, that the climax of the book, though well prepared, doesn't come off. The one memorable figure is the 12-year-old Jacques, an efficient knife-thrower, a fierce individualist and a homesick, bewildered child."

+ New Repub 114:358 Mr 11 '46 140w

"Mr. James, a young English newspaper man and radio reporter who is now a citizen of the United States (and, in his publisher's words, was 'a true citizen of the world' before that), is obviously creating his Breton décor from first-hand memories. But his characters, and the perils they face so doggedly, are, just as obviously, described at second-hand. Even if Mr. James were a better craftsman that fact would score heavily against him." C. V. Terry

+ N Y Times p10 F 24 '46 500w

"There is plenty of action, the story holds a neat lesson on the value of cooperation, and Mr. James may well be, as the publishers proclaim him, 'a citizen of the world,' but readers who know the men (and women) of Brittany will probably feel that the author has exaggerated their characteristics."

New Yorker 22:96 F 16 '46 80w

"Too much of the narrative is told in the staccato thoughts of Louis Travadel, rendered in a broken English which hinders rather than helps the illusion that the man is not an Englishman. An unfortunate result of this kind of jargon is that it influences at times Mr. James's narrative style, which is otherwise simple and rapid. He is particularly good in his descriptions of hard and violent action, and the great scene of the descent of Louis and his friends to rescue Jeanne and Avic on the night when the Royal Air Force bombs the flying-field is excellent in its pace and tension." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 29:18 Mr 2 '46 650w

"Man of Brittany" suffers from a few soft spots. It seems incredible that the German commander should not have made a more sustained effort to capture Louis Travadel. Nor is one disposed to believe that the various ideologically opposed groups in the French underground worked in any such spirit of friendly competition and mutual respect as is suggested here. But these faults fade before the book's positive merits. It deserves to be ranked high among novels dealing with the underground resistance movement." Jennings Rice

JAMES, SELWYN—Continued

+ — Weekly Book Review p4 F 24 '46 850w

JAMESON, STORM (MRS GUY CHAPMAN).
The other side. 134p $1.75 (7s 6d) Macmillan

46-25088

"A French and an English officer in the Armies of Occupation are billeted in the home of an aristocratic and embittered German family whose widowed daughter-in-law is a young and attractive Frenchwoman. She falls in love with one of the officers and, when she becomes aware of an underground plot against the Allies, is inevitably confronted by conflicting loyalties." New Yorker

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers

Book Week p15 Mr 31 '46 310w

Booklist 42:247 Ap 1 '46

"The story remains inconclusive and is by no means one of its author's best."

Cath World 163:380 Jl '46 200w

Christian Science Monitor p14 My 15 '46 600w

"Miss Jameson's prose is clean and generally blameless but unexciting. People who have spent any time occupying Germany since the end of this war might find her notion of contemporary army atmosphere in Europe a bit thin." John Broderick

Commonweal 43:627 Ap 5 '46 370w

"Somehow the story never comes to life; the emotional conflicts, as first the Englishman, then the warped and crippled younger Frenchman, fall in love with the young widow, who has sacrificed herself to warn them of a Nazi plot, seem never to cut below the surface."

Kirkus 14:5 Ja '46 200w

"Well written and powerful in appeal. Recommended." S. E. Sherman

+ Library J 71:344 Mr 1 '46 120w

Reviewed by Harold Brighthouse

Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 22 '46 100w

"Intellectually absorbing novel. Smoothly written, with a largeness of understanding rarely met in contemporary fiction of its kind, it presents a credible study in contrast of three European nations. Though the von Leydes are not monsters, we know before Miss Jameson is through with them that they could only be Germans. . . . Like Steinbeck in 'The Moon Is Down,' Miss Jameson relies too much on the inherent tension of her situation fully to develop the separate tragedies of her characters. Perhaps she feels the time has not come for writing in personal terms. There is still so much to understand." Nona Balakian

+ — N Y Times p34 Mr 24 '46 450w

"Here, obviously, is a situation with all the ingredients of tragedy, but it is also one which, if it is to be made to seem real, needs a wider base, deeper exploration, and richer detail than the author has given it in this disappointing novelette."

New Yorker 22:97 Mr 23 '46 120w

"The swiftly-paced action of Miss Jameson's story is gripping and exciting, but one could wish for less involved and subjective characterization. These people are not human beings so much as they are mental processes. . . . Miss Jameson's style drains the book of some quality of flesh and blood, warmth and emotion. But it is this same very subjective, analytical, highly cerebral style which has won for Miss Jameson her special and devoted audience." S. H. Hay

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:13 Ap 20 '46 750w

"The story is brief, done with impressive economy, and in both theme and tension of atmosphere recalls an earlier short novel by Miss Jameson, 'The Fort.' This, however, is a more successful piece of work. Indeed, save in the closing pages, where the tension slackens and an air of contrivance obtrudes, 'The Other Side' carries a remarkable force of inner drama."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p137 Mr 23 '46 650w

"This moving and tender study of French and German character is a fitting conclusion to Miss Jameson's long chronicle of Europe at war. More fully than any other English writer she has made herself the unhappy diagnostician of the sickness of Europe." H. S. Commager

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Mr 24 '46 800w

JANNEY, RUSSELL. Miracle of the bells. 497p $3 Prentice-Hall

46-2712

First novel by the co-author and producer of The Vagabond King. It is the story of a beautiful Polish-American girl from a Pennsylvania coal town who died just as she was about to make a name in Hollywood. The man who loved her, an ace publicity man, takes her body back to her native town, and attempts to carry out her last wishes for her funeral. It is then that the miracle of the bells occurs.

"If you are a reader who responds to a good sentimental glow and a very human story which is at once ingeniously appealing and told with obvious joy on the part of the author—a good part of this book will certainly hold you. And what the movies can do with a story like this, if it gets into the proper hands, will be something to see." J. W. Rogers

+ Book Week p3 S 8 '46 1000w

Booklist 43:17 S '46

Reviewed by J. F. Davidson

Canadian Forum 26:190 N '46 60w

"I would like to say something pleasant about his book, but the only thing I can think of at the moment . . . is that he has written the kind of novel about Catholics and Catholic ways usually described as fit reading for the entire family. No one will come down with sin after reading this book, but quite a few people will come down with nausea and spasms of derisive laughter. I am not disappointed in 'The Miracle of the Bells' because the author has not included a few passages on, say, the heated side of human love, but I am very sorry indeed that he had added to that hapless pile of uninspired fiction which, in spite of noble intentions, brings annual sorrow and embarrassment to a large section of the Catholic reading public." John Broderick

— Commonweal 45:18 O 18 '46 850w

"An extravaganza, that has some catchy qualities, on the theme of selfless good deeds in a naughty world . . . though overlong by much."

+ — Kirkus 14:158 Ap 1 '46 180w

"Just misses being something big. Its worth lies less in the writing than in the basic idea of the spreading influence of one person's action on others. First quarter of the book rings convincingly, the last of it less so. But the idea is still refreshing and the book on the whole, good reading." Thelma Brackett

+ — Library J 71:1127 S 1 '46 70w

"Each page is constructed on the declamatory pattern, sown ankle-deep with exclamation points and blocked into many a set speech of the type that once made the rafters ring when the theatre was not ashamed to be theatrical. But it cannot be said too often that the author's evangelism is beyond reproach—or that the story he tells will be enjoyed mightily by many readers. Miracles do happen—even nowadays, even in the unhappy heart of man. Mr. Janney deserves an audience for that earnest hope, and we've no doubt they'll come in droves." William Du Bois

+ — N Y Times p12 S 8 '46 600w

Reviewed by Jane Volles

San Francisco Chronicle p16 S 22 '46 450w

"That old cliché, tour de force, supplies a compact description for 'The Miracle of the Bells.' For the author has so mastered the art of capturing and holding attention that he practically coerces the reader into finishing his lengthy novel. And this feat is noteworthy because the plot, though based on a highly ingenious idea, is naïve, incredible, and continuously obvious." Bernard Sobel

Sat R of Lit 29:31 S 14 '46 650w

Spring'd Republican p4d Ag 4 '46 150w

"Janney's book [is] painfully funny at times (unconsciously so), unbelievably sincere, but puerile in its approach. Granted that religion should be endowed with the common touch, all this smacks too much of the evanescence of revivalism and hysteria to be an honest approach to godliness, and you don't have to be a cynic to disbelieve in the permanency of the reforms of the various characters." L. S. Munn

— + Spring'd Republican p4d S 6 '46 550w

— Time 48:110 S 16 '46 750w

"'The Miracle of the Bells' was planned as a short story and grew to a quarter of a million words—most of them every-day words, shrewdly chosen for dramatic impact, which—in the vernacular—means punchy dialogue and all the characters done in primary colors. . . . However you react to the inspirational content of the novel, you will find much enlightenment concerning techniques in publicity. Mr. Janney's build-up—from pure hoover to unsullied star to departed saint—overlooks none of the angles." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p10 S 29 '46 400w

Wis Lib Bul 42:151 N '46

JANOWSKY, OSCAR ISAIAH. Nationalities and national minorities (with special reference to east-central Europe); with a foreword by James T. Shotwell. 232p map $2.75 Macmillan

323.1 Minorities. Nationalism and nationality 45-9555

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"While the study is still timely and of merit, it is only of indirect interest to the sociologist. An appendix of documents and a selected bibliography enhance the value of the book." Ernst Mannheim

+ Am J Soc 52:72 J1 '46 600w

"Professor Janowsky's efforts to distinguish between the Soviet Union's cultural program and its political and economic institutions undoubtedly spring from his desire to analyze his particular problem more clearly. But his insistence on this distinction also appears to indicate his reluctance to recognize the leadership now being exercised by local Communists from the Balkans to the Baltic, lest he appear critical of Russia's expansion in that area. The result is a somewhat confused approach to events in Eastern Europe in the wake of the war. . . . Professor Janowsky would have made a more realistic appraisal of the type of solution that is now being given to the minorities question if he had been more candid about the rôle of the Communist party in Russia and the Eastern European countries as the centralizing force in culturally decentralized nations." W. N. Hadsel

Am Pol Sci R 40:368 Ap '46 900w

"In spite of the fact that Janowsky presents his facts ably and dispassionately, he has not written a penetrating book. . . . Part Three completes the treatment with one chapter on the efforts of the League of Nations to deal with the minorities treaties and another one which propounds Janowsky's idea of 'a genuine solution.' At the risk of appearing too critical, the reviewer would like to point out that the evolution of the League's failure in this respect has been presented more capably and systematically in several other studies, and that Janowsky's 'solution' in terms of 'national federalism' has been given up by even President Beneš of Czechoslovakia. . . . In fact, what impressed this reviewer was, on the one hand, the moralistic tone pervading this section and, on the other, the resolute dodging of the multitudinous problems involved in carrying out Janowsky's scheme in actual practice. All in all, the book will serve until the advent of a more satisfactory study of this most persistent and burning problem of central-eastern Europe." J. S. Roucek

+ — Ann Am Acad 243:161 Ja '46 370w

Booklist 42:195 F 15 '46

Foreign Affairs 24:559 Ap '46 40w

Reviewed by H. J. Morgenthau
Harvard Law R 59:301 D '45 1450w

Reviewed by Rustem Vambery
Nation 163:275 S 7 '46 300w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
N Y Times p10 Je 2 '46 650w

"This is a timely, sincere and well-intentioned book. It does not belong to that type of research which ends only in an increase in the footnote wealth of the country. It sees the real problems and tries to find their solution in the interest of suffering and hard-hit people." Oscar Jászi

+ Pol Sci Q 61:304 Je '46 1150w

"Associate professor of history in the College of the City of New York, Mr. Janowsky has traveled extensively and has studied at first hand the problems he discusses with so much candor. No student of modern government and world affairs can afford to miss his interesting and timely study of national minorities." M. B. Lissfelt

+ Social Studies 37:186 Ap '46 400w

"Although Professor Janowsky is successful in his aim of writing a 'reasonably readable' book for the general reader, he sometimes indulges in abstractions which give his work an air of unreality. For example, he tells us that 'national federalism' is a better term than 'cultural pluralism' to describe his plan because, among other things, it has the 'virtue of suggesting unifying centripetal, rather than disruptive and centrifugal tendencies.' A certain amount of vagueness is inevitable in so comprehensive a proposal, however; it does not nullify the validity of the book's central idea." Vernon McKay

+ — Survey G 35:57 F '46 400w

U S Quarterly Bk1 2:50 Mr '46 320w

JEFFERS, ROBINSON. Medea. 107p $2.50 Random house

812

46-25159

A free adaptation of the Medea of Euripides, which is intended for an acting version.

"Jeffers, who is at his brooding best when exploring such misanthropic themes, is convincing both as poet and dramatist in this play." Leo Kennedy

+ Book Week p13 Ap 21 '46 80w

Booklist 42:313 Je 1 '46

"Jeffers' name will carry this book out amongst his following and poetry readers generally, but it will fall short of wide general appeal. . . . At no point does he reach the intensity of horror and pity that the famous Greek poet achieves, even in translation. For some reason, Jeffers' rendering does not prove as effective as his pseudo-Greek tragedies set in his California background."

Kirkus 14:56 F 1 '46 90w

Reviewed by George Freedley
Library J 71:760 My 15 '46 20w

Reviewed by Arthur Mizener
Nation 163:246 Ag 31 '46 700w

"The play might act well, for with proper lighting and an ambitious actress it could explode uncompromising horror in the heart. But it is neither a great tragedy nor a good poem. It is a melodrama that falls between two styles. In the ancient, pottery colors of brick and black and in the decorative motifs, the handsome exterior of this volume evokes the Greek more easily than what the volume contains." D. A. Stauffer

N Y Times p7 Ap 21 '46 850w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan
New Yorker 22:94 My 11 '46 700w

Reviewed by G. P. Meyer
Sat R of Lit 29:20 J1 13 '46 320w

JEFFERS, ROBINSON—Continued

"Mr. Jeffers does not call for modern dress. . . Still less, praise be, does he lower the terrible story to the level of surrealism and Freudian fantasy, as Cocteau did with the Oedipus legend. He seems chiefly to have desired to make Euripides's drama fit the frame of the modern theater and be reasonably clear to a modern audience. Doubtless his personal predilection for strong meat was amply satisfied by the original story. . . The blank verse of the usual translation Jeffers has abandoned for a much longer and free-flowing line, which comes easily off the tongue and is frequently lit with images not in Euripides but vividly in keeping with the barbaric tragedy. The reader of this version will not sense the operatic nature of Greek tragedy, but he will feel without question its tremendous dramatic impact." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p19 Ap 21 '46
600w

JEFFERSON, THOMAS, and GILMER, FRANCIS WALKER. Correspondence, 1814-1826; ed. with an introd. by Richard Beale Davis. 163p il $2.50 Univ. of S.C. press, Columbia 19, S.C.
B or 92 46-1605

This correspondence between Jefferson and a much younger man, tho covering the last twelve years of both lives, is made up chiefly of letters written during the period when Gilmer, acting as Jefferson's agent, was in Europe on a mission to recruit faculty members for the University of Virginia.

"In editing the correspondence between Thomas Jefferson and Francis Walker Gilmer, Dr. Richard Beale Davis has done a service to the student and the historian. Too little is known of Gilmer, his friendship with Jefferson, and the important part he played in the founding of the University of Virginia and the selection of its faculty, of which he, had he lived, would have been a member. It is the more to be regretted therefore that Dr. Davis has failed to make use of all the available material and has completely neglected the Jefferson Papers in the Library of Congress. . . In all other respects, Dr. Davis' book is an excellent one. A well-written introduction gives the necessary background, assisted by portraits of the two subjects; the material is well arranged, each letter beginning a new page, with the source printed clearly at the top, and the unobtrusive, yet extremely accurate and helpful notes at the foot. Dr. Davis is so much to be congratulated on what he has done that the omissions seem a greater pity." E. M. Sowerby

+ — Am Hist R 51:764 Jl '46 320w

"Mr. Davis's primary purpose apparently is to hitch Gilmer's wagon to Jefferson's star. In this he has succeeded well. For this volume is far more a book about Gilmer than one about Jefferson. . . The editor's meticulous reproduction of all the writers' inconsistencies in form, while not disturbing to the scholar—indeed perhaps desirable—will distract the attention of, if not annoy, the general reader, who is not concerned with such close textual accuracy." M. R. Adams

Sat R of Lit 29:15 Je 8 '46 900w

"The book is a very fine account of the problems of founding a university in a new and inadequately educated country."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:190 S '46 270w

"Bibliophiles and scholars will like the volume, but the flat truth is that it adds little to our knowledge of either man. It is an admirable work of scholarship, but hardly an item for the ordinary man's library."

Weekly Book Review p38 Ap 14 '46
230w

JENKINS, WILLIAM FITZGERALD. Murder of the U.S.A. 172p $2 Crown 46-20792

"An ultramodern mystery story of the science-fiction type, in which the 'whodunit' problem is to identify and destroy the murderous enemy nation after a 40-minute surprise attack from a secret rocket-launching base has wiped out a third of the people of the United States and destroyed all the big cities of the country, including Washington." Spring'd Republican

"A melodramatic tract for melodramatic times, done in bold colors and in a tight, effective narrative (a little cluttered by romance). And it is welcome in itself and even more because it may help to do what the sober speeches of the scientists have not done to make us believe what the future holds for us." James Sandoe

+ Book Week p4 O 6 '46 130w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p28 S 15 '46 160w

"You'll remember the magnificently animate descriptions of bombs and counter-bombs." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 22 '46
90w

"Has its moments."

Sat R of Lit 29:80 D 7 '46 50w

Spring'd Republican p4d S 22 '46 360w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p40 O 27 '46 100w

JENNINGS, JOHN EDWARD. Salem frigate. 500p $3 Doubleday 46-6176

The frigate Essex, gift of Salem to the United States in 1799, is the scene of much of this novel. Two men, Dr Tisdall, ship's surgeon, and Ben Price, carpenter, sail on each trip of the Essex, fight against the Barbary pirates, are captured and return to Salem several times until the day when Ben Price is killed in battle. Then the doctor returns to Salem, and to the woman he really loves—Ben's wife.

"The characters, major and minor, do not stand out sharply, perhaps because of the nature of the story. . . The continuous, almost dizzying action ranges the seven seas. . . For all this, Jennings uses bold, strong colors, and sustains a swift pace that will please those who relish hair-breadth escapes and explosive events." Bruce Lancaster

Atlantic 178:167 O '46 300w

Reviewed by E. E. Leisy

Book Week p3 Ag 18 '46 320w

Booklist 43:17 S '46

"The plot does not matter. The story of the Essex itself is exciting enough to make the tangled affairs of Tom and Patience, Ben and Selina, seem of small account." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 21 '46
650w

"There's adventure and romance and atmosphere a-plenty, but the reader's interest flags in overlong passages remote from the story."

+ — Kirkus 14:280 Je 15 '46 260w

"Geographically, much of this stylish-atout costume romance lies somewhere east of Suez. Psychologically, it never gets east of East Lynne." Richard Match

N Y Times p10 Ag 25 '46 600w

San Francisco Chronicle p 11 S 29 '46
170w

"Mr. Jennings has a talent for imaginative writing about the far away and long ago and a high degree of narrative skill. That talent carries the reader past even the most contrived and wooden episodes in the main tale and lends a positive fascination to the subsidiary stories. But a good deal of this talent appears to have been wasted on a rather deliberate effort toward a fat sale to Hollywood." Fletcher Pratt

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:20 Ag 31 '46 650w

Spring'd Republican p4d S 22 '46 270w
Time 48:108 Ag 19 '46 200w

"Written in a style deliberately and successfully patterned after journals of those years, the book provides a graphic and realistic picture of naval life afloat and ashore, mixed with romance, human hatreds and a little politics." P. J. Searles

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 11 '46
800w

Wis Lib Bul 42:151 N '46

JEROME, OWEN FOX, pseud. See Friend, O. S.

JEWELL, EDWARD ALDEN. Georges Rouault. See Rouault, G.

JEWETT, ELEANORE MYERS. Hidden treasure of Glaston; il. by Frederick T. Chapman. 307p $2.50 Viking

46-25259

The setting of this historical mystery for boys and girls is the abbey of Glastonbury; the time the Middle Ages. Two boys discover a secret underground vault and become involved in locating treasures of King Arthur's day.

"The manners and customs of the time will be absorbed happily and painlessly by young readers of either sex." Jane Cobb
+ Atlantic 178:166 D '46 90w

"All those who have loved the stories of King Arthur and his Knights and their never ending search for the Holy Grail, will read this tale of Glaston's treasure with intense interest. [It is] a skillful blend of historical truth and persistent legend." Martha King

+ Book Week p11 O 13 '46 380w

Booklist 43:38 O 1 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '46

"Around the outline of the story is woven a rich fabric of authentic background involving the underground chambers of a great Abbey, the monastery life with its library and reverence for old parchments, the retreat of a mad hermit, the manor castle of the King. A veil of mysticism rests upon the realistic adventures and ties them closely to the splendid Arthurian tradition. The illustrations by Frederick T. Chapman happily combine the actual and the visionary." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:471 N '46 170w

"Good story telling."

+ Kirkus 14:424 S 1 '46 100w

"Well-written, exciting story. . . Illustrations by Frederick T. Chapman are in keeping with the twelfth century setting. Attractive physical make-up; good print and binding." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 71:1336 O 1 '46 100w

"This delightfully told story throws a warm, human light on monastic life in twelfth-century England. . . The book will have an especial appeal for readers of the Catholic faith, but there is nothing sectarian about it. The scholarly accuracy of the background, and the swift exciting pace of the telling, make it satisfying reading for young people of any creed." N. B. Baker

+ N Y Times p30 O 20 '46 150w

Reviewed by K. S. White

New Yorker 22:142 D 7 '46 60w

"Boys and girls will probably read this story for excitement and adventure, and of these Miss Jewett is generous. She makes the most of the two boys' excursions underground, and the figure of the crazed monk who guards the Sword of King Arthur and is seeking desperately for the Grail is well conceived and well executed. Miss Jewett has a marked visual imagination. The vividness of her picture of the abbey and its services must be allowed to atone for her occasional ignorance of twelfth-century ceremonial. The black and white illustrations are bold and decorative." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 29:46 O 19 '46 390w

"Miss Jewett frames a story such as naturally follows the fairy-tale age and will be most enjoyed by young readers to whom, not so long ago, magic was taken for granted." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 S 29 '46 320w

JEWISH BLACK BOOK COMMITTEE. The Black book; the Nazi crime against the Jewish people. 560p il $5 Duell

940.54056 World war, 1939-1945—Atrocities. World war, 1939-1945—Jews. Jews—Persecutions. Germany—Politics and government

46-3917

"This is a stirring indictment, prepared under the aegis of the World Jewish Congress.

the American Committee of Jewish Writers, Artists, and Scientists, and others, for submission to the juridical authorities of the United Nations War Crimes Commission as evidence of the crimes committed by the Nazis against the Jewish people throughout Europe. Its pages horrify the reader." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

Reviewed by A. C. Spectorsky

Book Week p4 My 19 '46 650w

Booklist 42:314 Je 1 '46

Reviewed by J. M. Oesterreicher

Cath World 163:472 Ag '46 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '46

Reviewed by Alfred Werner

Nation 163:162 Ag 10 '46 600w

New Yorker 22:94 My 25 '46 40w

"The book closes with a plea for justice, for the restoration of property from those who now thrive on that property, for indictment of those responsible for these crimes. It seeks to offset the dread implication in the statement made recently by Percy Knauth in his 'Germany in Defeat' that 'the fact of Buchenwald is all but forgotten in this overforgetful world.' Those who were responsible for the preparation and documentation of this volume have submitted a detailed and telling indictment." Harold Fields

Sat R of Lit 29:28 Je 1 '46 1250w

"The book is based primarily on press and personal accounts, with frequent reference to documents, many of which are photostatically reproduced. The record of the Nuremberg trials, when fully published, should be much more complete, especially with respects to official German documents. The present volume, however, is a concise statement, and contains much that may not be familiar, such as the story of armed resistance of some of the Polish ghettos. The book may serve as a useful addition to the record of Nazi scientific inhumanity."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:229 S '46 250w

Reviewed by B. C. Crum

Weekly Book Review p3 Je 9 '46 1000w

JOECKEL, CARLETON BRUNS, ed. Library extension; problems and solutions; papers presented before the Library Institute at the University of Chicago, Aug. 21-26, 1944. (Studies in lib. science) 260p $3 Univ. of Chicago press

021.8 Library extension. Libraries and state A46-6

"The delay in publishing this book was unfortunate, for it is important to the library profession. The papers are by eight specialists in various areas of public service and 10 librarians, and the general conclusions favor larger and fewer library service units, effective state library agencies with adequate state aid, and nation-wide aid in the form of federal grants." (Booklist) Partial contents: Library extension today, by C. B. Joeckel; The American pattern of local government, by J. G. Kerwin; The optimum size of the public library unit, by Lowell Martin; The rural community and county government, by J. H. Kolb; The county library, by E. H. Morgan; The regional library, by H. M. Harris; Governmental co-ordination and consolidation in metropolitan areas, by J. A. Vieg; Library co-ordination and consolidation in metropolitan areas, by Amy Winslow; State and federal aid to local governments, by C. H. Chatters; State aid to public libraries, by J. W. Merrill; Federal aid to libraries, by C. H. Milam.

Booklist 42:207 Mr 1 '46

Christian Century 63:307 Mr 6 '46 40w

"There is enough grist in this book to keep the 'mills' in librarians' heads and hearts grinding at all speeds and from coarse to fine, for years ahead. It is one of the most important books in the library field in years, in that it draws a clear, true picture of the 'great unfinished task of American librarianship,' the extension of library service to all the people." C. R. Zimmerman

+ Library J 71:1622 N 15 '46 1200w

JOECKEL, C. B.—Continued

"For all who are seriously concerned with the nation-wide equalization of reading opportunity, this volume is both a challenge and a practical guide. It is to be regretted that its origin and sponsorship will doubtless limit its audience largely to practicing librarians and library-school students, for it has important implications for educators, political scientists, social workers, public health officials, legislators, agricultural extension workers, and local community leaders—not to mention taxpayers and good citizens everywhere. . . . The greatest single lack in the volume—and a feature that might well have made it more meaningful to the average reader—is a critical summary, highlighting and more closely integrating the contributions of the individual authors." E. B. Stanford

+ — Library Q 16:254 J1 '46 1350w
School & Society 63:143 F 23 '46 40w
Wis Lib Bul 42:56 Ap '46

JOHNSON, JULIA EMILY, comp. Palestine: Jewish homeland? (Reference shelf) 342p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

956.9 Palestine—Jewish-Arab problem 46-3310

Study of the Palestinian question, composed of articles by well-known authors, grouped under three headings: The background and problem; Palestine as a Jewish homeland; and The Arab claim to Palestine. Bibliography.

Booklist 42:301 My 15 '46

"Well balanced and objective study of the Palestinian question."

+ Christian Century 63:723 Je 5 '46 40w
Foreign Affairs 25:172 O '46 10w
Wis Lib Bul 42:113 J1 '46

JOHNSON, ALVIN SAUNDERS. Clock of history. 253p $3 Norton

320.4 Political science. U.S.—Politics and government. Education 46-3108

"The author of these choice and pithy essays written out of the trend of events over a period of fourteen years, is one of the world's foremost and wisest exponents of liberal democracy. True progress is possible only through the development of the individual, and toward the attainment of this ideal he proceeds to give new and richer meaning to such familiar concepts as democracy, racial understanding, human rights, adult education. Until recently the author was director of The New School for Social Research and in this connection founded the University in Exile composed of European scholars." (Library J) No index.

Reviewed by Jacques Barzun
Am Hist R 52:161 O '46 160w
Booklist 42:292 My 15 '46

"A thought-provoking volume."
+ Christian Century 63:627 My 15 '46 70w

Reviewed by C. G. Hamilton
Churchman 160:17 O 1 '46 180w
Cleveland Open Shelf p17 S '46

"Alvin Johnson's book deserves thoughtful consideration by readers who would survey America in a hopeful but critical light. They may accept or refute in whole or in part as they see fit without discomfiture for the author." R. J. Purcell

+ Commonweal 44:172 My 31 '46 750w
Current Hist 11:328 O '46 50w
Foreign Affairs 25:162 O '46 30w

"Recommended." G. O. Kelley
+ Library J 71:584 Ap 15 '46 130w
Reviewed by Heinz Eulau
New Repub 114:583 Ap 22 '46 480w

"This is a good and helpful book. It will put courage into the hearts of those who need it—and don't we all?" R. L. Duffus
+ N Y Times p26 My 19 '46 950w

Reviewed by R. L. Schuyler
Pol Sci Q 61:639 D '46 180w

"In these essays the reader will find almost continuous provocation to thought and encouragement to hope. Dr. Johnson's own abiding hope as teacher and as individual, is in the effectiveness of adult education." M. S. Watson
+ Sat R of Lit 29:8 My 25 '46 900w

"The appearance of Dr. Johnson's quiet and nontechnical wisdom, distilled into 'The Clock of History' is an event of greater importance than the mere publication of a volume. By showing the method of a mature mind working through the apparent difficulties, it reaffirms faith that the human being will continue successfully to cope with new problems." A. A. Berle

+ Survey G 35:229 Je '46 900w

Reviewed by Frances Witherspoon
Weekly Book Review p16 J1 14 '46 500w

JOHNSON, BURGESS. Campus versus classroom; a candid appraisal of the American college. 305p $3 Washburn

378 Students. Colleges and universities 46-4283

Informally written, anecdotal chapters on American higher education, by one who has taught in American colleges for a quarter-century.

Reviewed by J. J. De Boer
Book Week p15 My 19 '46 270w

Booklist 43:7 S '46

Kirkus 14:123 Mr 1 '46 140w

"No pat answers, but a discerning analysis of the author's findings along the years." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 71:666 My 1 '46 90w

"It is always a pleasure and a satisfaction to sit with a kindly, intelligent professor and hear what he has to say. That is the feeling one has in reading Professor Johnson's 'Campus Versus Classroom.' Anecdotal, filled with wisdom and friendly but devastating observations, the book is as pleasant as an evening's visit with a favorite friend." Benjamin Fine
+ N Y Times p26 Je 16 '46 600w

"In the author's words, these are 'chapters filled with fragmentary experience mingled with sundry philosophizings.' They make good, and easy, reading, rewarding to anyone interested in the American college." J. L. McConaughy
+ Sat R of Lit 29:38 S 14 '46 850w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman
School & Society 64:300 O 26 '46 900w

"This is a book that ought to be read by every college teacher. It is the result of long and wide experience." Stephen Duggan
+ Survey G 35:417 N '46 500w

Reviewed by W. G. Avirett
Weekly Book Review p15 J1 7 '46 500w
Wis Lib Bul 42:111 J1 '46

JOHNSON, FREDERICK ERNEST, ed. World order; its intellectual and cultural foundations; a series of addresses. (Institute for religious studies. Religion and civilization ser) 247p $2 Harper

901 Civilization, Modern. International cooperation. Reconstruction (1939-) 46-242

"Addresses by leaders in religious and intellectual life indicating how religious leadership can contribute to a permanent world order. One of the Religion and Civilization Series, published by the Institute for Religious Studies of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America." (School & Society) Partial contents: Toward a new concept of man, by Irwin Edman; Human differences and world order, by Margaret Mead; The psychological presuppositions of world order, by H. D. Lasswell; The task of cultural rebuilding, by P. A. Sorokin; A juristic framework of world order, by J. P. Chamberlain; America's responsibility in the postwar international field, by E. G. Nourse; The Catholic church and world order, by John LaFarge; The Protestant churches and world order, by J. C. Bennett; The Jewish contribution to a world order, by M. M. Kaplan; What has the war taught the churches? by F. E. Johnson. Index.

"This is manifestly an unsporting appraisal of a religion-in-the-atomic-age house party, which is patently inspired by intellectual and cultural (in the non-anthropological sense) good fellowship. The publishers in sending the book to be reviewed here suggest possible sociological utility in it. There is some. It is very little." S. A. Chapman

— Am Soc R 11:775 D '46 550w

Reviewed by Benjamin Weintraub
Book Week p4 Ja 20 '46 450w

Bookmark 7:5 Mr '46

"World Order will reach only a small public educated in the social sciences and religion. I wish that the technical dialect of some of the articles could be altered, without sacrificing accuracy, in the direction of ordinary English, so as to reach a wider, though still intelligent, public. Writers on sociology and psychology, it seems to me, are often unnecessarily forbidding." R. H. Goodale

+ — Christian Century 63:302 Mr 6 '46 800w

Reviewed by J. H. Hallowell

Crozer Q 23:190 Ap '46 1100w

J Phils 43:221 Ap 11 '46 480w

School & Society 62:391 D 15 '46 60w

"Social studies teachers may well read this volume with profit. The lectures are contributions by some of the best minds in America." Joseph Kise

+ Social Educ 10:282 O '46 350w

Reviewed by J. P. Jones

Survey 82:244 S '46 300w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:93 Je '46 250w

JOHNSON, GERALD WHITE. Honorable titan; a biographical study of Adolph S. Ochs 313p $3.50 Harper

B or 92 Ochs, Adolph Simon 46-6092

Biography of Adolph Ochs, "the man who built the New York Times," by the author of Woodrow Wilson (Book Review Digest 1944). Index.

Booklist 43:34 O 1 '46

"An Honorable Titan becomes the second outstanding newspaper life to be published this year. The other is, of course, William Allen White's autobiography. In these two books, we can study two totally different, but equally significant, phases of American journalism. They are classics of newspaperdom." E. D. Canham

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 22 '46 850w

"A success story, told with warmth and understanding of its central figure."

+ Current Hist 11:509 D '46 70w

"A conscientious, competent portrait of a career rather than the man—who inspires little that is warm, or personal."

Kirkus 14:190 Ap 15 '46 170w

"This biography is interesting primarily because of the many intimate details which it relates. At the same time it is somewhat long winded and lacks the precision which would seem necessary to do full justice to Ochs and his enterprise." Rudolph Hirsch

Library J 71:1048 Ag '46 70w

Manchester Guardian p3 N 1 '46 400w

Reviewed by McAlister Coleman

Nation 163:507 N 2 '46 500w

"I have spent a week-end reliving my own memories of a character gone these eleven years. And my own knowledge of Mr. Ochs has been increased by a record compiled with the help of those who knew him and who still live richly in the heritage and environment he created. Many of these will salute 'An Honorable Titan.' That is the most sincere compliment the author can receive. Many others would have enjoyed more of Mr. Ochs' wisdom, more of his humor—in short, more of Ochs. Yet, for myself, I found so much of importance in the record of his activities and so much that brings to life the man I knew that I forgive the author for his title." Kent Cooper

+ N Y Times p1 Ag 18 '46 3850w

"A biography composed in almost gaping admiration for the man and his paper. Mr. Johnson, who wrote 'American Heroes and Hero-Worship' a few years back seems to have become infected himself. . . . His book, interesting as many parts of it are, occasionally makes one think of those biographies that are commissioned by the heirs of distinguished men."

New Yorker 22:91 Ag 17 '46 120w

Reviewed by X. Larabee

San Francisco Chronicle p10 S 1 '46 600w

"His story of the conquest of Charles R. Miller, editor of the Times, together with his associates in ownership, and of financial magnates beginning with the elder Morgan, August Belmont, and Spencer Trask, is perhaps the most astonishing and fascinating in the biography of the age of Titans. Mr. Johnson leaves no doubt that Ochs was utterly honest in it all. . . . I question Gerald Johnson's insistence that the genius of Adolph Ochs was a consummation of common sense. . . . The deepest source of his genius seemed instinctive—call it subconscious divination if you will. It was not mere common sense that made his paper the fullest and most accurate record of the events of this world." John Corbin

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:7 Ag 17 '46 2000w

Discussion by J. R. Cominsky

Sat R of Lit 29:20 S 28 '46 1800w

"Gerald Johnson, in his life story of the man who built 'The New York Times,' has, with his customary skill, caught the Honorable Titan he set out to draw, but it is a titan rather than a man who comes from his pen. It is a dramatic story, a highly readable story, certainly one that every newspaper man will want to read, but it is not a colorful story because, if Mr. Johnson has portrayed him correctly, Mr. Ochs was not a colorful man in the sense that Pulitzer, Bennett, Dana, Greeley, Watterson and others were." M. F. Ethridge

+ — Weekly Book Review p1 Ag 18 '46 1450w

JOHNSON, JOSEPHINE WINSLOW. Wildwood. 162p $2 Harper

46-1199

"Delicately written character study of Edith Pierre, from her arrival at the cloistered home of her elderly cousins, Matthew and Valerie Pierre, when she was an introspective child just entering her teens, until the death of the old people some nine years later. During those years Edith was so frustrated by lack of love and understanding, so completely enslaved by her surroundings, so withdrawn from actual contact with life, that the passing of her guardians left her totally unprepared to go out and face the world."

"The book itself, in some respects as faultlessly and exquisitely neat as a tiny Swiss watch, gives evidence of painstaking care—a patient and not entirely unsuccessful effort to extract the full potentiality from each character and situation. . . . Miss Johnson, after an excursion into the hard-boiled muscular style of the social novel in 'Jordanstown,' has returned to the lyric mood of her Pulitzer Prize-winning 'Now in November.' Her prose is delicate and sensuous, at rare intervals verging on but never quite reaching mawkishness. 'Wildwood' may appear to be pallid fare for those with a taste for the robust or sensational, but it is a book likely to be quietly and pleasantly remembered by most readers." Jack Conroy

+ — Book Week p3 F 3 '46 500w

Booklist 42:213 Mr 1 '46

Cath World 163:93 Ap '46 250w

"Readers for 'entertainment,' in the casual sense of that word, or those who seek in fiction an easy consolation for their own defeats

JOHNSON, J. W.—Continued
must go elsewhere. Those who delight in conscious mastery of prose will be glad of a book that rifts the monotony of imperceptive literalism." Denham Sutcliffe

+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 Ap 3 '46
600w

Kirkus 13:498 N 15 '45 150w

"Beautifully written psychological study... Descriptions of the garden in all weathers and [Edith's] very occasional outside encounters are the only highlights of this cheerless tale."

R. P. Tubby

+ — Library J 71:54 Ja 1 '46 80w

"[The author's] first novel, 'Now in November,' was an urgent, lovely book which established its author both as a highly gifted artist in prose and as a writer intensely and passionately concerned with human suffering... Now in 'Wildwood' the concern with human suffering has become a morbid preoccupation. The prose, though still frequently evocative, often strains, sometimes breaks, and in places goes askew. The bravery and the pride are gone; there no longer seems to be courage to face the mornings. And the total effect—perhaps particularly upon one who recalls the author's original affirmative talent—is so profoundly disappointing that it can be expressed only in terms of personal regret." Richard Sullivan

N Y Times p5 F 3 '46 750w

"The theme, the defeat of innocence, is always a painful one, and Miss Johnson's own emotional vulnerability sometimes impairs the effectiveness of her very definite gift for writing."

New Yorker 22:87 F 23 '46 80w

"For those who value sensitively concentrated studies of human behavior without benefit of hectic plot or dialogue, for those who appreciate a poetic awareness of nature and carefully wrought prose, here is heart warming gratification." Grace Frank

+ Sat R of Lit 29:8 F 23 '46 600w

Time 47:102 F 25 '46 500w

"Josephine Johnson belongs among the women novelists whose nerve ends lie so close beneath the thin-skinned surface of their imagination that every change of light upon the landscape, every small indrawn breath of emotion, every last ripple of an uneasy mind sets them quivering. Such vulnerability often narrows a writer's horizons, but it also deepens the perceptions, and when, within the narrow framework of a chosen story its depths are truly plumbed, the impact upon the reader is sharp and unforgettable. This is what Miss Johnson has achieved in the brief, taut, lyrical tale called 'Wildwood.'... There can be no contempt for the frail creature of 'Wildwood' in the mind of the reader. For Miss Johnson, by revealing so sharply what might have been her power, reminds us to look well behind seeming weakness for its hidden, potential strength." Virgilia Sapieha

+ Weekly Book Review p2 F 3 '46 950w

Wis Lib Bul 42:46 Mr '46

"Wildwood has little connection with any recognizably real world at all. In elaborate, subtle, beautifully rhythmic and suggestive prose it sings a mournful lament over the body of a dead book... Lovely words weave airy circles around her, but no living breath animates her body, no substance exists in her kingdom of mists and shadows. The plight of the over-sensitive, the timid, the introspective and unloved is genuine enough, but Wildwood leaves it an abstract state unrelated to any individual of flesh and blood. It's too bad, for Miss Johnson once wrote a splendid book, Now in November." Orville Prescott

Yale R n s 35:576 spring '46 180w

JOHNSON, LAURA, and JOHNSON, JACK.
Leaky whale; pictures by Charles Darby.
30p $1.75 Houghton

Picture-story book about a large whale who was accidentally punctured by a swordfish and started to lose his best sperm oil. When a storm came up the whale did a good turn for a ship in danger, and in return the crew put a patch on the leaky whale.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

Atlantic 178:170 D '46 10w

"The flavor of folklore is all through this tale, making it at once simple and sophisticated, easy to understand yet packed with meaning. It's classic in its appeal to young and old admirers of the subtle truth."

+ Book Week p4 N 10 '46 140w

"Charles Darby drawings in this year's whale book are humorous and clear as well as colorful, with water color and ink technique. They jack up a not too important story into attractive merchandise."

+ Kirkus 14:296 J1 1 '46 80w

"When this book was read to ten 4-year-olds, they wanted it 'again' and at the end of that reading, 'again.' Grown-ups too will like this sea yarn with its funny drawings." L. F.

+ N Y Times p5 N 10 '46 150w

Sat R of Lit 29:44 N 9 '46 50w

JOHNSON, MARGARET SWEET, and JOHN-SON, MRS HELEN (LOSSING). Vicki, a guide dog; il. by [the authors]. 87p $2 Harcourt

Dogs—Legends and stories 46-3688

The story of how Vicki, a boxer, came to be a Seeing Eye dog, and how finally she overcame her one fear—of loud noises, especially explosions and thunder. For young readers.

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

Christian Science Monitor p10 S 10 '46
150w

Churchman 160:3 N 15 '46 20w

"A well-handled, competent story."

+ Kirkus 14:198 Ap 15 '46 90w

"Large clear print and attractive illustrations help make this a good dog story for younger children." M. M. Smith

+ Library J 71:668 My 1 '46 70w

"The delicate pencil drawings of Vicki and her friends and their background are beautifully reproduced in this attractive volume." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:43 My 18 '46 230w

Spring'd Republican p4d My 5 '46 70w

Weekly Book Review p12 My 19 '46
380w

Wis Lib Bul 42:116 J1 '46

JOHNSON, MELVIN MAYNARD, and HAVEN, CHARLES TOWER. Automatic weapons of the world. 644p il $7.50 Morrow

623.4225 Firearms, Automatic 46-361

"This rewritten revision of the authors' Automatic Arms [Book Review Digest, 1942] is larger by three hundred pages. A large amount of new data has been added, the text has been rearranged, and the illustrative matter has been revised and increased in quantity. All types of automatic weapons including aircraft and antiaircraft guns are now covered. About one-half of the book deals with the history of the subject, the remaining half deals with such matters as classification, design, ammunition, and employment in combat. Supplementary matter includes a tabular summary of the characteristics of various automatic weapons used throughout the world, a collection of detailed drawings of ammunition and weapons, and a bibliography." N Y New Tech Bks

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '46

Library J 71:183 F 1 '46 110w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:56 O '45

"The authors of this book have played an important part in the development of automatic weapons in the United States, and they can speak authoritatively on the mechanics of these military devices. The work may be briefly characterized as a technical and comprehensive encyclopedia of automatic weapons, well adapted for use as a reference book on one of the most important groups of military armament."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:157 Je '46 160w

JOHNSON, SHERMAN ELLSWORTH, and others. Managing a farm. 365p il $2.95 Van Nostrand

631 Farm management Agr46-4
Practical guide for either full time or part-time farmers. Contains information on selecting a farm, planning the layout, work programs, record keeping, and finance. Index.

"On every side I hear of summer cottages being remodeled for year-round use, of the purchase of land by city people, of planning for an ultimate move to the country. Most of these actual or prospective migrants want to farm, at least to some extent. Of many books designed to help them, 'Managing a Farm' is the best I have seen for a clear general picture of what farming means and how a farm enterprise is actually conducted. This book is remarkable in its range." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p15 Mr 31 '46 250w

Booklist 42:262 Ap 15 '46

Kirkus 14:16 Ja '46 150w

"Although the book is written by leading farm economists it has been kept about as clear and practical as the subject matter permits. Taken thoughtfully, it could give a general reader a satisfactory course in farm economics."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:240 S '46 210w

JOHNSON, WENDELL. People in quandaries; the semantics of personal adjustment. 532p $4 Harper

412 Personality, Disorders of. Psychology, Pathological, Semantics 46-6288

"A useful book for college classes in mental health, psychology, abnormal psychology, and speech pathology; should also prove helpful to teachers of composition, journalism, and radio speech. Indexed." School & Society

Am J Soc 52:330 Ja '47 20w

"The book is clearly written and is easy reading. The (first) part that explains what General Semantics is about can be heartily recommended as an immunizing dose for all that great number of workers who should struggle through Korzybski's writings. . . About twenty closely written pages on suggested research problems in the language structure of the individual present a sound method of approach. The reader who would wish something more 'practical' must realize that this whole group has a tremendous amount to offer to us in the important area of communication—but that much painstaking work in the area of pure science must come first." J. S. Plant

+ Ann Am Acad 248:303 N '46 360w

Reviewed by S. I. Hayakawa

Book Week p1 Jl 14 '46 1800w

"Mr. Johnson is an evangelist for semantics. His enthusiasm leads him to understress many non-semantic features of maladjustment such as physiological and temperamental influences, or the shattering impacts of traumatic episodes. Furthermore, he seems oversanguine about getting people to change the errors of their ways. . . In any event the positive value of 'People in Quandaries' far outweighs its defects. Dr. Johnson has presented, clearly and interestingly, the case for a new kind of clinical interpretation." S. S. Sargent

+ — N Y Times p30 S '46 900w

"It is an extraordinarily interesting book, and simple enough for most laymen, though not for those who can't concentrate on what they read."

New Yorker 22:68 Jl 27 '46 90w

School & Society 63:463 Je 29 '46 50w

Scientific Bk Club R 17:3 Je '46 360w

JOHNSON, WILLIAM HARDING, and NEW-KIRK, LOUIS VEST. General woodworking. 283p il $2.50; school ed $2 Macmillan

684 Woodwork 46-4220

"This volume is a pupil text in general woodworking and gives basic introduction to carpentry, cabinetmaking, patternmaking, and carving." School & Society

Booklist 42:362 Jl 15 '46

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1129 S 1 '46 40w

School & Society 63:381 My 25 '46 20w

JOHNSTON, EILEEN. Jamie and the tired train; with pictures by Ora Brian Edwards. [40p] $1 Harper

46-22549

Jamie was a little boy with a genius for fixing things. In this story he fixed a little train which would not run, and saved his uncle's carnival, when it was about to go out of business.

"Most mechanically minded small boys love these Jamie stories, with their 'wish fulfillment' characteristic."

+ Kirkus 14:542 N 1 '46 50w

"Recommended." K. H. McAlarney

+ Library J 71:1629 N 15 '46 70w

"I don't wonder five-year-olds like these Jamie books; they are one size larger than the Peter Rabbits and just about that much 'older' in appeal." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 O 27 '46 240w

JOINT COMMITTEE ON LATIN AMERICAN STUDIES. National archives of Latin America. See Hill, R. R., ed.

JOINT COMMITTEE ON LATIN AMERICAN STUDIES. Survey of the literature on Brazil of sociological significance. See Pierson, D., ed.

JONES, ANNA MAY. Leisure time education; a handbook of creative activities for teachers and group leaders. 235p il $2.75 Harper

371.8 Student activities, Recreation, Leisure 46-4704

"The object is to guide boys and girls in making their out-of-school activities, whether afternoon, week-end, or vacation, genuinely entertaining and recreative and also culturally valuable. It is not necessary to list the activities discussed. Almost all possible and desirable ones are here. The author is educational and vocational counselor for the New York city public schools." (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index.

Christian Century 63:843 Jl 3 '46 70w

"A handbook for teachers and group leaders interested in guiding individuals in an enjoyable and satisfying use of leisure time."

+ Kirkus 14:119 Mr 1 '46 110w

"This is a book to be used, not read. The subtitle of the volume, 'A Handbook of Creative Activities for Teachers and Group Leaders,' well defines its place in the literature of education." L. H. Mahoney

+ School R 54:621 D '46 450w

"Miss Jones's little book consists of many outlines for group leaders in various fields of possible leisure occupation, such as hobbies, collections, sports, scouting, crafts, travel, improving community conditions, Nature study, pets, reading with a purpose and music. These outlines are practical and are supplemented by bibliographies. The text elaborates the outlines." H. W. Marr

+ Springfield Republican p6 Jl 3 '46 180w

Wis Lib Bul 42:128 O '46

JONES, MRS BARBARA (SLATTER) Bennington college; the development of an educational idea. 239p $2.50 Harper

376.8 Bennington college, Bennington, Vermont 47-30081

History of the beginnings and growth of Bennington college in southern Vermont, with an analysis of the educational verities of the controversial "Bennington idea." The author was a professor on the original faculty of the college, and is the wife of its president. Index.

JONES, B. S.—Continued

"Should be useful as a reference book in the education departments, and as an information service in school libraries, where data on various colleges, catalogues, etc., are in constant demand."

+ Kirkus 14:534 O 15 '46 120w

School & Society 64:392 N 30 '46 30w

"Her analysis of what has happened to one of the nation's thorough-going experiments in the higher education of women is frank, objective and conducive to a lively confidence in Bennington's future." W. G. Avirett

+ Weekly Book Review p15 D 29 '46 650w

JONES, DAVID BRYN-. See Bryn-Jones, D.JONES, ERNEST, and BROWN, INNIS.

Swinging into golf. 162p il $2.50 McBride
796.352 Golf 46-25175

"Although the title page carries no indication of it, this is a revision of a book published by another publisher in 1937 [Book Review Digest, 1937]. The author [Ernest Jones] says he has incorporated in this edition the results of his teaching experience." (Booklist) No index.

Book Week p12 My 26 '46 140w

Booklist 42:332 Je 15 '46

"Mr Jones gives little space to telling how to play the various kinds of shots. The stroke for all is practically the same, he says, however different it may appear. The fact that no two players hit the ball exactly alike is to him also merely incidental. Early in life he studied many books on the game and how to teach it, and the one that impressed him most was written by Sir Walter Simpson, who said, 'There is one categorical imperative—hit the ball.' Mr Jones prefers 'Swing the club-head,' and that's the theory he has taught successfully for many years." D. B. B.

Spring'd Republican p6 My 14 '46
300w

JONES, GUY PEARCE, and JONES, CONSTANCE BRIDGES. Peabody's mermaid. 242p $2.50 Random house

46-25079

"Mr. Arthur Peabody, prosaic shoe manufacturer of Boston, Massachusetts, while wintering on a British West Indian island, goes fishing and catches a mermaid. How does his wife react? What do the newspapers say? How does a captive mermaid behave? The Joneses tell us." Library J

"Literal-minded people will find the story extremely silly. Psychologists may diagnose it as 'illusions of illness.' The average reader may find it as pleasant as a very light wine after too much straight whiskey." Olive Carruthers

Book Week p4 Ap 7 '46 230w

Booklist 42:247 Ap 1 '46

"In handling the business executive's adventure into strange new territory, Mr and Mrs. Jones show an understanding of middle age and its approach to life that adds real literary value to their story." H. J. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 6 '46
400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '46

Kirkus 13:530 D 1 '45 190w

"A pleasant little tale, moderately amusing." J. L. Ross

+ Library J 70:1190 D 15 '45 70w

"It's a sweet, sad, funny little story, for as Mr. Jones admits, the satirical aspect faded as Min's haunting music drifted through the pages. There's enough of an allegory in it to fit anyone's lost dreams, and enough humor to make everyone laugh. If all husbands and wives could work together as smoothly as Mr. and Mrs. Jones, marriage would be as successful as sunshine." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Times p28 Ap 14 '46 320w

"The collaboration of the Joneses has produced a most diverting tale with a beautiful balance between realism and fantasy." G. G. Bates

+ Sat R of Lit 24:14 Ap 20 '46 700w

"For selfish reasons you'd better slip 'Peabody's Mermaid' behind a cushion when you have company. It's the sort of story people pick up idly and walk off with rapidly on the theory that their right to be amused—and most wittily amused—is more urgent than your rights of ownership, not to mention your rage if the book is borrowed before you have savored every bright page right down to the end." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p16 Ap 7 '46 400w

JONES, HOWARD MUMFORD. Education and world tragedy; the Rushton lectures. 178p $2.50 Harvard univ press

378 Education, Higher. Colleges and universities—Graduate work A47-78

"The Rushton lectures, in which the author calls for a major reorganization of educational patterns, particularly at the graduate-school level." School & Society

Reviewed by J. J. De Boer

Book Week p16 D 8 '46 450w

Current Hist 12:58 Ja '47 1000w

Reviewed by Lyman Bryson

N Y Times p36 N 24 '46 800w

School & Society 64:318 N 2 '46 20w

"He offers certain practical suggestions about discrimination among various Ph.D. degrees, one of which should remain a certificate of training in research, while another ought to be the proud badge of a promising teacher who has really learned something to teach and something about teaching it. These sections, I think, should be read by all deans of graduate schools, by all graduate teachers who have any sincere interest in their task, and by many college presidents who are at present more concerned with the trade-union label than with the state of teaching in their colleges." Marjorie Nicolson

Weekly Book Review p8 D 29 '46 1200w

JONES, JESSIE MAE (ORTON), comp. Little Child; the Christmas miracle told in Bible verses chosen by Jessie Orton Jones; il. by Elizabeth Orton Jones. 38p $2 Viking

232.92 Christmas stories. Jesus Christ—Nativity 46-11908

Bible verses telling the story of the nativity, with reverent pictures in red and black and grey showing a group of small children acting out the pageant for an auditorium full of small people like themselves. The materials for costumes are easy to procure. A 16-page booklet of directions and music for the production can be had for fifty cents.

"A lovely Christmas book which will endear itself to adults; for children the illusion created on a stage by costumes made from everyday household articles may be destroyed when transferred to the pages of a book."

+ Booklist 43:75 N 1 '46

"Nativity story, arranged for possible use as a kindergarten or school pageant, uses the King James version. Apart from this, it is recommended."

Commonweal 45:119 N 15 '46 40w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 22:459 N '46 120w

Kirkus 14:523 O 15 '46 90w

"Their faith and absorbed awe contrasting with the makeshift stage properties brings a lump to the throat of the grown-up, but the second grade to which the reviewer read the book was enraptured by the idea of seeing children acting the parts. . . In spite of price, recommended highly." Gertrude Andrus

+ Library J 71:1545 N 1 '46 90w

"To one who has watched children working out their little dramas it is absolutely true, catching the essence of the seriousness with which they work. From the first scene showing the small actors, very appealing in their homely innocence, to the final picture of them marching out of the auditorium, it is perfection. Grownups and children alike will love it." Phyllis Fenner

+ N Y Times p48 D 1 '46 100w

Reviewed by N. V. Morgan

San Francisco Chronicle p5 N 10 '46 30w

"For reasons personal as well as professional, I have for a long time kept track of the books about Christmas published each year for American children, especially those little plays appropriate to the season in which little children themselves take all or most of the parts. It is a long time since I have found a play of this kind so good as this one. I have never found a better. Indeed, I might even say that I have not read one exactly like it."

+ Weekly Book Review p9 N 10 '46 600w

JONES, MARION STURGES-. See Sturges-Jones, M

JONES, MARY ALICE. Bible story of the creation; pictures by Janice Holland. 38p $1.25 Rand McNally

222.11 Bible stories 47-606

An explanation of the Biblical story of the creation, written for children of six to ten.

Christian Century 63:1536 D 18 '46 10w

Kirkus 14:593 D 1 '46 90w

Reviewed by M. B. Snow

Library J 72:83 Ja 1 '47 70w

"This inspiring story could have been presented with more distinction for children of 6 to 10. However, the actual verses from the Bible on the creation are included so that they can be read along with the explanation and, perhaps, from the two combined a child would get some idea of the great mystery as told in the Bible. It is a pity that the illustrations are so poor and badly suited to the subject matter." Virginia Mathews

+ N Y Times p11 D 22 '46 140w

"This is something worth doing for the benefit of little children, boys and girls somewhat older than those to whom her earlier books were given: 'Tell Me About God,' 'Tell Me About Jesus' and 'Tell Me About the Bible.' . . I do not see how it could disturb any one's faith or fail to create a sense of something on which faith is based." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p9 D 22 '46 450w

JONES, NARD. Still to the West. 268p $2.75 Dodd

46-1885

A novel of the Pacific northwest, and of the people who made the Grand Coulee dam. The story centers around Ellen O'Malley, granddaughter of a sturdy pioneer, who marries a man of her own class, and regrets it. Later she falls in love with a man who shares her vision, the vision instilled in her by her pioneer grandfather.

Reviewed by E. D. Branch

Book Week p15 Mr 24 '46 270w

Booklist 42:248 Ap 1 '46

"Nard Jones, known for his novels about the Pacific Northwest, once more combines a nice balance of yarn telling with background and historical detail that are vivid and absorbing." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 21 '46 180w

"It is questionable if Mr. Jones's readers, of which he has a great number, and staunch ones, too, will consider this his best novel. It is much lighter in content than his 'Swift Flows the River.' It is less pungent than his 'Oregon Detour.' It is less scandalous than his 'Scarlet Petticoat.' What it is, it seems to me, is a competent piece of fiction." Stewart Holbrook

+ Sat R of Lit 29:55 Mr 30 '46 400w

"Mr. Jones manages a theme of sweep and dimension without dwarfing the human warmth of his story." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p34 Mr 31 '46 180w

Wis Lib Bul 42:75 My '46

JONES, PARK J. Petroleum production; 5v; v. 1, Mechanics of production; oil, condensate, natural gas. 228p $4.50 Reinhold

665.5 Petroleum (46-1915)

"The physical principles of the recovery of oil, condensate and natural gas from underground reservoirs are treated in this work. Scientific and engineering data are presented on such topics as interstitial and free water, properties of reservoir gases and liquids, displacement of oil by water and gas, and reservoir invasion factors and patterns. The present volume treats chiefly of production before displacing water or gas breaks through into the producing well, and the author's object is to present information that will lead to maximum production before this break-through occurs. Most of the chapters include references to related literature." N Y New Tech Bks

"The book makes no attempt at an exhaustive survey of published data but rather is a compilation of the information contained in a few articles by outstanding authorities, to which reference is made. The author uses his broad experience in the interpretation of this information but does not present any new data of his own . . . One of the most valuable features of the book is the inclusion of a substantial number of practical problems and their solutions. These will not only be of aid to anyone studying the subject for the first time, but will also be useful as a means of orientation to those who go to the literature for further information." Whitney Weinrich

+ Chem & Eng N 24:1132 Ap 25 '46 400w

Chem & Met Eng 53:299 My '46 100w

Library J 71:486 Ap 1 '46 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:11 Ja '46

JONES, STEPHEN BARR. Boundary-making; a handbook for statesmen, treaty editors and boundary commissioners; with a foreword by S. Whittemore Boggs. (Carnegie endowment for int. peace. Division of int. law. Monograph ser) 268p $3 Columbia univ. press

320.128 Boundaries 45-4928

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Reviewed by A. K. Lobeck

Am Hist R 51:488 Ap '46 550w

"This scholarly, heavily documented book makes a contribution deserving of critical study by those who hope to raise boundary making from the level of arbitrary haphazard dictation to that of a fine art or, even above, to the level of an exact science." M. J. Froudford

+ Ann Am Acad 246:146 Jl '46 440w

"Dr. Jones is not concerned with advocating any one theory, but rather tries to do justice to them all. His own view is that 'each boundary is essentially a unique case,' and should be decided on its individual merits rather than after general principles. Accordingly, he has drawn his examples from diverse regions, such as the Americas, Europe, the Middle East, and the Far East, and illustrates the text with numerous maps of specific problems. He has documented the work very carefully, and covered every aspect of the field. His style is terse and readable, and should attract the attention which this book undoubtedly deserves." J. W. Watson

+ Canadian Hist R 26:454 D '46 650w

"It is a book that must be in the equipment of the officials who will meet in coming months to negotiate the peace treaties in Europe and Asia, and it should be in the baggage of the technicians whose demarcating work will, presumably, begin after the 'delimiters' have finished their tasks. The general student of political geography and international relations should know the volume, to refer to it as occasion may demand. The bibliography is especially helpful." W. G. Fletcher

JONES, S. B.—Continued

+ Geog R 36:342 Ap '46 380w

"The book is well and interestingly written. One of its virtues is its compactness and lack of verbosity. It should be a real help in leading to a minimization of boundary difficulties in the future."

+ Harvard Law R 59:642 Ap '46 400w

JONES, THELMA. Skinny angel. (Whittlesey house publication) 334p $2.75 McGraw 818

46-2709

Reminiscences of the author's life with a jolly mother and a solemn Norwegian father, in a series of fresh water colleges over the middle west and west. Mother could always laugh, except over her own too opulent curves. It was her dearest wish to be "skinny" when she went to heaven, hence the title.

Reviewed by George Dillon

Book Week p17 Ap 7 '46 320w

Booklist 42:279 My 1 '46

"A family saga, revolving around Mother whose determination to let nothing beat her is leavened with humor, wisdom and warmth."

+ Kirkus 14:12 Ja '46 250w

Reviewed by Thelma Purtell

N Y Times p36 Mr 24 '46 360w

"'Skinny Angel' is pleasantly readable and completely written. Perhaps neither of its central characters becomes in the eyes of the reader as distinctive and remarkable as each must have seemed to the book's author, but they do become people real enough to arouse the reader's interest and sympathy." J. P. Wood

+ Sat R of Lit 29:34 O 5 '46 800w

"This is an exceptionally human and amusing first novel, though much of the material is prenatal." D. B. B.

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Ap 21 '46 160w

"'Skinny Angel' revolves around the engaging personality of the woman for whom it is named and the reserved but also lovable figure of Father. As a sidelight, it gives a vivid if sometimes disquieting picture of communities and their struggling colleges in American small towns and of people who had to meet ends gently and could not be 'candidly poor' like the day laborers who usually had an edge on them financially. Like Mother, the book has warmth and gaiety and substance; it is good reading." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Mr 31 '46 800w

Wis Lib Bul 42:72 My '46

JONG, ADRIANUS MICHAEL DE. The platter; being a dramatic tale filled with wicked passions, weird complications and the triumph of pleasure in the misfortunes of others; tr. from the Dutch by Alfred van Ameyden van Duym; il. by Gracia Stein. 180p $2.50 Querido

46-22835

A morality tale by a Dutch writer who was killed by Dutch Quislings in 1943. This story, originally published in 1933, concerns a valuable platter bought by a wandering peddler, and the greed and quarrels which it evokes. The scene is Brabant in southern Holland.

"In painting a miniature world picture in the confines of this simple story, De Jong makes an engrossing tale of human weaknesses, sparked with down-to-earth humor. The peculiar landscape of Holland's southeastern province and the way of life of the people make a fine background. To judge De Jong's importance as a writer and sociologist it will be necessary to read his last book finished shortly before his death which will soon be published in this country." Emily Schossberger

+ Book Week p2 D 1 '46 220w

"The translation is too literal; unnecessary four-letter words perhaps mar its value for the young, while adults will find the brief and obvious plot only mildly entertaining. Not recommended." Ann Whitmore

— Library J 71:1542 N 1 '46 80w

"The story is told spiritedly and with exemplary directness. It has all the winning naïvete and special magic of a folk tale. It has, too, that close integration of insight and fable which distinguishes the work of art. The illumination is intrinsic rather than imposed and doctrinaire. The translation is readable and smooth, but unfortunately Alfred van Ameyden van Duym in an attempt to represent the colloquial nature of Brabant peasantry speech has his peasants use [much] American slang." Stephen Stepanchev

+ — Weekly Book Review p10 N 24 '46 330w

JONG, DOLA DE. See De Jong, D.

JORDAN, PHILIP DILLON. Singin' Yankees. 305p il $3.50 Univ. of Minn.

927.8 Hutchinson family. Singers A46-1631

In 1842 several members of a New Hampshire farm family, the Hutchinsons, embarked on a career of singing for pay. For almost fifty years their name was popular in this country. They also sang in England, met many of the famous people of their day, and finally settled the town of Hutchinson, Minnesota. The book is filled with their impressions of those they met, and their experiences all over the United States, and in lesser degree in foreign countries. Words of many of their sentimental ballads are given. Index.

Booklist 42:327 Je 15 '46

"Mr. Jordan has told the story pleasantly and clearly. He dramatized the matter of documents and thus conveys information with interest. Swiftly he creates various backgrounds. His book echoes with songs sung by the Hutchinsons, and these songs do much to re-create the pathos-loving age of melodeons and Bloomer suits." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 27 '46 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '46

"A most attractive bypath in Americana and music. . . . The inclusion of the songs they sang (words only) forms a valuable treasury of indigenous American song. . . . Not specifically for music departments, but should be added to their shelves. Good Americana as well."

+ Kirkus 14:238 My 15 '46 190w

"This is the lusty and carefully detailed chronicle of this quintet of homespun vocalists who combined business shrewdness with sentimentality and humanitarian sincerity with showmanship. . . . The most unusual feature of the book, however, is the songs it describes and often quotes in full, ranging from homely ballads and spirituals to lyric propaganda of the worst sort. Many were hopelessly banal in spirit and little better than doggerel in form, but they were to a large degree the songs that America was singing just before and after the Civil War—the songs that through the medium of these 'Singin' Yankees' and similar troupes helped to make America what it was in that formative era." R. T. Bond

+ N Y Times p16 Je 16 '46 550w

"The story of the Hutchinsons' tuneful travels in this country and abroad makes fascinating reading." E. J.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Jl 7 '46 150w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:169 S '46 160w

"Although they must have been smug and frightful bores personally, the Hutchinsons are rather fascinating characters in a book, a compound of all the various yeasts that were fermenting in the Republic. Mr. Jordan has done an immense amount of work on them. He has also told their story well and in detail. He brings them to life. . . . I could wish that so able a historian as the author had not thought it necessary to include, in what purports to be straight biography, many long alleged conversations between the Hutchinsons. They are not convincing, nor is the alleged New Hampshire dialect like any that I, or anybody else, heard issue from the Old Granite State. The other portions of the book are sound and well done, and the background of events is carried along with the main narrative to make a most engaging study of a phenomenon that could have appeared nowhere but in nineteenth-century America. The book is illustrated and contains a number of the most dreadful lyrics ever written or sung. They are wonderful." Stewart Holbrook

 + Weekly Book Review p2 Ag 11 '46
 1300w

JORDAN, RALPH BURDEN. Born to fight; the life of Admiral Halsey. 208p il $2 McKay
 B or 92 Halsey, William Frederick 46-4500
 Biography of Admiral Halsey by a news service correspondent who covered navy warfare with Halsey and Nimitz thruout the war. Illustrated with photographs. No index.

Reviewed by William Hogan
 San Francisco Chronicle p14 J1 3 '46
 750w

"A livelier life of a war hero has not emerged from the late war. Ralph Jordan, a newspaper correspondent who has spent a long time with Admiral Halsey's commands, presents him 'tough in fibre, tough in thinking' and quite as much so in language, but his admiration and understanding of Halsey's character balances his reports of what the admiral said on various trying occasions."
 + Weekly Book Review p20 O 13 '46 230w

JORDAN, VIRGIL. Manifesto for the atomic age. 70p $1.50 Rutgers univ. press 901 Civilization. Economics. Atomic energy 46-5246

"Brief essay on the various aspects of the second industrial revolution, the atomic, or chemical age. He says the question is not philosophic, economic or moral, but biological and spiritual, 'whether or not human nature can assimilate and adapt itself to the age of alchemy and its applications and man still survive, not merely as a species, but as a spirit.'"
 Library J

Reviewed by Willard Shelton
 Book Week p3 F 10 '46 310w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
 Book Week p2 Ap 14 '46 550w

"This small and relatively expensive volume presents a philosophy of gloom of the type personified by the works of Spengler, Elliot, and Pareto. It has little to do with nucleonics or manifestoes. Dr. Jordan assumes that leisure and abundance for the common people will lead to decadence and a return to feudalism. He would like to take us back to the early industrial period of the last century but does not suggest the means by which such a transformation could be achieved. Little faith is shown in democratic processes for shaping our future. . . The book is an example of the bewilderment shared by many people toward the modern world. It is doubtful if Dr. Jordan's small volume will alleviate that bewilderment to any great extent." A. S. Newton

— Chem & Eng N 24:1731 Je 25 '46 250w
 Current Hist 11:229 S '46 40w
 Foreign Affairs 25:161 O '46 20w
 Library J 71:346 Mr 1 '46 60w

"The book may be read in thirty minutes and forgotten in half of that." Robert Bendiner
 — Nation 162:577 My 11 '46 280w

Reviewed by George Soule
 New Repub 114:512 Ap 15 '46 210w

"It seems to this reviewer that Dr. Jordan should have written a longer and more careful book, or no book. This one will make nervous people more nervous, but that is about all." R. L. Duffus
 N Y Times p6 F 17 '46 700w

New Yorker 22:98 F 16 '46 120w

"Thoughtful and provocative essay. But the accomplishments of the atomic physicists are only part of a trend which has been apparent for a century. Jordan's manifesto deserves the consideration of every business man for the simple reason that it crystallizes in a few pages the social and economic philosophy of our time." W. S. Lynch

Sat R of Lit 29:13 Mr 2 '46 1100w

Reviewed by Francis Hackett

Sat R of Lit 29:5 My 11 '46 2000w

School & Society 63:120 F 16 '46 40w

"Manifesto for the Atomic Age' might better be called a lamentation and a dirge. Mr Jordan gazes at the swiftly vanishing past with nostalgia, and at the prospect of future comfort and prosperity with terror. . . The world has tremendous problems ahead. The unlimited prosperity that Jordan foresees will not be attained easily and automatically. It will be attained by hard, constructive work and rational thinking, and not by those who become panic-stricken at the very idea of its accomplishment." H. M. Davis

— Springfield Republican p4d F 10 '46 420w

Reviewed by J. H. Holmes

Weekly Book Review p20 Mr 3 '46 750w

JORGENSEN, THEODORE. Henrik Ibsen; a study in art and personality. 550p $3.50 St Olaf college press, Northfield, Minn.

839.822 Ibsen, Henrik 45-10339

Professor Jorgenson has been teaching the drama of Ibsen at St Olaf college in Minnesota for twenty years. He says this book is "a cumulative result of studying the dramas personally and of using them educationally in my classes." A separate chapter is assigned to each of the major plays. Includes also a brief "epitome" of Ibsen's life and work. Index.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 Ja 27 '46 90w

Booklist 42:263 Ap 15 '46

"Professor Jorgenson's book is pretty steadily grey and on the heavy side. But it is thorough, sound and sensible in its analysis of the significant core of all the plays and in its story of Ibsen's development as artist in relation to the politics and movements of his day. All students of Ibsen—and nobody who studies modern drama can escape him—will find admirable guidance in this volume, and, after the first chapter, no fog." W. P. Eaton
 + Weekly Book Review p4 F 10 '46 1050w

JOSEPH, DONALD. Straw in the south wind. 297p $2.50 Macmillan

46-2670

Novel of the south in the early years of the twentieth century. The heroine is the young wife of an older tradition-loving judge. Constance's championship of the Negroes is the forerunner of two suicides, but brings happiness in the end.

"Joseph writes quietly and without rancor. His style is somewhat mannered, but it has a kind of flow, a paradoxical precision and lushness. His indefatigable attention to small detail has the effect of making the reader feel he has read a much fuller account of the period than is actually here." A. J. Hiken

+ Book Week p6 Ap 21 '46 320w

Booklist 42:317 Je 1 '46

Christian Century 63:658 My 22 '46 70w

Current Hist 11:49 J1 '46 50w

"A novel of the south at the turn of the century which has warmth and spirit. . . Romantic to humorous touches make this entertainment—primarily popular—rather than thematic problem reading."

+ Kirkus 14:79 F 15 '46 190w

"Not an important book, but should be in collections attempting to include all such material." D. R. Homer

Library J 71:586 Ap 15 '46 120w

"The book presents the anomaly of an overcrowded canvas with the net effect of thinness. We are offered a lynching, mob melodrama, clandestine love affairs, two suicides and the complete shattering and reorganization of an established home. But sketchy treatment and a lack of inner progression keep the book from coming alive; as is so often the case, minor characters have more reality than the principals. A 6-year-old boy, Brett, in particular, is a likable youngster whose childish irrelevances inject a little sanity into the sentimental vagaries of his elders." Barbara Herman

JOSEPH, DONALD—Continued

— + N Y Times p18 My 5 '46 230w

"Picturelly the book is excellent. There is the warmth of well-loved places and people remembered in the book as a sort of plantation landscape-with-figures of life in 1907. But when Mr. Joseph moves his portraits into action as people they become only soft-speaking puppets serving a story in which Mr. Joseph sacrifices everything to his own adoration for his own heroine." Jonathan Daniels

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:15 My 4 '46 450w

"Although it is strikingly uneven, and never quite seems to succeed in what it is attempting, Mr. Joseph's book remains interesting, provocative and sometimes stirring." H. T. Kane

+ — Weekly Book Review p8 Ap 21 '46 900w

Wis Lib Bul 42:115 Jl '46

JOSEPHSON, MATTHEW. Stendhal; or, The pursuit of happiness. 489p $4 Doubleday

B or 92 Beyle, Marie Henri (De Stendhal, pseud) 46-7755

A long, full biography of an early nineteenth century French writer, born Henri Beyle, but best known to posterity by one of his many pseudonyms, Stendhal.

Reviewed by Jex Martin

Book Week p3 D 1 '46 1000w

Booklist 43:168 F 1 '47

"Mr. Josephson writes with erudition and enthusiasm. He has covered the ground with great thoroughness, and, in spite of his preoccupation with Freudian theory, his work is authoritative as biography and as literary criticism." L. A. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 11 '47 650w

Kirkus 14:368 Ag 1 '46 200w

Reviewed by Harry Levin

New Repub 115:595 N 4 '46 1550w

Reviewed by W. M. Frohock

N Y Times p6 O 20 '46 1100w

"Mr. Josephson tries so hard to picture all sides of Stendhal simultaneously that his book occasionally reads like a double exposure. . . But 'Stendhal; A Biography' is a fine book, despite everything, because it makes available in English for the first time great chunks of material delightful to read. It is to be hoped that its publication will start a demand for the translation of the whole body of Stendhal's writing and of notable writing about him." A. J. Liebling

+ — New Yorker 22:126 O 19 '46 2400w

"Matthew Josephson has made a living portrait of Beyle and any reader acquainted with his other splendid biographies will know at once that here is a book they cannot afford to be without." George Snell

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 1 '46 600w

"Like most 'definitive' biographies, Matthew Josephson's Stendhal is heavily ballasted with tinkling trifles. It lacks, for all its efforts, the dazzling high spiritedness that poured like a flood out of Stendhal himself. Nonetheless, like Josephson's Victor Hugo it is the best and most comprehensive English study of its subject, a careful collection of material, skillfully assembled and organized."

+ — Time 48:106 O 21 '46 800w

"Mr. Josephson tells a rounded, well proportioned tale. He is skillful to the fine point of making himself unobtrusive. The ground he covers is so vast—the writings alone of Stendhal run to seventy-four volumes—that his errors and even his misjudgments are comparatively negligible. It is important that he has given Stendhal every chance to make a host of new friends." Marvin Lowenthal

+ Weekly Book Review p7 O 20 '46 1700w

JOSEPHY, ALVIN M. The long and the short and the tall; the story of a marine combat unit in the Pacific; introd. by A. A. Vandegrift; phot. by Marine corps combat photographers. 221p $3 Knopf

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Pacific ocean. U.S. Marine Corps. 3d division 46-2843

The author was a marine combat correspondent attached to the 3rd Division, who was to make recordings of actual invasions. He covered Guadalcanal, Guam, and Iwo Jima, and has reported the bravery and terrors of Joe Blow, the marine equivalent of the army's G.I. The appendix is a "Transcript of the eyewitness description of the landing on Guam, July 21, 1944, made for radio broadcast in the United States."

"Alvin Josephy does not pose as a GI philosopher or a military tactician; he has recorded what he saw and heard in two decisive victories over the Japanese, and he gives it to the reader straight without attempting to be significant or to draw any conclusions. . . Sergeant Josephy waded ashore on Guam in one of the first waves of assault troops and carried with him recording apparatus to make a running commentary of what happened to him and to the men close to him. A transcript of his unrehearsed remarks is included in the appendix of his book and makes the best reading of all. In the disjointed, often explosive chatter of a green soldier facing death knowingly and without hesitation, the civilian home front can find a ready clue to what the war was like for many of our American youth." E. L. Jones

+ Atlantic 178:152 Jl '46 420w

Reviewed by Harry Brown

Book Week p5 Ap 7 '46 550w

Booklist 42:296 My 15 '46

"Good, straight reporting of the invasions of Guam and Iwo Jima by a Marine combat correspondent who was in both campaigns. . . It is extraordinarily new, this material. Though faithful to fact and swift-moving, it lacks the bitter-tragic touch which a Tregaskis could give it, but his eyewitness account recorded while landing on the beach under Jap fire, has the vividness and immediacy of Sherrod's Tarawa [Book Review Digest, 1944], while the balance of his text proves that man's deepest experiences cannot be conveyed in on the spot impressions, when words seem superficial and muddled."

+ Kirkus 14:85 F 15 '46 130w

"This book contains some of the best war reporting to date and is highly recommended." H. G. Kelley

+ Library J 71:404 Mr 15 '46 140w

"Josephy has captured as much of the experience of Iwo as anyone there. The battle, in the last analysis, was not won by generalship or superiority of weapons, but by the intrepid spirit of that anonymous worthy, Joe Blow. 'The Long and the Short and Tall' is a fine memorial to his achievement." David Dempsey

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 31 '46 700w

"Some of this has been done before, though seldom quite so well, which is to say that the book is eye-witness journalism of a high grade but a common type." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R of Lit 29:32 My 25 '46 1000w

"The appendix of Sergeant Josephy's book is alone worth the price of admission. . . Other correspondents (and combat troops as well) reworked and polished their phrases long after the battle, while Josephy describes the fighting as it is actually going on. It is crude, rough, stuttering with excitement. It is authentic, the real thing, the instantaneous flavor of war." P. J. Searles

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Mr 31 '46 700w

JOVINE, FRANCESCO. Seeds in the wind; tr. by Adrienne Foulke. 306p $3 Roy pubs.

46-7691

A tale of Italy in the middle years of the nineteenth century, a time of civil strife and changing social conditions. The chief characters are Pietro Veleno, a peasant lad, his boyhood sweetheart Antonietta who is above him in station, and his friend Don Matteo, the parish priest.

"'Seeds in the Wind' may suggest comparison with Silone's 'Fontamara' and 'Bread and Wine' but, while Jovine avoids Silone's acerbity he also lacks his directness, and the charm of his leisurely perambulating style may quickly pall for readers who require pace and form in their fiction." Jex Martin

Book Week p5 O 20 '46 400w

"Authentic, sincere, there is perhaps too little story interest here to carry this to an American audience."

Kirkus 14:358 Ag 1 '46 120w

"Well written, but dull." Mary Clark

Library J 71:1330 O 1 '46 70w

"Mr. Jovine is not the most polished and accomplished of story builders. His book, however, which is warm, chaotic, and sympathetic, could hardly, by any reader, be criticized for slickness or dishonesty." E. V. Winebaum

+ N Y Times p20 O 20 '46 400w
New Yorker 22:133 O 19 '46 80w

"All his publishers tell us about this new author is that he is an Italian, and that this is his first novel. It would be a fine novel in any case; as a beginner's offering it is a remarkable book. It has the kind of measured pace which does not hamper, or retard, the flow of action, but lends it its proper weight. Its style, rich and wiry at the same time, stands out as distinguished in what seems to be a first-rate translation." Robert Pick

+ Sat R of Lit 29:20 N 2 '46 450w

Reviewed by J. D. Ross

Weekly Book Review p14 N 3 '46 700w

JUDSON, CLARA (INGRAM) (MRS J. M. JUDSON). . . Michael's victory; il. by Elmer Wexler. 192p $2 Houghton

46-7313

"The latest of Miss Judson's stories of children of other countries who settled in America, this tells of Irish Michael who came to Ohio in the early 1850's. He is a typical Irish boy and his championship of the new railroad brings out his ready wit and his fighting courage." (Sat R of Lit) At head of title: They came from Ireland.

"Action paced by excellent dialogue moves this story along at a good clip. Here's a fine picture of the 1800s that the 9 to 12 year olds are bound to enjoy." A. N.

+ Book Week p21 N 10 '46 90w

Booklist 43:89 N 15 '46

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 22:467 N '46 120w

"An unusual background of the building of the Toledo and Illinois, and a good story."

+ Kirkus 14:456 S 15 '46 90w

"Recommended for eight- to twelve-year-olds." Margaret Miller

+ Library J 71:1809 D 15 '46 70w

Reviewed by Edna Daniel

San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 10 '46 70w

Sat R of Lit 29:52 N 9 '46 50w

JURJI, EDWARD JABRA, ed. Great religions of the modern world. 394p $3.75 Princeton univ. press

290 Religions

"A collection of 10 essays on major contemporary religious faiths, Confucianism, Taoism, Hinduism, Islam, Shintoism, Judaism, Eastern Orthodoxy, Roman Catholicism, and Protestantism are the religions appraised. Lewis Hodous, Gerald G. Walsh, and August Karl Reischauer are among the nine well known contributors." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 43:112 D 15 '46

"Since any intelligent reader can easily discount its defects, 'The Great Religions of the Modern World' is a thoroughly recommendable book, for the reader of education and discernment who seeks profit in his reading. It is a book that is broadening in the best sense of the word, if only for its demonstration of how the great basic and primitive truths of God shine, even through distortion and errancy, in the major faiths of man." L. J. Trese

+ Commonweal 45:208 D 6 '46 550w

Current Hist 12:62 Ja '47 50w

"Excellent background material for the minister or layman or for anybody else seeking information about great religions. Selected bibliography following each article will furnish valuable guidance in further study. Heartily recommended for all libraries." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 71:1540 N 1 '46 140w

Reviewed by G. R. Stephenson

N Y Times p14 D 1 '46 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p31 D 1 '46 60w

JUSTEMENT, LOUIS. New cities for old; city building in terms of space, time, and money. 232p il $4.50 McGraw

711 City planning

46-844

"Although Louis Justement is an architect practicing in Washington, D. C., his approach to city planning is first of all financial. He believes that the rebuilding of our cities could be an immediate and a continuous task which would be the best remedy against depressions. In economics he is an intelligent conservative who wants to preserve the capitalistic system by saving it from its own excesses. Slum clearance and the rehabilitation of blighted areas cannot be achieved solely through the profit motive. Like Henry Churchill, Justement believes that the city, condemning the land, should retain title to it, and ultimately become the sole landowner. This transformation Justement proposes to realize through a new federal agency, the Urban Reconstruction Corporation, and, in each city, through a Municipal Realty Corporation. . . Justement is of the opinion that—with rare exceptions—buildings should be paid for, declared obsolete, and rebuilt within fifty years. His outlook is neither the immediate gain of the profiteers nor the eternity of the traditional architects. He is planning for organic, healthy renewal and growth instead of the present 'method' of disease and surgery." Nation

"The book is altogether a reasonable, lucid, helpful exposition, including some proposals that may turn out to have bugs in them, but warrant thoughtful consideration." C. S. Ascher

+ Ann Am Acad 248:294 N '46 400w

Eng N 136:96 My 16 '46 300w

"The book lacks flamboyancy: no apocalypse like that of Le Corbusier or Frank Lloyd Wright. But it is eminently practical and quietly daring. 'Above all, make no little plans.'" Albert Guerard

+ Nation 162:291 Mr 9 '46 360w

Reviewed by N. J. Demerath

Social Forces 25:103 O '46 850w

JUSTUS, MAY. Fiddler's fair; il. by Christine Chisholm. 30p $1.25 Whitman, A.

Story for fourth and fifth graders about a feud between two Southern mountain families, and how a small girl healed the breach.

"Good background material for schools and libraries, colorfully illustrated."

+ Kirkus 13:472 O 15 '45 130w

"Brief, easy reading. . . Recommended." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 70:1138 D 1 '45 50w

Reviewed by M. C. Meehan

Spring'd Republican p4d F 3 '46 180w

JUSTUS, MAY. Hurrah for Jerry Jake; il. by Christine Chisholm. 62p $1.50 Whitman, A.

46-404

A mean man begins tearing down the log schoolhouse in the Cumberland Mountain village where Jerry Jake lived. The schoolhouse was also the meeting house, and the village people were all stirred up. Then Jerry Jake saved the situation. For ages seven to ten.

JUSTUS, MAY—Continued

"Another of her delightful Kettle Creek stories—good regional material with a thoroughly readable story, of interest to seven to nine year olds."

+ Kirkus 13:368 Ag 15 '45 120w

"Recommended." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 71:408 Mr 15 '46 80w

N Y Times p24 F 3 '46 50w

"Christine Chisholm's illustrations are charming and realistic, and the many local expressions will please readers of the fourth, fifth and sixth grades." M. C. Meehan

+ Springfield Republican p4d F 3 '46 130w

JUSTUS, MAY. Sammy; ill. by Christine Chisholm. 47p $2 Whitman, A.

46-5742

Story of a little mountain boy who wanted new shoes very badly, and how he earned them singing an old ballad.

"Pleasant family relations, quaint speech and customs plus many illustrations in color and black and white by Christine Chisholm make this an attractive and interesting book. The important ballad is noted, music and verses."

+ Kirkus 14:388 Ag 15 '46 100w

"Unusual and interesting easy story. . . Pictures are bright, and clear and the story is told absorbingly." G. M. Williams

+ Library J 71:1335 O 1 '46 100w

"Authentic details of mountain life, an engaging little boy, and colorful illustrations compensate for lack of plot in this happy story for 8 to 10 year olds." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p11 S 1 '46 150w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p8 O 20 '46 200w

K

KAFKA, FRANZ. Great wall of China; stories and reflections [tr. by Willa and Edwin Muir]. 316p $3 Schocken bks [7s 6d Secker, Martin

46-8109

"Previously published in London, back in 1938, 'The Great Wall of China' gave rise to one of the first 'Kafka waves' in the world of English letters. This is the first American edition of the book. . . The present volume comprises smaller works of prose written in the last period of Franz Kafka's life, between 1917 when he was sick in cold, hungry, wartime Prague, and 1924, when he was dying in an Austrian sanatorium. There are four longer stories (all of them more or less fragmentary), fifteen short stories and fables, a collection of aphorisms, and the 'Reflections on Sin, Pain, Hope, and the True Way.' The introduction by Edwin Muir who, together with Willa Muir, signs as translator, was written in 1933." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by H. R. Forbes

Library J 71:1542 N 1 '46 130w

Reviewed by Wylie Sypher

Nation 163:731 D 21 '46 1600w

Reviewed by William Hogan

San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 10 '46 120w

Reviewed by F. C. Weiskopf

Sat R of Lit 29:17 N 16 '46 700w

KAFKA, FRANZ. Metamorphosis [drawings by Leslie Sherman; tr. by A. L. Lloyd]. 98p $2.75 Vanguard [3s 6d Parton press]

46-8182

First publication in America of a story published in German years ago. It is about the metamorphosis of a traveling salesman into a monstrous "vermin," and the terror and horror of his family over this tragedy, which ended only with his death.

"Taken simply as the impassive narrative of a bourgeois transformed into a cockroach it is an affecting and a frightening narrative."

James Sandoe

Book Week p4 D 15 '46 90w

"A caustic small story with a wider significance, of interest to Kafka's exclusive following."

Kirkus 14:504 O 1 '46 90w

"Recommended for larger public and college libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 71:1330 O 1 '46 100w

"This brief masterpiece is so direct, so like a punch on the jaw, that there should be little to say about it. But the introduction and the illustrations of the first American edition are so wrongheaded that they provide employment for a critic." William Empson

Nation 163:652 D 7 '46 1200w

Reviewed by William Hogan

San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 10 '46 80w

KAFKA, FRANZ. Miscellany. ltd rev & enl ed 120p $3.50 Twice a year press

838

"[This volume] contains fragments, meditations, letters and selections from his diary which throw light on Kafka's development as an artist. Also there are excerpts from Max Brod's biography of Kafka." San Francisco Chronicle

Reviewed by Richard Plant

N Y Times p6 D 8 '46 360w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 20 '46 30w

KAHLER, WOOD. Portrait in laughter. 205p $2.50 Dutton

46-20546

"To Larry Wharton, who tells this story in the first person, and his White Russian wife, Vera, their friend Arcady Grigoroff, White Russian-American artist, is in spirit a centaur. Another of their friends calls upon the Whartons to locate a husband for herself. They decide Arcady is a natural for the job and, after a good deal of temperamental backing and filling, he is hired for $10,000. The novel, laid in Florida and New York, is the story of Arcady's marriage and his relations with several other ladies who catch his eye." N Y Times

Kirkus 14:429 S 1 '46 130w

"A redeeming feature of the novel are some pertinent and penetrating comments about Florida." Theodore Pratt

N Y Times p36 O 13 '46 250w

"What can happen to a trivial plot when it is developed by a talented craftsman is fully exemplified by Wood Kahler's new book, 'Portrait in Laughter.' Boiled to essentials, it is the story of a charming wastrel who marries for money and finds that his heart is ensnared by a girl who has none. One shudders to think what could happen to this pat situation in the hands of a sentimental novelist." Rose Feld

Weekly Book Review p10 O 6 '46 600w

KAHN, ALFRED EDWARD. Great Britain in the world economy. 314p $4 Columbia univ. press 330.942 Great Britain—Economic policy.

Great Britain—Commerce A46-1225

"A comprehensive survey of the economic processes and the material welfare of the United Kingdom during the 20 years prior to the Second World War. It is a volume dealing, in large measure, with the decline of British industrial supremacy and analyzes the reasons for Britain's continuous loss of foreign trade during that period." (Christian Science Monitor) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by N. L. Silverstein

Am Pol Sci R 40:610 Je '46 380w

"Mr. Kahn's study is valuable and competent, even if he does sometimes seem to contradict himself, and even though the emphasis might have been different. But then the underlying theory has not yet received its final formulation, and reality perhaps contains contradictions which it would have been bad to gloss over." W. F. Stolper

+ Ann Am Acad 244:215 Mr '46 1000w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Mr 3 '46 70w

"This book is timely, but it is evident that its preparation has been leisurely and thorough. Its documentation is such as to make it appropriate for class and discussion-group study, an advantage enhanced by an excellent bibliography and index." G. R. E.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 29 '46 480w

Current Hist 10:350 Ap '46 80w

Foreign Affairs 25:170 O '46 30w

Reviewed by A. I. Bloomfield
J Pol Econ 54:559 D '46 950w

"The book, as Mr. Kahn tells us in his Preface, was originally a doctoral dissertation, and though he has completely rewritten it, it still bears some of the stigmata of its origin. There is a certain cautious tone about every statement, as if the author had had his reading committee always in mind. . . And while the book is primarily a study of the period between 1919 and 1939, and therefore largely historical, one cannot but regret that, with the background so admirably filled in, Mr. Kahn did not venture to analyze more fully than he has the lessons most of the leading economists of Britain drew from the economic policies which obtained between wars and their probable results in the years of readjustment just ahead." E. M. Thornbury

+ Nation 162:405 Ap 6 '46 500w

"It is certainly one of the best studies of Britain's foreign-trade problem since 1919, for it takes fully into account the changes in the world economy and suggests what Britain may do for survival. The quantitative material will be of special value to serious students."

+ New Repub 114:878 Je 17 '46 70w

"The book does not require a technical understanding of the international payments mechanism. . . The book poses many questions of current interest to businessman and diplomat alike on both sides of the Atlantic. The author ends on a note of hope; there is a growing consciousness among Englishmen of the gravity of their industrial position, and a growing disposition to do something about it."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:110 Je '46 240w

KAHN, ELY JACQUES, and MCLEMORE, HENRY. Fighting divisions: from materials provided by the Office of technical information, Special Information section, headquarters Army ground forces. 218p il maps $2.50 Infantry Journal

940.541273 U.S. Army ground forces. World war, 1939-1945—Regimental histories 46-29

Brief resume of the ninety combat divisions of the American army which were active in World war II. There were sixty-seven infantry divisions, sixteen armored, five airborne, one mountain, and one of mechanized cavalry. They are listed here in numerical order, with a brief sketch of each, including a drawing of its shoulder patch, its mottoes and nicknames, its origins, and a brief history of the part played in the war.

Foreign Affairs 25:339 Ja '47 30w

Kirkus 15:558 D 15 '45 110w

"This book was not conceived in terms of a complete history, but rather as an historical compendium. It achieves that aim. The appendices are extremely useful, comprising a listing of divisional and higher echelon units and their commanders in all theatres of operation, the battles and campaigns in which our forces were engaged, eighteen simple maps of operations and campaigns, and eight color pages of divisional insignia. This book is a timely and handy reference work." Joseph Hirsch

+ Sat R of Lit 29:40 Ja 19 '46 600w

"The combat ground soldier lived in and of his division; the civilian who now welcomes him home is often in blank ignorance, as a result of war-time censorship, of those corporate personalities which were everything to the veterans who composed them. This handbook should fill a gap which badly needs filling." Walter Mills

+ Weekly Book Review p10 F 3 '46 300w

KAHN, JOAN. Open house. 252p $2.50 Lippincott

46-4002

Modern story of a few months in the lives of two girls just out of college. They have a New York apartment, look for jobs, and go out on parties, and of course there are love affairs.

"The experiences of two young hopefuls which are recognizable, reminiscent, and very pleasantly done."

+ Kirkus 14:134 Mr 15 '46 150w

Reviewed by E. F. Kelly

Library J 71:758 My 15 '46 50w

"The idea is not new, yet Miss Kahn brings to it enough wit and tastefulness to make Kate and Chess an entirely believable pair who aren't (happily) symbols of anything. They are just themselves—and pleasant to read about." Thelma Purcell

+ N Y Times p24 My 26 '46 80w

"An appealing novel. . . Clear and effective in the simplicity of its style." P. H. Bickerton
+ Spring'd Republican p4d Je 30 '46 240w

"Miss Kahn's book is gay, observant and sympathetic." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p25 Je 23 '46 230w

KALIBALA, ERNEST BALINTUMA, and DAVIS, MARY GOULD. Wakaima and the clay man, and other African folktales; il. by Avery Johnson. 145p $2 Longmans

398 Folklore, African. Animals, Legends and stories of 46-3687

Humorous folk tales of the Baganda tribe of East Africa. Wakaima, an African rabbit of rather scandalous propensities, is the hero of some of the tales.

Book Week p12 Je 2 '46 240w

Booklist 42:333 Je 15 '46

"The book is a 'juvenile,' but will interest all devotees of folklore."

+ Christian Century 63:754 Je 12 '46 80w

"Storytellers will find here counterparts of some of the Uncle Remus stories. They are full of fun, not told in dialect, and are well adapted to group telling. The illustrations show humor and appreciation of the background." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:266 Jl '46 160w

"Good story telling material for library use."

+ Kirkus 14:67 F 1 '46 80w

"Good for storytellers or children's own reading." J. D. Lindquist

+ Library J 71:919 Je 15 '46 80w

"Everyone, young and not so young, is bound to like [Wakaima] and to be disappointed when he disappears after only four outrageous adventures. However, the nine tales which follow are woven around equally extraordinary gentlemen of the African bush. . . Mary Gould Davis has done her editorial work with a gentle, loving hand. The illustrations have a pleasant impudence and sly humor." Attilio Gatti

+ N Y Times p23 Je 2 '46 280w

"The arresting black and white illustrations by Avery Johnson are a perfect interpretation of the humor and strikingly dramatic elements in the stories." R. A. Hill

+ Sat R of Lit 29:41 S 28 '46 400w

School & Society 63:367 My 13 '46 20w

Spring'd Republican p4d Jl 7 '46 150w

"An authentic, highly interesting contribution to our acquaintance with East African folklore. . . The pictures are bold, primitive-looking woodcuts and the typography very easy on young eyes." M. L. Becker

KALIBALA, E. B.—Continued

+ Weekly Book Review p6 My 26 '46 500w

KALIJARVI, THORSTEN, and others. Modern world politics. 2d ed 852p maps $3.75 Crowell 341 World politics. International law and relations 45-9636

A second edition of a textbook first published in 1942 (Book Review Digest, 1942) now extensively revised and rewritten. "Several of the original chapters have been omitted and an equal number of new ones added. There are four parts. The first deals with the fundamentals of international relations, and includes chapters on international law and organizations for international government. The second analyzes the techniques and instruments of power politics. . . The third part treats the problems of the various regions into which the world is divided, and the fourth poses the question, 'peace in our time?'" (Am Pol Sci R)

"A weakness of the book lies in the difficulty of integrating the work of several authors into a unified whole, although in this respect improvement is shown over the earlier edition. The wealth of material commends itself to wide use as a text in introductory courses." R. A. Norem

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:398 Ap '46 230w

Reviewed by W. L. Godshall
Ann Am Acad 244:202 Mr '46 340w

Reviewed by L. A. Mander
Social Educ 10:281 O '46 600w

KANE, HARNETT THOMAS. New Orleans woman; a biographical novel of Myra Clark Gaines. 344p $2.75 Doubleday

Gaines, Myra (Clark) Whitney—Fiction 46-7630

Novel based on the life, times, and lawsuits of Myra Clark Gaines. "The story is that of a lady who brought suit to establish her mother's good name (this may remind you of 'Saratoga Trunk') and her own right to about a third of the city, and was opposed by all the forces of authority in the state." (New Yorker)

"Harnett Kane is a native of Louisiana. For 15 years he has busied himself collecting and studying the history of this remarkable woman. . . He has approached the telling of Myra Gaines' story plainly as a labor of love. With meticulous care, he has set it down and, as he did so, evoked the atmosphere which surrounded her when she lived. His sympathies lie with her, as apparently must the sympathies of anyone who observed her courageous determination. . . Kane has created a narrative that in spite of the complex legal tangle it must suggest as an accompaniment, is deeply fascinating." J. W. Rogers

+ Book Week p1 O 27 '46 1200w

Booklist 43:103 D 1 '46

"This makes fascinating reading, even to the long passages of legal documentation, for throughout the novel, Harnett Kane has kept before the reader the vivid figure of the indomitable woman who fought for her rights, and her children's security, though all New Orleans' power and money fought against her." + Kirkus 14:428 S 1 '46 300w

"Myra Gaines is an American figure well worthy of resurrection. It is a pity that she should be dressed in such worn finery." John Woodburn

N Y Times p18 N 17 '46 800w

"It makes quite a situation, but long before Mr. Kane has finished combing it out, it has become as tedious as accounts of other people's lawsuits usually are."

New Yorker 22:125 N 2 '46 100w

"The biographical novel is always handicapped. It must use the devices and conventions of fiction but stay recognizably close to the character and life story of its subject. 'New Orleans Woman' effects the compromise decently, mostly because Myra Clark Gaines was colorful and there was sufficient drama in her career. 'New Orleans Woman' is not otherwise a novel of marked quality." J. P. Wood

Sat R of Lit 29:64 D 7 '46 470w

"Harnett Kane handles the intricacies of the litigation and the host of characters involved in it with skill, and never lets other matters interfere with his chief purpose, the delineation of the central figure, Mr. Kane knows his Louisiana. . . and he has succeeded well in recreating Myra and her milieu." Coleman Rosenberg

+ Weekly Book Review p8 N 17 '46 1000w

KANE, HENRY BUGBEE. Tale of the wild goose [il. by the author] (Wild world tales) [48p] $1.75 Knopf

598.41 Geese—Legends and stories 46-25237

Similar to other volumes in the author's Wild world tales. Photographs, text, and pen drawings describe the lives and dangers of a wild goose and gander and their goslings, from the time they chose the nest until the family took off for their winter home. For ages ten to twelve.

Reviewed by Martha King
Book Week p26 N 24 '46 90w

Booklist 43:20 S '46

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p11 N 12 '46 90w

"This remarkable set of photographs, showing the life history of a wild goose, is the result of accurate firsthand information, an artist's skill in composition and the infinite patience of a naturalist. It is a beautiful and informing book for all ages." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 22:464 N '46 40w

Kirkus 14:325 J1 15 '46 90w*

"Photographs and small line drawings are excellent and well suited to the simple text, descriptive yet vivid in style." J. E. Lynch
+ Library J 71:131 S 1 '46 100w

"The author's dignified and poetic style, his superb photographs and his delicate line drawings combine to make this a fascinating book for nature lovers of all ages." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p14 S 29 '46 160w

Reviewed by K. S. White
New Yorker 22:144 D 7 '46 70w

Reviewed by E. H. Franzen
San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 10 '46 100w

"Exquisite photographs. . . Full of atmosphere, graceful in line and movement as are the pen-and-ink sketches which appear on many pages. The text, too, has beauty of word and phrase. Nature-loving adults will enjoy these pages as much as the children. It is a lovely book to handle and to own." M. C. Dodd

+ Sat R of Lit 29:40 S 28 '46 120w

KANE, HENRY BUGBEE. Thoreau's Walden, a photographic register by Henry Bugbee Kane; with an introd. by Brooks Atkinson. 169p $4 Knopf

818 Thoreau, Henry David—Walden 46-6184

Photographs of the surroundings, flora, and fauna of Walden pond, published to commemorate the centenary year of Thoreau's famous retreat to the woods. Each picture has a brief excerpt from Walden as caption.

Booklist 43:32 O 1 '46

Christian Science Monitor p15 D 14 '46 70w

+ Kirkus 14:292 Je 15 '46 80w

"The pictures are quite handsome. . . Yet fine as they are, they don't seem to recapture the pervasive mood of 'Walden.' One thinks of wood engravings when reading 'Walden,' and slick, bright, clear photographs like these seem too modern."

New Yorker 22:102 S 7 '46 120w

"This is one of those rare books so simple in design, so perfectly executed, that not much can be said of it except by way of description and praise." H. S. Canby

+ Sat R of Lit 29:15 N 23 '46 290w

"Each picture is given full-page reproduction and is accompanied by an appropriate selection from the text of 'Walden.' Both the quotations and the photographs catch the spirit and mood of Thoreau's best writing. . . Kane's book, in one beautifully made volume, contains the cream of what has taken him years to produce. It reveals, as no previous volume has done, the world of beauty and interest in which Thoreau moved in those years when he was living the book we know as 'Walden.'" E. W. Teale

+ Weekly Book Review p8 S 22 '46 500w

KANIN, GARSON. Born yesterday; a comedy. 141p $2 Viking 812 47-289

Text of a Broadway success. It is a farce-comedy in which a junk magnate, his chorus girl mistress, and a writer for the New Republic who falls in love with the girl, are the chief actors.

Kirkus 14:380 Ag 1 '46 40w

"Highly recommended." George Freedley
+ Library J 71:1714 D 1 '46 30w

"Here is a playwright who can sustain a first-rate conflict when he has set it in motion. The printed play makes hilarious reading—but there's also time to see how real these people are, how fundamentally lonely, and how eager to solve that loneliness." C. V. Terry

+ N Y Times p16 N 3 '46 180w

"It is much nicer to see good plays than it is to read them, you won't be amazed to learn; but once in a long while one comes along that reads almost as well as it plays 'Born Yesterday' is still packing them in on Broadway, and you'll understand why after romping through this bright, bouncy satire on the Washington scene." P. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 24 '46 160w

"What makes 'Born Yesterday' more than a rowdy farce is a certain satirical bite both in the characters and the preposterous situation. What makes it a success in the theater, probably, is the hilarious character exaggeration, which affords the actor unlimited opportunities. You don't believe a word of it, any more than you believe in the Pussycat Man of Holberg. But these exaggerations are figures blown up out of contemporary life, not out of stock figures that date back to Menander." W. P. Eaton

+ Weekly Book Review p32 N 3 '46 90w

KAO, GEORGE, ed. Chinese wit and humor; introd. by Lin Yutang. 347p $3.75 Coward-McCann
895.17 Humor 46-6653

Contains many short stories, anecdotes and jokes as well as excerpts from novels. Material is grouped under four main headings: The humor of philosophy (ancient); The humor of the picaresque (old); Humor—practical and otherwise (all time); The humor of protest (modern) Index

Reviewed by J. O. Supple

Book Week p2 S 29 '46 320w

Booklist 43:67 N 1 '46

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 63:1407 N 20 '46 460w

"Mr. Kao points out in his preface that what appears funniest to the Chinese often is outside the realm of the written word. He also writes that what is funny to the Chinese may not be translatable or may not be funny to the westerner, even if it can be translated. Despite all his difficulties, however, Mr. Kao has found some fine examples of written humor. His selection well illustrates some of the basic differences—as well as basic similarities—between Chinese and American humor." Floyd Taylor

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 16 '46 700w

Kirkus 14:144 Mr 15 '46 160w

"Editor's prefatory notes to each selection are brief, appreciative, popular. They supply biographical and historical information and make occasional piquant reference to western analogies—Gulliver's Travels, Thurber, Abbott and Costello. An enlightening and civilizing book, as well as a very entertaining one." H. W. Hart

+ Library J 71:1048 Ag '46 140w

"Here is an amiable and urbane book giving an insight into the Chinese mind. It is an important book, one of the best of its kind yet published, a must for those who wish to come to a better and deeper appreciation of the Chinese, and a real treat for those who love a sly bit of fun and enjoy a good joke for its own sake. Editor George Kao has selected carefully and wisely." Carl Glick

+ N Y Times p6 S 1 '46 700w

— New Yorker 22:102 S 7 '46 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p11 S 29 '46 160w

Reviewed by Rodney Gilbert

Weekly Book Review p18 O 20 '46 1900w

KARASZ, MARISKA (MRS D. A. PETERSON). Design and sew; drawings by Christine Engler. 112p $2 Lippincott

646.4 Dressmaking 46-7363

"Written with the school girl in mind, the book starts with the fundamentals of a good dress and by drawings and careful explanations instructs the teen-age seamstress in the process of designing, choosing colors, and sewing. The beginner is encouraged to use simple articles, such as dummies, for a start and progress gradually to more complicated apparel. The author explains the use of patterns very thoroughly and also the techniques in making buttonholes, seams, and decorative designs." Booklist

Booklist 43:72 N 1 '46

Kirkus 14:491 O 1 '46 60w

Sat R of Lit 29:66 N 9 '46 40w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 O 27 '46 270w

KARIG, WALTER (KEATS PATRICK, pseud), and others. Battle report: the Atlantic war; prepared from official sources; pub. in co-operation with the Council on books in wartime. (V2) 558p il $3.50 Rinehart

940.545 World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations

An informal account of the Navy's role in World War II in the Atlantic, the Arctic, and the Mediterranean. This is the second volume of the Battle report series. The first volume (Book Review Digest, 1944) covered the six months in the Pacific from Pearl Harbor to Coral Sea; the present one covers actions from the work of the Neutrality patrol to the crossing of the Rhine. Index.

Reviewed by R. A. Brown

Ann Am Acad 245:192 My '46 450w

Reviewed by Sherman Miles

Atlantic 177:168 Ap '46 480w

Reviewed by Cecil Brown

Book Week p4 Mr 10 '46 650w

Booklist 42:245 Ap 1 '46

Bookmark 7:11 My '46

"Like its predecessor, this is a beautiful volume, with eighty pages of photographs and combat paintings. . . While it is hardly, as a jacket blurb says, 'the record for the centuries,' it is an interesting and valuable book." R. A. Brown

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 15 '46 550w

Foreign Affairs 25:163 O '46 30w

Kirkus 13:502 N 15 '46 270w

"Stirring in its reporting of courageous and unceasing effort. Vivid through the frequent references to individuals and incidents. A 'must' for any understanding of the terrific odds against which the battle of the Atlantic was waged and a proud record of the effort that won the battle." Marian Manley

+ Library J 70:1087 N 15 '46 100w

KARIG, WALTER—Continued

"Has all the merits and demerits that, considering its provenance, one might expect it to have. . . . The non-service reader is bound to have mixed reactions to 'Battle Report.' At times it is choked with detail, much of which seems to have been included merely to satisfy naval tradition. The constant identification of officers, the generous attention paid to the action of minor units frequently destroy any continuity; and the intention of the book, to describe action within a valid framework of strategic and tactical reference, is sometimes frustrated by the sheer profusion of reports that are in themselves excellent." Ralph Bates
Nation 162:513 Ap 27 '46 240w

"The 'Battle Report' series, of which there are more, dealing with the Pacific, to come, is sponsored by the Navy Department's Office of Public Information; but it should be emphasized that neither of the books thus far issued, and this is particularly true of the second volume, presents even a faintly comprehensive picture, and certainly not a well-balanced picture. Too much is withheld, too much glossed over and 'The Atlantic War,' compiled by three authors, reads like it. It has too little tang of the sea or smell of powder, and it is episodic and staccato. But it is rather clear that the main faults of this volume are not properly attributable to the men whose names are on the cover. All of the authors are in uniform, and their facts have had to be presented regimented." H. W. Baldwin
N Y Times p3 F 24 '46 1350w

"Despite a certain class-yearbook quality (the authors never miss a chance to include name, rank, and title), it is an excellent story, in its anecdotal fashion, of the heroic effort that beat the U-boats."
+ — New Yorker 22:101 Mr 16 '46 120w

"A superb book. It is easily the best account that has yet appeared of the Navy's war in the Atlantic and its adjacent seas. It is not, however, to be accepted as a true and literal account of the battles and campaigns the Navy fought. It is an 'official' history. This lends great strength to its documentation, great weakness to its point of view." Ron Schiller
+ — Sat R of Lit 29:27 Mr 23 '46 1200w

"Profusely illustrated and written in a breezy, colloquial style, the book is readable and entertaining. Its appendices, including a complete list of decorations and citations awarded to navy personnel in the Atlantic theater of war, are especially useful as illustrating the difficulties of the campaign against the submarine. Its principal shortcoming is a lack of perspective."
+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 2:120 Je '46 170w

"Frequently, the inclusion of more and more detailed charts of combat operations would have helped; but one cannot speak too highly of the admirable photographic sections, compiled by Commander E. John Long, U.S.N.R. The eighty plates, including hundreds of separate photographs, are in themselves a record of utmost value and vividness of the enormous operations of the United States Navy in the Atlantic part of its global war." Walter Millis
+ Weekly Book Review p4 Mr 3 '46 850w

KARK, LESLIE. Red rain. 254p $2.50 (8s 6d) Macmillan

46-1076

One night in June 1944 an English bomber is shot down over Munich and only one man of its crew of seven is able to bale out. This novel tells the life stories of the seven men and ends with the adventures of the lone survivor after his escape from Germany.

"The story is not lacking in the pathos expected from a war novel and it is handled gracefully, the style fairly bristling with British understatement, but this does not prevent some banal moments." Martin Savala
+ — Book Week p12 F 17 '46 360w

Booklist 42:213 Mr 1 '46

Bookmark 7:16 My '46

"To a reader who has had some contact with both the RAF and the settings, the characters, events, and settings, have a strong flavor of realism." R. D. C.

Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 2 '46 330w

"A competent, composite portrayal, which should have a little more for popularity."
+ Kirkus 13:529 D 1 '46 150w

"Well written but with limited appeal."
Hannah Severus

+ Library J 71:54 Ja 1 '46 110w

Reviewed by H. I'A. Fausset
Manchester Guardian p3 D 7 '45 100w

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue
N Y Times p14 F 17 '46 550w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt
Sat R of Lit 29:32 F 23 '46 650w

"Leslie Kark, who has published a good collection of stories about life in the R.A.F. called The Fire was Bright, is rather less successful with his first novel, Red Rain. . . . Much of his material is first-rate, his character studies are done with sympathetic skill. But the plan of the book is too heavy, and all the author's matter-of-fact technique fails to wield it into a convincing and satisfactory whole." John Hampson

+ — Spec 175:578 D 14 '45 130w

"For all its honesty, humour and quiet competence, this is a book of short stories, not a novel."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p17 Ja 12 '46 600w

Reviewed by Herbert Kupferberg
Weekly Book Review p18 Mr 3 '46 550w

KARLOFF, BORIS, ed. And the darkness falls; with an introduction, and notes. 631p $2.75 World pub.

Short stories—Collections 46-25174

An anthology of stories of the supernatural and horror. There are about sixty stories with a few poems added. Includes stories by Lafcadio Hearn, Dorothy Sayers, Jonathan Swift, Maupassant, Conrad, Conan Doyle, Galsworthy, and many others.

Book Week p9 My 12 '46 200w

Booklist 42:329 Je 15 '46

"The collection is broad enough for almost any taste. There's enough guignol for the addicts—and enough good writing for those who insist on polish as well as punch. . . . When he is discussing the techniques of such writers as Maugham and Galsworthy, Mr. Karloff speaks with authority. On the other hand, when he notes that 'the odd angle of the corpse's head is provocative, to say the least,' one is just as positive that he knows whereof he speaks." C. V. Terry

+ N Y Times p20 My 12 '46 230w

"A distinguished job, on the whole, and one containing a remarkably small percentage of those threadbare items that have been appearing far too regularly in the recent horror anthologies."
+ New Yorker 22:99 My 11 '46 90w

Reviewed by Phil Stong
Sat R of Lit 29:44 Jl 27 '46 320w

"Names" in this collection are far too numerous to mention, and it's a fair guess that none of them will equal the longevity record of Jonathan Swift, represented with appalling timeliness by his 'Modest Proposal' of 1729. You'll find several frankly amusing pieces, including entries by Turgenev, Ambrose Bierce and John Collier; Mr. Collier's 'The Chaser' might better be called profound. On the whole, however, this bargain in a special kind of thrills is of serious intent. As the sponsors state, it 'probes the darkness of the human mind.' It sure does." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p30 My 26 '46 260w

KARNEY, JACK. The ragged edge. 405p $2.75 Morrow

46-1631

Story of life in the tenement district of lower East Side New York as it affects the members of the Slater family and their neighbors. The daughter marries a racketeer, but returns to a more honest man after her first husband is shot. One son becomes a prize fighter and a gangster. Then there is young Danny, who joins the tough boys on the East River piers. It all adds up to a picture of life on the ragged edge of poverty.

Reviewed by John Norcross

Book Week p16 Mr 31 '46 370w

"Tough, sometimes tender, and not Public Library material."

Kirkus 14:7 Ja '46 120w

"Mr. Karney's clay-footed characters move sluggishly in this book when he works clumsy strings. They utter little obscenities at the rate of from three to four on each page as though the author had figured 'I'll drop a few here' and 'Here's a spot for a gob of it.' The jacket says smugly, 'Honesty can be shocking,' but it is not nearly so shocking as dishonesty, and this book is dishonest. It is not a portrait of Manhattan's lower East Side. It is cruel distortion, as something seen through a sticky and dirty pane." Meyer Berger

— N Y Times p10 Ap 28 '46 500w

"You have read it all before, and it wasn't terribly interesting even the first time."

— New Yorker 22:97 Mr 23 '46 120w

"Mr. Karney's style is forceful, and his dialogue free from labored corniness. He will write many good scenes yet, and, perhaps, even a first-rate novel some day." Robert Pick

Sat R of Lit 29:74 Ap 13 '46 650w

"A truthful and vigorous book, as eye-filling as city life itself." Herbert Kupferberg

+ Weekly Book Review p22 Mr 24 '46 500w

KASPER, SYDNEY H., ed. Job guide; a handbook of official information about employment opportunities in leading industries. 193p $2.50; pa $2 Am. council on public affairs

371.425 Occupations 46-25008

"Lists 20 fields of employment, with evaluation of opportunities, working conditions, location of industries, and union affiliations. Air transportation, aluminum and magnesium, glass, meat packing, merchant marine, radio and radar, street railway, and motor bus, trucking, and textiles are some of the jobs covered. Much of the information may become dated with changing conditions." Booklist

Booklist 42:178 F 1 '46

"The chief criticism made of books on vocations is the lack of specific information of practical value to the reader. This criticism, however, cannot be levied against Job Guide. Patterned somewhat after the excellent occupational summaries issued by the United States Employment Service, this book analyzes some twenty general occupational fields." Leo Litzky

+ Social Studies 37:235 My '46 480w

KATO, MASUO. The lost war; a Japanese reporter's inside story. 264p $2.75 Knopf

940.5352 World war, 1939-1945—Japan 46-6474

"The author, who received his university education in the United States, has been a prominent correspondent for Japanese newspapers and press associations since 1924. In the critical months leading up to Pearl Harbor, Kato was Washington representative of Domei, the official news agency and an ill-disguised propaganda medium of the Tokyo government. His book recounts the important events, commencing chronologically with the peace mission of venerable Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura in 1941 and culminating with General Douglas MacArthur's studied descent from his plane at Atsugi Airfield four years later." (Weekly Book Review) No index.

Reviewed by John Ashmead

Atlantic 178:178 D '46 270w

Reviewed by F. S. Marquardt

Book Week p4 N 3 '46 650w

Booklist 43:51 O 15 '46

"The book is imperturbable, bland and impeccably adapted to please Western ears. It is also informative, objective, comprehensive, and immensely readable. The one thing that it completely fails to be is tragic. All the material for tragedy is here; but Mr. Kato, skillfully versed though he is in Western modes of thought, is a true son of his native land in his almost casual acceptance of disaster, without that protestant energy of character which turns it into moral purgation. There is plenty of cool analysis here, but no troubled soul-searching. This is, perhaps, only to say that Mr. Kato is a journalist and not a prophet, yet one could wish that the first voice to come out of Japan after the war had struck a deeper prophetic note as an omen of the nation's moral rebirth." Robert Peel

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 O 25 '46 400w

"It was looking at a familiar picture from a different angle. The remembered outlines were there, the vivid colors, the correlation of objects. Only the line of vision was changed. This was the experience in reading Masuo Kato's 'The Lost War,' a volume every Pacific veteran should buy, and all Americans could profitably examine." J. N. Moody

Commonweal 45:204 D 6 '46 450w

Current Hist 11:512 D '46 80w

"A record, open to argument and bias, that does however make real the men, women and children, who really paid the cost of Japan's dream of empire and world domination. Neither placating nor abusive, this measures a nation in terms of personalities, programs and defeat."

Kirkus 14:405 Ag 15 '46 190w

New Repub 115:565 O 28 '46 240w

"The Lost War' is a remarkable book. For many reasons. One reason is that it was written and published at this early date, or perhaps even written at all. . . Mr. Kato is so temperate in his writing, so measured in his judgments and so compelling in his reasoning that 'The Lost War' might (if it is given wide enough distribution in Japan) have a considerable effect on the Japanese people. More effect, at least, than books written by non-Japanese. For here is one of their own people pointing out the errors the Japanese and their leaders have made—and not pointing them out by hindsight, either, for Mr. Kato never was in favor of the Pacific war. In recommending the book for Japanese reading, one does not intend to say that it is not good reading for Americans too." Foster Haley

+ N Y Times p6 O 13 '46 750w

New Yorker 22:135 O 19 '46 120w

"The long and short of it is that Kato's book gives me the sharpest possible feeling of a man writing one thing and thinking another. There are just enough little slips, it seems to me, to show this. But maybe I'm quite wrong. I can't help wondering how others will feel about the book." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 23 '46 950w

"As the first Japanese version of the war published in this country. 'The Lost War' merits close scrutiny and careful consideration. . . Most Japanese today, and Mr. Kato is no exception, consider themselves to have been 'pro-American' right along. The book's jacket blurb states that Mr. Kato's record will be invaluable to any one interested in what we now face in Japan. That is true because he so perfectly adheres to what has become a conditioned attitude of Japanese intellectuals and professional men about the war. If one completely accepted the author's interpretation of the events which precipitated Pearl Harbor it would appear that nobody in Japan (nor the Japanese abroad) knew about the planned attack on the United States. Mr. Kato, who wrote straightforward dispatches from Washington which were misleading before the war and then wrote misleading dispatches from Tokyo during the war, feels no responsibility. And neither do the mass of the Japanese people." R. E. Lauterbach

Weekly Book Review p8 O 13 '46 950w

KAUB, VERNE PAUL. Collectivism challenges Christianity. 249p $2 Free Methodist publishing house, Winona lake, Ind.

335.4 Communism and religion 46-20685

"Presents the conviction of the author that 'human freedom is rooted in traditional Christianity' and his belief that 'totalitarian collectivism is freedom's greatest contemporary foe.'" School & Society

"The affirmation contained in the title is the thesis of the book—that collectivism does challenge Christianity. . . The author is especially critical of Christians who deem themselves social and economic liberals and oppose capitalism—Christian socialists and people like Kirby Page, to whom a good deal of attention is given. He appears to regard the profit system of enterprise as essential to a Christian order and, conversely, the general acceptance of Christianity as essential to the proper working of the profit system."

Christian Century 63:1345 N 6 '46 130w

School & Society 64:279 O 19 '46 40w

Social Studies 37:380 D '46 10w

Wis Lib Bul 42:146 N '46

KAUFFMAN, HENRY J. Pennsylvania Dutch American folk art [ed. by C. G. Holme]. 136p pl $5.75 Studio

745 Art, Pennsylvania-German. Folk art 46-4839

Discussion devoted to the folk art of the Pennsylvania Dutch, as introduced into America in the early eighteen hundreds. This craftsmanship was strongly influenced by their ancestral home craft, and developed into a distinct type of work when transported to this country. "The purpose of this book is to bring together a representative collection of illustrative material not only as a record of the work of the Pennsylvania Dutch but also as a further source of inspiration to present day American design and decoration. The author is of Pennsylvania Dutch ancestry and is a craftsman and collector in his own right." (Publisher's note)

Booklist 43:97 D 1 '46

"Proofreading has been too casual in this book, and in one case the author commits an error in ascribing Romanesque influences to a biblical scene on a stovepipe. In his bibliography there are some second-rate sources, but in every other aspect this is a serious, worthy and helpful volume." W. G. Dooley

+ N Y Times p14 O 13 '46 420w

"The rage for Pennsylvania-German folk art is at its height, and this excellent general book with its hundred plates of more than twice that number of photographs, its drawings of characteristic motifs, its several valuable color reproductions, its brief but readable popular text, may fan the flame still higher, if that is possible."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:269 D '46 140w

"Of all the things that have fascinated me in my long years of collecting of Dutchiana I miss very few here. I have not found decorated Easter eggs, Christmas-tree ornaments, such as matzebaume and putzes, cut-outs, watch cabinets, musical instruments, silverware, fox horns and whetstone holders, funnel cake tins and cheese moulds. All the main items of household art are, however, pictured here. Read this book if you would have a quick and faithful introduction to the interior decoration of the Pennsylvania Dutch." Cornelius Weygandt

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Je 23 '46 550w

KAUFMAN, WOLFE. I hate blondes. 181p $2 Simon & Schuster

46-3140

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p8 My 12 '46 150w

Kirkus 14:51 F 1 '46 90w

"There is swift action and plenty of it in this first novel." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p34 Ap 28 '46 140w

"Despite luscious ladies, considerable romping 'round N. Y. suburbs and plot mixture of high finance and feathery pictures it doesn't quite come off."

Sat R of Lit 24:59 Ap 20 '46 40w

"This tough item, emanating from the special cosmos created by Dashiell Hammett and kept going by Raymond Chandler is herewith recommended to all and sundry except those who simply cannot stand that sort of thing and no use trying." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p28 Ap 14 '46 270w

KAUTSKY, KARL JOHANN. Social democracy versus communism; ed. by David Shub and [tr. by] Joseph Shaplen; with an introd. by Sidney Hook. 142p $2 Rand school

335.09 Socialism, Communism 46-4279

"This volume, comprising selections from the writings of Karl Kautsky published in German from 1932 to 1937, a year before his death at the age of eighty-four, may be regarded, as Professor Sidney Hook says in his provocative introduction, as the author's political testament. Penned in exile, shortly before his death, with an undimmed faith in the ideals of democratic Socialism, they are the distillation of a lifetime of wisdom on a subject of crucial importance to our era—the difference between Socialism and Communism." Sat R of Lit

Foreign Affairs 25:162 O '46 20w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Jl 28 '46 100w

Reviewed by M. R. Konvitz*

Sat R of Lit 29.9 Mr 2 '46 850w

KAVAN, ANNA, pseud. See Edmonds, H. W.

KAYSER, RONAL (DALE CLARK, pseud). Red rods. 245p $2 Messner

46-8609

Detective story.

"Gentle understatement is to say it is brutal and below the belt."

— Kirkus 14:311 Jl 1 '46 80w

"The story doesn't make much sense, but it has plenty of violent action." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p14 D 22 '46 120w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p14 D 8 '46 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p42 D 8 '46 100w

KEAN, CHARLES JOHN, and KEAN, ELLEN (TREE). Letters of Mr and Mrs Charles Kean relating to their American tours, by William G. B. Carson. 181p $2.50 Wash. univ, Skinker & Lindell sts, St Louis

B or 92 Actors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 45-9596

A hundred years ago Charles Kean and his wife, Ellen, were famous theatrical figures both in England and America. The letters here presented were written mainly about their trips in America, and their business arrangements, etc. Many of the letters are from manuscripts selected from the editor's collection, or from that of the Missouri Historical society. Index.

Theatre Arts 30:191 Mr '46 280w

"Whatever these letters lack in historical value is made up for by their unconscious humour. The more the reader bears in mind that the younger Keans were theatrical personages of undoubted importance the funnier their insistence on their dignity becomes. Anecdotes about them may be suspect, but here they betray their finer feelings in their own words."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p622 D 29 '45 420w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Weekly Book Review p12 O 7 '45 600w

KEELER, MRS KATHERINE (SOUTHWICK). Spring comes to Meadow brook farm [il. by the author]. 39p $1.75 Nelson 46-25034

Text and pictures tell the story of the arrival of spring on Farmer Allen's farm, and how it affects the animals, the ducks, the chickens, etc. First of four seasonal books. Ages six to nine.

Book Week p23 Je 2 '46 150w
"Unpretentious pictures that are somehow very effective and satisfying."
+ Booklist 42:215 Mr 1 '46

"There are far more attractive baby animal books already on the market, but these pictures and the story that goes with them are pleasant if uninspired."

Kirkus 14:67 F 1 '46 130w

"Charming drawings by the author combine knowledge of animals and a sense of humor."
+ N Y Times p16 F 10 '46 90w

"This lively, pretty book, stirring with spring, recalls the first train trip one takes after a winter in the city, to find that something has completely changed the face of the landscape."
M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 My 5 '46 170w

KEEN, RAYA. She shall have music. (Story press bk) 318p $2.50 Lippincott 46-3589

Novel based on the life of an American ballet dancer. Zina's ambition is to become a great ballerina and she trains with a once famous Russian dancer. Financial difficulties prompt her to take a job in a large corps de ballet, but she still clings to her early dream. The story is of her gradual working back to her original ambition.

"A well developed story of the life of a dancer, and her world of ballet, as she solves the problem of the artist versus economics, and recovers from a series of setbacks to live up to her ideals. . . Direct, simple, and quite real."

+ Kirkus 14:130 Mr 15 '46 150w

"The plot itself is all commonplace and uninspired. But the picture of a ballerina in the making, the study of a once great Russian dancer who now teaches, the intimate glimpse into the lives of the girls who make up a corps de ballet—these things give interest to Miss Keen's book." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p14 Ap 28 '46 140w

"Miss Keen's translation [of life] although it is filled with soul-searing experiences, lacks quality; her prose, although it is frequently frenetic, is devoid of style. Mannerism is not style, enthusiasm and vigor are not genius or even talent. . . RAYA Keen does, however, have a certain talent for the soap-opera facts of middle-class life. . . The Empire City theatre atmosphere is excellent, but nowhere do you get a genuine whiff of greasepaint." Leo Lerman

+ Sat R of Lit 29:23 J1 13 '46 550w

"This novel breaks new ground, in a vigorous refreshing fashion. The author, a ballerina of Russian parentage born and professionally trained in this country, deals with the life and world of an American dancer. She commands a thorough knowledge of her subject, and she brings to it a genuine talent for fiction. The result is a book which, like the paintings of Edgar Degas, takes one backstage. . . It is an excellent story, and Miss Keen tells it with vividness and dramatic skill at a quick pace."
Lloyd Morris

+ Weekly Book Review p4 My 5 '46 700w

KEESING, FELIX MAXWELL. Native peoples of the Pacific world. (Pacific world ser) 144p 11 maps $3 (15s) Macmillan

919 Islands of the Pacific 45-4872

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"In some ways this handbook is a condensation of Keesing's monograph, The South Seas in the Modern World, published in 1942. . . There is here the same high quality of style and balanced presentation that characterize Keesing's other reports. It is unfortunate that, prior to the book's publication, Keesing had not had any firsthand acquaintance with or access to reliable reports of the native populations during the war. In many sections his observations on recent developments are based on premises no longer true, and in others the total significance of the social revolution and upheaval taking place in the Pacific is missed."

John Useem

+ Am J Soc 51:491 Mr '46 950w

"The author does a splendid job within the limits of his assignment. One may question, though, the wisdom of trying to cover so diverse an area in one short book. Inevitably there is great condensation and some confusion as the discussion shifts rapidly from area to area. Somewhat greater attention is given to the more primitive peoples of Oceania than to the advanced cultures of Java and the Philippines. Detailed information on Malaysia, however, is available in the recent publications of Raymond Kennedy, Bruno Lasker and Fay-Cooper Cole. Some of the War Background Studies of the Smithsonian Institution cover other island groups, but no other book briefly surveys the entire area of the tropical Pacific."
P. F. Cressey

+ Am Soc R 11:131 F '46 250w

"A thoroughly sound and practical introduction by a recognized authority."

+ Foreign Affairs 24:361 Ja '46 40w

"Learning and understanding we had a right to expect; for Dr. Keesing has been historian, economist, sociologist and educationalist, and his specialized field-work has been done in areas as widely separated as New Zealand, Samoa and the Philippines. But, with such a wealth of material at his disposal, compression might easily have resulted in dullness. Nowhere has it done so. He has been particularly successful, too, in making his description one of strictly contemporary conditions. Native, and non-native, ideas, institutions and techniques are described in so far as they are of importance to those now living. Some of the most vigorous and satisfactory parts of the book are those dealing with the impact of Western cultures upon the Pacific peoples—the account, for example, of the rise of nationalist movements and of native cults." J. W. Davidson

+ Pacific Affairs 19:119 Mr '46 900w

KEESOM, W. H. Helium 494p il $10 Elsevier
bk. co, 215 4th av, N.Y. 3

546.29 Helium

"An account of all that is known about helium. . . The author was a colleague and is the principal successor of H. Kamerlingh Onnes in the study of the low temperature properties of helium. Their collaboration in experimentation in this field began some forty years ago, shortly before Kamerlingh Onnes succeeded in liquefying helium; thus the author has either been a participant in or a close observer of all the investigations on helium at the Kamerlingh Onnes Laboratory at Leiden, and he is thoroughly familiar with nearly all the related work done in the few other laboratories which have the necessary low temperature facilities."
Am Chem Soc J

"A very outstanding work." W. F. Giauque
+ Am Chem Soc J 68:1140 Je '46 460w

Library J 71:1052 Ag '46 90w

KEHOE, KARON. City in the sun. 269p $2.50
Dodd

46-11861

Story of a family of Japanese-Americans, confined at the Maricopa relocation center, and what happened to them in that dreary place of heat, dust, and insects.

Reviewed by Kay Harper

Book Week p4 Ja 5 '47 340w

Booklist 43:132 Ja 1 '47

Reviewed by H. S. Taylor

Library J 71:1542 N 1 '46 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ja 5 '47
250w

KEHOE, KARON—Continued

"This is the first novel of a young writer. It is a sensitive and honest job. . . 'City in the Sun' is a good book; but it is 'surface' writing. The degeneration of a healthy boy into a petty thief and liar is explained almost entirely in externals. The author is perhaps too young to dig down into the raw roots of emotions. To the credit of her book, however, let it be said: it is not slick; it deals with the real world." Millard Lampell

+ — Weekly Book Review p10 N 24 '46 380w

KEHOE, WILLIAM JOHN. Straw wife. 224p $2.50 Dutton

46-7277

Portrays a woman of thirty-five who had wanted all her life to express herself, but had followed the rules laid down by her elders instead. Her marriage turned out to be another failure, because of her husband's dominating sister. The story is told with a background of small town life.

Book Week p47 D 1 '46 230w

"A little odd, often arid, written in monotone—this is certainly not for the general market." Kirkus 14:465 S 15 '46 140w

"Mr. Kehoe has treated his inflammatory theme with confusion and awkwardness. . . What is particularly curious about 'Straw Wife' is that Mr. Kehoe seems to have written it in perfect seriousness. At first one suspects him of trying to inaugurate a technique of ironic symbolism. But it does not take long to discover that the stuttering odds and ends passed off as language, the absurd situations, the consistent vagueness, are simply that and nothing more." P. B.

— N Y Times p16 D 8 '46 330w

"It all works out alright at the end, thanks to Mr. Kehoe's string pulling. While he has a genuine gift for writing, a sensitive feeling for child characterization, his book is a distinct disappointment. Minna is not only unbelievable, but also dull and ridiculous." Rose Feld

+ — Weekly Book Review p44 N 24 '46 600w

KELLAND, CLARENCE BUDINGTON. Land of the Torreones. 274p $2.50 Harper

46-3130

Adventure story which takes place in the wilds of Arizona. Two rival expeditions, searching for molybdenum, get mixed up with a band of escaped Nazi war prisoners, are captured, and then reassert themselves.

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers

+ Book Week p11 F 3 '46 400w

Booklist 42:318 Je 1 '46

"A well paced story replete with intrigue and rivalry, and refreshingly free of the morbid psychology which seems to be absorbing so many contemporary novelists. True, its denouement is not exactly unexpected." J. P. Wood

+ Cath World 163:187 My '46 140w

Kirkus 13:545 D 15 '45 180w

"There is nothing wrong with serial stories as such. Tales of love and adventure can be stirring tales about credible characters. 'Land of the Torreones' is not a stirring tale. Despite a few modern trimmings, it is as hackneyed as it is shallow. Its characters are the paper-thin devices—lovely heroine and strong hero—of every 'Western' and every serial that ever was concocted." J. P. Wood

— Sat R of Lit 29:33 Mr 9 '46 600w

"Once again Clarence Budington Kelland has given his readers an unusual and thrilling adventure." E. H. Dexter

+ Spring'd Republican p4d F 3 '46 480w

"When it comes to romances in the nightclub realm, which Mr. Kelland turns out from time to time for relaxation, we check a little of our enthusiasm with our hat, but when he writes of the open spaces we throw the hat in the air. . . His novels of the Southwest, of which this is the latest, may have the flavor of the frontier or they may be (as this is) of these days, but you can count on them to yield sap and excitement." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p22 F 17 '46 250w

KELLER, MARTHA (MRS EDMUND ROWLAND). Brady's bend, and other ballads; ll. by Edward Shenton. 142p $2.50 Rutgers univ. press

811 U.S.—History—Poetry

"These ballads, collected under the title of the first poem in the volume, sing the story of Americans from their first bold settlements west of the Alleghenies to their equally desperate and glorious days at Corregidor. As might be expected, such men as Washington, George Rogers Clark of 'the ragtag bobtail riflemen,' Jackson 'a man as hot as whisky,' and Lincoln 'common as dirt and as all-rewarding,' appear among Martha Keller's verses; but the characters best remembered are the Indian Fighter; Mary Kendig, 'short . . . stout . . . homely as a hen-bird,' the dispossessed farmer whose lament is entitled 'Foreclosure.' These people speak the language of plain heroes and heroines." N Y Times

"Martha Keller is a learned poet, well-read and accomplished. Much of the book is not in the folk manner. The more conventional lyrics are sometimes as good as the ballads. . . The poems are not all on the same level. Miss Keller can write badly. 'Drum Music' is very poor. . . Sometimes she overdoes alliteration or indulges a rather annoying trick of half-pun, half-echo. . . Taken all in all, [however], Brady's Bend is indubitably an important book." Robert Hillier

+ — Atlantic 177:175 Je '46 360w

"Boisterous, sentimental, rowdy, delicate, romantic, tender and patriotic—these are some of the adjectives that a reading of Martha Keller's poems prompts." Leo Kennedy

+ Book Week p10 Ap 28 '46 300w

"With unerring instinct for words and a skill with meter, she has evoked the feeling of a people who, in the last 300 years, have made a nation. As in the best of the ancient ballads, there are romance and humor, wistfulness and courage, triumph and dark tragedy, following close on one another in these modern examples." Pearl Strachan

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 8 '46 250w

"Comely and vigorous [are] these ballads. . . In her verses about events since the Civil War, Martha Keller is not always so successful, being sometimes too studied, sometimes even obscure. But her account of the sinking of the Graf Spee equals any ballad in the book and deserves a place among fine narratives of the sea in English verse. No comment on this handsome volume would be complete without a tribute to Mr. Shenton's excellent illustrations." W. E. Wilson

+ — N Y Times p28 Je 2 '46 300w

"A pattern of rather inflated words suggesting no deeper meaning than the surface—hard and glossy as that is—no deeper feeling than the feeling that American pioneers were better than their latter-day descendants." J. G. Fletcher

— Poetry 69:171 D '46 600w

"Here is poetry that speaks to the heart, to the mind, and, with its spirited melody and beautifully balanced rhythms, to the ear as well. Miss Keller's ballads are as fine as any I have had the good fortune to read. She is a worthy candidate for the ranks of the Benét, Kipling, Chesterton, and those anonymous masters of the ballad form whose folk songs come from the mountains and plains of rural America." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 30:28 Ja 18 '47 400w

KELLY, FRED CHARTERS. David Ross, modern pioneer. 182p il $3 Knopf

B or 92 Ross, David Edward 46-109

Biography of the Hoosier farm boy who became a famous inventor. After his graduation from Purdue in 1893 David Ross went back to his father's farm, took over its management, and some years later embarked on his career as an inventor. He made a fortune with his inventions, most of which he used in developing Purdue university. Index.

"A pedestrian, uninspired biography of interest primarily to Purdue alumni."

— Kirkus 13:537 D 1 '45 140w

"Mr. Kelly's biography is entirely eulogistic. No faults of character or personality, no human failings even, appear in his portrait of the man who did so much to make Purdue University and the Purdue Research Foundation the great institutions that they are. But, by writing in an unadorned, colloquial style befitting his subject, the author has brought him to life none the less." W. E. Wilson

+ N Y Times p27 J1 14 '46 450w

"If the book had appeared before the holidays college presidents might have found it a stimulating gift for their boards of trustees. Dave Ross was not only a generous donor but a working trustee on whom President Edward C. Elliott counted heavily. The appeal of the book is not limited, however, to those concerned with university administration or with Indiana. It is a pleasant introduction to a homespun Hoosier whom most of us would like to meet." W. G. Avirett

+ Weekly Book Review p35 Mr 31 '46 230w

KELSEN, HANS. General theory of law and state; tr. by Anders Wedberg. 516p $6 Harvard Univ. press [38s 6d Oxford]

340.1 Law—Philosophy. State, The A45-4443

"This volume brings together several of Professor Kelsen's most distinguished contributions on the pure theory of law, his general theory of the state, and his theory of international law. The book has two main parts. The first deals with the nature of law and justice, and the fundamental concepts of a static as well as a dynamic theory of law. . . The second part of the book, entitled The State, deals with the law and the state, which are more or less interchangeable, the elements of the state, the so-called separation of powers, the forms of government—democracy and autocracy, the forms of organization, centralization and decentralization, and, lastly, the important subject of national and international law, which are not two separate compartments but, in the author's opinion, two branches of the same law. The Appendix, translated by Wolfgang Herbert Kraus, consists of an analysis of the natural law doctrine as opposed to legal positivism." U S Quarterly Bkl

"This volume is indispensable to every teacher and student of legal and political theory. By making Dr. Kelsen's systematic doctrines available in English, the Harvard University Press has done an important service to these groups and to many other thoughtful readers." M. E. Oatman

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:131 F '46 750w

"Even in his narrowly limited objective, Kelsen is not wholly successful. If he is to enable us to describe accurately any system of positive law, the jurist must be rigidly consistent in his own language, and must supply us with an unambiguous terminology. This Kelsen fails to do. . . This defect of expression, disappointing as it is, cannot obscure the magnificent rigor of Kelsen's thought. Few readers of the international literature of jurisprudence would deny him the title of great jurist. But this does not mean that his pure science is a totally satisfying approach, or even the most useful approach, to law." P. E. Corbett

Ann Am Acad 244:203 Mr '46 450w

"Publication of [this book] makes available in English, for the first time, an extended and systematic formulation of Kelsen's vastly influential 'pure theory of law.' The English style makes rather heavy going for four hundred and fifty tightly packed pages, but it would doubtless be impossible to state the essentials of Kelsen's uncompromisingly positivistic system in terms suitable for armchair reading. . . In his 'pure theory of law' Kelsen has beyond question provided a pattern of critical analysis which can profitably be applied to the doctrinal and institutional bases of any legal order." H. W. Jones

+ Columbia Law R 46:685 J1 '46 1150w

Foreign Affairs 24:744 J1 '46 30w

Reviewed by Paul Sayre

Harvard Law R 59:1184 S '46 3450w

"This book offers the most integrated and best articulated theory of law produced in the last fifty years in jurisprudence. It is a systematic presentation of a point of view developed over a lifetime of thinking and writing on the problems of jurisprudence. For this reason alone, apart from either agreement or disagreement and apart from the many special and valuable insights of the author, the book merits close attention from every student of social philosophy." E. N. Garland

+ J Philos 43:712 D 19 '46 4000w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:38 D '45 360w

KELSEY, VERA. Whisper murder! 255p $2 Doubleday

Detective story. 46-2493

Booklist 42:266 Ap 15 '46

Bookmark 7:15 N '46

"Fast and furious, but a bit jumpy."

Kirkus 14:9 Ja '46 90w

"The denouement and some of the events leading up to it are, to say the least, highly improbable." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p22 Mr 24 '46 180w

"Small-town background ably handled, crimes capably solved, ample action and quite a few surprises."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:54 Mr 16 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p24 Mr 17 '46 140w

KELWAY, PHYLLIS. Otter book; il. by Arnrld Johnston; phot. by the author. 144p $1.50 Collins

Otters—Legends and stories

An English naturalist's story of her rescue of an otter cub, and their friendship which lasted over a year. The book is illustrated with photographs, and black and white drawings.

Booklist 42:209 Mr 1 '46

"Charmingly written, sympathetically record of the 'flickering fellowship' that exists between animals and men. . . Beautiful full-page photographs of animals taken by the author, and black and white drawings by Arnrld Johnston."

+ Bookmark 7:7 My '46

KEMP, LYSANDER. Northern stranger [poems]. 77p $2 Random house

811

46-5780

First book of poems by a young American, written while he was on duty with the United States army in Panama, Ecuador, and Puerto Rico.

Reviewed by George Snell

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ja 12 '47 80w

"He is not in the least merely an army poet. He is a sensitive writer with an almost photographic eye, and he gives us occasional memorable lines. . . He brings nothing very new in thought, by field or flood or foreign clime, but he brings vivid pictures, and spare honesty in such a poem as 'After.' This is a good first book." W. R. Benet

+ Sat R of Lit 29:21 Ag 31 '46 200w

"This poetry has curious affinities with the prose of Chekhov. It is equally straightforward. It presents things seen, generally without comment, from the point of view of a witness who craves justice, but who makes no move to secure it beyond simple candor. It is undramatic, and above all, it breathes a humanity, a sorrowful indignation, that is warm, deep and contagious." Eabette Deutsch

+ Weekly Book Review p5 J1 21 '46 1200w

KENDALL, CAROL. Black seven. 275p $2 Harper

46-15770

Detective story.

"Hard to swallow."

Kirkus 14:51 F 1 '46 70w

KENDALL, CAROL—Continued

"This is Carol Kendall's first published book. She shows a talent for amusing ribaldry and sound, though somewhat sketchy, mystery plotting." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p34 Ap 28 '46 140w

Sat R of Lit 24:59 Ap 20 '46 40w

"Strangely enough in a story obviously designed for merriment, the author goes in for offensive details and some expressions that should have been blue-pencilled." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p21 Ap 21 '46 140w

KENDALL, MESSMORE. Never let weather interfere. 423p $3.75 Farrar, Straus

B or 92

46-8072

The story of his life by an American whose varied career has included the practice of law, development of copper mines, publishing books, building a theater, helping in the reclamation of a colonial church, and service in World War I. The great and near-great have been his friends, and anecdotes of his friendships fill his pages. Index.

"The style of the book is that of pleasant and cultivated after-dinner conversation. The story benefits in the telling by the circumstance that it is addressed by the author to his son, a circumstance conducive to a delicate blending of discretion and frankness." Wendell Johnson

+ Book Week p24 D 1 '46 450w

"Loquacious, lingering, this is the record of a man who enjoyed what he did, and did what he wanted, with a digit in many doings. Friendly."

+ Kirkus 14:337 J1 15 '46 170w

"'Never Let Weather Interfere' bubbles with enthusiasm for living and it is not until the end, when his cherished and self-built Washington Hall has been set down beside the Nudist Village at the World's Fair, that his humor deserts him. . . When a joke is turned against him, he tells it anyway, and when situations amuse him, he tells about them in friendly, anecdotal form. The brooding style at the end is unfortunate, for the young man who almost fell victim to a Montana snowstorm never could permanently wear an Apleyque powdered wig. The weather will clear for the sequel." Lewis Robbins

+ N Y Times p48 N 24 '46 950w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p15 D 15 '46 250w

"A prodigy in his youth, invincible in his maturity, Mr. Kendall is a dash smug and stuffy when, in his seventies and entrenched in George Washington's erstwhile headquarters at Dobb's Ferry, he sits down to reflect on his coups and triumphs in law, finance, the theater, journalism, the publishing field. . . Mr. Kendall's life reads like a succession of Burton Holmes's travelogs, with overtones of Horatio Alger, Johnny Appleseed and the late Andrew Mellon, as we follow him over the Andes, through a Montana blizzard, a Chicago fire, the halls of the Senate, the home of Somerset Maugham, the Florida Keys, the Rue Balzac, Coleman du Pont, two heirs of George Washington and double magnums of Veuve Clicquot." Richard Maney

— Weekly Book Review p30 N 24 '46 900w

KENDON, FRANK. The time piece; a poem. 71p $1.75 Macmillan [5s Cambridge]

821

46-2142

A journal in verse, describing this English poet's year-round observations on country scenes and the drama of the seasons.

"Those who enjoy sauntering through the English countryside and the seasons of the year will find in Mr. Kendon a sensitively observant companion. . . The note is lyrical and reflective; seldom, if ever, impassioned." H. I.A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 9 '46 120w

Reviewed by G. W. Stonier

New Statesman & Nation 31:51 Ja 19 '46 180w

"Frank Kendon, of 'The Time Piece,' in his love of earthly English things and his half-lyrical narrative, could be called in a sense a modern Wordsworth." W. R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 29:9 Mr 23 '46 180w

"Mr. Kendon's muse only fires on one husky cylinder. The trouble is that when for a moment you think he is going to rise above this level, as in the description of a walk by moonlight, he is too timid to give the full experience. I must confess that I find his version of Nature too pleasant, beneficent and pretty to be convincing." Sheila Shannon

Spec 176:330 Mr 29 '46 170w

Times [London] Lit Sup p620 D 29 '45 120w

KENNEDY, RAYMOND. Bibliography of Indonesian peoples and cultures [ed. by Cornelius Osgood and Irving Rouse] pub. for the Dept. of Anthropology, Yale university. (Yale anthropological studies) 212p maps pa $2.50 Yale univ. press [12s 6d Oxford]

016.572 Ethnology—East Indies—Bibliography. Civilization, Indonesian—Bibliography A46-691

"A lengthy listing of literature in the fields of sociology, ethnography, archeology, linguistics, geography, colonial administration, education, economics and history dealing with the peoples and cultures of Indonesia. Standard references on geology, botany, zoology and kindred subjects have also been listed because of the bearing they have on the human and cultural scene. The scheme of classification is according to islands or island groups and within these by tribes and tribal combinations." Am Soc R

Am Soc R 11:377 Je '46 100w

Foreign Affairs 24:756 J1 '46 20w

KENNEDY, STETSON. Southern exposure. 372p il $3 Doubleday

975 South. U.S.—Race question 46-7842

"Stetson Kennedy, himself a Southerner, believes that predatory capitalism is the historic and present cause of the South's racial dilemma, its adherence to the doctrine of 'white supremacy,' its economic beggary and its political hollowness. In 'Southern Exposure,' after essaying to prove his thesis, he recommends as cure a strong, bi-racial union movement, an intensification of Federal legislative concern with the South, and the discarding of any leadership, Northern or Southern, which does not advocate immediate and total racial equality." Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by E. R. Embree

Book Week p6 N 24 '46 400w

Kirkus 14:369 Ag 1 '46 190w

Reviewed by Ellis Arnall

New Repub 115:828 D 16 '46 500w

Reviewed by Jonathan Daniels

N Y Times p16 N 24 '46 800w

"To anyone who has paid attention to what is being said, written, and done by certain Americans below the Mason and Dixon line, there is little new information in the book, but the quantity of ignorant hate, hypocrisy, and violence Mr. Kennedy discovered is staggering."

+ New Yorker 22:127 N 2 '46 120w

"The middle of 'Southern Exposure' is its best—the section dealing with the specific type of violence and agent of violence with which the South is infected. He obviously knows whereof he writes; a terrible kind of conviction gleams from his recitals of brutal murders of Negroes, castrations of labor leaders, grim mistreatment of Jews and others who fall victim to well-heeled, well-organized Southern interest. . . Mr. Kennedy's first section, a generalization of facts and history of the 'Squalid south,' is good enough, presented in free-swinging, journalistic style, with a few too many statistics. The closing part, 'The Road Ahead,' is provocative in another fashion.

Though its conclusion can be regarded by some liberals as rather moderate, in its presentation it seems more doctrinaire than persuasive. Often Mr. Kennedy over-simplifies; he works upon the converted rather than the unconverted. Southern liberals are certain to disagree among themselves about it; and out of that additional heat, too, may come a measure of further enlightenment." H. T. Kane
Sat R of Lit 29:14 N 30 '46 800w

"By its very intensity, its failure to detect suitable graduations between black and white or to see any brighter colors in the dawn, 'Southern Exposure' will repel the growing group of self-examining Southerners which it should strive hardest to convince. Here is a bitter, searching, though sometimes naive and historically awry, survey of the South's ills, containing much that could be read with the most profit by Mr. Kennedy's own people. Yet a majority of these will probably discard it angrily." Hodding Carter
Weekly Book Review p6 O 27 '46
1400w

KENYON REVIEW (periodical). Gerard Manley Hopkins, by the Kenyon critics. (Makers of modern literature) 144p $2 New directions
B or 92 Hopkins, Gerard Manley A46-2862

"All but two of the eight essays in this volume were first published in the Hopkins centennial number (1944) of the Kenyon Review. A close scrutiny, by scholars and poets, of the biographical and textual problems in Hopkins." New Yorker

"As an introduction to the poetry of Hopkins this book cannot be too highly recommended. It possesses the scholarship and insight which recent biographical studies of the poet have lacked." L. K.
+ Book Week p2 F 3 '46 220w

"A Kenyon critic, not included here, has sagely written that the taproot of great poetry is faith, that great belief has the power to invigorate and beautify expression. This volume, in the main, informally expounds that thesis." Margaret Meagher
+ Cath World 163:181 My '46 650w

Commonweal 44:20 Ap 19 '46 210w

Reviewed by Delmore Schwartz
Nation 162:347 Mr 23 '46 1900w
New Yorker 22:90 F 23 '46 50w
U S Quarterly Bkl 2:171 S '46 210w

"Admirable as this book is in many ways, it does little to dispel the general ignorance about Hopkins, the Jesuit poet who worked in painful obscurity toward the close of the last century and found limited recognition only some thirty years after his death. . . . It is all the more unfortunate that practically every book about him, including the one under review, should be framed for readers who are somewhat familiar with Hopkins already and whose interest in him is that of poets and scholars. If there is still need for a book that will make this master available to his potential audience, this little volume will prove stimulating to the specialist." Babette Deutsch
+ Weekly Book Review p12 Mr 17 '46
1150w

"In the book before us, the newcomer to Hopkins's work is going to find skilled assistance in qualifying the uncritical enthusiasm or revulsion which usually accompanies first readings of this poet." Maynard Mack
+ Yale R n s 35:539 spring '46 1400w

KERILLIS, HENRI DE. I accuse De Gaulle; tr. from the French by Harold Rosenberg. 270p $2.75 Harcourt

944.08 Gaulle, Charles André Joseph Marie de. France—Politics and government 46-2229

"Of what? Of the ambition to become a dictator, of subordinating the Free French military campaign to his political career, of surrounding himself with Cagoulaards (not the first time this charge has been made), of terror methods within the Free French movement during the war, of trying to split the Allies and create distrust of the United States, of a great deal more. M. de Kerillis, in exile here since 1940, was for some years a fervent de Gaulle. He is a man of politics, but his book hasn't the sound of irresponsible invective." (New Yorker) Index.

Reviewed by C. A. Micaud
Ann Am Acad 247:194 S '46 550w

Reviewed by David Karno
Book Week p12 Mr 24 '46 500w
Booklist 42:263 Ap 15 '46

"His book is written primarily for Frenchmen, and it is up to them to answer it. Certainly, it cannot be all brushed aside. Some of his charges at least are well-documented. . . . On the other hand, M. De Kerillis is a violent as well as vigorous writer, and an impulsive man, and certainly the very violence of his accusations make him suspect, at least of exaggeration. However, the true story of De Gaulle and De Gaulism still has to be written, and this book will certainly have to be taken into account in the writing of it." G. M. A. G.

Canadian Forum 26:141 S '46 280w

"M. de Kerillis is a trained journalist who presents his case with persuasive clarity."

Christian Century 63:463 Ap 10 '46
130w

"Despite the serious evidence for the prosecution," quoted in M. de Kerillis's book, judgment on de Gaulle's motives and actions must be withheld until the General has had a chance to reply." E. S. P.

Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 21 '46 700w

Current Hist 10:444 My '46 90w

Foreign Affairs 24:750 Jl '46 80w

Kirkus 14:146 Mr 15 '46 150w

Reviewed by Albert Guérard
Nation 162:438 Ap 13 '46 1450w
New Yorker 22:98 Mr 23 '46 180w

"I Accuse de Gaulle is a necessary corrective for the inspirational type of writing turned out during the war. But, in its way, it is as indiscriminating in its choice of facts and as prejudiced in its interpretation of them." Ellen Hammer

Pol Sci Q 61:294 Je '46 850w

"The book has the bitterness of a man who has accepted a leader and then found him wanting, but its not merely an angry tirade against De Gaulle. It is a carefully documented historical study, and throws much light from hitherto unpublished documents on the reasons for the attitude of Roosevelt and Churchill toward the leader of the Free French." H. W. Marr

+ Spring'd Republican p1d Ap 21 '46
450w

"M. De Kerillis has not the elevation of thought, feeling or style to execute the task he has here set himself. Now that Charles de Gaulle is sulking in his tent it may be thought opportune to publish a translation of this book, which has circulated clandestinely for some time in France; but neither at this time nor at any other moment will a work of the kind carry conviction unless it is struck off in the white heat of a passionate indignation based upon irrefutable facts. . . . This is a pity, because there is some serious historical evidence brought forward in the book." Vincent Sheean
+ Weekly Book Review p3 Mr 31 '46
1350w

Discussion by Vincent Sheean

Weekly Book Review p26 My 12 '46
900w

KERR, MRS LAURA (NOVAK). Doctor Elizabeth; il. by Alice Carsey. 209p $2.50 Nelson
B or 92 Blackwell, Elizabeth—Juvenile literature 46-1687

Biography of Elizabeth Blackwell (1821-1910), the first woman to enter the medical profession in modern times. For young readers.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p19 Mr 31 '46 190w

KERR, L. N.—Continued
Booklist 42:230 Mr 15 '46

"A stimulating biography for younger girls than those reading Rachel Baker's The First Woman Doctor." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 22:212 Mr '46 90w
Kirkus 14:73 F 1 '46 180w

"The author's trick of describing scenes and conversations as though she had been behind the door is trying, but she has made a good choice of material, and the story of how Elizabeth Blackwell carried out her resolution to become a practicing physician could hardly fail to be inspiring." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p16 F 10 '46 110w

"Slight and for younger readers than was Rachel Baker's The First Woman Doctor," published by Messner several years ago, this may well serve as an introduction to more substantial biographies of women doctors and nurses." M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p6 Mr 17 '46 140w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p6 Je 23 '46 320w

KERR, SOPHIE (MRS UNDERWOOD). Love story incidental. 245p $2 Rinehart 46-3291

"Ann Linton goes to Hollywood for a reunion with her movie-actor father, whom she hasn't seen since she was 4. Ann's mother divorced the charmer because he was allergic to work; but when he skyrockets to fame, Ann writes him and his invitation follows. Follows, too, her disillusionment with papa and movieland. Her morale lifter is nice David Stake, who helps her understand a lot of things—including what happens to her heart." N Y Times

"Flimsy, feminine fare."
— Kirkus 14:111 Mr 1 '46 120w

Reviewed by Anne Richards
N Y Times p20 My 12 '46 100w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p40 My 19 '46 130w

KERSH, GERALD. Night and the city; a novel. 372p $2.50 Simon & Schuster 46-2642

"This novel of the London underworld has something of the realism of a Hogarth picture and the satire of a Swift. Pimps, prostitutes, panderers, petty crooks and odd characters move about in low joints and night clubs, fleeing and being fleeced by each other." Library J

Reviewed by Jex Martin
Book Week p16 Ap 7 '46 360w

"A story told in successive shots—vivid, authentic—and almost unrelievedly unpleasant but convincing realism."
Kirkus 14:24 Ja 15 '46 150w

"Good study of the types, but the almost unrelieved sordidness of the background will make the book a questionable purchase for many libraries." G. W. Hill
Library J 71:406 Mr 15 '46 70w

Reviewed by Raynes Hoffman
New Statesman & Nation 32:424 D 7 '46 600w

"The city of Mr. Kersh's title is pre-war London, and the people of his story are the sorry little people who make up the underworld of a big city—prostitutes, pimps, waiters and bartenders in clip-joints, gamblers, promoters, peddlers and night-club hostesses. It is certainly the best novel of this kind since John T. McIntyre's magnificent 'Steps Going Down', which was about the underworld of Philadelphia, Philadelphia, London, or New York, however, the underworld is the underworld." Russell Maloney
+ N Y Times p8 Ap 7 '46 700w

"Although the author may not have intended to point a moral, you get the not entirely demodé idea that if death is not always the wages of sin, it is inevitably the price of being in the wrong racket at the wrong time. This ugly but effective bit of low life was written before Mr. Kersh's extremely interesting 'Sergeant Nelson of the Guards'."

New Yorker 22:110 Ap 6 '46 120w

"One thing I have learned from this novel is that Mr. Kersh is a good writer. This is probably no news to those who have read his work before—there have been three or four other books, I believe—but Mr. Kersh is new to me, and the impact of his keen and crafty writing is a gratifying experience. He has the gift of words, for turning them into fresh arrangements for their best use." N. L. Rothman
+ Sat R of Lit 29:16 Mr 30 '46 650w

Reviewed by P. A. Bickerton
Spring'd Republican p4d My 5 '46 180w

"When Mr. Kersh sticks to his sinners he does astonishingly well; he describes them with awful lucidity, dirt and everything, and does an equally good job of delineating the vices that enslave them. . . . One has the definite impression that this author thoroughly knows the scene which he describes and that it appalls him—as it does his readers." Iris Barry
+ Weekly Book Review p12 Ap 14 '46 700w

KERSH, GERALD. Weak and the strong. 209p $2.50 Simon & Schuster [7s 6d Heinemann] 46-7278

A group of people from a resort hotel, presumably somewhere in the Caribbean, go on a trip into some volcanic caves. A sudden landslide closes the company into the cave. During the hours while they are supposedly facing death the true characters of the members of the group are brought out.

"The story moves along at a comfortable pace, the characters are always amusing, and the authentic bathos, which at its best has a classic quality, gives a distinctive flavor to this post-seasonal hammock reading." Jex Martin
+ Book Week p13 O 27 '46 400w

"A bitter picture of sordid humanity at its worst, done with Kersh's incredibly vivid screen flash method."

Kirkus 14:310 Jl 1 '46 240w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse
Manchester Guardian p3 O 5 '45 150w

Reviewed by John Farrelly
New Repub 115:741 D 2 '46 300w

"The bare story situation is more exciting than the actual telling. The characters are pretty much stock, slick magazine jobs with little of the breath of life in them. When Mr. Kersh takes us off his mythical island and tells of the naturalist's experience with a native tribe, it becomes for that section an enjoyable and interesting tale. But he has not on the whole realized the possibilities of the usually reliable device of a conglomerate group of people suddenly isolated and threatened with death—and the total result, even as a slick job, is disappointing." Theodore Pratt
+ N Y Times p32 O 27 '46 230w

"A weak mixture of cynicism and sentimentality which fails to meet even the standards of good melodrama." Arthur Foff
— San Francisco Chronicle p11 D 8 '46 250w

"Mr. Kersh's 'Faces in a Dusty Picture' belongs to the very first rank of World War II writing. In this country his novel 'Night and the City' has won him a considerable reputation. Admirers of his talent had a right to expect even greater efforts. His present book will come as a shocking disappointment to them. It is not only a failure, but its plan and what becomes visible of its design are so much below the level of the author's earlier accomplishments that this reviewer for one is still wondering whether the whole affair is not intended as a satire on pseudo-philosophical sentimental fiction writing." Robert Pitkin
— Sat R of Lit 29:60 D 7 '46 400w

"Author Kersh—who worked as baker, bouncer, wrestler and Coldstream Guardsman before he became known as a novelist—is at his lively best when he is wallowing in gore, at his worst when he tries to raise the level of his thriller by expatiating on Man, Life and The Eternal. Those who believe . . . that Author Kerah is 'one of England's foremost young writers,' or even those who considered him a man after Hemingway's heart, will find their faith severely shaken by The Weak and the Strong."

Time 48:116 N 4 '46 390w

"Some of the stories are imaginative, some commonplace, but the effect of all is enhanced by Mr. Kerah's adroit handling. The drama of the past is kept deftly in touch with that of the present, there are some agreeable if temporary changes of heart, and the author commands at times an effective pathos."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p485 O 13 '46 360w

"'The Weak and the Strong,' though not exactly breath-taking, nevertheless sustains interest and human curiosity." Kenneth Fearing
Weekly Book Review p16 O 27 '46 550w

KESTEN, HERMANN, ed. Blue flower [best stories of the romanticists] il. by Z. Czermanski. 674p $5 Roy pubs.

Short stories—Collections 46-8191

The blue flower was the flower of fortune and the symbol of the romantic period in modern literature. The short stories in this anthology represent that period in eleven countries: France, England, Austria, Switzerland, Russia, Poland, Italy, Hungary, Denmark, Spain, America. Contains brief biographies of authors.

"Entertaining omnibus. . . I expected to get just a whiff of mothballs when I opened it, but I am impressed, instead, with the freshness and vitality of most of these veterans, both the characters themselves and the whole illuminating complex of time and place in which each comes to life: 'Worlds' that are sometimes worlds apart, but all made part of our bravely imagined one world by the power of great writing." George Dillon

+ Book Week p5 D 22 '46 320w

"Many of the selections come from names—and countries—whose literature we know too little. The juxta-position of this fresh material with familiar works gives the whole a special significance for students. Brief biographies of the authors appear at the end."

+ Kirkus 14:434 S 1 '46 230w

"Here again is the example of the superior anthology as a pointer to what has been neglected in one's reading, and particularly in the British section, a reminder that one too often studies the romantic poets at the expense of the story-tellers. For the most one notices how narrative, non-dramatic, and untricky the short story was at that period of its development, how pleasant to muse over, how often near the fairy tale and the intimate journal." E. V. Winebaum

+ N Y Times p42 D 1 '46 360w

"Mr. Kesten has shown taste and imagination in assembling a collection of tales that were as familiar as daily bread to the literate of half a century ago but are probably little known to our generation."

+ New Yorker 22:142 N 30 '46 70w

Reviewed by A. Foff

San Francisco Chronicle p10 D 1 '46 100w

"The forty-five stories he presents to you in this collection are full of that deep and lasting delight emanating from jewels out of the treasure chest of world literature." F. C. Weiskopf

+ Sat R of Lit 29:14 D 14 '46 650w

Weekly Book Review p60 D 1 '46 80w

KESTEN, HERMANN. Ferdinand and Isabella; a novel. 373p $3 Wyn

Ferdinand V, king of Spain—Fiction. Isabella I, queen of Spain—Fiction 46-11819

"A [biographical novel] of Isabella (and, rather incidentally, of her King) that presents her against a background of the civil wars of her early childhood, the Inquisition, and the discovery of America, and follows through to her old age and death. Mr. Kesten is no great admirer of his remarkable heroine; he presents her as a strong-minded, implacably good woman whose tireless Christian zeal reduced the earthly paradise of Spain to a desert, ruined its industry, destroyed its commerce, and exalted man's tyranny over man." New Yorker

Reviewed by Paul Bixler

Book Week p2 N 17 '46 270w

Booklist 43:117 D 15 '46

"The author of The Twins of Nuremberg meticulously recasts past history, omitting no detail of religious, political, personal interpretation, in a lengthy fictionalization. Historians may quarrel with his interpretation; his details seem soundly based on scholarship."

Kirkus 14:399 Ag 15 '46 190w

"Arrangement of the material in episodes lends itself to an irregularity of style and an unfortunately weak climax but lovers of history will be much interested. Recommended." Katharine Shorey

+ Library J 71:1465 O 15 '46 90w

"Seven years ago I reviewed in these columns Hermann Kesten's novel 'The Children of Guernica,' the book with which that author introduced himself to the American reading public. 'Ferdinand and Isabella,' testifies once more to the freshness and originality of his talent." Klaus Mann

+ Nation 164:51 Ja 11 '47 500w

Reviewed by Franz Schoenberger

N Y Times p20 N 24 '46 900w

New Yorker 22:124 N 2 '46 100w

Reviewed by Leo Lerman

Sat R of Lit 29:12 N 30 '46 1100w

"A richly endowed but in some ways disappointing book. The blending of fact and fancy is always a dangerous procedure, despite its obvious fascination. When marshaled to fit a thesis or win an argument, facts lose their shape. When the great dead of history are resurrected in a book and given imaginary thought and feelings they lose the reality they had in first-hand accounts and become, no matter how interesting, the hybrid creatures of one man's imagination. . . Mr. Kesten has obviously studied European history with meticulous care, and in the mass of detail with which his story abounds he evokes an absorbing parallel between the period of Isabella's reign and our own, alike in their relentless abuse of human rights and liberty. But the book is neither warm with the breath of creation nor cold from the steel of truth." Virgilia Peterson

+ Weekly Book Review p16 O 27 '46 850w

"Hermann Kesten is a distinguished German literary exile. His Ferdinand and Isabella is an impressive historical novel, imaginative and dramatic, but serious and scholarly. It is arresting as fiction, but it is also an interpretation of history. With the melancholy insight of a German scholar who has observed and understood contemporary history, Mr. Kesten has made this book a commentary on certain trends which appear in all history." Orville Prescott

+ Yale R n s 36:382 winter '47 230w

KESTEN, HERMANN. Twins of Nuremberg [tr. from the German by A. St James and E. B. Ashton]. 616p $3 Fischer, L.B. 46-4717

A story of Germany and Europe from 1918 to 1945. The "twins of Nuremberg" are in fact two sets of twins, first the sisters Primula Lust and Ultima (Aunt Ull), and later Primula's twin sons, Caesar and Alexander. In each generation the twins are symbolic figures of the good and evil in German history.

"A novel about Germany and Germans in exile between the world wars, this is a strange, neurotic and bitter book. It is compounded almost maddeningly of the crassest realism and the most arbitrary symbolism. The strange characters in spite of their strangeness are only types. . . The plot is incredible." D. M. Weil

KESTEN, HERMANN—Continued

— Book Week p5 My 26 '46 450w

Kirkus 14:20 Ja 15 '46 150w

"Novel contains many moving scenes, but lacks somehow deeper reality. Recommended for libraries with representative collections of European fiction." F. E. Hirsch

Library J 71:281 F 15 '46 100w

Reviewed by Franz Schoenberger

New Repub 114:841 Je 10 '46 900w

"The author is more than a story-teller. So artfully does he pit the Nazi against the anti-Nazi that he makes the reader feel that perhaps it is true that 'nature is mad.' It is here that the plots of the book become profound and reach far beyond the mere problem of Germany. Good and Evil seem inextricably tied together, and we are on sadly familiar ground when Mr. Kesten shows once more how much blood had to be spilled in a new attempt to separate the eternal Siamese Twins." Konrad Heiden

+ — N Y Times p5 My 12 '46 700w

"A long, extremely interesting work, which would have been more successful if Herr Kesten had made up his mind at the outset exactly what kind of novel he intended to write."

+ — New Yorker 22:106 My 18 '46 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 18 '46 400w

"Irony alternates with tenderness, and pathos with glassy soberness. It is not always easy reading, but the discriminating and thoughtful reader will be richly rewarded." F. C. Weiskopf

+ Sat R of Lit 29:15 My 11 '46 1150w

"If the novel as a whole moves erratically through unhappiness into desperation over allegorical seas, each of its twenty-four chapters, taken by itself and in varying degree, displays the equipment of a novelist of the first rank. Wit and irony, humor and compassion lift the story along its way. That which we call the spirit still lives. Indeed, as the story goes, it is of the order of the great picaresque novels, full of journeys, of episodes, escapades, adventures, of all sorts of characters, with the full complement of rogues and rascals and every girl in her humor. And if it is sicker at heart than the familiar classics of this order, perhaps they too in their day were sicker at heart than we realize—although certainly not as desperately so as here." F. T. Marsh

Weekly Book Review p4 My 12 '46 800w

KESTEN, PAUL W., and others, eds. Radio alphabet. See Columbia broadcasting system

KHATCHATRIANZ, I. Armenian folk tales; Russian version; tr. by N. W. Orloff; il. by Martyros Saryan. 141p $2 Colonial house pubs, 1049 E. Chelton av, Philadelphia 33

398.2 Folklore, Armenian

Translations of sixteen Armenian folk tales for ages eight to twelve. "The stories in this volume are genuine folk tales. The geography, place and personal names, the currency, economic conditions, social values and customs, domestic relations, general outlook and attitudes, moral standards and religious beliefs and practices in these stories all point to their genuineness as Armenian folk tales." (Introd)

"Translated by N. Orloff, these 16 tales have the lure of all authentic folk material and the distinct flavor of Armenia imparted through names, customs, currency, economic conditions, manner of travel, and many personal and social values. . . The beautiful illustrations by the 'dean of Soviet painters' give minute details of costume and setting and catch all the mystery, romance, and spirit of amazement which cling to all folk tales."

+ Book Week p17 N 10 '46 150w

Booklist 43:120 D 15 '46

Kirkus 14:521 O 15 '46 80w

Reviewed by K. H. McAlarney

Library J 71:1809 D 15 '46 70w

"A land rich in folklore, its stories of magic and humor combine universal appeal with an extravagant inventiveness that most nearly suggests the folk tales of Ireland. . . A subtlety which children may miss is the general undertone of realism which smiles at men's gullibility and belittles his sense of self-importance. Though poorly reproduced, the pictures carry out the imaginative quality of the text." Nona Balakian

+ — N Y Times p3 N 10 '46 100w

"Apart from impacts, economics and literary revivals, the stories are excellent entertainment, though double translation has somewhat interfered with their style." M. L. Becker

+ — Weekly Book Review p10 Ja 26 '47 200w

KIELLAND, AXEL. Dangerous honeymoon; tr. from the Swedish text and the original Norwegian manuscript by Carolyn Hannay. 277p $2.50 Little [8s 6d Collins]

46-3945

"Fast moving story of how an American girl, destitute in bombed Berlin, meets an influential Swede who volunteers to take her out of the country as his wife in name only. But Ann attempts to smuggle out a code message and adventures follow fast and furious." Library J

Booklist 42:317 Je 1 '46

"The framework is definitely the worst part of the story, whose main value lies in the intriguingly impossible situations, and a slick dialogue fast enough to keep almost anyone going. We got tired toward the end. If you like to escape into Hell and high water rising rapidly, this should do very well. But don't expect anything more than 'escape.'" Fran Ziemau

Canadian Forum 26:189 N '46 280w

"High hearted and fairly harum scarum adventure which starts off amusingly, ends up improbably, but provides some entertainment en route."

+ — Kirkus 14:133 Mr 15 '46 170w

"Improbable but entertaining and bouncy. Not as good as author's Shape of Danger." L. M. Kinloch

+ — Library J 71:758 My 15 '46 70w

"Not very thrilling." Lucy Greenbaum

N Y Times p18 My 19 '46 200w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 7 '46 70w

"Entertaining."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:37 Je 1 '46 30w

Reviewed by R. M. Morgan

Springfd Republican p4d Je 23 '46 180w

"The foreign air of 'Dangerous Honeymoon' and its more restrained fun struck us as an improvement over the thin-man dialogue and American 'sophistication' of this author's 'Shape of Danger,' a work to which we were allergic but which many other readers pronounced quite wonderful. The absence of that debonaire playboy and Gingernuts and the girl called Petter is alone worth the price of admission. Ann and Gosta are much nicer to meet. Try this for light spy comedy." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p17 Je 2 '46 270w

KIELY, MARY FRANCES, comp. New worlds to live; a catalog of books for Catholic boys and girls. new ed 152p il pa $1 Pro parvulus bk. club, Empire state bldg, N.Y.

028.5 Children's literature—Bibliography.
 Roman Catholic literature—Bibliography

"In arrangement and format it reminds one of the superb lists issued by the National Council of Teachers of English. The attractive cover, many illustrations, handy size of 6x9 which physically makes it a companion volume to Miss Kiely's Traffic Lights, good paper and fine job of printing combine to provide a selection tool of which Catholic librarians can be proud. It is a logical grouping of reading interests at various age levels, each section an alphabetic author arrangement with title, publisher, age level, price, annotations. A short introduction sets the theme of each section." Library J

Booklist 43:76 N 1 '46

"Not only fathers and mothers, uncles and aunts, librarians and teachers will welcome this latest edition of Mary Kiely's selected and annotated list of books for Catholic boys and girls, but also harassed book editors suddenly recalled from the intricacies of editing and faced by the query from one or other of the above mentioned: 'Please tell me some good book to give to Johnny or Jenny'. . . Out of her wide knowledge of the field, her instinctive religious sense and her understanding of the young mind, Miss Kiely has produced a constructive, highly creditable and much needed piece of work."

+ Cath World 163:188 My '46 200w

"The third edition of this well-known guide will receive a cordial welcome by parents, librarians, booksellers and others. For years it has been and still is the best Catholic list obtainable. Its accent on the recreational aspect of reading is both a strength and a weakness, and its thousand titles will provide a point of departure for the projected Catholic children's catalog. . . The list, in our estimation, would have been much more useful and stronger by being strictly a Catholic list; such titles as Arabian Nights, Matchlock Gun by Edmonds, Struwwelpeter by Hoffman, Cave Twins by Perkins and Leeming's Fun with Clay are lower case 'catholic.' . . The annotations vary widely in quality, and some will disagree with the grading assigned. The designating of Catholic authors is always interesting, especially where one finds evidence to the contrary." R. J. Hurley

+ — Library J 71:479 Ap 1 '46 650w
School & Society 63:176 Mr 9 '46 40w

KILHAM, WALTER HARRINGTON. Boston after Bulfinch; an account of its architecture 1800-1900. 144p 32pl $3.50 Harvard univ. press

720 9744 Architecture—Boston A46-3128

"Few of us think of Boston as having ever been experimental, even architecturally, but this handsome book gives a thorough account of the enthusiasm and skill with which Boston architects embraced the Greek Revival, Victorian Gothic, Romanesque (thanks to Richardson, a worth-while flirtation), and even, in George Apley's boyhood, the steel-framed buildings of the Chicago school." New Yorker

"The text of 'Boston After Bulfinch' is lively, the photographs are bright and sharp, and all in all it is an ideal book to remember when Christmas comes around." Wayne Andrews

+ Commonweal 44:289 Jl 5 '46 200w

"This welcome reintroduction to forgotten Boston landmarks serves to remind us that not all the glories belong to antiquity or the immediate present." W. G. Dooley

+ N Y Times p11 S 1 '46 850w

New Yorker 22:84 Jl 13 '46 80w

"Primarily biographical and descriptive, this essay is of value chiefly for its precise summaries of the lives and work of more than a score of nineteenth-century Boston architects. Of particular interest are the accounts of the men of the great Greek Revival, Alexander Parriss, Solomon Willard, Ammi B. Young, and Isaiah Rogers; also, those of the less known architects of the mid-century such as Edward C. Cabot, Gridley J. F. Bryant, Arthur Gilman, and William Ware."

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:167 S '46 220w

"A book which will give pleasure to Bostonians and some enlightenment to those to whom Boston is still an enigma. . . Boston is a style. I should have liked Mr. Kilham's book better if he had searched for that style; if he had made it express and visible in the mind of his readers. He is too detached, too much the analyst and reporter, too much concerned with surface phenomena. I wish that he were at times more warm and more incisive in his interpretations of such fine buildings as, for example, the Quincy Market and a little more offended by the stupid and vulgar mutilation which it has suffered. A flash or two of anger would have illumined his pages. His scholarship would have cut deeper if it had had a keener edge." Joseph Hudnut

+ — Weekly Book Review p21 Je 30 '46 550w

KIMBERLY, EMERSON EDWARD. Electrical engineering. 2d ed 407p il $3.50 Int. textbook 621.3 Electric engineering 46-11915

"A comprehensive course of instruction in the fundamentals of electricity and the more common types of electrical apparatus and power equipment. It is written for college students who are majoring in mechanical, industrial, chemical, or civil engineering and who need practical facility in the electrical field in pursuance of their own specialization. To this end the text, specifically functional in treatment, contains many worked-out examples on the application of electrical laws and formulas. Compared with the first edition (1939), several chapters have been expanded to cover developments in heating, lighting, electronic tubes, and other advances, and a new chapter has been added on electronic devices. Numerous additional practical problems have also been included" (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1715 D 1 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:39 Jl '46

KIMBROUGH, EDWARD. Night fire. 343p $2.75 Rinehart

46-20739

A novel dealing with racial prejudice and labor troubles in the South. The hero, a young Southerner of good family, has always stood aside from conflict until he learns the life of an innocent Negro is endangered by mob spirit roused by unscrupulous politicians. Ashby attempts to help Temp escape and in the ensuing adventures each learns his need of the other's help.

Reviewed by William Lipscomb

Book Week p2 N 3 '46 650w

"An angry, though authentic, indictment of primitive persecution in the south—but lacking the direct personal appeal of Strange Fruit, etc."

Kirkus 14:307 Jl 1 '46 170w

Reviewed by L. D. Reddick

Library J 71:1127 S 1 '46 110w

"Mr. Kimbrough maintains a nice balance between physical action, love in bloom, and social analysis. The style is rich, rhythmic, sentimental. Much of the story is told in flashback, sometimes rather lengthy flashbacks intruding into the narrative at crucial times. But there is power in the sustained intensity of Ashby's seeking, in the lushness of the writing, the thick bouillabaisse of violence, wild humor, sentiment and emotional extravagance. It is a manner appropriate to the subject and the setting." N. K. Burger

+ — N Y Times p20 O 6 '46 550w

"If there is such a thing as a sociological melodrama, this it is—and not a bad job, either."

New Yorker 22:125 O 5 '46 110w

San Francisco Chronicle p6 D 1 '46 110w

"'Night Fire' is a novel with a message, a message which, being a novel and a pretty good one at that, it expresses in terms of human drama. . . Indeed, Mr. Kimbrough attempts to pack in too much. He also tends occasionally to lapse into pure melodrama and to exploit the bizarre for its own sake. Even so, a deep sincerity rings through the main lines of his story and much that he has said cannot be said too often—even though he may find himself persona non grata with his neighbors for having said it." Jennings Rice

+ — Weekly Book Review p10 S 29 '46 700w

KING, MARY PAULA (MRS EDWIN P. O'DONNELL). Those other people. 343p $2.50 Houghton

46-886

The scene is a small section of the French Quarter of New Orleans; the time, a hot June day in the late nineteen thirties. During the long hours of a day and a night the author traces the crossing paths of a group of people, notably a middle-aged woman who has met and then lost sight of a sailor; realizes she wants to see him again and searches for him. He in turn searches for her. And in the course of that day the activities of all kinds of people—black, white, and brown, are added to the development of the story.

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 F 3 '46 600w

Booklist 42:226 Mr 15 '46

Bookmark 7:15 Mr '46

+ Cath World 163:187 My '46 200w

"We grow to love almost everyone of the characters presented—and we learn to live imaginatively in New Orleans—which is to say that 'Those Other People' is an excellent book, especially when contrasted with recent best-sellers. One hopes though that Mrs. O'Donnell, will grow to recognize the intimate relationship between the natural charity which she celebrates and the charity of Christ about which she is obscure. For the only parts of her lively narrative which do not bear the stamp of sincere understanding are those which concern the Church and the meaning of the Church for Catholics." F. X. Connolly

+ — Commonweal 43:531 Mr 8 '46 650w

Kirkus 13:529 D 1 '45 250w

"A saga of trivialities and their effect on our lives. Recommended." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 71:121 Ja 15 '46 70w

"Mrs. O'Donnell writes with a consistent, appraising sensitivity that we sometimes miss in writers of greater emotional impact. If there is anything to be skeptical of in 'Those Other People,' it is the smooth, compact fastidiousness of the framework. The story begins and ends with the same sun-loving, plant-like, absorptive old woman. This sonata form is rigorously maintained and too pointedly offsets the scattered kaleidoscopic effect of the material." Isa Kapp

+ — N Y Times p5 F 3 '46 1000w

"Her story telling method is simply to get her specimens out of bed in the morning (there are some very early risers down South) and follow them industriously around all day, watching their paths cross, or almost cross, and observing the consequences of these encounters. This sort of thing can, of course, get tedious long before sundown, but Mrs. O'Donnell manages to keep things moving with no more than an occasional twitch of melodrama."

+ — New Yorker 21:84 Ja 26 '46 140w

"Throughout, the people are sufficiently plausible and the bits of plot are so neatly carpentered that it is easy to forgive the book's lack of solid drive and power. Perhaps any novel written to this particular formula is bound to seem kaleidoscopic, and its character ephemeral. Where Mrs. O'Donnell does excel, however, is in evoking the atmosphere of New Orleans—the visual, tactile, olfactory side of the old city's life. Here the author has been consistently successful, and a great many readers will welcome her book for this and will let Leah and her search go hang." T. M. Purdy

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:22 F 16 '46 400w

Spring'd Republican p4d F 10 '46 400w

"Many people have written of New Orleans' fragrant, teeming, multi-hued French Quarter—the realists, the 'name' story-tellers, hunting the thing called color to splash over their stock situations. But Mary O'Donnell has done something fresh and genuine with the material. It is difficult to think of any one who has treated it with greater understanding or greater artistry than she has done in this, her second novel. . . . Through the book runs a fine sense of scene—the Quarter's worn, many-shaded stucco walls, the humid courtyards, the smells that float beneath the iron balconies." H. T. Kane

+ Weekly Book Review p1 Ja 27 '46 750w

Wis Lib Bul 42:46 Mr '46

"The constantly changing scene, the constantly reappearing and disappearing characters, the kaleidoscope of local colors, all blend into a lively impressionistic panorama of human living. Mrs. O'Donnell has a sharp eye for realistic details, a good ear for speech. But she only introduces characters, never develops them. She only provides incidents, never a sustained narrative. Those Other People is mildly diverting. It includes some good satire at the expense of stuffed-shirts and reactionary prejudice. But it only misses dulness by a hair's breadth." Orville Prescott

+ — Yale R n s 35:575 spring '46 260w

KING, RUFUS. Museum piece no. 13. 220p $2
Doubleday

46-6603

Psychological mystery.

Booklist 43:71 N 1 '46

"Unsubstantial but cultivated."

Kirkus 14:332 J1 15 '46 90w

"Top marks for this one, and for its charming and deliciously funny heroine. What a play it would make!" E. H.

+ New Repub 115:357 S 23 '46 120w

"In telling this modern version of the Bluebeard legend Rufus King has employed a curiously involved style which focuses attention upon itself to the detriment of the story of terror and suspense which it is intended to convey." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p28 S 15 '46 150w

"Without doubt, the oddest of this season's mysteries, and certainly the least alarming." New Yorker 22:120 S 21 '46 120w

"The oddest and possibly the best of Mr. King's curious experiments in the slick-macabre." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 22 '46 70w

"Weird affair."

Sat R of Lit 29:47 O 19 '46 50w

"An engaging novelty in the gooseflesh round, suitable for all the better fans. A bit mannered in the telling, more than a trifle fantastic, as becomes a mystery rendition of the Bluebeard story, and pleasingly short on detective routine, it should induce all the shudders you need, whether or not you agree that the climax packs 'almost unbearable tension,' whatever that is. This was serialized as 'The Secret Beyond the Door.'" Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p18 S 8 '46 290w

KING-HALL, MAGDALEN. Life and death of the wicked Lady Skelton. 269p $2.50 Rinehart [8s 6d Davies]

46-2310

"During the war an old English country house was destroyed, and the country people did not seem to mind for the house had been haunted for over two centuries. The novel describes the life of the original of the ghost, beautiful Lady Barbara Skelton, who was married in 1678, and died a violent death seven years later."

"The tale is of the racy, fantastic genre which marks it strictly for entertainment. In fact, it has already been filmed in England, under the title 'Wicked Lady.'" O. C.

Book Week p8 Ap 14 '46 180w

Booklist 42:265 Ap 15 '46

Kirkus 14:22 Ja 15 '46 150w

"This being Miss King-Hall's ninth book she handles all the requisite turns with a skill and finesse that can come only with practice. . . . Miss King-Hall has a pat sense of color and costume description—the sort that lends itself prettily to inspiration of musical-comedy costumers and Technicolor scenarists." B. V. Winebaum

+ N Y Times p31 Ap 14 '46 260w

"Authorities upon the interior economy of a seventeenth century estate may be able to explain how it would be possible for a woman to ride out night after night in all sorts of weathers, return before dawn to leave a blown or mired horse in the stables, and yet escape detection by all but one person. However, this is but one improbability among many. The tale is more euphonious and less painful than some. It is an agreeable and harmless trifle, hovering upon but not too frequently overstepping the verge of arrant nonsense." George Dangerfield

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:35 My 25 '46 350w

"Miss King-Hall has prepared the way for the entrance of her beautiful and disastrous heroine by devoting the first part of her colorful novel to an account of the several apparitions of the wraith of that exceedingly unscrupulous and wayward young person. This, curiously enough, is really the best part of her book and does indeed skillfully render a true atmosphere of terror: one believes in her ghost. The living seventeenth-century heroine is a good deal less credible." Iris Barry

+ — Weekly Book Review p16 Ap 28 '46 500w

KINGSBURY, ALISON MASON. Adventures of Phunsi [il. by the author]. 88p $2 Putnam 46-7279

"Phunsi is a young and rather troublesome zebra who was captured with his mother in Africa and brought to the Central Park Zoo in New York. In Africa he was a famous runner. . . In New York he practised jumping over his mother's back until he could jump the high fence in the Zoo and roam about the city at his will. His adventures on Manhattan and Long Island include a short stay in a pet shop, a disastrous invasion of the Paddy Market, an encounter with a dissipated and rather cynical alley cat . . . and an eventual return to the Zoo and to his mother." Sat R of Lit

"The prose and verses that describe the baby zebra's antics are a bit too long and too whimsical, but the book has considerable freshness and should entertain six- and seven-year-olds." K. S. White

+ — New Yorker 22:138 D 7 '46 60w

"Every once in a while Miss Kingsbury 'drops into verse.' Some of the verses have rhythm, but it might have been wiser to have made it all prose. All the characters, including the alley cat, have humor and personality. The illustrations in black and white are distinctive and pleasing." M. G. D.

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:43 N 9 '46 270w

KINGZETT, CHARLES THOMAS. Chemical encyclopaedia; a digest of chemistry and its industrial applications; rev. & ed. by Ralph K. Strong. 7th ed 1092p $16 Van Nostrand [45s Bailliere]

540.3 Chemistry—Dictionaries [46-4623]

"Compared to the sixth edition (1940) the changes in the seventh edition of this established reference book are not extensive. The principal changes and additions are noted in the Editor's preface to the seventh edition. The entry under Penicillin is new. A number of entries, such as Vitamins, have been revised. The changes have increased the number of pages by four." N Y New Tech Bks

"Changes made between the sixth and seventh editions hardly seem to justify the increase [in price], especially when, with few exceptions, the same type appears to have been used for both. The new printing has four pages more than its predecessor because the article on vitamins has been rewritten and expanded. . . The encyclopedia contains about three dozen tables of commodity import, export, consumption or production data for the year 1936. Many of these 10-year-old statistics could have been modernized a bit even if the war did intervene. Other changes could have been made." Chem & Met Eng 53:273 J1 '46 300w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:762 My 15 '46 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:5 Ja '46

KINNAIRD, CLARK, ed. It happened in 1945. 464p il $3.50 Essential bks.

909.82 Current events

46-25227

"News stories and news flashes of the greatest year in history chronologically through November 14. Among important events related are legislation for veterans, the United Nations Charter, end of Hitler, victory over Germany, Japan's defeat, homecoming of heroes, traitor trials, unity of China, etc. Scientific stories are the atomic bomb and possible effects of atomic power, radar and the secret weapon No. 2, radio operated fuse for projectiles. Lighter events cover sports and photographs of the year and oddities in the news. Kaleidoscopically presented, full of facts. Index to year." (Library J) The volume "was prepared with the co-operation of the editors . . . of the International News Service, King Features Syndicate, and International News Photos." (Publisher's note)

Reviewed by T. A. Reynolds

Book Week p12 My 26 '46 550w

Booklist 42:363 J1 15 '46

Foreign Affairs 25:335 Ja '47 20w

Kirkus 14:191 Ap 15 '46 110w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:483 Ap 1 '46 100w

Reviewed by F. S. Adams

N Y Times p7 Je 23 '46 250w

"More happened in 1945 than in almost any other year of world history, and we should presumably be grateful for any substantial book which adds to the record. But this volume is too frankly a distillation of journalism to be given high marks. . . The pictures deserve a word. A few of them are magnificent; the photograph of the first assaulting wave on Iwo Jima, for example." Allan Nevins

Sat R of Lit 29:25 J1 6 '46 400w

"The book abounds in news photographs, ranging from the Russian Army entering Leipzig to Shirley Temple nuzzling her new husband. Cartoons and maps are scattered hither and yon. In fact, you are to find almost anything from a little treatise on juvenile delinquency to a Parisian edict that American women don't take enough baths. Whether you will find what you are looking for is something else again; but at least you will have a pleasant time looking."

Weekly Book Review p8 J1 21 '46 220w

KINNAIRD, CLARK, ed. The real F.D.R.; with an introd. by Philip S. Foner. 122p $2.50 Citadel

B or 92 Roosevelt, Franklin Delano 45-6516

"An intimate close-up in pictures and anecdotes, with a factual record of his life and works." Subtitle

Cleveland Open Shelf p1 Ja '46

"For a hastily assembled memorial volume, this one is uncommonly well done, largely because it does not try to do too much. . . The book shows appreciation, sympathy and dignity."

+ Weekly Book Review p16 S 16 '45 180w

KINSLEY, PHILIP. Chicago tribune; its first hundred years; v 2, 1865-1880. 349p il $3 Chicago tribune, 1 S Dearborn st, Chicago

071.73 Chicago tribune (43-7191)

"This is Volume II of the history of the Chicago Tribune. The first volume, published in May of 1943 [Book Review Digest 1943] . . . carried the Tribune's history through the Civil War and into the period of its stability and maturity as a newspaper. . . In the present volume the story is continued from the death of Lincoln to 1880." Pref

Reviewed by B. L. Pierce

Am Hist R 52:147 O '46 700w

"It is unfortunate that the book is so lacking in focus. The Tribune has been and still is a powerful force in American life. Regardless of one's attitude toward its policies, it is a newspaper that merits a far more profound and penetrating study and analysis than is given in this volume." M. M. Willey

KINSLEY, PHILIP—Continued

— Ann Am Acad 246:168 J1 '46 320w

Reviewed by Louis Filler

Nation 162:292 Mr 9 '46 210w

New Yorker 21:90 Ja 12 '46 200w

Reviewed by H. P. Stokes

Sat R of Lit 29:30 Ap 20 '46 900w

Reviewed by F. L. Mott

Weekly Book Review p20 My 5 '46 1400w

KISHORE, PENINA. Towelina; drawings by Roberta Pafin. [39p] $1.25 Greenberg

Pictures and story describe Trudy's making of a doll out of an old Turkish towel, four clothespins, some yarn and paint. For ages six to nine.

"The story of 'Towelina' has that rare and satisfying tug to the heartstrings which means that while she was writing it Penina Kishore remembered just how it feels to love a doll very dearly." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p15 Mr 10 '46 150w

Booklist 42:267 Ap 15 '46

KISSIN, RITA. Gramp's desert chick; pictures by Sari. [32p] $2 Reynal

Picture story book about a gentle old man who lived alone on the desert, and what happened to the egg he brought home from the store. For ages four to seven.

"Rita Kissin's story is an endearing one and carries considerable information about little-known animals. The effective pictures by Sari have a real desert flavor." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p14 My 26 '46 230w

Reviewed by E. T. Dobbins

Library J 71:7058 Ag '46 80w

"Not recommended. Very flimsy binding."

K. H. McAlarney

— Library J 71:1058 Ag '46 70w

KIVER, MILTON S. Television simplified. 375p $4.75 Van Nostrand

621.388 Television

46-1194

"Companion volume to author's U.H.F. Radio Simplified [Book Review Digest, 1945]. Principles and practice of television. Handbook explaining television receivers in simple language, without mathematics. Directions for trouble shooting and repairing television equipment. Covers color television, frequency modulation and related subjects." (Library J) Glossary of television terms. Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 70:1136 D 1 '45 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:14 Ja '46

"Persons interested in the subject in more than a general way will find 'Television Simplified' of considerable value. Although the text is not burdened with involved technical theory, it does, necessarily, use to advantage mathematics and diagrams in elucidating a subject that must seem forbidding to many. Non-technically trained readers seeking a simple explanation of television will have to look elsewhere. For radio servicemen, television workers, set owners and others concerned with the present and future of the field, however, Mr Kiver's book is authoritative, clear and satisfactory as a handbook." F. P.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 F 6 '46 240w

"It is a useful and reliable basic volume for the engineer or studio technician exploring video broadcasting and it can be studied profitably by the television executive seeking to complement his general information with technical essentials." A. W. Bernsohn

+ Theatre Arts 30:369 Je '46 50w

"Presents the principles of the art, and their applications in television receivers, in a practical and interesting way. It is intended particularly to aid radio service men, already familiar with sound receivers, in the understanding of television sets so that they may take care of these as well." James Stokley

+ Weekly Book Review p30 Mr 31 '46 100w

KIVIAT, ESTHER. Paji; pictures by Harold Price. (Whittlesey house publication) 56p $2 McGraw

46-3698

Paji was a young Ceylonese wood carver who got so bored with carving elephants and nothing else that he ran away. In the jungle temple, with only his bullock for company, Paji carved such beautiful things that he won a prize when he returned home. Grades four to six.

"The pictures, done in wonderful tones of brown and green, lend a jungle touch to the book. A grand book to read, to look at, to own."

+ Book Week p23 Je 2 '46 200w

"An appealing story greatly enhanced by unusual, fine illustrations in appropriate colors." Booklist 42:303 My 15 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 J1 '46

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 22:268 J1 '46 80w

"An exceedingly good juvenile . . . as well as fine background material for libraries and schools."

+ Kirkus 14:149 Mr 15 '46 160w

"A real contribution to stories of children in other lands, especially for eight- to ten-year-old readers. Illustrations by Harold Price are vivid in color and have a delightful touch of humor." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 71:763 My 15 '46 80w

"If the story strains one's credulity a bit at the end it is an appealing one, with its atmosphere of Ceylon and the feeling it gives of a real little boy. The pictures are right and lovely." Phyllis Fenner

+ — N Y Times p36 Ap 14 '46 130w

"An informative and entertaining story for six to 10-year-olds, illustrated with attractive drawings by Harold Price." P. P. R.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 9 '46 180w

+ Weekly Book Review p10 My 19 '46 300w

KLEEMAN, MRS RITA (SULZBACHER) HALLE, Young Franklin Roosevelt; il by Lawrence Dresser. 191p $2.25 Messner

B or 92 Roosevelt, Franklin Delano—Juvenile literature 46-6452

Story of the boyhood of Franklin Roosevelt, with a few chapters on his later life. The writer is the author of Gracious Lady (Book Review Digest 1935) the biography of Franklin Roosevelt's mother, and some of the stories in the present book were told the author by the elder Mrs Roosevelt. For boys and girls.

Kirkus 14:126 Mr 1 '46 40w

"Written by a friend of the Roosevelt family, this biography of F. D. R. for the fourth and fifth grades is good in its recital of small incidents and background of the great President's childhood. Much of the material is not available elsewhere. However an inept style and a too sweet tone make it difficult reading for children who like a spark of devilry in their heroes." Gweneira Williams

+ — Library J 71:1720 D 1 '46 90w

"It gives an excellent picture of the broad cultural and social background which he enjoyed, and of the careful and wise training which helped to mold his personality. . . . Certain portions seem a trifle Parson Weemsish, but in general it is a logical as well as interesting account of the boyhood of a man destined to greatness. The last few chapters, which attempt to survey his adult life, are thin and commonplace." R. A. Brown

+ — N Y Times p18 S 8 '46 230w

Reviewed by K. S. White

New Yorker 22:146 D 7 '46 90w

Reviewed by Thomas Jefferson
San Francisco Chronicle p2 N 10 '46
100w

"This is an interesting book. It is, perhaps, too informal to be called a biography. It is a story, well informed and fully authenticated, of the childhood, boyhood, and youth of a great American. Young people, reading it, will recognize well-known characteristics that appeared early in his life." M. C. Dodd

+ Sat R of Lit 29:68 N 9 '46 180w

"That it does not spill over into sentimentality is to its credit; the book is one that children will read and older people use for background material." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p7 S 1 '46 270w

KLEIN, GAY T. Starting right with turkeys; ed. by Ed Robinson. 129p il $2.50 Macmillan
636.592 Turkeys Agr46-7

Easy-to-follow instructions for the beginner who wants to raise turkeys. Contains information on breeding, feeding, diseases, killing, dressing, and marketing. Illustrated with diagrams and photographs. Index.

Booklist 42:313 Je 1 '46

"A much needed and very satisfactory book on raising turkeys on a small scale."

+ Kirkus 14:89 F 15 '46 150w

"As turkeys have the reputation among many farmers of being able and even determined to die in more different ways than anything else in feathers, this practical guide to keeping them not only alive but robust makes a lively opening volume for this firm's new 'Have More Plan' Reference Library of country life."

+ Weekly Book Review p13 Je 2 '46 100w
Wis Lib Bul 42:112 Jl '46

KLEIN, PAUL EUGENE, and MOFFITT, RUTH EMILIE. Counseling techniques in adult education. 185p $2 McGraw

371.42 Personnel service in education. Education of adults. Counseling 46-3801

"[This] is intended as guide and source book for teachers, administrators, and counselors in adult-education programs. While the major emphasis is on the school situation, the suggestions presented may be used by anyone counseling adults—Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. workers, church and social-agency staffs, counselors of veterans, industrial workers, and the like. For the student of adult education and counseling, it should provide an introduction to this field." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 42:360 Jl 15 '46

"Here is a handbook ready for immediate and practical service in the field of counseling. It is not too much to recommend it as a source book and manual indispensable for those who wish to employ the results of both experimentation and experience in the realization of their guidance objectives. The peculiar merit of this volume is its pertinence in the difficult area known as adult education." C. D. Champ-lin

+ School R 54:620 D '46 1150w

School & Society 63:320 Ap 27 '46 40w

KLEMPNER, JOHN. Letter to five wives. 204p $2.50 Scribner

46-1554

Addie Joss, a charming divorcee, sends a note to a group of five women, her "friends" and companions in the good works of the community, a note in which she taunts them with the threat that the husband of one of them is about to succumb to her wiles and elope with her. The story reveals why each of the five believes she may be the one to be robbed.

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock

Book Week p18 F 24 '46 320w

Booklist 42:248 Ap 1 '46

Kirkus 14:41 F 1 '46 200w

"It is an interesting tour de force, exploiting feminine cattiness and masculine vulnerability. Though the finale is a little flat, the suspense is well sustained and the total entertaining." Barbara Bond

+ N Y Times p28 Mr 3 '46 140w

"The story is well conceived and finely executed. Suspense mounts tensely for the reader as well as for each wife, for it is obvious that this polite comedy is to be real tragedy for at least one of the five. John Klemmner's treatment of the unusual but plausible situation proposed is surgical, incisive, and clever." J. P. Wood

+ Sat R of Lit 29:15 Mr 16 '46 550w

"Mr. Klemmner delineates the characters of the five wives with an almost feminine sharpness. There is a touch of the Dorothy Parker in him. His narrative is swiftly paced, his dialogue witty and biting. All the action takes place in the one afternoon. The ending is a surprise one but entirely credible. It's a clever and mature story, cleverly and maturely told." Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p2 F 17 '46 600w

KLENKE, WILLIAM WALTER. Candlemaking. 80p il $2 Manual arts

665.1 Candles

46-6889

"Mr. Klenke introduces us to every aspect of candle-making in the five divisions—starting with how candles burn and including waxes and formulas, scented candles, hand-dipped candles, wax for coloring, candles in composition, and many other subjects—all made understandable through the 62 drawings and photographs of candles—plain and novel—in process and completed." School arts

Booklist 43:96 D 1 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '46

Library J 71:1052 Ag '46 40w

"Right in tune with the approaching holiday season comes this new book on candlemaking, by William Klenke. Here's a chance for your pupils to double their enjoyment of candle decorations by making them—starting with such simple equipment as kitchen gelatin molds—building to the more complicated forms as skills increase—as they're sure to do, for this is a craft of ever-increasing fascination, and when they see the many seasonal decorations that they can create, candlemaking may become a life-long hobby."

+ School Arts 46:1 O '46 150w

KLING, SAMUEL G. Your legal rights; a layman's handbook of law. (New Home lib) 336p 69c Blakiston

347 Law—Compends

45-8483

"After some general advice on when and how to choose a lawyer, with information as to the fees usually charged, this book takes up thirteen subjects on which knowledge of legal matters may be called for: Marriage and divorce, Parent and child relationships, Personal property, Contracts, Agency, Sales, Insurance, Criminal law, Landlord and tenant, Partnership, Torts, and Wills. Under each of these, following a brief introductory summary, the question and answer method is followed." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 42:130 D 15 '45

"Both the general reader and the practicing lawyer will find much of interest here."

+ Spring'd Republican p6 S 4 '45 80w

Wis Lib Bul 42:43 Mr '46

KLUTCH, M. S. Mr. 2 of everything. [32p] il $1.50 Coward-McCann

46-7312

"This is about a man who, when he bought anything, always bought another just like it. This was not only provision of a spare: he wore two ties, two shirts and managed—even the picture can't quite turn this trick—to wear two pairs of shoes at once. His son, who disapproved of two houses to live in with two dogs in front of each, tried a series of ingenious tricks to convince him that this habit was, as Artemus Ward expressed it, '2 mutch.'" Weekly Book Review

KLUTCH, M. S.—Continued

"A likable, laughable story, good to read with the 5 to 10-year olds." Martha King
+ Book Week p11 O 13 '46 100w

"Some children will think it good fun. I think it just silly."

Kirkus 14:295 J1 1 '46 110w

"Finding a new book with characters drawn by Kurt Wiese is like meeting relatives of old friends, for these have the same easy-going, homey appearance that make his people real and lovable. In his portrayal of Mr. 2 of Everything and his family he shows once again his skill in blending the apparently serious with the ridiculous." Lois Palmer
+ N Y Times p48 D 1 '46 110w

Reviewed by K. S. White
New Yorker 22:132 D 7 '46 60w

Reviewed by Leone Garvey
San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 10 '46 150w

"A good story enlivened by Kurt Wiese's amusing drawings."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:44 N 9 '46 50w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p8 O 6 '46 110w

KNAPP, SALLY ELIZABETH. New wings for women. 179p il $2.50 Crowell

926.29 Women in aeronautics. Woman—Biography 46-6736

Biographical sketches of thirteen women well-known in aviation. Contents: Teddy Kenyon; Pauline Gower; Lois Coots Tonkin; Nancy Love; Maxine Miles; Ellen Church; Helen Harrison; Caroline Iverson; Ethel Colwell; Valentina Grizodubova; Helen Montgomery; Phoebe Omlie; Isabel Ebel. For girls in the twelve-to-sixteen-year age group.

Booklist 43:104 D 1 '46

Kirkus 14:595 D 1 '46 100w

"Not an overall history of women in aviation. Readable, conversational style. Balanced attitude concerning the future of women in aviation with some vocational value since it shows the types of jobs women occupy in this field." Eleanor Kidder

+ Library J 71:1336 O 1 '46 80w

"The biographical sketches that make up her book have the thrill of pioneering, and they skillfully point the way for girls who may themselves want aviation careers. Although prejudices against women in aviation have been battered, if not beaten, the author's good-humored account of the struggle should excite any reader who has an ounce of spirit, whether she is air-minded or not." Mary Elting

+ N Y Times p30 O 6 '46 180w

Sat R of Lit 29:69 N 9 '46 60w

"Young girls whose distant dream is to take an active part in aviation will regard this book with impassioned interest. To those of their elders who still think aviation has room for women only on the side-lines, it will be a rapid eye-opener." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 S 29 '46 470w

KNAUTH, PERCY. Germany in defeat. 233p $2.75 Knopf

943.086 Germany—History—Allied occupation, 1945- 46-3053

"Life and Time foreign correspondent's report on conditions in Germany immediately following Allied victory. . . [Contains] descriptions of Buchenwald; destruction of Frankfurt, Nuremberg, Berlin; German armies on the march (in reverse); Germans of high social sense crying democracy from so deeply imbedded Nazi convictions that they themselves do not realize their inconsistency; relationship of Hitler with his people, his co-workers, with Eva Braun; the bombing of July 20, 1944 and Hitler's death." (Library J) No index.

Reviewed by Ralph Peterson

Book Week p4 My 5 '46 500w

Booklist 42:296 My 15 '46

Christian Science Monitor p16 Je 13 '46 550w

Foreign Affairs 25:343 Ja '47 50w

Kirkus 14:140 Mr 15 '46 170w

"Highly articulate and forceful descriptions. . . Recommended for all libraries." J. M. Brittan

+ Library J 71:584 Ap 15 '46 130w

"Percy Knauth . . . is endowed with a keen sense of the essentials of character, and gives his sympathy freely where he feels sympathy is deserved. His understanding of men, especially of those who suffer, is his strength as a writer. . . The weak points of the book lie in the drawing of general conclusions from concrete personal observation." Herman Ebeling

+ Nation 163:78 J1 20 '46 490w

"'Germany in Defeat' is surely one of the best books of its kind; it makes one see and it makes one think; that is a hard combination to beat." Theodore Draper

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 28 '46 1150w

"The book is earnestly written, but there's not much in it that hasn't been said before."

New Yorker 22:90 Ap 27 '46 70w

San Francisco Chronicle p13 J1 7 '46 160w

"There was so much to see, hear, and learn in newly liberated camps that those of us who entered Buchenwald, for instance, before any of its wounds could be healed realize that one person alone cannot tell the full story, and some day a symposium of the reports of American eye-witnesses should be published. But Percy Knauth's report on Buchenwald and its implications is the most thorough and illuminating I have seen in any book since I returned from duty overseas." Sigrid Schultz

+ Sat R of Lit 29:34 Ap 27 '46 1000w

"Percy Knauth, who traveled up and down Germany close on the heels of the invading American armies, has given us the best picture which has yet been published of the aftermath of defeat in that country. I recommend it to all those who wish to get the atmosphere of the Germany of those days. . . The book is a judicious mixture of easy-going narrative and penetrating analysis of political and social conditions in Germany. It is based on real understanding of the German character and personal acquaintance with Germans in various walks of life. . . In addition to his keen observation of the German people among their material and spiritual ruins, there are many items of real historical interest. He witnessed Kesselring's surrender in the West and tells us as much as is to be known today of what happened to the Fuehrer in his underground shelter in the Reich's Chancellery. A most important contribution is made to the history of the last days of the Third Reich in the detailed account of what took place in Hitler's headquarters on July 20, 1944, when the bomb was thrown." A. W. Dulles

+ Survey G 35:168 My '46 750w

"In 'Germany in Defeat' [Knauth] shows himself as a keener observer than many of his colleagues. For it was not the physical destruction of the towns and cities that attracted his attention but the moral ruin of the German people, who, unfortunately, he says, learned few lessons during the war years. As a story of what the German people were thinking about as they looked at the ruins about them, 'Germany in Defeat' is a fine contribution to a story that Americans should know and remember in the years to come. If it is hastily told, it is carefully documented. And the reader begins to understand the importance of the problems of occupation against a background of Buchenwald, Berchtesgaden and Berlin, all of which Mr. Knauth saw last spring and summer." Walter Kerr

+ Weekly Book Review p5 My 5 '46 650w

KNICKERBOCKER, WILLIAM SKINKLE, ed. Twentieth century English. 460p $5 Philosophical lib.

420.4 English language. Literature 46-6062

Symposium on modern writing, by over thirty writers or instructors in English in colleges or secondary schools. Partial contents: The crisis in modern literature, by C. F. Strauch; Poetry and science, by C. I. Glicksberg; The future of poetry, by Louise Pound; The revolt against positivism in recent European literary scholarship, by René Wellek; The origin and nature of speech, by L. A. White; Idle fears about basic English, by I. A. Richards; Designations for colored folk, by H. L. Mencken; Parents, it's your fault, by N. E. Orchard; On Bokys for to rede, by S. A. Nock; Seniors plan a basic library for high-school graduates, by I. W. Miles; You can't write writing, by Wendell Johnson; A note on the writer's craft, by John Erskine; The word and the fact, by Archibald MacLeish; The five master terms, by Kenneth Burke; Literary pattern as a graph of social evolution, by Frederika Blankner; The meaning of the 'new criticism,' by W. J. Ong; The new criticism and scholarship, by Cleanth Brooks; Shakespeare, by W. S. Knickerbocker.

"Thirty-seven authors take part in the discussion . . . and the majority have some interesting things to say."

New Yorker 22:79 Je 29 '46 40w

School & Society 63:448 Je 22 '46 20w

"The chief value of the book is that it is a collaborative effort; the editor, however, has underscored the significance of each of the essays by his arrangement and by his demonstrated opinion that each is an essential part of the larger picture."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:177 S '46 210w

"A volume not easy to place. Not that the book lacks interest or value. The point is that its values are of varying order; that those writing are working on such different levels of seriousness and sophistication that one has difficulty in forecasting its precise audience. Many readers will react gratefully to Norris E. Orchard's hints on how painlessly to steer the American school child out of the Saturday double-feature into at least a bowing acquaintance with English letters and the Bible. They will enjoy Walter Prichard Eaton's pleasant comments on the falling reservoir of material accessible to the modern dramatist, and smile over John Erskine's witty 'A Note on the Writer's Craft.' They will gain considerable light from Francis P. Chisholm's discussion of semantics in the teaching of reading. . . . But the general reader, for whom the volume is said to be intended along with teachers and writers, may find himself in deep water as he approaches the 'new criticism.'" Frances Witherspoon

+ Weekly Book Review p12 Jl 7 '46 500w

KNIGHT, CHARLES ROBERT. Life through the ages; il. by [the author]. 66p $2 Knopf 560 Paleontology—Juvenile literature 46-262
Accurate pencil drawings and brief text describe prehistoric animal life and some present day descendants. Junior and senior high schools.

Booklist 42:230 Mr 15 '46

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 22:211 My '46 80w

"A rather studied style in a kind of classic museum catalogue manner uses vocabulary beyond the 12 year level, while the picture book shape and format suggests even younger readers. The book's value will be largely for the museum-wise youngster in a large city where a natural history museum is a goal for young visitors. Libraries and schools will find the photographically accurate pictures valuable for reference."

Kirkus 14:37 Ja 15 '46 180w

"Recommended for public and school libraries." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 71:281 F 15 '46 70w

N Y Times p18 Mr 31 '46 70w

"The pictures with a graphic text for each fill a slim book which will interest a little child and satisfy older boys and girls. It is another example of a book that shows how well authors and artists have learned to take advantage of the sources that science has put at their disposal." M. C. Dodd

+ Sat R of Lit 29:45 My 18 '46 230w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p7 Jl 21 '46 320w

KNIGHT, CLAYTON. Quest of the golden condor; il. by [the author]. 346p $2.50 Knopf

46-2360

Two American boys and their father go to Peru to secure the Golden Condor of the Incas for a museum. They have many adventures, including a plane crash, and an encounter with thieves, but eventually they reach the ancient Inca citadel, and are successful in their quest. For older boys and girls.

Booklist 42:320 Je 1 '46

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 22:270 Jl '46 80w

"An unusual setting in the Inca ruins of the west coast of South America helps to make this an interesting adventure story."

+ Kirkus 14:150 Mr 15 '46 140w

"Natural dialogue and plot well integrated." Gertrude Andrus

+ Library J 71:589 Ap 15 '46 100w

"Mr. Knight writes uneasily at first, but warms to his work; the final chapters are packed with excitement and lighted by the splendor of the high Andean scene." Alden Hatch

+ N Y Times p27 My 12 '46 180w

"This is an excellent, fast-moving adventure story. The characters are alive and colorful, and the background convincing. Mr. Knight has made the most of his knowledge of Peru. It is a bit disappointing not to learn what happened to the great, kind Negro Jim, or to know whether or not the appealing Juan Callelo ever recovered. The main plot, however, is resolved to the reader's entire satisfaction." R. A. Hill

+ Sat R of Lit 29:43 Je 15 '46 400w

Wis Lib Bul 42:116 Jl '46

KNIGHT, CLIFFORD. Affair of the corpse escort. 217p $2 McKay

46-18353

Detective story.

"Confusing in its wanderings among tenses and personal pronouns." Elizabeth Bullock

— Book Week p5 Ag 4 '46 140w

N Y Times p26 Jl 21 '46 70w

"With Knight's usual excellence at locale and some amusing Hollywood gags, this is one of his more entertaining books; but I've yet to see that Rogers has any function as a detective beyond sitting around for 70,000 words and then bluntly accusing a man who kindly confesses." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Jl 21 '46 50w

"Run-of-the-mill."

Sat R of Lit 29:28 Jl 20 '46 20w

"With a plot like that, Mr. Knight probably does all that is humanly possible to carry on. His initial idea seems to have been a screwball story based upon the apparent truth that anything can happen in Hollywood, but he lets it go after Professor Huntoon Rogers, learned amateur, appears on the scene." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p16 Jl 21 '46 160w

KNIGHT, KATHLEEN MOORE. Trouble at Turkey hill. 220p $2 Doubleday

46-3160

Detective story.

Booklist 42:283 My 1 '46

"This is more of a mystery-thriller than last season's Stream Sinister [Book Review Digest, 1945], but once again Kathleen Knight spins her yarn out of characters and setting. This time it is a story of violent death on 'Penberthy Island' (it might be Martha's Vineyard) off New Bedford; a story of a clutter of suspects, all with cause and opportunity; and of an elderly school teacher and the local sheriff playing Sherlock Holmes."

Kirkus 14:113 Mr 1 '46 60w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p40 Ap 14 '46 120w

KNIGHT, K. M.—Continued

"Well worked out, but readers who have been conditioned to Miss Knight's recent Latin-American thrillers may have some trouble in adjusting themselves to this return to her earlier, or wai-I-swan, phase."

+ New Yorker 22:119 Ap 13 '46 130w

"Readable."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:36 Je 15 '46 40w

Spring'd Republican p4d Ap 14 '46 170w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p22 Ap 7 '46 140w

KNORR, KLAUS EUGEN. World rubber and its regulation. 265p $3 Food research inst.

338.47678 Rubber industry and trade A45-5353

"An expert monograph on the economics of the rubber-producing industry primarily in its international aspects. Attention is given to the influence of the synthetic rubber industry and to problems of American policy." (Foreign Affairs) Annotated bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Knorr's book should be 'must' reading for those who are in any way responsible for formulating this country's rubber policy. He has provided a back drop of the world rubber problem of which this country's problem is but a part, though an important one. He has sketched the general direction in which we must go if we are to live up to the Good Neighbor policy without sacrificing our own vital security needs. At a few points the book is slightly repetitive and at times the style is a bit heavy. But these are only minor defects in a work that is otherwise thoroughly scholarly." H. S. Piquet

+ — Am Econ R 36:181 Mr '46 2500w

Reviewed by J. W. Robinson

Am Pol Sci R 40:392 Ap '46 380w

"This book is a greatly needed and timely contribution to worth-while rubber literature. . . Plenty of food for thought here—for those whose recommendations will some day be coldly appraised by other writers." E. G. Holt

+ Ann Am Acad 245:200 My '46 500w

"The author has included considerable information on the growing and preparation of natural rubber and on the chemicals and processes used for producing synthetic rubber. This information serves as useful background. The author, however, is far more adept and at home in discussing questions in economics than chemistry." H. L. Fisher

+ — Chem & Eng N 24:563 F 25 '46 600w

Foreign Affairs 24:563 Ap '46 40w

Reviewed by O. D. Hargis

Geog R 37:171 Ja '47 900w

"Timely, scholarly book." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 71:825 Je 1 '46 60w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:36 Mr '46 270w

KNOTTS, RAYMOND, pseud. See Volk, G.

KNOX, JOHN. Christ the Lord; the meaning of Jesus in the early church. 146p $1.75 Willett

232 Jesus Christ—Person and offices 45-11302

The lectures given at Colgate-Rochester Divinity school in April, 1944, on the Ayer foundation. In them the author gives "the character of the gospels and the major facts of Jesus' career that survive criticism (lecture 1); Jesus' view of the kingdom of God and the son of man (lecture 2); the character and content of his ethic (lecture 3); the earliest experience of the resurrection as an event constitutive of the church and its faith in the Lord (lecture 4); the developing formulations of Christology and soteriology (lecture 5, 6)." (Crozer Q) Bibliography. Index.

"This little book combines accurate scholarship, which frankly accepts the conclusions of such scholarship, with a genuine devotion to the Lord and Saviour as revealed in the New Testament and the life of the church." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 160:15 Mr 15 '46 300w

"The style is everywhere clear and forceful; the method faithfully follows the canons of current scholarship; the conclusions are judicious and convincing. My chief disappointment lies in the failure of the volume to fulfill the promise of the subtitle, and to maintain the perspective adopted in the introduction. . . Only in the last chapter, in the discussion of sin and salvation, does Professor Knox move into the genuine milieu of apostolic experience. And here he writes with penetration and warmth. Elsewhere academic analysis displaces the existential concern that alone can make the event (i.e., Jesus Christ) an intelligible and redemptive reality for us." P. S. Minear

+ — Crozer Q 23:284 Jl '46 400w

KNOX, RONALD ARBUTHNOTT. God and the atom. 166p $2 (7s 6d) Sheed

239 Religion and science. Atomic power 46-762

"What science has discovered must be brought into fruitful relation with what religion knows of God, Mr Knox submits in his profound yet simple discussion. He fears that man may come to feel he has taken his destinies into his own hands, 'who knows with what appalling results?' He feels that faith now has readjustments to make at a greater depth, with charity more obviously needed than ever, if this terrifying new power is not to be used for destruction of the world. Msgr Knox, for the first time since he began a vast task of translating scripture, has interrupted it to write this book. Aside from its destructive qualities, he also wonders to what other uses atomic energy may be put. Perhaps the greatest danger of all, he fears, is that it may shoot us back, unprepared, into the vortex of prosperity, by manifesting the same capacities for making people comfortable as it has for making them uncomfortable. His appeal is to the individual conscience." (Spring'd Republican) No index.

"Most people probably would enjoy reading this book. It is written by an unusually competent craftsman of the language, and one who is at once conversant and sympathetic with the plight of the average man. The translation of the New Testament from the Greek, which the author made not so long ago, won widespread acclaim. I have a suspicion that this work is also going to get a warm welcome." F. E. McMahon

+ Book Week p3 Ja 13 '46 600w

Cath World 163:281 Je '46 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '46

"Anyone who has read, aloud, or to themselves, Monsignor Knox's splendid new translation of the New Testament, will have realized that he is a great master of English prose. Few living authors are such craftsmen, turning a sentence as though mind were lathe, paring off the superfluous, adding the final, slightly strange chip that gives a tang, like herb-mustard to meat. But his 'God and the Atom' starts off as higher journalism, goes on to Belles-Lettres, and only towards the home stretch breaks into a good gallop as polemics, which unquestionably it should have been all along." Anne Fremantle

Commonweal 43:602 Mr 29 '46 750w

Foreign Affairs 25:338 Ja '47 50w

"It is a book which may well be recommended to those of whatever faith whose convictions have been shaken by the catastrophic ushering in of the atomic age."

+ Kirkus 14:102 F 15 '46 170w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 2 '46 140w

Reviewed by C. E. M. Joad

New Statesman & Nation 31:50 Ja 19 '46 1150w

"The political significance of the atomic bomb is being illumined, or at least fully discussed, in every journal. The deeper problem of its religious significance has not yet been dealt with very adequately. Monsignor Knox's lucid, simple and yet profound analysis is therefore most welcome. It must have been written in a hurry, but it reveals no signs of haste. The author is evidently drawing upon some profound thought on the meaning of human existence which he has been able to make relevant to the immediate issue." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ N Y Times p4 F 3 '46 1100w

"If on occasion his style ceases to be brilliant and becomes first bright and then jaunty; if, and especially in the second chapter, his historical data are defective and his argument little better than special pleading; and if in the last resort his book gives us instead of a synthesis (or even a 'sublimation') an appeal for saintliness; even so, it remains a fine and timely and searching piece of work." C. E. Raven

+ — Spec 175:598 D 21 '45 650w
Spring'd Republican p6 Ja 16 '46 250w

KOCHER, PAUL HAROLD. Christopher Marlowe; a study of his thought, learning, and character. 344p $3.50 Univ. of N.C. press

B or 92 Marlowe, Christopher 46-25252
"An interpretation, based on 'all the biographical evidence of his thought,' of Marlowe as a highly subjective playwright, with particular emphasis on religion as the core of his thought and feeling." (Theatre Arts) Index.

"[This work] will enhance the reputation which Dr. Kocher has already made for himself as an authority on Marlowe. Parts of the material here presented have appeared in one or another of the scholarly journals, but they are now so expertly welded into the context that no rough joints are visible. The book is a shapely whole." S. C. C

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 17 '46 420w

Reviewed by Kappo Phelan

Commonweal 44:462 Ag 23 '46 110w

"This is a valuable book for the background of Marlowe's thought; it is not concerned with the baffling detective story of his life, and does not I think recognize the influence of that on his work." William Empson

Nation 163:444 O 19 '46 1000w

"The author seems to shun a showdown. One respects him for his integrity, but one believes that a man who has done so much excellent research is entitled to make a few inspired guesses without hedging on them. Even so, his book should be highly valued as a reservoir of information regarding the intellectual milieu in which Marlowe lived." Alexander Cowie

+ — N Y Times p29 S 8 '46 600w

Theatre Arts 30:495 Ag '46 50w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:172 S '46 270w

"Every future biographer of Marlowe must take account of Dr. Kocher's researches and of his argument; and his study is, more broadly, of significance for the historian of the conflict between the medieval heritage and the 'new' science in the period of the Renaissance. As such, the book may be recommended not merely to students of our old drama but to every one interested in the history of ideas. It is written with vigor, clarity and grace." S. C. Chew

+ Weekly Book Review p18 O 6 '46 550w

"Professor Kocher has undertaken an ambitious task in attempting to probe the mind and character of Christopher Marlowe, and he has succeeded extraordinarily well in his deep experiment." H. T. E. Perry

+ Yale R n s 36:175 autumn '46 1100w

KOEHLER-BROMAN, MELA, II. See Smith, I. When grandma was a little girl.

KOESTLER, ARTHUR. Thieves in the night; chronicle of an experiment. 357p $2.75 (10s 6d) Macmillan

46-7678

Novel depicting life in Palestine during the years 1937 to 1939. The author has chosen as his protagonist a young man half English, half

Jewish, who gradually loses his sense of aloofness and becomes deeply involved in the attempts of his Jewish countrymen to resettle Palestine.

Reviewed by Helen Woodward

Book Week p27 N 10 '46 950w

Booklist 43:133 Ja 1 '47

"The characters and events are pushed around to fit a thesis. The element of fantasy, which saved Arrival and Departure is absent. Although the book is clever in exposition it does not, moreover, introduce anything particularly fresh into the discussion about Palestine." John Garrett

+ — Canadian Forum 26:234 Ja '47 800w

"The value of Koestler's book lies in his sincere efforts towards impartiality and in his excellent character vignettes." E. V. Kuehnelt-Leddihn

Cath World 164:375 Ja '47 700w

"Koestler cannot depict, project or traffic in personalities and the things of personality. His characters are very crude caricatures, or names alluded to, or minds and voices thinking and speaking the author's thoughts. But this is more or less irrelevant, for he has a live and discerning mind, an eloquent voice, intensity of feeling and adeptness at exposition; he could not write a dull book. So never mind his characters, never mind his novel—it was produced at white heat in lieu of a series of articles on Palestine." H. S. Tigner

+ — Christian Century 63:1470 D 4 '46 800w

"The first part [of the novel], dealing with the trials of the Jews in their pioneering, is dramatic and forceful, carrying the reader into the historical scene. The rest of the book is so strongly Zionist, despite the author's suspicion of most of his characters' motives, that it loses force as a novel and becomes a tract." + — Current Hist 11:512 D '46 100w

"Koestler has never been a popular author in the popular sense; the theme here is itself limiting; the market is therefore questionable."

Kirkus 14:355 Ag 1 '46 190w

"A book for all general libraries. It is Koestler's incisive mind at its best." Thelma Brackett

+ Library J 71:1465 O 15 '46 90w

"This is not a great novel, certainly not Mr. Koestler's best, but it is marked throughout by that acute analytical mind which makes him the most brilliant of those modern writers who try to diagnose the ills of our society. And its moving study of the Jewish character challenges the best in literature from Shylock to Hyman Kaplan." J. M. D. P.

Manchester Guardian p3 O 25 '46 360w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling

Nation 163:530 N 9 '46 1950w

"It is as a reporter that Koestler writes his most effective passages on the marching, enraged, leaderless Jews of Jerusalem and Tel-Aviv; but as a reporter with a sense of history, its tragedy and shame. But once he has done presenting the natural justification of violence and, turning political theoretician, begins to look for a higher justification, all sense and principle desert him." Isaac Rosenfeld

+ — New Repub 115:592 N 4 '46 1900w

"Thieves in the Night is not a well constructed novel, and its only plot is the intellectual development of the hero. The characters are types—brilliantly sketched, but still types; and the philosophic argument is illustrated in a series of static scenes. This strengthens the impression that it is a piece of reporting which can fairly be discussed on its merits as a picture of Jewish life in Palestine. On my second reading I barely resisted the temptation to underline inaccuracies and examples of one-sided reporting as though Thieves in the Night were a newspaper story or a propaganda pamphlet. . . . As a work of art Thieves in the Night fails because emotion is recollected in agony, and doubt in self-torture. But it is a magnificent failure, an immensely exciting and an important book, which is worth a dozen minor literary successes." R. H. S. Crossman

+ — New Statesman & Nation 32:321 N 2 1400w

KOESTLER, ARTHUR—Continued

"While it lacks the straight dramatic impact of either 'Darkness at Noon' or 'Arrival and Departure,' it is an impressive and significant performance, not so much as a novel as through the heroic and terrible light it throws on the tragedy of modern Palestine." Richard Watts

+ N Y Times p1 N 3 '46 1550w

"In its study of social groups and political manifestations, the book is full of the psychological insights which are the only things that make history intelligible and the writing of it a humanistic art. 'Thieves in the Night' is not, and it hardly pretends to be, a first-rate contribution to literature, but it is one of the most valuable reports that have been written about the recent events of our bewildered and appalling period." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 22:125 N 15 '46 1500w

"'Thieves in the Night' is a bewildering book. It is a magnificent novel." Robert Pick

+ Sat R of Lit 29:12 N 2 '46 1100w

"Mr. Arthur Koestler's new and solid documentary novel, takes a deal of reading, is shocking, bitter, painful, informed—and as a work of art disappointing. But it comes pat to widen our view of one of the world's present most grievous troubles, the Jewish question in Palestine; and therefore, did its author's great fame not already ensure it general attention, it will be read far and wide and, it is hoped, with the care and afterthought which it merits." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 177:590 N 29 '46 650w

"Whatever his stand on the political issues, no open-minded reader of this story can fail to gain insight into the news that now comes from Palestine. The contribution of this beautiful and quietly assured novel, however, lies in its search into motives and strivings common to all humanity—deeper than any 'Jewish question' (or Arab question or British Empire question). Interest in the story and in the picture of Palestine Mr. Koestler offers makes this a hard book to put down; the depth and breadth of its portraits of human beings will make it equally hard to forget. It is spacious and powerful, the book of an intelligent and sensitive man looking out over wide horizons." Mary Ross

+ Survey G 35:412 N '46 1050w

Time 48:110 N 4 '46 800w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p517 O 26 '46 1150w

"The novel is more than a tale. Like 'The Grapes of Wrath' and similar works, it presents a piece of current history and seeks to persuade the reader to take a stand in the solution of a vast, tragic problem. From the days of 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' such attempts have usually failed as art to the extent they have succeeded as persuasion. Whether Mr. Koestler will persuade or not, his art has suffered but little. For with rare skill he has used the actual events of the last decade . . . as the motivating forces, and not merely as the background, in the development of the plot. And with even rarer skill—a skill which Dos Passos sometimes displays—these real events play the part of an interpretative chorus to the fictional drama, lighting up corridors of past history and sounding dooms to come." Marvin Lowenthal

+ Weekly Book Review p3 N 3 '46 2000w

"As vivid, dramatic, powerful reporting, this novel is highly effective. . . . But as a work of creative writing Thieves in the Night is as unsuccessful as it is successful as a political pamphlet. Its characters are wooden puppets spouting appropriate sentiments, never well-realized individuals." Orville Prescott

+ Yale R n s 36:380 winter '47 320w

KOHN, HANS. Prophets and peoples; studies in nineteenth century nationalism. 213p $2.50 Macmillan

320.15 Nationalism and nationality 46-3346

"Looking back with scholarly interest on the power of ideas expounded by powerful proponents, the author concludes that the age of nationalism they helped to foster has made division of mankind more pronounced. All the prophets he presents: John Stuart Mill for England, Michelet for France, Mazzini for Italy, Treitschke for Germany, Dostoevsky for Russia, passionately supported the ideal fatherland peculiar to each nation, and all admitted war might be necessary to attain that ideal. Extensively documented through notes, this book, which follows his Idea of Nationalism, is a well-condensed presentation of messages of nationalism these outstanding advocates offered their people." (Library J) Index.

"The right of national self-determination needs reexamination and redefinition. This study, like so many others by Professor Kohn, provides valuable background." W. T. R. Fox

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:1181 D '46 600w

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek

Ann Am Acad 246:147 J1 '46 400w

Reviewed by J. G. Kerwin

Book Week p3 Ap 28 '46 450w

Booklist 42:293 My 15 '46

"This book, dealing with the roots of the immediate past, is exceedingly timely. It is an authoritative study; not 'popular' and yet distinctly easy to read if one is willing to read to think rather than to kill time." B. M. O'Reilly

+ Cath World 163:374 J1 '46 550w

Christian Century 63:754 Je 12 '46 20w

Foreign Affairs 25:159 O '46 90w

"One of the true scholars of our time, Professor Kohn makes a distinguished contribution to both background and perspective."

+ Kirkus 14:29 Ja 15 '46 190w

"Recommended." Walter Hausdorfer

+ Library J 71:404 Mr 15 '46 140w

"Hans Kohn's book, though limited in scope, is a fine volume of sources for the student of nationalism." Denis Plimmer

New Repub 114:939 J1 1 '46 900w

"Dr. Kohn wisely refrains from devising blueprints for a world which is more 'national' than it was in Mill's time. His book defines the problem with admirable clarity and broad knowledge, thus taking the first and indispensable step toward its solution." Robert Strausz-Hupe

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 21 '46 1300w

"The author has adopted an interesting line of thought, but the subject calls for a more comprehensive treatment than he has given it."

New Yorker 22:111 My 18 '46 90w

"The plan of Professor Kohn's book is excellent. . . . The author's material, moreover, is anything but redundant. So much has been written vaguely and abstractly about romantic nationalism that it is refreshing to read something definite about the opinions held by Michelet and his friend Quinet at various times in their lives. . . . In spite of these merits, Prophets and Peoples is not the book it could and should have been, given the nature of the subject and the undoubted capacities of its author. Its faults may be explained in part by its self-imposed and otherwise commendable brevity, yet this explanation is hardly an excuse—as the reader may come to feel if this reviewer lists his chief objections." Jacques Barzun

+ Pol Sci Q 61:449 S '46 800w

Reviewed by A. M. Lee

Sat R of Lit 29:8 My 11 '46 900w

"Professor Kohn . . . writes as a scholar, but these are not cold and formal academic summaries of past history; they are open—and also indirect—pleas for rationality, for moderation, for liberty. And by liberty Professor Kohn means the old and possibly outmoded article, liberty according to Mill and Tocqueville—not the liberty that consists in the merging or sinking of the individual in a mass movement, in the nation or, although the point is not emphasized, in an international movement which detests heretics and suppresses doubters."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p504 O 19 '46 1450w

U S Quarterly Bk1 2:230 S '46 160w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard
Weekly Book Review p24 My 19 '46
700w.

KOLLWITZ, KAETHE (SCHMIDT). Kaethe Kollwitz; introd. by Carl Zigrosser. 26p pl $9 Buttner, H.

769.2 Engravings 46-21144

"Kaethe Kollwitz, who died last year in Germany, was one of the world's great contemporary masters of black-and-white. This book is a kind of memorial volume. The seventy-two illustrations, handsomely reproduced, range from 1897 to 1945, but the emphasis is on her four big cycles of lithographs—the Weavers, War, Peasants, and Death." New Yorker

Book Week p23 D 8 '46 90w

"It is grim stuff, for it is drawn from the depths of life's grimness. It is powerful, because she breathed into it her own compassion and she was a master craftsman. It is fitting that this new volume should contain an introduction by Carl Zigrosser, curator of prints at the Philadelphia Museum, an expert in his field and one who previously as director of the Weyhe Gallery had helped enthusiastically in bringing her work to the attention of the American art world. His selection of her work reproduced in the volume is admirable, giving a clear picture of all her techniques and her subject-matter and including many of her most significant examples." Howard Devree

+ N Y Times p7 D 15 '46 600w

"The text, by the Curator of Prints at the Philadelphia Museum, is thoughtful and authoritative."

+ New Yorker 22:118 O 26 '46 90w

Reviewed by W. E. Parkes

San Francisco Chronicle p18 D 5 '46
250w

KONEFSKY, SAMUEL J. Chief Justice Stone and the Supreme court; with a prefatory note by Charles A. Beard. 290p $3 Macmillan
347.99 U.S. Supreme court. Stone, Harlan Fiske 45-9618

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Reviewed by O P Field

Am Hist R 51:767 J1 '46 400w

"Professor Konefsky's book is well worth reading, although subject to some criticism, and it gives a striking illustration of the scholarship of a blind young man who came to this country at the age of eleven." W. F. Dodd

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:581 Je '46 850w

Reviewed by C. A. M. Ewing

+ Ann Am Acad 245:211 My '46 450w

"Mr. Konefsky has written an interesting book. It is hard to lay it down." Edwin Borchard

+ Columbia Law R 46:334 Mr '46 1400w

"Mr. Konefsky is concerned with the role of the constitutional judge. His purpose is to exemplify it in Mr. Chief Justice Stone, but in this he is only partly successful. His Stone, not entirely but for the most part, is visualized in terms of the authorized version of the Holmes-Brandeis hagiography. His book is more valuable as a history of the last few years than as a present prognosis. He gives a descriptive analysis of the course of constitutional development in the last twenty years. In spite of the claim on the dust cover that the book is written in 'lucid non-technical language' which will be 'welcomed by intelligent laymen,' lawyers can be grateful that Mr. Konefsky has studied with Professor Dowling in the Columbia Law School and writes within the law school tradition with an accuracy, a regard to the facts, and to the legal materials that will make his book useful to the profession." L. L. Jaffe

+ Harvard Law R 59:304 D '45 2150w

Reviewed by William Seagle

Nation 182:200 F 16 '46 650w

Reviewed by C. B. Swisher

New Eng Q 19:253 Je '46 700w

"Intensive knowledge of the court and its work is shown by Dr. Konefsky who writes in clear, nontechnical terms. . . The writer's thoughtful insight, philosophy and fidelity for research are illustrated on almost every page. Behind his painstaking work are two appealing circumstances: Dr. Konefsky, instructor in political science at Brooklyn College, is only 30 years old; in a foreword, he thanks American Red Cross workers for translating 'into Braille for me materials not otherwise available.'" Lewis Wood

+ N Y Times p39 My 5 '46 1100w

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:51 Mr '46 240w

"Mr. Konefsky's study does not pretend to be a full-dress one. It is rather in the nature of a preliminary analysis of Justice Stone's role and of the constitutional issues to which he has most effectively addressed himself. It is clear, intelligent, critical, and judicious. It reveals a firm grasp of the essential problems of judicial interpretation, a mastery of the tools of scholarship and criticism, an incisive critical acumen. It is one of the most valuable and illuminating monographs in this important field of the study of the democratic processes that has appeared for many years." H. S. Commager

+ Weekly Book Review p5 F 24 '46
1950w

Wis Lib Bul 42:84 Je '46

"Within the limits set by its pattern and purpose, this is an excellent job. It is not a biography and will not furnish the basis for future drama or motion picture. It is sober scholarship by a deep student of the subject, to be read and used in the main by others in the fields of law, history, and politics. Still it is to be hoped that the invitation on the dust cover to the 'intelligent laymen' will be accepted, because it is in truth written in 'lucid, nontechnical language,' and only the depth of the subject matter will discourage the reader." C. E. Clark

+ Yale R n s 35:564 spring '46 900w

KONVITZ, MILTON RIDVAS. On the nature of value; the philosophy of Samuel Alexander. 119p $2 King's crown press

121 Worth. Alexander, Samuel A46-963

Summary and criticism of the theories of value, of the late Samuel Alexander, a British philosopher, who was born in Australia in 1859 and died in 1938. Brief bibliography. No index.

Reviewed by Wendell Johnson

Book Week p12 Ap 28 '46 240w

"Alexander was a master of clear and orderly expression. The same cannot be said of Dr. Konvitz. His exposition of Alexander is in detail, often obscure, mixed with reinterpretation and even misinterpretation. . . some comments are irrelevant, a few unintelligible. Among these luxuriant tares it comes as a surprise to find any wheat, but it is there. In the last chapters he does effectively bring out the main features of Alexander's theory of value, the only part of his philosophy discussed." A. D. R.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 7 '46 180w

"Mr. Konvitz's discussion of the points, as originally settled by Alexander, cannot of course be summarized here. I can only reaffirm its limited merits and suggest how, once again, a worthy interest in a subject seems balked by a kind of unfamiliarity with it that 'technique' cannot cure. Mr. Konvitz has read his sources and other things besides, so that his work is a compound of strict technical exposition and free criticism or illustration of his own choosing." Jacques Barzun

Sat R of Lit 29:10 Ap 27 '46 700w

KOOP, THEODORE FREDERIC. Weapon of silence. 304p $3.50 Univ. of Chicago press 940.5405 World war, 1939-1945—Censorship.
U.S. Censorship, Office of A46-6173

Story of wartime civilian censorship during World War II, told by the assistant director of the Office of censorship. Index.

Current Hist 12:60 Ja '47 80w

Library J 71:1543 N 1 '46 20w

KOOP, T. F.—Continued

Reviewed by Gladwin Hill

N Y Times p6 Ja 5 '47 700w

"If the tone is somewhat partisan and uncritical (Director Byron Price and his staff seem to have been unique among Washington agencies in possessing no weaknesses) and the style less than enthralling the book is nonetheless valuable source material, well documented and indexed, on a highly successful operation. The sections on the voluntary censorship of press and radio are particularly interesting." A. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 D 8 '46 130w

KOOS, EARL LOMON. Families in trouble; with a pref. by Robert S. Lynd. 134p $2.25 King's crown press [11s 6d Oxford]

392 Social surveys New York (city)—Poor. Family A46-2902

A study of sixty-two low income families living in one block in New York city. "In this study the effort has been to concentrate upon all the troubles experienced by the family over a period of time. This approach was chosen because it appeared to offer the best opportunity for studying the family's experiences in toto." (p.1) Dr Koos won the confidence of both children and parents, in order to further his study, and includes many quotations and excerpts from interviews. No index.

"The author has utilized a research technique as yet not very highly developed. He devotes the entire first chapter to a detailed explanation of the method and technique used. This orients the reader to the entire study. The book is well written and holds the reader's attention from beginning to end. It should be read and carefully studied by every student of social problems and social work." T. E. Sullenger

+ Social Studies 37:375 D '46 300w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:325 D '46 270w

KOOS, LEONARD VINCENT. Integrating high school and college; the six-four-four plan at work. 208p il $3 Harper

3712 Junior colleges. Education, Secondary 46-4282

"A compilation of the opinions and attitudes of administrators, instructors, and students who have worked under the 6-4-4 plan, which supplies a total evaluation of this movement." (School & Society) Index.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Ag 4 '46 90w

Reviewed by J. S. Diekhoff
Sat R of Lit 29:28 S 14 '46 550w

School & Society 63:351 My 11 '46 50w

Reviewed by H. W. Marr
Spring'd Republican p6 Jl 9 '46 240w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:309 D '46 280w

KOPAL, ZDENEK. Introduction to the study of eclipsing variables. 220p $4 Harvard univ. press [22s 6d Oxford]

523.84 Stars, Double. Stars, Variable A46-3043

"Pairs of stars, rotating around their common center of gravity, cause, under favorable conditions, mutual eclipses which are revealed to an observer by a periodic change in brightness. These 'eclipsing binaries' are of great importance for the determination of masses and densities of stars. To this end their orbits must be determined by means of the observed variations of their light curve. The present book is an introduction to the mathematical theory of this very intricate subject." U S Quarterly Bkl

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:1715 D 1 '46 40w

"This monograph will undoubtedly form an important tool for the future study of this subject."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:254 S '46 170w

KOPMAN, HENRY HAZLITT. Wild acres; a book of the Gulf Coast country; foreword by John Kieran. 189p $3 Dutton

598.2 Birds—Louisiana. Birds—Mississippi 46-7203

Nature essays about the Mississippi delta country, especially its bird life.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p10 N 17 '46 50w
Booklist 43:83 N 15 '46

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds
Christian Science Monitor p11 D 21 '46 800w

"The seasonal changes, the migrations, changes in weather and scene, in a tranquil, picturesque country, recorded with appreciative affection."

+ Kirkus 14:473 S 15 '46 120w

"As it stands, the book will have a place in ornithological literature. It is valuable for its information and for its picture of the wild acres of a delta country. If its general observations had been bolstered more often with concrete examples and individual birds shown more often in sharp focus, the breadth of its appeal would have been immensely augmented." E. W. Teale

+ Weekly Book Review p12 O 27 '46 550w

Wis Lib Bul 42:163 D '46

KORFF, SERGE ALEXANDER. Electron and nuclear counters; theory and use. 212p $3 Van Nostrand

537.63 Electric discharges thru gases. Geiger-Müller counters 46-4117

"This book is designed for physicists and persons of similar scientific training who use electron and nuclear counters in research work. It discusses briefly the electrical phenomena of counters, and then deals individually with the principles and operating characteristics of ionization chambers, proportional counters, and Geiger counters. Practical and detailed directions are given for the construction of counters, and there is a long chapter on auxiliary electronic circuits. The correction of errors in counter results is discussed at some length. Extensive lists of references and a short list of manufacturers of counters and counter elements, are included." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"Useful and timely book. . . The chapter on electronic circuits is particularly well done. It covers all the more important functions which are required in nuclear work and gives extensive reference to specific papers and specialized monographs. This book is highly recommended to students and investigators in the field of nuclear physics or its manifold applications in chemistry, biology, and medicine." R. H. Müller

+ Chem & Eng N 24:2286 Ag 25 '46 450w

"This volume is a timely contribution for workers in nuclear physics and radiology. It gives an authoritative, simple, straightforward account of fundamental methods of measuring ionizing radiation." G. F. Kinney

+ Chem Eng 53:298 O '46 220w

Library J 71:346 Mr 1 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:24 Ap '46

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:258 S '46 240w

KOUES, HELEN (MRS S. LAWRENCE BODINE). How to choose, plan, and build your own house. 128p il pa $1.25 Tudor

728 Architecture, Domestic 46-25057

"Profusely illustrated book with suggestions rather than details. No prices are given, but most of the homes pictured are modest ones. For each house exterior and interior photographs are given, with floor plans and short notes on construction. Partial contents: The modern trend in architecture; Vacation houses; Pennsylvania, mid-South, and Florida types;

Ranch houses; Remodeling; Suiting the house to difficult sites; Attractive small houses.
Booklist

Booklist 42:223 Mr 15 '46

"Now that housing is prominent in the public mind, there should be wide interest in this practical book of plans, pictures and wise advice about home building."

+ Christian Century 63:369 Mr 20 '46 70w

"There's very superficial presentation—but there are a good many facets of the subject touched upon here that are usually omitted in such books,—stairs, windows, doorways, shutters, fences, etc."

Kirkus 14:123 Mr 1 '46 90w

Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 6 '46 300w

Reviewed by Richardson Wright

Weekly Book Review p8 Ap 14 '46 100w

KRAEMER, ELMER OTTO. Scientific progress in the field of rubber and synthetic elastomers; ed. by H. Mark and G. S. Whitby. (Advances in colloid science, v2) 453p il $7 Inter-science

541.3452 Colloids, Rubber, Rubber, Artificial (42-11751)

"Collection of contributions from outstanding American and British specialists in the field of rubber chemistry and high polymers presented in 9 sections by 13 authors. Introduction by Dr. Whitby, brief biography of the late Dr. Kraemer and reviews of recent literature on subjects by Dr. Mark. Section bibliographies." Library J

"All the authors are well qualified and have made outstanding recent contributions to the respective subjects they discuss. On the whole, the reviews are comprehensive, clear, and critical, and the result is very satisfactory."

J. H. Mathews and J. D. Ferry

+ Chem & Eng N 24:1970 Jl 25 '46 470w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:980 Jl '46 70w

"The book can be recommended unreservedly to all those interested in the field of high polymers." E. J. Meehan

+ J Phys Chem 50:491 N '46 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:22 Ap '46

"Several of the topics presented will be of interest to the high polymer chemist and physicist who is not specifically concerned with rubber. Throughout, fundamental aspects of the subject are stressed; extensive bibliographies are presented."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:251 S '46 320w

KRAMER, ANNE. It's fun to make a book! pictures by Carlyle Leech. 37p $1 Dutton

46-5504

A game book for ages six to eight. Two stories with pictures, are started and a blank space for the story's ending and pictures are left. The real endings are included. Space is also left for the child's own story.

Kirkus 14:346 Ag 1 '46 90w

"The two stories, telling of a farm visit and of two mischievous boys, will interest 6 to 8 year olds. However, the task of spelling out several pages of story calls for more skill and patience than is possessed by the average child of 8. For the exceptional child of 8 or so, this is a new and interesting type of how-to-do-it book." Nina Schneider

+ N Y Times p41 S 15 '46 120w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p8 O 6 '46 320w

KRAUSS, RUTH (MRS DAVID JOHNSON LEISK). The great Duffy; pictures by Richter. [32p] $1.75 Harper

46-7447

Pictures and story tell about a small boy's imaginary adventures between getting up in the morning and getting down to breakfast. They picture a very involved way of rescuing the boy's puppy.

"A delectable book for the distracted parent who wants to wean small sons from too constant demand for the comics. Mischä Richter of New Yorker fame catches the spirit of the indomitable small boy in a big traffic-ridden world."

+ Kirkus 14:490 O 1 '46 130w

"Children frustrated by size, and with imagination, will understand the story, and all parents will get it. The pictures, rather confusingly run together without benefit of margins, have the glorified and cockeyed reality of Richter's cartoons, and the text is free and easy, a montage of radio and movie adventure stories." M. F.

N Y Times p3 N 10 '46 90w

Reviewed by Florence Little

San Francisco Chronicle p4 N 10 '46 100w

KRAVCHENKO, VICTOR ANDREEVICH. I chose freedom: the personal and political life of a Soviet official. 496p $3.50 Scribner

947.084 Russia—Politics and government. Communism—Russia 46-2999

"About two months before D-Day on the beaches of Normandy, a frightened member of the Soviet Purchasing Commission deserted his post in Washington and placed himself under the protection of the people of the United States. He was Victor Kravchenko, long a member of the Communist party, an engineer, a factory director and for a time an official in the Council of Peoples Commissars of the Russian Soviet Federative Socialist Republic, by far the largest of the republics constituting the U. S. S. R. Kravchenko was not frightened of shellfire but of the long arm of Soviet law dealing with a renegade. He escaped, however, and in 'I Chose Freedom' he and his translator have described his life in the Soviet Union, his views of the Soviet régime and the events that prompted him to desert." (Weekly Book Review) Index.

"An honest biography could have thrown light on the psychology of the new Soviet citizen, or on the psychology of a deserter. This book does neither. The psychological portrait is completely lifeless, even though given in tedious detail to the extent of 496 pages of close packed, small print." William Card

— Book Week p16 Ap 14 '46 350w

Booklist 42:315 Je 1 '46

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley

Cath World 163:279 Je '46 400w

"Kravchenko is equipped with a richly varied experience of Russian life and Soviet affairs, a sensitive spirit, an orderly and discerning mind, an eye for drama, and a gift of articulation. His story is such a remarkable production that he either is a natural-born literary genius or had the ample aid of a super-competent professional writer, or perhaps both. He has rendered a quarter-million-word report without a superfluous item, without a dull sentence. Under ordinary circumstances this book would be simply a first-class autobiography, but historical conditions have conspired to make it the most significant political document since Hitler's Mein Kampf." H. S. Tigner

+ Christian Century 63:840 Jl 3 '46 500w

"It is all rather overpowering. Undoubtedly, much of what he says is true. And, as aforementioned, there can be no question of Mr. Kravchenko's sincerity. And yet—one wonders. Is the whole story told here? The suspicion that attends apostasy dies hard." Homer Metz

Christian Science Monitor p14 My 6 '46 600w

"Even in its present form, the memoirs of Kravchenko contribute to the understanding of the Soviet régime as a totalitarian régime, imposing industrialization from above, operating with an inefficient and inexperienced personnel, trying to correct its mistakes by ruthlessness and terror, dominated by men so convinced of the correctness of their political views and beliefs that they are willing to sacrifice everything to them. Particularly illuminating are Kravchenko's accounts of the brutal fights and conflicts inside the party, on the activities of the GPU against the specialists, even though

KRAVCHENKO, V. A.—Continued
they might be party members." Waldemar Gurlan

+ Commonweal 44:185 Je 7 '46 1600w
Current Hist 11:48, J1 '46 100w
Foreign Affairs 24:753 J1 '46 110w

"Urgently recommended for every library."
E. F. Kelly

+ Library J 71:584 Ap 15 '46 140w

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr
Nation 162:602 My 18 '46 550w

"The latest spicy dish from the Red-baiters' kitchen purports to be the autobiography of Victor Kravchenko, industrial engineer and Red Army captain, who fled from a Soviet Purchasing Commission in Washington on April 4, 1944, and at once publicly denounced the Soviet government for tyranny and a 'double-faced' foreign policy. Neither author nor publisher cares to disclose who translated the manuscript and assisted in 'editing it from an American vantage point.' But the book conforms in all respects to the prescribed formula, including the melodramatic flights of the author from the secret agents of the NKVD bent upon his liquidation, the usual array of slanders and the customary framing, poisoning and butchering of all good people by the fiendish Stalin." F. L. Schuman

— New Repub 114:667 My 6 '46 1400w

"Written in a cold, flat style, more reminiscent of scientific journals than Russian novels, this latest addition to the growing list of disillusioned revelations of life in the U.S.S.R. makes up in persuasive credibility what it lacks in literary dash and color. It contains little that is essentially new, little that can be dismissed as patently improbable and much that is important for Americans—particularly Americans of good-will—to absorb and understand. . . The most important question in evaluating such a book as this, that of its accuracy, is impossible to answer finally." Elizabeth Simon
N Y Times p4 Ap 21 '46 1050w

Reviewed by Edmund Wilson
New Yorker 22:108 My 4 '46 650w

"It is, I believe, the most remarkable and most revelatory report to have come out of the Soviet Union from any source whatsoever. . . 'I Chose Freedom' reads like a novel, not a political discourse. . . So factually documented a story as this, being difficult to answer in fact, will certainly be attacked on the ground that the translator or re-writer doctored the manuscript of the author, who knows hardly any English. Such gossip is already being disseminated. But Mr. Kravchenko's fact-trained mind led him to insist that the first translation be re-translated by another translator into Russian, so that he could check whether or not he was being exactly represented. He did the same with passages rewritten for smoother English from the original translation. Mr. Maxwell Perkins, of Scribner's, is my authority for this, for I was unwilling to review the book until I was certain that it was exactly Mr. Kravchenko's and no other's. . . The man who wrote this book loves his people, is convinced that they can be 'trusted' with self-government, and passionately believes that, given the chance to choose, they, like he, and like us, would choose—Freedom." Dorothy Thompson

+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 Ap 26 '46 2200w

"This is a bitter book; full of personal incidents and sharply slanted opinions. It is a diatribe against all the present Soviet régime stands for. Because the telling comes from a man who was very close to the Russian scene through the dark days of the war, it must command notice, but the dark overtones of hate completely shadow any value the autobiography may have had as an attempt at clear evaluation of the greatest sociological revolution of our time." W. H. Rudkin

Springf'd Republican p4d My 19 '46 480w

Time 48:102 J1 8 '46 1550w

U S Quarterly Bk 2:190 S '46 220w

"Unquestionably it is the most bitter and abusive account of Russia that has been published in many years, written with all the passion of violent hate. And it ends with an astonishing appeal to the people of this country to contribute to the 'liberation' of the Russian people from the Stalinist regime." Walter Kerr

Weekly Book Review p5 Ap 28 '46 1650w

Wis Lib Bul 42:86 Je '46

KREBS, RICHARD JULIUS HERMAN. See Valtin, J.

KREYMBORG, ALFRED. Man and shadow; an allegory [in verse]. 256p $5 Dutton 811 46-4194

"The plan encompasses a day's wandering in Central Park, in the course of which the poet encounters characters representative of the whole range of modern life. Its texture runs the gamut of dialog, chants, sonorous blank verse periods and delicate lyrics." San Francisco Chronicle

"While Alfred Kreymborg has a certain skill for crisp lyric and epigram, his rather flat diction does not lend itself successfully to blank verse discourse of 250 pages. The recent poem, announced on the jacket as an 'allegory,' would probably receive scant attention had it been written by an unknown author. From the pen of a former president of the Poetry Society of America and well-known writer and lecturer, 'Man and Shadow' draws a certain amount of attention to itself." Pearl Strachan

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 16 '46 600w

"A good American, gifted with an almost elfin-light touch and a sound sense of irony, Kreymborg, an example of the good old-fashioned German, here gives us a little work of rich personal flavor and fine quality. It will, I believe, attract a small but enthusiastic group of readers."

+ Kirkus 14:264 Je 1 '46 110w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
Nation 163:189 Ag 17 '46 140w

Reviewed by George Snell
San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ag 11 '46 110w

"This is a good book for Americans to read, because it embodies much of what Americans should be, of what they like to think they are and so often are not. The real Kreymborg, of course, jumps clean through his paper hoops at the end and lands in a design for a ballet, where he is superbly at home." W. R. Benét
Sat R of Lit 29:13 J1 20 '46 750w

KROLL, HARRY HARRISON. Their ancient grudge. 326p $2.75 Bobbs 46-6325

The story of the Hatfield-McCoy feud told as it affected six women, five McCoy's and one Hatfield.

"Those who have been scrutinizing Restoration history in novels peopled by willing wenches and ready men ought to enjoy Kroll's robustious mountaineers. Kroll's intention, however, is more than mere entertainment. Horror and grief and a bitter lament for useless bloodletting and violence are by no means minor characteristics of his chronicle of the Hatfields and the McCoy's." Jack Conroy

Book Week p5 S 1 '46 360w

Booklist 43:35 O 1 '46

Kirkus 14:303 J1 1 '46 170w

"The author has given the far-fetched story the lavish setting of magnificent scenery and lush passion that it cries out for. His recording of the flavorsome mountain speech is admirably authentic and more than makes up for occasional moments of overwriting. 'Their Ancient Grudge' is as gripping as a bar hug and as terrifying as a mountain storm. Too bad it could not have been as illuminating." Mary McGrory

+ — N Y Times p4 S 8 '46 650w

"After one attempt to write the novel from the viewpoint of the men, Mr Kroll approached it from the way the women saw the feud, and has produced an excellent story of its kind. . . It would be a good exciting novel even without its basis of fact, and with it makes a humanly understanding memorial to one of the most spectacular family dramas in American folk history." R. F. H.

+ Spring'd Republican p4d S 8 '46 320w

"Mr. Kroll sees the mountain people as they see themselves, without patronage and without sentimentality. He catches the flavor and cadence of their speech, its earthiness, its rude humor, its not infrequent flashes of poetry. . . Out of a true knowledge of the life he is portraying, he is able to present the feud, not as a mere savage struggle between savages but as an inevitable outgrowth of the fierce pride, the deep if sometimes perverse loyalties, the courage and curious sensitiveness of these people who had been born and reared in ignorance and isolation." Jennings Rice

+ Weekly Book Review p3 S 8 '46 750w

KRONENBERGER, LOUIS, ed. Pleasure of their company; an anthology of civilized writing; with an introduction. 653p $5 Knopf

808.8 Literature—Collections 46-6154

An anthology of selections of writings by authors ancient and modern—Petronius and Lord David Cecil, Virginia Woolf and Erasmus, Voltaire and Aldous Huxley, etc. In his introduction the author explains: "What [is found] here are examples of that large literature inspired by worldly experience, or the comic sense of life, or the civilized point of view; that literature in which urbanity, irony, elegance, skepticism, sophistication, wit—or the contemplation of those who possessed such qualities—play a leading part. This is the literature of men and women who have noted and understood, exposed or embellished, the way of the world."

Reviewed by Bergen Evans

Book Week p3 S 15 '46 500w

"This is a dull and depressing book."

—Cath World 164:381 Ja '47 100w

"This miscellany may be cordially recommended to readers with a limited purse or limited shelfroom, or both. A large amount of 'civilized' entertainment is comprised within its 650 pages. . . A few things seem trivial—Mr. Forster's 'My Own Centenary,' for example, and a few things dull, which is an unpardonable offense in this genre—Diderot's 'Rameau's Nephew' falls upon the reader after a few pages. One wonders at the inclusion of two or three things; the letters which Henry Adams wrote from Japan are neither interesting nor remarkable in any way. But, on the whole, the taste which dictated the selection is excellent and the general level high and the evenness of tone what one would expect from a group of writers scattered through the centuries but resembling one another in tastes and experience, in breeding, and in knowledge of the way of the world." S. C. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 S 28 '46 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '46

Current Hist 11:329 O '46 80w

Kirkus 14:315 Jl 1 '46 140w

"Kronenberger is under no illusions that even the best of his 'civilized writing' is up to the standard of the world's best literature. 'Anyone at all capable of responding to the urbane,' says he, 'has a right to be spared the obvious.' . . . However one may value Congreve's 'Way of the World,' Voltaire's 'Candide,' Saint-Simon's memoirs or Gibbons autobiography, there is, says the editor, nothing in them to set against the 'dark, luminous, passionate, multiform world of a Shakespeare or a Dostoevsky.' Yet the supreme virtue of civilized writing is that 'if the deepest things in life seem foreign to it, all but the deepest things are fish into its net.'" Carlos Baker

N Y Times p3 S 22 '46 1250w

"The selections have little in common except that they are examples of good writing, as opposed to 'fine writing.' The book is prefaced by an urbane, substantial essay in Mr. Kronenberger's best manner."

New Yorker 22:119 S 21 '46 100w

"The merit of 'The Pleasure of Their Company' is that it contains nothing but first-rate works, many of which are nowadays hard to come by. It is a good book and, if it were also handy and cheap, would have a wide utility. What a pity to give it a bulky pre-war format and price it at five dollars!" Eric Bentley

+ Sat R of Lit 29:23 D 28 '46 300w

Theatre Arts 31:70 Ja '47 220w

"Excellent choices, in a finely printed volume."

+ Time 48:114 S 30 '46 70w

"Within its range, which is frankly stated, 'The Pleasure of Their Company' is marked by almost perfect editorial taste, and it is printed and bound with genuine distinction."

+ Weekly Book Review p20 S 22 '46 360w

KUBIE, NORA BENJAMIN. See Benjamin, N. G.

KUCZYNSKI, JURGEN. Labour conditions in Great Britain, 1750 to the present. 191p $2.50 Int. pubs.

331 Labor and laboring classes—Great Britain 47-693

"[A] Marxist economist and statistician, undertakes the development of a startling theory that labor conditions under industrial capitalism have been steadily deteriorating. The deterioration is not only relative, but absolute, Mr. Kuczynski maintains." (Spring'd Republican) Index.

Reviewed by Witt Bowden

Ann Am Acad 246:158 Jl '46 450w

Book Week p12 Ap 7 '46 230w

Reviewed by Mark Starr

Nation 162:665 Je 1 '46 750w

Reviewed by Paul Knaplund

Pol Sci Q 61:476 S '46 300w

"What Mr Kuczynski may succeed in proving to the majority of his readers, unwilling to reject the evidence of their memories, personal experience and common sense, is the adaptability of statistics for use in deriving any desired interpretation." J. S. K.

Spring'd Republican p4 Ap 8 '46 240w

KUNHARDT, MRS DOROTHY (MESERVE). Once there was a little boy; il. by Helen Sewell. 66p $2.50 Viking

232.9 Jesus Christ—Juvenile literature 46-3462

Simple stories of daily life in Nazareth, in the time of Christ. They are supposedly told by Mary to her son, Jesus, on his birthday. The book ends with the Christmas story. For ages seven to ten.

Book Week p20 Je 2 '46 250w

Churchman 160:3 N 15 '46 80w

"Mothers, who want their young children to think of Jesus as an intimate friend near their own age, will find this tender and sensitive book exactly suited to their wish. For its illustration Helen Sewell has made the loveliest of her color pictures, truthful in setting and character and showing thoughtful study inspired with deep sympathy." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:203 My '46 160w

"A difficult book to place—the story level is young, the vocabulary and typography would do for third and fourth grade readers. The educational value and story substance are doubtful."

Kirkus 14:34 Ja 15 '46 150w

"[The stories] are told with such a luminous simplicity that the young child who hears them read aloud and the 7 to 10 year olds who read them will have the sense of knowing Jesus as a friend. . . Helen Sewell's pictures, crisp in line, soft in color, heighten the vivid impression of that life and time." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 17 '46 140w

"Many children want to visualize the Christ Child and these illustrations depict Him with exceptional feeling and beauty." K. S. White

+ New Yorker 22:136 D 7 '46 80w

KUNHARDT, D. M.—Continued

Reviewed by N. V. Morgan

San Francisco Chronicle p5 N 10 '46
50w

"This is a tender and moving book. Mrs. Kunhardt has caught the beauty that is common to childhood the world over and the happiness and security that belong to children who are surrounded with love and understanding. It is a loving interpretation of a child and of his relationship with his mother." R. A. Hill

+ Sat R of Lit 29:54 Ap 20 '46 400w

"There is no religious teaching, there are no angels, no legends from the Apocrypha, no mention of God. The adult will read much between the lines; the listening child will finish feeling that this was a very special child and mother. The author's intention was to make them real and lovable, and, in spite of some sentimentality, she has succeeded." L. S. Bechtel

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Mr 31 '46
400w

Wis Lib Bul 42:89 Je '46

KURIHARA, KENNETH K. Labor in the Philippine economy; issued under the auspices of American council, Institute of Pacific relations. 97p il $2 Stanford univ. press [9s Oxford]

331 Labor and laboring classes—Philippine Islands A46-1060

"This discussion of the labor problem in the Philippines is one of several studies initiated by the Institute of Pacific Relations to explore labor conditions and the state of social welfare in Southeast Asia. The author was formerly on the staff of the Department of Economics of the University of the Philippines and more recently has been a Research Economist for the United States government. In this brief report he seeks to present the basis for an understanding of the problems of Philippine labor within the uncertain national economy of the Commonwealth Government and its elaborately planned but war-interrupted program of 'Social Justice.' The attempt is made to deal in a descriptive and factual manner with a story that often involves basic conflicts and controversies in the organization of Philippine life, both political and economic. The picture presented deals primarily with pre-Pearl Harbor days, with only general comment on implications for the post-war economy." (Am Soc R) Bibliography. Index.

"The problems of labor in the Philippines are different from our own to make Dr. Kurihara's monograph required reading for statesmen engaged in remodeling our economic relations with the Philippine Commonwealth. . . Bruno Lasker's Foreword places this study in the wider perspectives of southeast Asia. That an American scholar of Japanese descent can present an objective and balanced account of Filipino labor problems at this time augurs well for the future. The reviewer would like to demur at ascribing the relatively high social status and freedom of Filipina women to the remnants of 'matriarchal customary law'; they have rather earned it by their contributions to economic life." Fred Eggan

+ Am J Soc 52:71 Jl '46 420w

Am Soc R 11:377 Je '46 150w

Foreign Affairs 25:348 Ja '47 30w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:137 Je '46 280w

KURNITZ, HARRY (MARCO PAGE, pseud). Shadowy third. 228p $2.50 Dodd

46-8486

Detective story.

"The cast and dialogue are amusing." E. H. + New Repub 116:41 Ja 6 '47 70w

"The story is rather loosely put together, and some details of the case are not adequately explained." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p28 D 1 '46 110w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 15 '46
130w

"Veracious orchestra and musical background, numerous piquant personalities, ample action, and a resourceful detective." + Sat R of Lit 29:80 D 7 '46 40w

"All is set down in good plain English, with hard but not brittle moods, many bright cracks and a general air of right reasons." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p54 D 1 '46 270w

KUTTNER, HENRY (LEWIS PADGETT, pseud). Brass ring. 217p $2.50 Duell

46-7706

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Book Week p25 N 24 '46 70w

"Ironical, laconic, this does very well for harsher tastes." Kirkus 14:469 S 15 '46 140w

New Repub 115:358 S 23 '46 20w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p40 O 13 '46 180w

New Yorker 22:103 S 28 '46 70w

"An excellent psychology cum-action whodunit, plus some shrewd commentaries on other husband-and-wife detecting teams. Mr. Padgett, currently top man in science fiction, threatens in this debut to take over the mystery field with equal success." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 O 6 '46
70w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p31 O 6 '46 100w

KVARACEUS, WILLIAM CLEMENT. Juvenile delinquency and the school. 337p $2 World bk.

364.36 Passaic, N.J. Children's bureau. Juvenile delinquency 45-10169

"A report of the co-operative plan under which the school system of Passaic, New Jersey, assumes chief administrative responsibility for the scientific study and treatment of active and prospective delinquents." El School J

"This volume affords valuable guidance for responsible leadership in other communities where improved procedures in dealing with delinquency are being sought. It will be useful also to teachers in their efforts to deal directly with problem cases in the schools. It is a timely contribution to the literature of school administration in that it points the way to a clearer definition of the role of the school in solving one of the baffling social problems of community life." N. B. Henry

+ El School J 46:294 Ja '46 600w

Reviewed by J. A. Kinneman

Social Educ 10:142 Mr '46 600w

"An excellent analysis of the Passaic program." E. A. Lissfelt

+ Social Studies 37:90 F '46 700w

Reviewed by W. D. Lane

Survey 82:123 Ap '46 650w

KYD, THOMAS. Blood is a beggar. 256p $2 Lippincott

46-3287

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p15 My 26 '46 200w

Kirkus 14:137 Mr 15 '46 70w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p40 My 5 '46 150w

"College faculty life gets beautiful dusting-off in cleverly plotted, ironic and exciting yarn with real surprise at finish." + Sat R of Lit 24:46 Ap 27 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p33 Ap 28 '46
320w

L

LABBERTON, JOHN MADISON, ed. Marine engineers' handbook; prepared by a staff of specialists; with the general engineering fundamentals reproduced from Mechanical engineers' handbook (Lionel S. Marks, ed-in-chief). 2013p il $7.50 McGraw

621.12 Marine engineering 45-10269

"This handbook was planned as a successor to Sterling's 'Marine Engineers' Handbook (1920) and included in it is the section on reciprocating engines that appeared in the older book. This section has been reset but not revised. The remaining parts that deal with marine engineering topics (as distinguished from the sections on general engineering reproduced from Marks' Mechanical Engineers' Handbook) are new. As in the older book, the sections are by various authorities and are signed. The work is designed mainly for the use of students of marine engineering and graduate engineers concerned with design and construction." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 42:209 Mr 1 '46

Library J 70:687 Ag '45 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:58 O '45

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:73 Mr '46 220w

LACERDA, JOHN. The conqueror comes to tea; Japan under MacArthur. 224p $2.75 Rutgers univ. press

952 Japan—History—Allied occupation, 1945-

A brief review of the Japanese occupation under MacArthur, as reported by a war correspondent who went to Japan with the occupation forces as a representative of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

"Light reading, often amusing, without any attempt to be profound. It bears out the general American impression that the occupation of Japan is working fairly well—certainly much better than the occupation of Germany." F. S. Marquardt

+ Book Week p2 N 24 '46 360w

Reviewed by Robert Peel

Christian Science Monitor p16 D 16 '46 260w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '46

Current Hist 12:59 Ja '47 100w

Reviewed by Harold Strauss

N Y Times p31 D 15 '46 450w

"The book's principal virtues are its timeliness and the author's lack of reticence in discussing such revered matters as General MacArthur's personality, the efficiency of our occupying personnel, and the Emperor. . . It's thin reporting, but it sounds authentic. Mr. LaCerde probably won't be returning to Japan for some time"

+ New Yorker 22:126 N 23 '46 100w

"His book is a melange of odds and ends—the kind of thing a wideawake reporter could and would collect in the circumstances. As such, it is not a very good piece of work. It's reasonably entertaining, and it has the surface sparkle of clever journalism, wherefore it should be widely read. And this, I think, will be a good thing. For the author, even though he persistently shies away from being too serious (when in my opinion his duty is to be just as serious as he can manage to be) cannot help some of what he feels coming through between the lines." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 25 '46 850w

LA DAGE, JOHN, and VAN GEMERT, LEE. Stability and trim for the ship's officer. 180p il $3 Van Nostrand

623.81 Stability of ships. Trim (of ships) 46-5136

"This book is designed to give ship's officers and candidates for Chief Officer's and Master's licenses, rather than naval architects, a thorough, practical knowledge of stability and trim. The treatment is developed in chapters entitled as follows: What is stability?; Calculation of metacentric height; (GM); The calculation of KM; The inclining experiment; Stability at large angles of inclination; Free surface; Damage stability; Stability and trim computers and tables; Marine disasters due to loss of transverse and stability." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:981 Jl '46 70w

"The book is compactly written and contains considerably more information than its relatively small number of pages would indicate."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 31:30 Ap '46

A LADY'S pleasure; the modern woman's treasury of good reading, with an introduction by Ilka Chase. 602p $2.75 Penn

810.8 American literature—Collections. English literature—Collections 46-3974

A compilation of stories, poems, and articles, all designed to appeal especially to women. Partial contents: The door that would not stay closed, by M. R. Rinehart; Fräulein, by Edna Ferber; A day in a woman's life, by Sheila Kaye-Smith; Midsummer, by Nancy Hale; Home, James, by Fannie Hurst; Mr. and Mrs. Dove, by Katherine Mansfield; Tea, by "Saki" (H. H. Munro); Permanent wave, by Edith Wharton; Horsie, by Dorothy Parker; To the not impossible him, by E. S. Millay; Apology for husbands, by Phyllis McGinley; The look, by Sara Teasdale; Curl up and diet, by Ogden Nash; I find out why women get married, by M. C. Harriman; The Mrs. Astor I remember, by Frank Crowninshield; Breaking the ice, by C. O. Skinner.

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers

Book Week p5 Je 2 '46 230w

Booklist 42:325 Je 15 '46

"A cleverly compiled anthology. . . It is all lively, reading."

+ Christian Century 63:724 Je 5 '46 90w

+ Kirkus 14:238 My 15 '46 130w

"Introducing this latest anthology, Ilka Chase refers to it as 'a royal stew.' Actually the book is more than just one dish. It is a whole meal and an elegant repast at that, flavored and spiced with many contemporary short-story writers, poets and autobiographers—a rich and digestible volume." Lucy Greenbaum

+ N Y Times p24 My 26 '46 320w

"Few reviewers are likely to part with this anthology. It will divert too many of their clients who, like birds in the nest, continuously demand refreshment. Although obviously aimed at the ladies, the volume is a perfect bedtime companion for guest and sick friends of both genders." Grace Frank

+ Sat R of Lit 29:40 Je 22 '46 850w

"Actually, with the exception of a few of the more aggressively feminine items dealing with babies, country-style cooking and women's clothes, the short stories, verse and nonfictional pieces contained in the anthology should have an equal appeal for both men and women. For although all the material deals with the subject of women, that subject can hardly be classified as one in which men have only a half-hearted interest. And any collection of short pieces dealing with the distaff side can hardly fail to include an abundance of male characters." J. S. K.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 16 '46 420w

LA FARGE, CHRISTOPHER. The sudden guest. 250p $2.50 Coward-McCann

46-6673

This novel has three aspects: it is first a story of how a New England spinster lived thru two violent storms, the hurricane of 1938 and the lesser storm of 1944; secondly, it is a character study of Carrel Leckton, a typical product of her age and environment; and finally, it is a parable for our times.

LA FARGE, CHRISTOPHER—Continued

"I value this novel for its fine fidelity to New England and for its sure delineation of the battered coast and the coast dwellers. I value it for its skill in contrast: the contrast of the demoniac force without and the human sanctuary within; the contrast in effect of the two great storms—the first, so unexpected, so ruthless, the second, foreseen and doubly dreaded; and above all, the contrast in these New Englanders, these people of Negro, Jewish, Italian, and Yankee blood whose impact cracks the hard shell of Miss Leckton and reveals the heart of the story." Edward Weeks
+ Atlantic 178:148 O '46 650w

Reviewed by Dorothy Sparks
Book Week p5 S 8 '46 750w
Booklist 43:35 O 1 '46
Bookmark 7:13 N '46

Reviewed by Margaret Williamson
Christian Science Monitor p14 O 12 '46 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '46

"What Mr. La Farge has done—has magnificently done—is to pour into a single character, to distill over her, all the essential oils of a time and a place in our human history and geography. He has painted a portrait, and his subject, very much one living person, so sums up a host of generically like persons we have known that we feel as we do with some of Copley's best pictures, we have surely some time, somewhere met and known Miss Leckton very well."

+ Commonweal 44:527 S 13 '46 1600w

+ Kirkus 14:256 Je 1 '46 170w

"The theme is less important than the magnificent description of the storms, which are sometimes one in the reader's mind. In spite of this confusion, highly recommended." L. M. Kinloch

+ Library J 71:1127 S 1 '46 120w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling
Nation 163:387 O 5 '46 260w

"There are at least two impressive levels of meaning in Christopher La Farge's beautifully composed novel. 'The Sudden Guest' may be taken as a penetrating study of character. Or it may be taken as a kind of long parable—one peculiarly appropriate to our time—dealing with the responsibility of the single person to the community which holds him, like it or not, in non-cancellable membership. And of course there is no incongruity in viewing the book as both study and parable together. For, like many other rightly written works, it achieves its effects simultaneously and harmoniously. Considered simply as a piece of narrative composition, it is greatly to be admired for its sound and expert, often brilliant, craft." Richard Sullivan

+ N Y Times p3 S 8 '46 850w

"Mr. La Farge is educated, intelligent, and perceptive, and he writes English like those cultivated Englishmen who, whatever their other limitations, seem to have an inbred knowledge of how to use words. Despite these advantages, he has written a book that is only passable, at best. What tripped him up, I believe, was his determination, as expressed on the jacket of his book, to write on three different levels." Hamilton Basso

New Yorker 22:115 S 21 '46 500w

"I do not mean to say that Mr. LaFarge has written a sermon. As I've already said, he is far too able a novelist merely to preach. And the reader will make his own choice, getting from 'The Sudden Guest' what he is able to bring to it. Indeed, it is because it offers this choice, at the same time saying what its author wants it to say, that 'The Sudden Guest' is the fine novel it is. You will miss one of the year's significant pieces of fiction if you let this thoughtful, beautifully done book get past you." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 S 5 '46 700w

"In the face of it, 'The Sudden Guest' is a remarkably compelling story that has for its chief subject matter one woman and two hurricanes, the woman being drawn with great skill, the hurricanes being described with extraordinary vigor and vividness. What more there is, behind the face of it, each reader must decide for himself. But I doubt that anyone will read this novel without being aware of other winds than those which lashed the Atlantic seaboard in 1938 and 1944; without his thoughts going to other 'islands' than Miss Leckton's." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 29:7 S 7 '46 1200w

"Poet Christopher La Farge spends 100,000 words pointing his moral. He might have made it needle-sharp in 10,000."

Time 48:108 S 23 '46 290w

"Quite evidently Mr. La Farge meant this as a parable for the times, but the narrow world of Miss Leckton is somewhat too limited to become a symbol of the great globe itself. Even without this superimposed meaning, the novel achieves admirable suspense and human significance."

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:281 D '46 350w

"I can think of no recent novel quite comparable to 'The Sudden Guest' except, perhaps, Miss V. Sackville West's noble 'All Passion Spent,' of a few years back. Though Miss West's was the story of an aged woman who had lived a full and out-giving life, the innerness of the two novels and the fine dispassionate appreciation of human values makes them the closest kin. And they have one more invaluable characteristic in common: they are written, both of them, with such dependable delicacy of style, such naturalness and ease, that to read either, lingeringly, paragraph by paragraph, is to savor something fine and rare." F. H. Bullock

+ Weekly Book Review p3 S 8 '46 750w

LA FARGE, HENRY ADAMS, ed. Lost treasures of Europe. 39p 427il $5 Pantheon bks.

709 World war, 1939-1945—Art and the war. World war, 1939-1945—Architecture and the war. Art treasures in war 47-30010

A survey, mainly in photographs, of the great cultural monuments of Europe which were destroyed or partially destroyed during World war II. In a few cases photographs of damage done are included, but in the main the pictures are of the original intact. The text is a descriptive list of the plates, giving in each case brief history of the building and the amount of destruction.

Booklist 43:152 Ja 15 '47

"The Editor earns our gratitude; that his was no easy task even the unimaginative must realize, but he has surmounted difficulties of conflicting reports, baffling search, selection and elimination, and has succeeded in his conscientious effort to represent every major destroyed monument or city in Europe and at the same time to give every country its due. The finely chosen, clear pictures are preceded by an informative, concise Descriptive List of Plates."

+ Cath World 164:380 Ja '47 200w

Reviewed by Dorothy Adlow
Christian Science Monitor p14 D 14 '46 800w

"A book with tremendous nostalgic value for those who knew Europe well before the devastation of the war."

+ Kirkus 14:575 N 1 '46 100w

"A well done book that may be something of a monument in itself." S. Y.

+ New Repub 115:774 D 9 '46 100w

"If, in appraising this book, I have an important stricture, it would only be that its photographs of the architectural treasures of Europe destroyed in this war might well be presented in black borders as a mark of mourning for beauty which now lives only in human memory and in photographs such as Mr. La Farge presents in this volume. In all, he has selected 427. Most of them occupy a full page and the offset process of reproduction gives not only sharpness of detail but also such a richness of shading that one often has the illusion of full color. One can have no quarrel with Mr. La Farge's choices in view of the many difficulties which he has had to surmount; for sometimes not only have the buildings disappeared but all photographs of them as well." W. L. White

+ N Y Times p5 N 24 '46 1200w

New Yorker 22:134 N 16 '46 100w

"The photographs are excellent in most instances, the only exception being some panorama shots which are fuzzy in detail. The photographs are grouped by country and numbered with a descriptively annotated list preceding the collection. The only obvious lack in the book is an index. However, since the book has only limited value as a reference work, this is not a major omission." W. E. Parker

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 D 1 '46 250w

"Mr. La Farge has chosen well, and he has apportioned fairly to the several countries the losses which add up to such a dreadful sum. One can hardly believe that these great buildings and works of art are gone; they live so vividly and so poignantly through his splendid reproductions. A solemn spirit of requiem pervades the entire book—an air of having known and loved personalities who are no more." F. H. Taylor

+ Weekly Book Review p6 D 22 '46 700w

LAFITTE, FRANÇOIS. Britain's way to social security. (Target for tomorrow) 110p $2 Transatlantic [6s Pilot]

331.2544 Insurance, State and compulsory [45-9864]

"For the greater part of his book Mr. Lafitte limits himself to two tasks; to recount the progress of social insurance and national assistance since the great Indian summer of Liberalism before the last war and to establish the practical issues which must be settled by the new Minister of National Insurance in making the programme of law and enforcement to which all the parties are now committed both effective and efficient." Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 42:130 D 15 '45

Times [London] Lit Sup p404 Ag 25 '45 2000w

LAGER, MILDRED M. The useful soybean; a plus factor in modern living. 295p $2.75 McGraw

641.35655 Cookery (soy bean). Soy bean 45-5989

"While the author's interest is primarily in the nutritional value of the soybean as evidenced by her collection of over three hundred and fifty recipes for appetizers, entrees and desserts which constitute the latter half of the book, she has also contributed ten informative chapters on the history of the culture of the bean, the development of important production in the United States, the extensive research work of the soybean processors, and the numerous industrial applications developed in the last fifteen years." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"The value of this book lies in its bringing together all the stray bits of information on this crop that have been passing about more or less loosely during the past decade. The book's emphasis, however, is on its nutritional value."

+ Chem & Met Eng 52:263 S '45 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:13 Ja '46

LAKE, JOE BARRY (JOE BARRY, pseud)
Triple cross. (Mystery house publication)
256p $2 Curl

Detective story. 46-3011

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p30 Ap 7 '46 130w

"Readable tough-un."

Sat R of Lit 29:28 Ap 6 '46 40w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 21 '46 160w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p33 Mr 31 '46 160w

LAMB, HAROLD. Alexander of Macedon; the journey to world's end. 402p $3.50 Doubleday
B or 92 Alexander the Great 46-4464

Biography of Alexander of Macedon, which the author calls "an endeavor to recreate for the reader today [the] journey of the Macedonians, under Alexander." In his efforts to gather material for this book the author followed the course of Alexander's journeying for two years, and covered all the territory "except within northern India." Index.

Booklist 42:327 Je 15 '46

"It will be difficult to obtain an equally comprehensive notion of the Great Alexander's career in any other way half as pleasant as the reading of this book. . . . On the whole Alexander remains a remote figure rather than a living personality; and probably it could not be otherwise, unless the author were to draw upon his imagination much more heavily than he has chosen to do."

+ Cath World 163:477 Ag '46 150w

"The rivalry of one Macedonian lieutenant with another, the jealousies of the forthright Macedonians, of the more highly civilized Persians, are realized and set forth with skill. In his effort to understand Alexander, Mr. Lamb has undoubtedly been audacious; he has used his imagination to create details of Alexander's thinking and feeling. Undoubtedly, some scholars of the period will have their quarrels with those, but the general reader will enjoy them as he enjoys Mr. Lamb's most clear and readable accounts of the battles, no one which Alexander ever lost. The book is a stunning portrait of a great symbolic hero." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 22 '46 1150w

Reviewed by Max Fischer

Commonweal 44:313 Jl 12 '46 700w

Current Hist 11:230 S '46 60w

Kirkus 14:117 Mr 1 '46 150w

"Mr. Lamb's biography is really a noble piece of work, running clear as water." E. B. Gar-side

+ N Y Times p6 My 19 '46 1000w

New Yorker 22:93 Je 1 '46 120w

"The fact is that Lamb has written what resembles a romantic biography, which is surely his privilege, but it is not fair to the public not to say so. Everything seems certain; rarely is there a problem; dialogue goes on for page after page, not a word of which can be found in the Alexander-historians, yet all the time we are building a picture of Alexander that has little to do with reality. Some of this makes good reading and I applaud Lamb's desire not to be dull, but I suspect that even that section of our population which cares little for history has outgrown the presumed naïveté of the ancients." C. A. Robinson

Sat R of Lit 22:21 Je 1 '46 700w

"Alexander of Macedon' is authentic history blended with imagination. Mr. Lamb invents minor situations and conversations, arranges material dramatically, employs the spotlight effectively. At the same time he does not distort facts and is completely reliable on actual events. Where a reader may occasionally disagree is in interpretation of character, and even there the author makes out a persuasive case based upon evidence. If he chooses to follow Arrian rather than Plutarch, who can dispute the choice? Other histories and biographies may contain more dates and statistics, but none is more absorbing, satisfying and readable. Mr. Lamb's portrait of Alexander is as fine as anything in the field, an invaluable addition to the gallery of great historical figures." P. J. Searles

+ Weekly Book Review p5 My 19 '46 1300w

Wis Lib Bul 42:114 Jl '46

LAMBERT, JANET. Up goes the curtain. 189p
$2 Dutton

46-2484

Continues the story of Penny Parrish, who appeared in earlier books: Dreams of Glory, and Glory Be (Book Review Digest 1942 and 1943). In this story for older girls Penny has her first part in a Broadway success, visits her army post home, and aids in capturing a spy.

Kirkus 14:150 Mr 15 '46 80w

"Will be as popular with older girls as other titles by this author." Ruth Bostwick
+ Library J 71:669 My 1 '46 70w

"The book is slightly starry-eyed, but deft, and is written with a true understanding of 'teen-age girls.'" F. N. Chrystie
+ — N Y Times p36 Ap 14 '46 90w

"Miss Lambert's characters are a bit too sweet, but they are pleasant people to know, and she writes with humor and considerable insight. It's a good book for 'teen-agers.'" P. H. Bickerton

+ — Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 28 '46 200w

"Penny's luck is too good to be true, but her readers won't believe that for a moment, and I hope they don't; Penny is so nice a girl she deserves all she has. I am glad to see that Miss Lambert leaves her hesitating between two lovers; the series will evidently keep on moving."

+ Weekly Book Review p16 My 19 '46 160w

LAMBERT, LYDIA. Pushkin, poet and lover; tr. from the French by Willard R. Trask. 276p $2.75 Doubleday

Pushkin, Aleksandr Sergeevich—Fiction
46-4822

Romantic, fictionalized biography of this early nineteenth century Russian poet.

"It is Strachey strained through Maurois to emerge as the reductio ad absurdum of all impressionistic, romanticized biographies. The author goes to work in the approved fashion to turn the poet Pushkin into a capricious Casanova. Seizing upon a joking remark attributed to Pushkin that his wife was his one hundred and thirteenth love, the author digs up from fact, fiction, and poetic allusions the other hundred and twelve, and gallops through these real and imaginary affairs at the rate of about one to every two pages. . . . If only this book does not find its way to the Soviet Union, where Pushkin is venerated as the Russian Shakespeare, we may be spared still another international scandal." E. J. Simmons

— Atlantic 178:154 Ag '46 360w

"All his romantic, and somewhat pathetic, love life is told without too much taste, and little insight into the poetic and revolutionary gifts which made Pushkin a great artist. But the accent here on the sensual, the sensational, may give this a certain popularity."

Kirkus 14:169 Ap 1 '46 150w

"Since the biography is of no value as literary criticism and the romantic adventures related without any distinction of style it is not recommended." B. B. Libaire

— Library J 71:822 Je 1 '46 90w

"Since Pushkin was a plant that flourished only in the climate of love, Miss Lambert is quite justified in emphasizing the erotic side of his career. She also writes her original in French, a language better equipped than English to explore the nuances of love as a cult. Her prose seems consciously allied to painting. Everything is reduced to essential forms. The images are concrete and alive with fresh, gilty color. Much credit must be given to Willard R. Trask, Miss Lambert's translator, for preserving these deceptively simple qualities." E. B. Garside

+ N Y Times p8 S 1 '46 600w

New Yorker 22:108 Je 8 '46 160w

"Miss Lambert, a young Frenchwoman, writes with a pronounced Gallic flavor. She tosses off lightly and easily this marron glace of a biography which should be taken as an after-dinner sweet and not as a complete piece de resistance." J. V.

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Jl 21 '46 220w

"The book should please the not inconsiderable public that enjoys highly seasoned fare, is titillated by extravagance, and requires vicarious passion, however presented. A more fastidious audience will find it meretricious stuff." Babette Deutsch

Weekly Book Review p24 Je 23 '46 550w

LAMKIN, NINA B. Health education in rural schools and communities. 209p $2.50 Barnes, A.S.

371.7 Hygiene—Study and teaching. Rural schools
SG46-239

"A crystallization of the author's wide experience and her fund of information into an excellent book for teachers of health education." School & Society

Reviewed by R. E. Grout

Am J Pub Health 36:1443 D '46 390w

"The book will be found a valuable guide for administrators, teachers, doctors, nurses, and others interested in taking to the people in rural areas the latest scientific findings to the end that life may become better and safer. This will occur in proportion to the incorporation of these findings in their daily living. Materials and methods used in this book will make this work interesting and effective to anyone engaged in promoting a similar health education program." Bess Exton

+ J Home Econ 38:604 N '46 330w

+ School & Society 63:431 Je 15 '46 20w

"The author's traditional program is good as far as it goes, but much more is needed." E. B. McCue

School R 54:493 O '46 650w

LAMOND, HENRY GEORGE. Brindle Royalist; a story of the Australian plains. 235p il
$2.50 Morrow

46-1682

Biography of a brindle bull, born on an Australian cattle station. Describes his life on the range until he is finally captured and subjugated to the rule of man. Includes a glossary of expressions common in pastoral Queensland.

"Lamond writes about animals with candor and even brutality, but also with a considerable measure of sympathy and warmth. His attitude toward the aboriginal 'boys' and 'gins' (women) is the typical one of the British colonial bound to assume the 'white man's burden' on the theory that the natives are irresponsible children who go to pot if they aren't restrained by a firm white and British hand. If one discounts this manifestation, which isn't a very important part of the whole, 'Brindle Royalist' is a rewarding experience." Jack Conroy

+ — Book Week p8 Mr 17 '46 360w

Booklist 42:282 My 1 '46

Kirkus 14:7 Ja '46 100w

Reviewed by Robert Peck

Weekly Book Review p24 Mr 24 '46 500w

LAMONT, CORLISS. Peoples of the Soviet Union. 229p il maps $3 Harcourt

572.947 Ethnology—Russia
46-25056

"Maps on end papers and scattered as needed throughout book are essential to understanding text. Author—identified with USSR for years, as traveler, lecturer, teacher—maintains that, politics aside, USSR is a successful ethnic democracy. Book defines term, and then goes into detail about various racial sub-divisions of the Soviet Union. Geographical location, brief historical backgrounds, conditions before 1917, Soviet objectives and accomplishments all are covered." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by N. S. Timasheff

Am J Soc 52:70 Jl '46 550w

Reviewed by Barrington Moore
Am Pol Sci R 40:385 Ap '46 450w
Am Soc R 11:377 Je '46 100w

Reviewed by D. F. White
Ann Am Acad 245:184 My '46 800w

Reviewed by David Karno
Book Week p3 Mr 17 '46 140w
Booklist 42:224 Mr 15 '46
Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '46
Commonweal 43:661 Ap 12 '46 40w
Foreign Affairs 24:753 Jl '46 50w

Reviewed by C. D. Harris
Geog R 36:695 O '46 450w

"This is a clear, factual volume, provocative and informative, but no attempt is made to discuss the controversial issues of phases of democracy as applied to the U.S.S.R."
+ Kirkus 14:56 F 1 '46 210w

"Significant and fascinating book. Recommended both for reference and for general reading." Thelma Brackett
+ Library J 71:280 F 15 '46 140w

Reviewed by B. D. Wolfe
N Y Times p39 Ap 14 '46 650w
New Yorker 22:87 Mr 2 '46 70w

"I happened to be reading this book on a recent train trip where I fell into conversation with a G.I. just mustered out. Noticing the title, he observed significantly that he was now keenly interested in Russia, for the reason that, of all the serious subjects discussed by the men in the service, Soviet Russia seemed to be the one they talked about most. Dr. Lamont's work should be of interest and value to the ever growing number of those giving serious thought to the Soviet Union." John Somerville

+ Sat R of Lit 29:9 Mr 9 '46 1150w

Reviewed by Walter Kerr
Weekly Book Review p5 Mr 17 '46 950w
Wis Lib Bul 42:113 Jl '46

LAMONT, THOMAS WILLIAM. My boyhood in a parsonage; some brief sketches of American life toward the close of the last century. 203p il $2.50 Harper
B or 92 46-7176

These reminiscences cover the first fourteen years of the author's life from 1870 to 1884, with three supplementary chapters on prep school days, college days at Harvard, and early journalistic years in the 90s. The author, the son of a Methodist minister, recalls his childhood as one marked by "kindly, if not high, thinking, and plain living."

Reviewed by Ellery Sedgwick
Atlantic 178:166 N '46 480w

"These memoirs are uneven in quality and occasionally verge upon the sentimental. But they have much of the charm which made Clarence Day's 'Life with Father' memorable. In a season of almost unrelieved filth, perversion, sadism, and overwritten melodrama, these quiet pages from an earlier, more dignified, and infinitely more decent America should evoke nostalgia." Sterling North

+ Book Week p10 O 20 '46 360w
Booklist 43:100 D 1 '46

"With quiet humor and the casualness of a friendly letter, Mr. Lamont pictures his childhood in the Hudson valley and his years at Phillips Exeter and Harvard, ranging from 1870 to 1892. . . . Memorable figures—President Eliot, George Lyman Kittredge, William James, William Vaughn Moody, George Herbert Palmer, Charles Eliot Norton—flit across the pages to make one wish that the writer had done their portraits with penetrating detail. If he had, this engaging book, so easily written and easily read, might not be so easily forgotten." Robert Berkelman

Christian Science Monitor p14 O 11 '46 480w

Kirkus 14:318 Jl 1 '46 120w

Reviewed by G. O. Kelly
Library J 71:1205 S 15 '46 110w

"As is true of life generally, in and out of the parsonage, Mr. Lamont as historian has his good days and bad. Some of the sketches are set down in the manner of family memorabilia, and so may not hold great interest for the general or casual reader. Others show the parsonage as a symbol of an age and time." Lewis Nichols

+ — N Y Times p3 S 29 '46 800w

"The inspirational source of Mr. Lamont's little book on his boyhood in a Methodist parsonage is a nostalgic, yet an always humorous and often beautiful memory of horse-and-buggy living in the final decades of the nineteenth century." John Corbin

+ Sat R of Lit 29:17 O 5 '46 800w

"In these brief chapters of happy childhood and his early life, the author foretells his future success story by all the implications of zeal and character the simple chronicle reveals. A story of a fortunate life so well begun deserves continuance. If written, it is certain to fulfill the promise of these first chapters." Henry Bruere

+ Survey G 35:411 N '46 850w

Reviewed by Richardson Wright
Weekly Book Review p2 S 29 '46 800w
Wis Lib Bul 42:148 N '46

LAMPELL, MILLARD. The long way home; pref. by William Rose Benét; forewords by Howard A. Rusk and Merle Armitage. 174p $2.50 Messner

792 Radio plays. World war, 1939-1945—Drama 46-2334

Fourteen radio scripts first produced over the Columbia network. Each script is about the homecoming of our soldiers from World war II, with their wounds—physical or spiritual, with a brief flashback to show the origin of the wound.

"To the average radio writer, champing under sometimes indiscriminate commercial restrictions, Lampell's plays will stand as a symbol of the type of high-minded writing that could be done for the air were the too often stultifying taboos against honest expression lifted by those who monitor the mikes." Herb Futran

+ Book Week p18 Ap 7 '46 400w
Booklist 42:278 My 1 '46
Bookmark 7:6 N '46

"14 official AAF radio plays here available in book form, and as poignant and challenging to read as they were to hear. . . . They picture returning air force men (it could apply to any casualties), the problems of adjustment they face, and the way cases are handled in all types of hospitals and in redistribution and convalescent centers. Human documents which approach the problems vigorously."

+ Kirkus 14:116 Mr 1 '46 80w

Library J 71:760 My 15 '46 40w

"Written to ease the burden of the homecoming soldier, these crisp and probing scripts dramatize both the need for aid and the therapy used. The best of them are very good indeed. Through many runs an undercurrent of bitterness that will not please the 'let them alone' school of thought." David Dempsey

+ — N Y Times p5 Ap 28 '46 550w

"Mr. Benét expresses a high regard for these short plays, and, judged by the none too subtle standards of radio, maybe they are as good as he says; very possibly they may even serve a useful purpose. If, however, you have a queasy stomach for script writers exploring the heart of a soldier, or if you just don't have a low emotional boiling point, the collection may not be for you."

New Yorker 22:90 Mr 30 '46 150w

"Considering the limitations imposed by subject matter and plot, this collection of plays is nothing short of a tour de force. The book should, of course, be taken in small doses. But even when read at a single sitting, the plays are never repetitious; they never flag in vigor or deftness of touch, or lose the delicate balance that exists between grimness and humor." Ron Schiller

+ Sat R of Lit 29:93 Ap 13 '46 700w

"When printed radio plays are read silently and still manage to deeply impress a reader who is himself akin to the subjects of the sketches, one can be certain the author has caught the true essence. It is difficult to imagine more successful efforts in playwriting for the new medium that is radio than 'The Long Way Home.' F. P.

LAMPELL, MILLARD—Continued

+ Spring'd Republican p6 Ap 9 '46 420w

Theatre Arts 30:623 O '46 40w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:86 Je '46 240w

"The best of fifteen-minute radio plays seem rather bare when stripped down to silent print. This is particularly true of Lampell's experiments with the folk-ballad effects he used so successfully in 'The Lonesome Train' (although his brief production notes outline the original sound and musical backgrounds). A few of the scripts, too, are, on the surface, dated. But they all have a tough core of lasting truth and integrity." Richard Match

+ Weekly Book Review p12 Ap 28 '46 600w

LANCASTER, CHARLES MAXWELL, tr. See Ercilla y Zúñiga, A. de. Araucanías

LANCASTER, HENRY CARRINGTON. Sunset; a history of Parisian drama in the last years of Louis XIV, 1701-1715. 365p $5 Johns Hopkins press [25s Oxford]

842.09 French drama A45-4816

"A sequel to Professor Lancaster's History of French Dramatic Literature in the Seventeenth Century, the present work carries on essentially unchanged the purpose and pattern of his earlier volumes. Its immediate aim is to provide succinctly a survey of all plays from 1701 to 1715 acted or published in or near Paris. . . . After an introductory chapter dealing with political and social backgrounds and the history of the Comédie Française, Professor Lancaster considers in general fashion the nature and aims of tragedy in the period, and follows this with a thorough but compact account of the work of the various writers of tragedy. A similar pattern is pursued in dealing with comedy. Subsequent chapters consider lost comedies, comedies not acted at the Comédie Française, and plays of the Foire." U S Quarterly Bkl

"Closely packed facts give Professor Lancaster's pages a forbidding air at first. They have to be read slowly. Once the usual speed of the eye has been checked for the mind to separate names and dates and add a flavour to them, this volume can be enjoyed as well as used. It fills a gap on the shelves of stage history and excites surprise that the gap has been there so long. . . . 'Sunset' is a very valuable addition to the shelves of the playgoer, and of others besides."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p269 Je 8 '46 1000w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:7 Mr '46 260w

LANDIS, PAUL HENRY. Adolescence and youth; the process of maturing. 470p il $3.75 McGraw

136.7354 Adolescence, Youth 46-6

Study of the problems and influences which affect the process of growing up in the present day. The book recognizes the problems of three adolescent-youth groups: town, village and open country. Index.

Reviewed by Carson McGuire

+ Am J Soc 52:275 N '46 950w

"If the book is to be used as a college text it passes muster creditably. It is readable and meets issues frankly. Students who plan to teach in secondary schools shouldn't miss reading it. If, on the other hand, the book is meant as a treatise on the sociology of adolescence in a field heretofore preempted by psychologists, we would have been better served by a more considered, less hurried, less diffuse product. Shall we say, it is more provocative than definitive!" Reuben Hill

Am Soc R 11:761 D '46 950w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '46

School & Society 62:391 D 15 '45 20w

"In spite of the lack of a functional concept of the interaction between the individual and society and in spite of the depersonalized and lifeless feeling of the book, Landis has collated much pertinent material and has strongly emphasized the need for more extensive consideration of society's part in the socialization process. The book could be read with profit both by the professional teacher and by the intelligent layman, either of whom would obtain an increased awareness of the social demands made on us all." W. E. Henry

+ School R 54:369 Je '46 1150w

LANDRY, ROBERT JOHN. This fascinating radio business. 343p il $3.75 Bobbs

621.384193 Radio broadcasting 46-7482

History of commercial radio broadcasting with special reference to the mechanics of present day broadcasting. Index.

"An interesting, thorough, and comprehensive history of commercial radio broadcasting." Ricker Van Metre

+ Book Week p20 N 24 '46 90w

Booklist 43:151 Ja 15 '47

Kirkus 14:341 J1 15 '46 120w

"Mr. Landry's approach to these problems is comprehensive, fair and stimulating. He acknowledges (as do most responsible radio officials) that there is much room for improvement. He has, however, not paid sufficient attention to those millions of listeners who agree with him that radio has done a splendid job but who think it can do even better." J. A. S. Kenas

+ N Y Times p46 N 17 '46 650w

San Francisco Chronicle p31 D 1 '46 80w

"Mr. Landry has written this birdseye view of radio with a sharpness and insight which makes it valuable for even those cynical characters who have been kicking around the studios since the earphone and crystal-set days. Mr. Landry's writing style has a cutting edge of wry humor." Millard Lampell

+ Weekly Book Review p24 D 8 '46 650w

LANDRY, STUART OMER. Cult of equality; a study of the race problem. 359p $3.50 Pelican pub. co, 511 Gravier st, New Orleans 12

572 Race problems, Negroes 45-3331

"A presentation of the case for holding that there are fundamental and inherent inequalities among the races, and that the White is superior to the Negro." Foreign Affairs

"The author is unaware of his own biases, uncritical of any statement that conforms to them, and unfamiliar with the nature of scientific evidence. The book shows no understanding of racial realities and no insight into the nature of race relations. The literary craftsmanship is not distinguished. But to the student of racial realities the book is very valuable. The author seems to embody and faithfully reflect racial beliefs and attitudes that prevail in his social class and community. Various field studies have undertaken with more or less success to report the folk attitudes in isolated areas of the South and to show the hiatus between modern knowledge and the folk beliefs. Here it is all set out by a more or less unsophisticated native who expounds the true doctrine and refutes the errors and heresies of the social scientists." E. B. Reuter

+ Am J Soc 51:348 Ja '46 600w

Foreign Affairs 24:350 Ja '46 40w

LANDSBERGER, FRANZ. Rembrandt, the Jews and the Bible; tr. by Felix N. Gerson. 189p il $3 Jewish pub.

759.9492 Rembrandt Hermanszoon van Rijn. Jews in art. Bible. Whole—Pictorial illustration 46-4153

"In the days of his prosperity Rembrandt bought a large house in the Jewish quarter of Amsterdam. Some biographers believe it was not so much for isolation and peace of mind as for association with a group of people with whom he was sympathetic. . . . When poverty came, he moved for the last time to an unrequented part of the Ghetto. The nature and the extent of the Jewish influence upon Rembrandt's etchings and paintings is the theme of Landsberger's book. There is first a conventional, brief life of the artist covering eight pages. The story of the coming of the Jew to Amsterdam, Sephardim, and Ashkenazim, concludes the first chapter. The other chapters are 'Rembrandt's Portraits of Jews,' 'Rembrandt's Scenes of Jewish Daily Life,' and 'Rembrandt and the Bible.' The representations of Jewish men and women were not portraits, commissioned by the sitters, but the result of Rembrandt's artistic impulses and for the pleasure of art lovers. His models were the Jews he knew so well, and Landsberger makes a somewhat detailed study of fourteen of these pictures. Only three scenes from Jewish life are examined, but there are thirty-four biblical scenes. The works of other artists, reproduced for comparison and study, complete the total of sixty-six illustrations." (Crozer Q) Bibliography. Index.

"To those who are students of Rembrandt and to those concerned with the history of the Jewish people this volume presents material of interest. . . . Although this book includes well-documented notes and an extensive bibliography, the illustrations are poor and the works reproduced are identified only as paintings or etchings or drawings, with no indication of their present location or ownership. In some cases their attribution to Rembrandt must be questionable. Nevertheless Dr. Landsberger's research will reveal that to a man as great as Rembrandt all phases of human life were enriching and he knew no narrow limits of creed or country." Dorothy Odenheimer
Book Week p7 Ag 11 '46 250w
Booklist 43:66 N 1 '46

"A twofold appeal should win acceptance for this expertly written and handsomely published work. Jews, Christian friends of the Jews, and all right-minded people who take satisfaction in evidences of cultural sympathies which ignore the barriers of race and religion, will be interested in the record of friendly relations between the greatest Dutch artist of his time and his Jewish neighbors."

+ Christian Century 63:1312 O 30 '46 280w

"This is a beautiful collection of an unknown Rembrandt and a fine sociological picture of Dutch Jewry of his age. . . . The only criticism I can possibly make is that the author approaches the middle ages and their art with a typical German bourgeois mentality and that he is therefore slightly biased against Christianity. Like so many European Jews, he views the dark ages through two glasses: the Jewish one and a 'liberal' Protestant one. It would help his book greatly if he corrected some of his statements." H. A. Reinhold
+ Commonweal 44:533 S 13 '46 280w

"The average person looks at a picture superficially, seeing very little of the characteristics that make it a work of art. A study such as this is extremely valuable apart from its specialized Jewish interest, because it suggests and illustrates what art really is and how it may be understood and appreciated. Landsberger is an interpreter and a guide, not a propagandist, thereby producing a discriminating, sound presentation of a very important phase of Rembrandt's art that is worthy of serious study. Occasionally he seems to be pressing for a meaning. Does the 'shadow that falls upon the right cheek' give 'a tinge of sorrow' to 'Ephraim Bonus'? The 'stooping' of the taller figure in Illustration 25 (p. 79) does not quite seem to be that he may hear better. The lower level of the synagogue floor may not be a genuine inference from the bent knee of the entering figure in Illustration 28 (pp. 85, 87). . . . But these are not serious matters; they are practically trivia in the light of the serious work of an author who convincingly and interestingly makes Rembrandt not an illustrator but an important interpreter of the Jews and the Bible." R. E. Keighton
+ Crozer Q 23:389 O '46 500w
Current Hist 11:331 O '46 40w

LANDSTROM, RUSSELL, comp. See Associated news annual LANE, JANE, pseud. See Dakers, E. K.

LANE, KENNETH WESTMACOTT (KEITH WEST, pseud). Peony. 213p $2 Macmillan [8s Cresset]

46-2895

"Chinese love story in four parts in which old and new China are poetically interwoven. The spirit of the heroine, Peony, is symbolic of the girl of today against a background of ancient philosophy and tradition. This will appeal to the reader of Chinese stories and especially to those familiar with the manners and customs of the country who would understand the sophistication of the Oriental." Library J

"Keith West, an Englishman, has traveled widely in South China and in this, as in earlier novels, he presents Oriental culture persuasively and with charm. The book will appeal to sophisticated readers." Marion Strobel

+ Book Week p6 Ap 14 '46 450w

"Keith West writes of China with a delightful sagacity that gives his work the flavor of an old tale, skillfully retold. The moral concepts are not ours, yet the wit and epigrammatic style have an inimitable charm."

+ Cath World 163:380 Jl '46 150w

Kirkus 13:530 D 1 '45 230w

"Not recommended for high school libraries." Alice Haynes

Library J 71:54 Ja 1 '46 90w

"[Peony] is an attractive character whose originality shines the more brightly in a ceremonious setting. So does the humour and insight with which Mr. West draws the other characters, the tutor, the Governor and his witty wife, Peony's parents and husband, and even her cat. This is a mature book for mature people." H. I. A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 12 '45 150w

"Keith West's finely written story moves with curious, beautiful circumlocution to its more or less fated end, giving, by the way, many vivid pictures of life on a Chinese tea cup—a life which, however, seems merely that, in the last analysis. The fabulosity of that Chinese life as here depicted tend to blot out the individual soul, leaving, in its place, another conventional portrait." Marguerite Young

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 14 '46 600w

New Yorker 22:105 Ap 20 '46 80w

"This is an intricate and sophisticated story, told in such an extremely formalized and subtle style that it is sometimes a little difficult to know what is really going on. . . . Mr. West's book has charm and wit, but it is for those who have a decided taste for its own special flavor. Readers jaded with modern forthrightness and clipped dialogue will find the long allusive speeches, the excessive classicism and formality, the stylized, antique decorative style, wholly delightful. Others, and I am afraid I am one of them, may find it occasionally over-elaborate and tedious." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 29:26 My 18 '46 600w

"Mr. West tells her story with wit and charm. His characters have a pleasing individuality, which contrast delightfully against the formal background." John Hampson

+ Spec 175:368 O 19 '45 360w

Times [London] Lit Sup p437 S 15 '45 300w

"The action of the novel is lively and Mr. West puts a delightfully high gloss of wit and ironic humor on its telling. His characters speak in aphorisms and epigrams, but so effortlessly that the unwary reader may either miss them altogether or fall into the error of thinking that they are as simple as at first they sound. Soon one begins to feel it the most natural thing in the world to improvise a few stanzas of verse in the course of a conversation, and it is this illusion of complete reality that gives 'Peony' much of its charm and lifts it above the average run of its kind. When you add to this sense of reality an adult theme handled without pretentiousness and a group of polished and witty performers, you have a book that is very easy to take." J. J. Espey

LANE, K. W.—Continued

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ap 21 '46 900w

LANE, KENNETH WESTMACOTT (KEITH WEST, pseud). Three blossoms of Chang-an. 268p $2.75 Macmillan

46-5869

The trials of a well-educated young Chinese magistrate in old China, and the stories of the three Chinese ladies who loved him. The story is supposed to be based on three scrolls found in the young man's coffin, centuries after his death.

Christian Science Monitor p16 Ag 15 '46 1000w

Kirkus 14.280 Je 15 '46 200w

"Recommended if this type fiction is wanted." E. F. Kelly

+ Library J 71:1051 Ag '46 100w

"It is difficult to say whether Mr. West is merely a primitive novelist or whether, if he deserted his Arcadian subject matter, he might emerge into modernity with a real grasp upon the individual character and circumstance. As it is, his writing is made up largely of a sometimes palling interest in Chinese maxims, traditions, conventions, tapestries, foot-gear. All of this is very charming, but by this time it wears a little thin. The escape is too easy, like an endless sonnet sequence in which one sonnet is differentiated very little from another." Marguerite Young

N Y Times p16 S 22 '46 400w

"Mr. West, who writes in a deliberately elevated style, is a well-thought-of student of Chinese life, but you will probably detect a slightly synthetic flavor in this somewhat mannered novel."

New Yorker 22:90 Ag 17 '46 60w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 20 '46 80w

"The book reads as if it were written with the constant aid of a collection of Chinese sayings and quotations to make both the author himself and the readers believe that this is historically Chinese. The result of such a hodge-podge is that the characters are stiff and bloodless, mouthing passages from the ancient classics, and having nothing to say for themselves. . . Mr. West writes sharply-edged sentences, well tailored and trimmed. If he could only pump a little warmth and blood into his characters, his novel would be more convincing." Helena Kuo

— + Sat R of Lit 29:34 S 28 '46 360w

"[The] story is one of sharp contrasts, of sophisticated refinement, coupled with primitive justice and cold-blooded cruelty, told in a scholarly but happy easy fashion, blending gay epigrams and ironic wit." P. H. Bickerton

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Ag 11 '46 320w

"Mr. West handles [his characters] with understanding and the tender irony that is the most characteristic quality of his writing. As usual, he succeeds in making his highly colored picture of imperial China a graceful framework for a story of individual development that is able not only to serve as pleasant summer entertainment but also to stand up under more exacting standards; for in his own way Mr. West is always a gentle, urbane, and thoroughly civilized moralist." J. J. Espey

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 18 '46 600w

LANE, MARGARET (COUNTESS OF HUNTINGDON). Tale of Beatrix Potter; a biography. 162p il $3.50 (12s 6d) Warne

B or 32 Potter, Beatrix (Mrs William Heelis) 46-11998

Biography of the author of a long line of famous books for children, headed by The Tale of Peter Rabbit. Beatrix Potter's life was divided into two distinct periods: her early years as the only daughter in a wealthy English home, when she was completely under her parents' domination, and her happy married life when she farmed and raised sheep on her own lands in the Lake District. The author has discovered as much detail as possible about both periods.

Reviewed by M. A. Ayres

+ Book Week p4 N 10 '46 200w

Booklist 43:100 D 1 '46

Christian Science Monitor p16 D 7 '46 800w

"To this reviewer it is in the last chapter of all, 'Mrs. Heelis of Sawrey,' that Margaret Lane reaches the highest spot in her portrayal. . . Closing The Tale of Beatrix Potter and thinking back over it, one is conscious of the great debt we owe Margaret Lane, both for her choice of material and her treatment of it. It is a fully rounded picture she has given us of an original personality, and there is in it not one trace of the sentimentality which would have so irked the creator of all those salty little characters who live between the covers of these twentieth century classics. Their enduring charm and fidelity to the English countryside defy time and imitation." Marcia Dalphin

+ Horn Bk 22:431 N '46 3200w

"It is as readable as it is important and contains criticism of special value to writers and artists and publishers in England as well as in this country." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 22:457 N '46 180w

Reviewed by G. E. Cartmell

Library J 72:87 Ja 1 '47 70w

"Of a life so retiring and about one who had no use for publicity Miss Lane has written an excellent account, full of understanding of this very individual and English character." M. C.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 21 '46 300w

"Peter Rabbit, Jemima Puddle-Duck, Tiggy Wiggy and Hunca Munca have been granted a just apotheosis upon the children's Olympus, and one approaches a biography of their creator with proportionate good will. Then one discovers that, even if Beatrix Potter did not already interest us as a writer and illustrator, she would command our attention by the singularity of her character. And of this excellent material Miss Margaret Lane has made the best use. She writes crisply, perspicaciously and succinctly." Raymond Mortimer

+ New Statesman & Nation 32:84 Ag 3 '46 1000w

"The background and the indomitable character of the heroine alone would have made this biography interesting, but Miss Lane's skillful treatment has made it, in addition, a really delightful book of an unusual sort."

+ New Yorker 22:126 N 2 '46 160w

Reviewed by Hannah Hinsdale

San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 10 '46 200w

"Miss Lane's book gives as full and methodical an account as possible of this 'modest and unsensational' life. Occasionally, where facts are thin, there are unfortunate 'descriptive' passages in a pseudo Virginia Woolf style, but on the whole a good sober piece of work is done. The book is generously illustrated, with photographs and examples of Miss Potter's art; and there is information on her other achievements—her farming ability and work for the National Trust. The admirer will admire her more for some of the extracts from letters at the end of her life." Gwendolen Freeman

+ — Spec 177:42 J1 12 '46 900w

Time 48:106 N 11 '46 1350w

"It is perhaps her biographer's best achievement to have given us an entirely convincing picture of that endearing, sturdy, formidable person, so different from the thin solitary girl of Bolton Gardens—Mrs. Heelis of Sawrey, chairman of the Herdwick Sheep-Breeders' Association and zealous protagonist of the National Trust. The book, is attractively produced with twenty illustrations. There are rather too many Victorian family photographs, and it would have interested many people to see a reproduction, perhaps in colour, of one of Miss Potter's landscapes, or a photograph showing her Sawrey home in its Lakeland setting. But no one would wish to part with the picture done for Sir Henry Roscoe, the chemist, of a scholarly band of mice experimenting scientifically with toasted cheese."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p369 Ag 3 '46 700w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p6 D 1 '46 800w

LANG, ANDREW. Arabian nights. See Arabian nights entertainments

LANG, DON. Strawberry roan; with ill. by Gertrude Howe. 218p $2 Oxford
Horses—Legends and stories 46-11954

"Roscoe and Strawberry were friends of long standing. When Roscoe wasn't allowed to sleep in the stall with Strawberry the great trotting horse lost his race. And when the Connecticut River flooded the Meadowbrook stables and an injury forced Strawberry to leave the track, naturally Roscoe went with him—to adventures in farming, the grocery business and the circus. . . Only in the illustrations do we know that Roscoe is a little Negro boy." N Y Times

"Stories of love between a boy and a horse have been told before, but seldom have the characters been portrayed as well as are young Roscoe and David Hal, champion trotter. And never has there been such a pig as Florabella, or such a 'banty' rooster. Don Lang is a fine writer. You know it by the end of the first paragraph which sets a style, a mood and a promise of a rich story to come." Ben Thomas

+ Book Week p20 N 10 '46 280w

Booklist 43.89 N 15 '46

"Line drawings and an effective wraparound jacket in color make this good merchandise as well as a surely popular story for libraries."

+ Kirkus 14.526 O 15 '46 90w

"Recommended." D. M. MacDonald.
+ Library J 71:1720 D 1 '46 70w

"For animal lovers, 11 to 14, here is a natural, understanding story of a boy and his horse." Frances Smith

+ N Y Times p4 N 10 '46 100w

"The distinction of this story lies in the relationship between a great horse and a boy. There is a sound knowledge of horses and boys, humor and feeling in both characterizations. The drawings of Roscoe and Strawberry are satisfying." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:61 N 9 '46 250w

LANG, HARRY. Corpse on the hearth. 240p
$2 Macrae Smith co.

Detective story. 46-3215

— Kirkus 14:81 F 15 '46 70w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p34 Ap 28 '46 140w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p21 Ap 21 '46 180w

LANG, OLGA. Chinese family and society. 395p $4 Yale univ. press
392 Family. Sociology. China—Civilization A46-4602

"A thoughtful analysis of Chinese family life and social structures, using information gathered in that country during 1936 and 1937. . . The first part of the book presents the various aspects of family life in Old China, while the second, comprising the bulk of the material, is concerned with the family in contemporary China. No facet has been neglected, from the changes in thought and modes of living of each member in village, town, and city families to the effects wrought among certain groups who work in factories and the various degrees of change that occur because of money, education, and religion. The section dealing with students is particularly vital." Scientific Bk Club R

"The author would be the first to admit that it is unfortunate that her study closed in 1937. The extent of the transformation which the war has brought about is another large field of research. We are indebted to Miss Lang for this clarifying picture of the trends of family life in modern China, spread before us in a book which is probably the most careful work in this field in the English language." J. S. Burgess

+ — Ann Am Acad 248:296 N '46 800w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '46

Current Hist 11:330 O '46 50w

Kirkus 14:91 F 15 '46 150w

"Important scholarly work. . . Copious notes with bibliographical data. Recommended for small library purchase." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 71:667 My 1 '46 140w

Reviewed by Yang Kang

Nation 163:563 N 16 '46 460w

Reviewed by Eleanor Lattimore

N Y Times p42 S 15 '46 1150w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 S 15 '46 120w

+ Scientific Bk Club R 17:4 My '46 200w

"Most illuminating are the reactions of China's youth to the problems of love and marriage, and parental authority—the new view concerning filial piety and the classical tradition. Interesting, too, are the varying reactions to nepotism which so long had a place in Chinese life. Though excellent in all these respects, one perceives a slight dogmatism in the author's approach, a lack of sympathy for the Confucian and Taoist world-outlook, and perhaps too little recognition of the basically democratic structure of Chinese society."

U S Quarterly BkI 2:326 D '46 290w

Reviewed by Rodney Gilbert

Weekly Book Review p16 S 22 '46 1750w

LANG, OTTO. Downhill skiing, with an introd. by Hannes Schneider. rev & enl ed 113p il $2 Holt

796.93 Skis and ski running 46-25278

"Fine new photographs taken in America and some revision in a book that first appeared in 1936. Author is a European of the Arlberg school." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1937.

Booklist 43.55 O 15 '46

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ag 10 '46 50w

LANGE, ANNEKE DE, pseud. See Chase, E. H.

LANGLEY, EVE. Not yet the moon. 377p $2.75 Dutton

46-2023

Picaresque novel about two sisters, Steve and Blue, and their adventures as migratory workers in Gippsland and the Australian Alps. The poetic passionate Steve is the narrator.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Book Week p9 Ap 28 '46 450w

"There are parts of the book that etch unforgettable pictures. There is a revealing awareness of the conditions that gave rise to social problems. There is a sense of being an intimate part of the scene—not outside looking in. . . But the author—for me at least—throws the whole book out of key by her flowery style, her ramblings away from the point of the story—if there is one. The central character is an unconvincing—and most unprepossessing character, a self-conscious prude, driven by an abnormal sex urge which her sub-conscious refutes. An odd and unpleasant book."

+ — Kirkus 14:79 F 15 '46 170w

LANGLEY, EVE—Continued

"It makes an exciting story, with its picturesque, fledgling impressions and grace of style. The witty details etching this exotic geography, the brusque asides, are refreshing, if romantic, reading. . . The peculiar charm of this book (it tells many sly stories not strictly within the novel form) is the Puckish laugh and the rich, earthy figures in which it exults." Harry Roskolenko

+ N Y Times p8 Ap 28 '46 320w

"The amusing, and sometimes desperate, existence of the girls elicits humorous sympathy and indulgent interest by turns. As a naturalistic, simple story of adventure, 'Not Yet The Moon' is invested with potentialities, some of which are realized with humor, clarity, and pathos by the author. Yet on the whole, there is little grasp of the adolescent emotional climate evoked by the situation." Palmer Bovie

+ Sat R of Lit 29:37 My 11 '46 550w

"It is full of poetry, much beauty and fun." M. M. Dickey

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Je 30 '46 360w

"Steve's story is told in the first person, with herself as narrator, and in a style that is both forceful and poetic. Scenes are brought to life with vivid sensory images that produce an unusual effect of immediacy. At times the conversation seems improbable because of the author's disregard of the conventional boundary between fantasy and reality; but if you do not insist on a book's trailing close on the heels of fact, if you tolerate an occasional extension of the realms of probability, you will like Miss Langley's novel." Stephen Stepanchov

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Ap 28 '46 450w

LANHAM, EDWIN MOULTRIE. Slug it slay.
234p $2 Harcourt

46-7804

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Book Week p25 N 24 '46 80w

Booklist 43:171 F 1 '47

Kirkus 14:530 O 15 '46 90w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p40 N 10 '46 150w

"Wild guesswork and feeble characterizations add up to a thoroughly second-rate book, surprising on Harcourt Brace's small and generally distinguished mystery list." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 17 '46 70w

"Newspapermen—and woman—who act, talk, and think like real thing make this outstanding—plus beautiful surprise ending."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:80 D 7 '46 40w

"Here's proof that it is possible to write a newspaper mystery that is neither juvenile nor silly. . . Recommended for its occupational color and earnest puzzling." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p46 N 10 '46 180w

LANIER, SIDNEY. Centennial edition of [his] works [general ed. Charles R. Anderson]. 10v pl $30 Johns Hopkins press

811

A46-2793

"This collected edition of the poems and prose writings of Sidney Lanier was originally planned to appear (as its general title indicates) in 1942, in celebration of the hundredth anniversary of the poet's birth; the war necessitated a postponement. Undertaken by Duke University, the project was at an early stage transferred to Johns Hopkins. The auspices are appropriate, for in its very early days Lanier was a lecturer on English literature on the staff of the new institution. Much of his ripest and most thoughtful work was done in Baltimore, the city of his mature manhood." Christian Science Monitor

"The elaborate and meticulous studies devoted by Professor Anderson and his fellow-editors to this large corpus of writings, the pains taken to 'establish,' introduce, and comment upon the texts, are comparable in extent and minuteness to those expended by other scholars upon the works of the great masters. The plan adopted required separate introductions (some of them of extreme length) to each volume; and this plan has involved a good deal of avoidable repetition, acceptable, however, because it has made for an admirable clarity of narrative and analysis." S. C. Chew

Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 10 '46 1350w

"It is a gallant and heroic figure who emerges from these volumes. Each generation will admire anew the fortitude with which he met illness and poverty, the consecrated devotion to art, the lyrical sense of beauty, the deep integrity, the gentleness and magnanimity of the man. Yet in the last analysis Lanier's reputation must rest on his poems. Edmund Gosse found these 'never simple, never easy, never in one single lyric natural and spontaneous for more than one stanza  a grotesque violence to language and preposterous storm of sound.'" H. S. Commager

+ N Y Times p6 O 20 '46 2200w

"It is a first-rate job of bookmaking and editing. . . The kind of thing that is very much needed to fill out the still incomplete picture of literary activity in the United States during the latter part of the nineteenth century but that is seldom undertaken without the benevolence of a university press. This edition contains a very great amount of hitherto unpublished material: drafts and notes for unfinished poems, and nearly twelve hundred letters, of which only two or three hundred have ever been printed before." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 22:134 D 14 '46 1350w

"The work as a whole should be an unparalleled quarry for future investigators who may wish to reconstruct stages in the full-circumference growth of Lanier's mind and art in relation to his environment, his reading, and his associates. Since the Johns Hopkins University did so much to nourish and inspire Lanier, it is highly fitting that that University should have assembled with scientific care the basic Lanier collections and published this handsomely printed complete edition which should serve as a landmark in scholarship."

+ U S Quarterly BkI 2:172 S '46 550w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

Weekly Book Review p1 Ag 25 '46 2900w

"Although retarded three years by the war, the handsome Centennial Edition symbolizes the general acceptance of Sidney Lanier as an American man of letters. Always provocative to the poet, to the musician, to the Southerner (somewhat as Thoreau is to the New Englander), Lanier now becomes required reading for us all. The Centennial Edition, with its many pages of criticism, is at once the culmination of the increased study of Lanier and the commencement of our real evaluation of him. What can be said of no other major American writer can now be said of Lanier: he is before us entire in the dress of modern scholarship." S. T. Williams

+ Yale R n s 36:179 autumn '46 950w

LANSING, MRS ELISABETH CARLETON (HUBBARD) (MARTHA JOHNSON, pseud). Nancy Naylor, captain of flight nurses. 241p
$2 Crowell

46-2361

Continues the story of the American nurse Nancy Naylor. In this novel for older girls Nancy does her share in evacuating the wounded to England after D-day.

"Sustained dramatic interest, interesting background, but inadequate, two-dimensional characterization."

+ Kirkus 14:38 Ja 15 '46 80w

"Recommended for junior high school girls." Nelle McCalla

+ Library J 71:1058 Ag '46 70w

"Neither characterization nor writing are good enough to compensate for the plot. Not recommended." El. W. Turpin

+ Library J 71:1058 Ag '46 50w

Reviewed by F. N. Chrystie

N Y Times p14 Ap 21 '46 70w

LAO T'AI-T'AI. See Ning, Lao T'ai-t'ai

LAPRADE, MALCOLM. That man in the kitchen; how to teach a woman to cook. 244p il $2.50 Houghton
641.5 Cookery 46-5924

An anecdotal discussion of cooking, interspersed with some recipes, by the travel tour man, known on the radio for fifteen years as The Man from Cooks. Index of recipes.

Booklist 43:9 S '46

"With all its tongue in cheek attitudinizing, there's lots of good sound sense (and some of us women may borrow a few hints)."

+ Kirkus 14:235 My 15 '46 170w

Reviewed by Idwal Jones

N Y Times p23 Ag 25 '46 600w

"Mr. LaPrade's got some good stuff in his book . . . but his style is—well, he's the kind of writer, for instance, who suggests with the sherry only 'a few simple potato chips,' quite as if there were some danger of serving a complicated potato chip. . . . He runs a bit to the cute, too, with suggestions for 'that intimate little dinner for two, when you feel in good form for cooking.'" J. H. Jackson

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p16 Jl 15 '46 170w

Reviewed by H. S. Neal

Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 20 '46 280w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p28 O 6 '46 290w

Wis Lib Bul 42:127 O '46

LARDNER, RING WILMER. Portable Ring Lardner; ed. with an introd. by Gilbert Seides. (Viking portable lib) 756p $2 Viking

817

46-7398

Selections from the works of Ring Lardner, including two novels, You Know Me Al, and the Big Town, some newspaper columns, short stories, parodies and plays. An introductory essay by Gilbert Seides contains critical material.

"As Gilbert Seides notes in an incisive introduction, Ring Lardner, even when writing about left-handed pitchers and Tin Pan Alley dopes, was writing about humanity at large. He did it with a sharp knowledge of character and with an ear for American language and dialogue matched by few of his predecessors, contemporaries, or imitators. You're making a grave error if you pass up this volume." Herman Kogan

+ Book Week p6 O 13 '46 450w

Booklist 43:134 Ja 1 '47

"Well organized, well worthwhile."

+ Kirkus 14:310 Jl 1 '46 90w

Reviewed by Richard Watts

New Repub 115:487 O 14 '46 550w

"I can't agree with Mr. Seides that even the least of Lardner's stories had universal implications, or even that he was altogether the legitimate descendant of Swift and Twain, but, if I understand a rather nebulous and literary term, he could 'project' all right, to the end of life. His characters usually led appallingly childish or vicious lives, but he wrote about them with the mature, exact judgment of a man whose comprehension of life clearly exceeded the limits imposed by his material. . . . The best things Lardner wrote, the ruthless, hilarious, incomparable portraits of morons, sadists, drunkards, and bores, are all here, and they make a wonderful Hogarthian gallery." Wolcott Gibbs

+ N Y Times p13 O 6 '46 1200w

"A highly satisfactory collection, containing some of the very best Lardner, some of the next best, and only a few pieces—mostly stuff written for newspapers—that don't quite stand up today."

+ — New Yorker 22:118 O 26 '46 100w

"It's a fine, inclusive winnowing of Lardner's work, in which you have a chance to see Lardner in almost all his manifestations—as journalist-in-general, as sports writer, as baseball fictioneer, as parodist, playwright and short story writer. . . . Altogether it's hard to see how

Mr. Seides could have done better. And his 'Introduction,' it should be said, is a good deal more than just that. It is as neat a critical essay on the art of Ring Lardner as anyone has ever put into print." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 2 '46 550w

Weekly Book Review p35 O 6 '46 320w

LARIAR, LAWRENCE, ed. Best cartoons of the year, 1946. 128p $2 Crown

741.5 Caricatures and cartoons

Collection of cartoons, selected by the artists themselves, from their work in Liberty, Collier's, The Saturday Evening Post, This Week, and other magazines.

"The laugh meter would—judging from unofficial tests at hand—show a low rating of entertainment value."

— Kirkus 14:619 D 1 '46 50w

Reviewed by Paul Speegle

San Francisco Chronicle p12 D 1 '46 50w

"The job must be no snap, but the results are harmony and laughter. The cartoons have been plucked from all the favorite sources, and just so there will be no favoritism the editor uses a few of his own." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p7 D 1 '46 70w

LAROM, HENRY V. Mountain pony; a story of the Wyoming Rockies; il. by Ross Santee. (Whittlesey house publication) 240p $2 McGraw

Horses—Legends and stories 46-7448

Western story for boys and girls. It describes a summer spent on a Wyoming ranch, where Andy visits his uncle, and has all sorts of exciting adventures, including trouble with game rustlers.

"A splendid story of a boy in the Wyoming Rockies, and believe it or not, the scene is Wyoming today, with a new kind of rustler—the game rustler—who carries his booty away by airplane. Further more the local color is not vaguely Western, but clearly and crisply Wyoming." Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 178:166 D '46 60w

Booklist 43:120 D 15 '46

"Good, modern Western adventure with some stock characters that do not try too hard."

+ Kirkus 14:326 Jl 15 '46 90w

"Well-made book with line drawings by Ross Santee." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 71:1720 D 1 '46 70w

"A rattling good old-fashioned Western with modern angles." Alden Hatch

+ N Y Times p5 N 10 '46 120w

Reviewed by Dorothy Hamilton

San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 10 '46 90w

"This is a story that, with its sage-brush atmosphere, its real men, boys and horses, its elemental nature, makes almost any one wish that Wyoming would be his new home."

+ Weekly Book Review p34 N 10 '46 400w

LARSON, GUSTAV EDWARD, and others. Selecting and operating a business of your own. 364p $3 Prentice-Hall

371.425 Vocational guidance. Business

46-3487

"A guide for choosing and setting up a small business enterprise." (Subtitle) Partial contents: A sporting goods store; A retail drug store; A general merchandise store; A grocery store; A hardware store; An aviation service business; A dry cleaning business; A beauty shop; A restaurant; A small factory; An electrical appliance and radio shop; A shoe repair shop; Farming as a small business; Business and farming opportunities in Alaska; How to find opportunities; Small business checklist; Index.

Booklist 42:324 Je 15 '46

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:981 Jl '46 70w

LARSON, GUSTAV EDWARD, and TELLER, WALTER MAGNES, eds. What is farming? 410p maps $2.95 Van Nostrand

630 Agriculture

Agr46-150

"Not primarily on farming technique, but a broad account of the various aspects of agriculture in the U.S. Discusses the kinds of farming found in all parts of the country; climate, soil, water, and plants as the base of agriculture; and farming as a way of life. In addition there is general information on farm buildings and tools, planning and management, and opportunities and methods of getting started in agriculture." Booklist

Booklist 42:196 F 15 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '46

Reviewed by P. M. Wagner

Weekly Book Review p10 Ja 13 '46
750w

LARSSON, GOSTA. Ships in the river. (Whiteseey house publication) 378p $2.75 McGraw 46-2673

The New York waterfront is the scene of this strange love story of Jan, an upright Bohemian stevedore, who was saving money to go back to his home in Bohemia, until he met the strange Norwegian beauty, Karen. Karen's nephew tells the story of his aunt in Norway, and then in New York with Jan.

Reviewed by Gordon Bercovici

Book Week p17 Ap 7 '46 320w

"The author uses his first American setting, and gives an impression of firsthand knowledge of the background, the river, ships, docks, bosses, unions, workers—and writes of human labors in understanding terms. Good blend of labor problems with human relations."

+ Kirkus 14:46 F 1 '46 190w

"Limited appeal. Recommended for public libraries." H. A. Carpenter

+ Library J 71:406 Mr 15 '46 70w

"Mr. Larsson's thinking and writing are simple, direct and honest. His episodic devices frequently impart an annoying jerkiness to his tale, but he fails in no sense in rounding out what might be considered his basic theme—the atrocious racketeering inherent in the New York waterfront system." George Horne
+ N Y Times p18 Ap 7 '46 400w

"The story in Mr. Larsson's novel is quite simple and unambitious, about a longshoreman and a girl, and how his love for her regenerates her. Now there is a summary that would seem to damn the book with its promise of staleness, but the fact is that 'Ships in the River' is level about its plot in charm and freshness. This is entirely due to the sincerity of its writing." N. L. Rothman
+ Sat R of Lit 29:14 J1 27 '46 320w

Reviewed by Richard Match

Weekly Book Review p8 Ap 7 '46 650w

LA SALLE, DOROTHY. Guidance of children through physical education. 292p il $3 Barnes, A.S.

371.7322 Physical education and training.
Education of children 46-5310

"The education of elementary-school children on the playfields and in the gymnasiums is advanced which should prove of interest to all teachers, especially those in the field of physical education. Too frequently educators have looked on children's play as a natural outlet for physical and emotional needs which will take care of itself with little or no attention from the teacher. After a careful reading of this book, one is convinced that physical education, as defined therein, is the center around which education revolves." El School J

"From the content, one may be inclined to judge that this publication is a course of study for physical-education teachers. However, it is much more than that. It gives a broad educational philosophy which may be helpful to all elementary-school teachers, and it shows strength in its style, organization, and illustrations. It does not overlook the essential element in any good guidance program—evaluation. . . Whether or not the reader agrees with the philosophy of education and the inclusion of such a program within the school curriculum, this book will furnish him with a challenge and cause him to be more critical of the type of physical-education program now offered." F. E. Brooks

+ El School J 47:55 S '46 700w

School & Society 63:431 Je 15 '46 20w

LASCH, ROBERT. Breaking the building blockade. 316p $3 Univ. of Chicago press
331.833 Housing A46-9

An editorial writer for the Chicago Sun, attacks the problem of America's housing shortage. "The main outlines of policy by which Mr. Lasch hopes to attain his objectives can only be listed here. They include, besides the loans and subsidies for low-rent housing just mentioned, a continuous campaign of anti-trust-law enforcement in the construction industry by the Department of Justice, especially to break monopolistic labor practices; the adoption of modernized building codes by local governments; mass purchasing of basic house-building materials under Government sponsorship; the year-around stabilization of house-building activity and the reform of the property tax. Similarly, concrete proposals are advanced for urban redevelopment." (N Y Times) Index.

Reviewed by C. S. Ascher

Ann Am Acad 248 295 N '46 380w

"This is 'must' reading for all persons interested in supporting and developing a sound housing program for families of all income levels." E. E. Clarke

+ Book Week p3 Ap 7 '46 800w

Booklist 42:262 Ap 15 '46

Bookmark 7:4 N '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '46

Current Hist 10:130 Ag '46 200w

Eng N 136:96 My 16 '46 200w

"Here is a plan, local, state and federal, for low-rent housing and urban redevelopment based on socio-moral-economic principles to break the building blockade. Timely and valid."

+ Kirkus 14:172 Ap 1 '46 150w

"The book is a clear exposition of the housing problem. It is logical, sincere, and effective in its argument. There will be disagreement with its findings and conclusions, as there must be about any book on what is today America's No. 1 headache. One must criticize its failure to recognize that the pent-up demand for the housing of 60,000,000 people in the next ten years presents us with the choice of rebuilding America's cities or of stratifying the existing obsolete patterns for generations ahead. The author, however, seems not to have made up his mind whether private or public enterprise should have the main share of the job." Charles Abrams

+ Nation 162:511 Ap 27 '46 800w

Reviewed by B. B. Seligman

New Repub 114:706 My 13 '46 600w

"This is a book for everyone concerned about the broader lines of America's post-war contours. Written in clear, incisive style by an experienced journalist . . . it paints a picture that will shock many laymen, but it also suggests a course of action that is eminently realistic and level-headed. The problem badly needs popular understanding." A. D. Gayer
+ N Y Times p6 Ap 14 '46 1650w

"Robert Lasch has written a good book, one that is particularly opportune today. His work, fortunately, is not cluttered up with charts and technical detail that the average reader would skim over. Lasch presents, in forceful language, a thoughtful analysis of housing as it affects the country as a whole." E. J. Kahn
+ Sat R of Lit 29:38 Je 8 '46 1050w

Reviewed by N. J. Demerath

Social Forces 25:229 D '46 550w

"The book makes two outstanding contributions: it enumerates and analyzes the many dissociated elements which combine to complete a house, and it gives perspective to them by a wealth of data, not coldly arrayed in columns of figures but skillfully presented in clear, concise language. . . The fault of the book, a common one in this field, is its attempt to carry weaker causes into popular favor on the strong back of the housing movement." Alfred Rheinheim

+ — Survey G 35:300 Ag '46 650w

"Though perhaps too visionary and idealistic to be practical for immediate needs, Mr. Lasch's study does attempt to break down the obstacles which stand in the way of producing homes for the one third of the population which falls into the low-income bracket."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:204 S '46 280w

"Mr. Lasch's forceful and documented criticism of present principles and practices in respect to housing is a valuable contribution toward the formation of such a new attitude—even if it should not be Mr. Lasch's own attitude." H. W. Baehr

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Ap 14 '46 600w

LASERSON, MAX M. Russia and the western world; the place of the Soviet Union in the comity of nations. 275p $2.50 Macmillan

327.47 Russia—Foreign relations. Russia—History 45-10252

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Reviewed by Michael Karpovich

Am Hist R 52:127 O '46 550w

"One of the very solid merits of this study by Professor Laserson is that it keeps its head. . . [He] has written a scholarly book which clarifies the position of the Soviet Union today by setting it in the historical perspective of Russian political and social evolution. He commands Russian sources and has used Soviet and pre-Soviet periodicals and books to make available material on Soviet jurisprudence, historiography, and federalism which has hitherto been accessible only to those who read Russian. It is regrettable that the somewhat turgid and forbidding style of this volume may deny it the audience which it otherwise deserves." Merle Fainsod

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:367 Ap '46 600w

Reviewed by D. F. White

Ann Am Acad 245:183 My '46 400w

Reviewed by Harvey O'Connor

Book Week p6 Ja 20 '46 700w

Current Hist 10:253 Mr '46 1550w

Foreign Affairs 24:558 Ap '46 110w

"When German aggression made allies of Russia and the democracies, the place of the Soviet Union in the comity of nations became one of the foremost problems in practical urgency and in theoretical fascination. Toward its understanding Professor Laserson, who was born and educated in the Russian Empire, has made a valuable and scholarly contribution. The reader need not share his optimism to benefit from his dispassionate and well-informed discussions; the facts, presented with care and analyzed with penetration, may warrant different conclusions from those he has drawn. But in the impressionistic literature on Russia this book stands out as one that does not remain on the surface but opens new and truer perspectives." Hans Kohn

+ N Y Times p37 Ap 14 '46 950w

"The breadth of view and keen sympathetic insight that characterized Laserson's work are unfortunately marred by the fuzziness of many passages, arising perhaps from undue haste in the writing. Yet the book will well repay careful scrutiny by the reader who wishes to see in perspective the ideological evolution of the Soviet régime in specific characteristic phases." J. D. Clarkson

+ — Pol Sci Q 61:142 Mr '46 1200w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:51 Mr '46 280w

Reviewed by George Vernadsky

Yale R n s 35:751 summer '46 490w

LASSWELL, HAROLD DWIGHT. World politics faces economics; with special reference to the future relations of the United States and Russia. 108p $1.25 McGraw

338.91 World politics. U.S.—Economic policy 46-283

"A publication of the Committee for Economic Development Research Study, this is principally a view of the economic relations between the United States and Russia, in which the author shows some similarities (as he sees them) between Russian policy of today and the policy of the American founders. He also gives sympathetic explanation to some Russian lines of political thought." Current Hist

"The book is written in a rather unusual form, consisting of a series of propositions with explanatory comments and analysis. The material is for the most part tightly packed together and repays close study and re-reading. Not the least attractive aspect of the author's recommendations is that they make good sense even without taking account of the contribution they might make to better Russo-American relations." Max Gideonse

+ Am Econ R 36:431 Je '46 1250w

Reviewed by Lawrence Pelletier

Am Pol Sci R 40:611 Je '46 350w

Reviewed by O. C. Cox

Am Soc R 11:777 D '46 550w

"This work may be rated as good in execution and excellent in intention." S. S. Harcave

+ Ann Am Acad 246:143 Jl '46 440w

Current Hist 10:350 Ap '46 90w

Foreign Affairs 24:742 Jl '46 90w

"A great merit of this little book lies in the earnestness of the endeavor to attain a well-balanced and rational view of a subject which has been laden and overlaid with emotions. It is an admirably sincere effort to examine several important obstacles to a peaceful understanding with Russia. The result is an enlightened and thought-provoking contribution. It does not solve any concrete problems. But anyone concerned with these problems will find Lasswell's study an illuminating guide" Alexander Gerschenkron

+ — J Pol Econ 54:565 D '46 1050w

"Mr. Lasswell's major premise is not to be denied. . . The political solutions which Mr. Lasswell offers are unsatisfactory. He does not recognize the revolutionary impact which atomic weapons and the other developments of modern applied science for destruction will have on our political institutions. Indeed he minimizes the new weapons to a point which necessarily orients his political recommendations toward past practices. . . A word is necessary about the form of this book. Its ninety-one pages of text consist of a series of statements, each of which is followed by a brief comment. This style is appropriate to, say, the American Law Institute's Restatements of Law; but it is not suitable to a subject of such general interest as this." T. K. Finletter

Sat R of Lit 29:60 Ap 13 '46 1250w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:129 Je '46 250w

Reviewed by W. T. R. Fox

Yale R n s 36:164 autumn '46 350w

LATHAM, BARBARA (MRS HOWARD COOK). Perrito's pup; ill. by [the author]. [32p] $1.25 Knopf

46-20989

Picture-story book for ages three to seven. It describes the antics of a frisky little pup, who was never accepted as a real dog by the old dog Perrito, until the day the pup fell into the pond.

Kirkus 14:418 S 1 '46 70w

"Recommended for ages 3-7." S. J. Robinson
+ Library J 71:1335 O 1 '46 40w

"The illustrations in black and white with touches of rust and blue are quite charming and reveal a love and knowledge of dogs." Leone Garvey

+ San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 10 '46 80w

LATHROP, WEST. Black river captive; il. by Dwight Logan. 307p $2.50 Random house 46-6303

With only a knife made out of a French sword and the memory of a wordless song his mother had sung as a heritage, fourteen-year-old Jethro set out to find his kin. The time was during the French and Indian wars, the place New Hampshire. When he was captured by Indians his hopes seemed slim, but eventually it was that capture which led him to his father. For older boys.

Booklist 43:59 O 15 '46

"Excellent tale of Indian warfare in 1757."

A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:470 N '46 150w

"Good library and school material."

+ Kirkus 14:276 Je 15 '46 80w

"Thoroughly good story of French and Indian War. . . Well written, excellently plotted, with a hero that boys will long to emulate. A book hard to put down and highly recommended" Gertrude Andrus

+ Library J 71:1336 O 1 '46 70w

"A good adventure tale for 10 to 14 year olds." Frances Smith

+ N Y Times p14 S 29 '46 140w

"This is an exciting story, with a carefully developed plot and good characterization. As a story it is completely plausible. It all could have happened at many places along the frontier in the mid-eighteenth century. Unfortunately for this reviewer's peace of mind, the setting of the tale is within a few miles of his home. He knows that the maps, and some of the descriptions, are not accurate and that the story could not have happened when and where it is supposed to have happened. This will not trouble most readers; but it is regrettable that the author's research was not as sound as his storytelling ability." R. A. Brown

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:54 N 9 '46 310w

LATOURETTE, KENNETH SCOTT. Short history of the Far East. 665p maps $6; text ed $4.75 Macmillan

950 East (Far East)—History 46-2846

Comprehensive history of the Far East, including India and southeast Asia from the days of the earliest records to the defeat of Japan. Bibliography at end of each chapter except two. Index.

"Any weakness which this survey has is more than balanced by the clarity of style with which it is composed and the objectivity with which the author has drawn his outlines and his conclusions. The brief bibliographical references at the chapter ends are carefully chosen. The half-dozen outline maps at the end are excellent, as is the volume as a whole." H. F. MacNair

+ Ann Am Acad 247:188 S '46 700w

Booklist 42:326 Je 15 '46

Christian Century 63:1214 O 9 '46 300w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 3 '46 600w

Foreign Affairs 25:347 Ja '47 30w

"Clear maps and a full index add to the value of the book which includes so much of current importance in concise and readable form. Recommended." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 71:584 Ap 15 '46 130w

"A well organized, comprehensive and always interesting history. . . As objective as he is, however, it must be noted that the author is essentially conservative in his inclinations, which, while it certainly does not weigh heavily upon his political judgment, makes it advisable to check up on him when he is contemplating such matters as the Chinese Communists and the influence of the USSR."

+ — New Repub 114:813 Je 3 '46 170w

New Yorker 22:87 Je 22 '46 80w

"College students, teachers who, at whatever level, are called on to deal with the Far East, and in fact any American who is willing to do solid reading about Asia in order to acquire real knowledge, will find Latourette's A Short History of the Far East far and away the best one-volume survey of Eastern Asia obtainable." M. E. Cameron

+ Social Educ 10:377 D '46 550w

Wis Lib Bul 42:129 O '46

LATOURETTE, KENNETH SCOTT. The United States moves across the Pacific; the A.B.C.'s of the Am. problem in the western Pacific and the Far East. 174p $2 Harper

327.73 U.S.—Relations (general) with East (Far East) 46-25100

"U.S. interest in the Pacific is seen as an inevitable step in our westward expansion. This study summarizes the development of U.S. Pacific interest since the eighteenth century, reviews policy and type of American interest in various areas, and appraises problems today and the course that the U.S. can take. The author is more suspicious of other nation's interests, particularly Russia's, than of ours, but he recognizes and warns against the possibilities of American imperialism." (Booklist) Index.

Reviewed by R. H. Heindel

Ann Am Acad 247:189 S '46 320w

Booklist 42:276 My 1 '46

"Even in as short a book as this, Dr. Latourette might helpfully have said much more about that problem than he has. His closing section, outlining a future Far Eastern policy for the United States, is packed with wisdom. He sees the danger of an American imperialism, and warns against it. He sees the 'morass' we are getting into in internal Chinese politics, and warns against it. . . He offers no panaceas, and he is free—thanks be!—from all cocksureness. But it would be hard to compress into equal space an anywhere nearly equal amount of genuine, far-sighted statesmanship."

+ Christian Century 63:626 My 15 '46 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '46

Reviewed by W. F. Sands

Commonweal 44:122 My 17 '46 600w

Reviewed by R. W. Battenhouse

Crozer Q 23:290 Jl '46 800w

Foreign Affairs 25:164 O '46 30w

Kirkus 14:172 Ap 1 '46 130w

Reviewed by J. K. Fairbank

Pol Sci Q 61:602 D '46 1250w

"Teachers of international relations will find this book a useful guide to American policies in all areas of the East, the author's prognostications about possible future trends being particularly suggestive. The writing is admirably clear, but the short sentences, unrelieved by semicolons, result in a staccato style which in time becomes wearisome. More emphasis on the cultural, as well as the political factors, would have been welcome."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 2:219 S '46 240w

"The younger generation is characteristically unafraid, and the older generation characteristically doubtful of the maxim 'nothing venture, nothing win.' . . It is a safe prediction that many of the younger generation will feel that Professor Latourette's caution tends to be over-cautious. They will be taken aback by his tendency to indorse liberal principles and hopes, while at the same time recommending minimum action in changing the status quo. Indeed, they will feel that when he recommends programs of action at all, they are of a kind likely to prolong the status quo. It is particularly those who feel this way who should read Professor Latourette. By measuring his prudence and sobriety they can estimate the importance of caution and reluctance to change, in our society as factors in the relations between our country and other countries." Owen Lattimore

+ Weekly Book Review p16 Je 2 '46 950w

Wis Lib Bul 42:111 Jl '46

LATTIMORE, ELEANOR FRANCES. Bayou boy; il. by [the author]. 127p $2 Morrow

46-25258

Louis was a little Negro boy, living near a bayou in Louisiana. In this simple story of everyday life Louis goes swimming, catches turtles, and watches Granny at her work. When his father decided a house in New Orleans would be nice, the whole family went to look at the house, except Granny. At the end of a long day the family gave up the idea of New Orleans; they were glad to get back to the bayou and Granny.

Book Week p4 N 10 '46 150w

Booklist 43:39 O 1 '46

"Both in the pictures and the narrative Miss Lattimore's warm feeling for childhood in its natural human relationships is revealed against a well studied background for younger children."

+ Horn Bk 22:352 S '46 120w

"Good vocabulary—clear text—make this good self-reading material, with enough story, alive characters, and social values. Charming illustrations by the author."

+ Kirkus 14:345 Ag 1 '46 120w

"Good, wholesome picture of a Negro family, full of everyday adventures and fun." N. L. Rathbun

+ Library J 71:1545 N 1 '46 70w

"This simple story of a group of happy and natural Negro boys and girls will do more toward eliminating race prejudice than a dozen books written to the theme of the oppressed Negro. First-rate prose for beginning readers and delightfully illustrated." K. S. White

+ New Yorker 22:136 D 7 '46 90w

"This whole picture of Negro life along the bayou will be fresh and new to many children. The background is colorful and the two boys lively youngsters." M. C. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:41 S 28 '46 230w

"The book has throughout the grace and sweetness that have made 'Little Pear' [Book Review Digest 1934] an American classic of the nursery. Like that, it lays the foundation of an interracial understanding we'd better encourage if this world our children will inherit is to be a healthy one for them to live in." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 O 13 '46 340w

Wis Lib Bul 42:135 O '46

LAU, MRS JOSEPHINE SANGER. Beggar boy of Galilee; il. by Frederick Hogg. 192p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury

46-7637

Story of the blind Bartimaeus and his son Caleb who lived precariously by the Sea of Galilee during the days of Christ's ministry. For ages nine to eleven.

"Stands on its merits as a remarkable book, regardless of its religious nature." Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 178:166 N '46 130w

Book Week p6 D 8 '46 70w

"Mrs. Lau endows the boy and his father with appealing personalities and has shown skill in picturing the country and the time."

+ Horn Bk 22:356 S '46 100w

Kirkus 14:385 Ag 15 '46 90w

"Details of everyday living are as vividly portrayed as the actual contacts with the crowds following Jesus and the glimpses of the Master himself. It is a good 'period' book for nine- ten- and eleven-year-olds." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 71:1467 O 15 '46 70w

"The main characters seem real and the story is well told, but the book never quite fulfills the promise of its opening chapters." E. H.

+ N Y Times p46 N 10 '46 170w

Reviewed by N. V. Morgan

San Francisco Chronicle p5 N 10 '46 70w

Wis Lib Bul 42:172 D '46

LAURENCE, WILLIAM LEONARD. Dawn over zero; the story of the atomic bomb. 274p il $3 Knopf

623.45 Atomic bomb. World war, 1939-1945 —Japan 46-5709

This volume contains the report of the New York Times writer who was assigned to cover all aspects of the atom bomb, its inception, development, the secret trials, and the final use on the cities of Japan.

Booklist 43:49 O 15 '46

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 30 '46 480w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 S '46

Kirkus 14:327 J1 15 '46 80w

"Mr. Laurence may make your flesh creep; he will also hold you enthralled." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 71:1048 Ag '46 100w

Reviewed by Milton Mazer

New Repub 115:488 O 14 '46 700w

Reviewed by H. M. Jones

N Y Times p6 Ag 25 '46 1550w

"The author, as you probably are aware, was the only newspaperman allowed to attend the secret trial in New Mexico (the code name of the area was Zero) and he knows as much as any layman about the bomb, from its genesis to its use in Japan. The first explosion of the atomic bomb knocked Mr. Laurence breathless and, judging by his style, he's been breathless ever since. His explanations of nuclear theory are well done, but you will have to pay very close attention if you intend to become a drawingroom authority on the subject."

+ New Yorker 22:100 S 7 '46 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p35 D 1 '46 100w

"To say that 'Dawn Over Zero' is exciting is as banal as saying that life itself is exciting. But the word will have to stand, for there is no other way to describe it. There is a sense of horizon to the book, a sense of intellectual and emotional expansion. There is no point in exhorting those who are bored with the subject of atomic energy to read it. There is no point in threatening them. In this case, to be bored is to be damned anyway." Norman Cousins

+ Sat R of Lit 29:7 Ag 24 '46 1700w

"For those readers for whom the Smyth report is too difficult, Dawn Over Zero is an adequate substitute. For those who find the Smyth report technically adequate but lacking in those elements needed for a great human document, William Laurence's book is an admirable supplement."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:278 D '46 300w

"At last we have the book that should have been available for the best-seller list immediately after Hiroshima along with the Smyth Report, which was almost unintelligible to the non-scientist. It should have forestalled the flood of hasty and half-informed books on the atomic bomb that appeared in the succeeding weeks and months. . . To be sure, much has happened in the last year so that Laurence's book is already dated. . . Yet 'Dawn Over Zero' is, and will long remain, an original document in the history of science, written in the blinding light of one of its greatest moments." Gerald Wendt

+ Weekly Book Review p6 S 8 '46 700w

LAURENCE, ARTHUR. Home of the brave. 167p $2 Random house

812

46-5104

A play dealing with the problem of prejudice, as seen by a young Jewish soldier, who had been shell-shocked.

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '46

"A brilliant play."

+ Kirkus 14:210 My 1 '46 20w

"One of the most distinguished of the 1945-46 crop of plays. The author has marked ability. Recommended." George Freedley

+ Library J 71:979 J1 '46 30w

"A maze of tough talk that gets nowhere." C. V. Terry

+ N Y Times p8 J1 21 '46 70w

"The play is a problem play which dares to be a play as well as a poster, and it gains its end not by preaching, but by the human appeal of the characters who move through it."

LAURENTS, ARTHUR—Continued

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:277 D '46 160w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Weekly Book Review p21 S 15 '46 130w

LAVENDER, DAVID SIEVERT. Andy Claybourne. 370p $2.50 Doubleday

46-7803

"The wall was a 700-foot rampart of crimson sandstone which stood between the impoverished farmers of Salt Creek and their wealthy neighbors of the cattle country... The span of this novel of today's West is some four years of Andy Claybourne's life—from 1937, when he was 19, to 1941, when the shadow of war was more menacing than that of the Wall." N Y Times

"A slow-paced, ineffectual story."

— Kirkus 14:399 Ag 15 '46 120w

"Mr. Lavender has given us a well-written novel with a wholly unlovable hero." Hoffman Birney

+ N Y Times p26 O 27 '46 500w

"David Lavender has created a genuine character in his hero, and the minor figures in the story are alive and authentic. This novel is real meat, not Western hash." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p36 O 27 '46 270w

LAVENDER, DAVID SIEVERT. Mike Maroney, raider. 242p il $2 Presbyterian bd.

45-6199

Story for older boys based on an actual incident of the Civil war—the capture of a locomotive in enemy territory by Union troops.

Kirkus 13:493 N 1 '45 80w

"Will be read as a railroad story, a fast-moving adventure and supplementary material for Civil War study. Recommended for seventh to ninth grades." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 70:1139 D 1 '45 70w

Wis Lib Bul 42:62 Ap '46

LAVIGNE, JEANNE DE. See De Lavigne, J.LA VIOLETTE, FORREST EMMANUEL. Americans of Japanese ancestry; a study of assimilation in the American community. 185p $2.50 Canadian inst. of int. affairs, 230 Bloor st, W, Toronto 5

325.252 Japanese in the U.S. 46-3995

"This book is about the family and community life of Americans of Japanese ancestry. It describes, in summary and through many examples, some of the problems of these people, problems resulting from a bi-racial, bi-cultural milieu in which racial discrimination is a compelling fact of life... Although it deals with an American problem of assimilation, this book owes its publication to two Canadian bodies: the Canadian Social Science Research Council, whose grant was an encouragement and assistance in the preparation of the manuscript; and the Canadian Institute of International Affairs which, through its Research Committee, has sponsored the publication." Pref

"This study is a welcome addition to the slender list of titles on Japanese-American community life before 1942... Among the more original contributions of the study are the chapters on vocational and community problems. These include, for instance, a discussion of job opportunities for Nisei, the problems presented to a young man in a Japanese family enterprise, the beginnings of interracial unionism in the canning industry, and a description of the origin and functioning of the Japanese American Citizens League." J. F. Embree

+ Am J Soc 52:285 N '46 950w

Reviewed by Edith Fowke
Canadian Forum 26:44 My '46 700w
Foreign Affairs 24:749 JI '46 20w

LAVRIN, JANKO. Tolstoy; an approach. 166p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Methuen]

B or 92 Tolstol, Lev Nikolaevich, graf 46-1937

"This book is not a biography, but an attempt to interpret Tolstoy the man, the artist, and the thinker in the light of some of our present-day needs and problems. Although based on one of [the author's] previous studies of Tolstoy, this 'approach' contains a certain amount of new material some of which became available only fairly recently." Note

Current Hist 10:539 Je '46 100w

"A tedious and pedestrian study of Tolstoy's beliefs and works... It adds little or nothing to what almost any cursory reader already knows of the great Russian writer."

— Kirkus 14:31 Ja 15 '46 90w

"Well written and no doubt an interesting addition to the many books about Tolstoy. Recommended for large libraries or for limited purchase." Jacqueline Overton

+ Library J 71:343 Mr 1 '46 70w

"Professor Lavrin expresses the highest admiration for Tolstoy as an artistic genius. In the light of this admiration it is surprising to observe that he devotes two routine chapters to a discussion of Tolstoy's art, and then dedicates much more space to a formal and unhistorical refutation of Tolstoy's moral doctrines. One wonders why he does this. If Tolstoy is most important to us for his art, then that should be dealt with in greater detail; if Tolstoy was the second or third rate thinker the Professor believes him to be, then his moral rigidities could have been polished off more quickly and concisely." J. T. Farrell

N Y Times p3 Mr 17 '46 1600w

"An intelligible 'approach' to the Russian master, in whom the author sees a creative genius of the first class overtaken in mid-career by his alter ego—a second-rate religious prophet and seer."

+ New Yorker 22:95 Mr 30 '46 130w

Reviewed by E. J. Simmons

Sat R of Lit 29:56 Ap 13 '46 1450w

"What is there about this book that is so unsatisfying and why is one inclined to mistrust the simple emphasis of the conclusions? Partly because the author of this study too obviously and easily explains away the patently sincere religious experience of an unmistakably complex and profound nature... The problem of the quarrel between the artist and the saint in Tolstoy remains to be studied by a writer, perhaps, who is not determined to prove at the outset that the saint in Tolstoy was all foolishness." Irwin Edman

Weekly Book Review p10 S 1 '46 750w

LAWRENCE, HILDA. Pavilion. 279p $2 Simon & Schuster

46-743

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p15 Ja 13 '46 450w

Booklist 42:200 F 15 '46

Bookmark 7:16 My '46

"Excellence in character and atmosphere detail, in indirect, retrospective narration, in cumulative suspense, make this a top performance in the genre."

+ Kirkus 13:480 N 1 '45 130w

"A fascinating and haunting story in which Mrs. Lawrence more than fulfills the promise of her two earlier books." E. H.

+ New Repub 114:102 Ja 21 '46 120w

"It is a somber tale with few of the trappings of the ordinary whodunit. Almost unbearable suspense is the keynote of this superb novel." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p22 Ja 13 '46 180w

"Ablly plotted, and with lots of that fine eerie atmosphere for which this author has been building herself quite a reputation lately."

+ New Yorker 21:92 Ja 12 '46 80w

Sat R of Lit 29:39 Ja 19 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p22 Ja 13 '46 180w

LAWRENCE, ISABELLE. Gift of the golden cup; a tale of Rome and pirates; il. by Charles V. John. 288p $2 Bobbs

46-3772

Atia, a twelve-year-old Roman girl, niece of Julius Caesar, is captured by Mediterranean pirates. The story of her life aboard the pirate ship follows, as well as the story of her rescue, her subsequent adventures in Athens, and her betrothal when she finally returns to her home in Rome. For older boys and girls.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p11 Je 2 '46 300w
Booklist 42:333 Je 15 '46

"It is an intimate story of a family—with excellent detail of the life and customs of the time—and a lively sense of history."

+ Kirkus 14:69 F 1 '46 210w

"Customs of the times are skilfully introduced into a well planned if somewhat lengthy plot. Modern dialogue a bit overdone in spots. Story should interest junior-high young people." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 71:920 Je 15 '46 40w

"Beginning Latin students will welcome the book for its illumination of Roman life. Social and religious customs are explained without pedantry, and the long-dead scene comes vividly alive." N. B. Baker

+ N Y Times p31 My 26 '46 120w

"The narrative is simple enough for the book to be listed as juvenile, but the historical setting is so accurate and inclusive in its detail that the book will be of interest to many older readers. . . This is a vivid portrayal of life in ancient Rome and Athens, and may be highly recommended for boys and girls and also for older readers." H. W. Marr

+ Spring'd Republican p4d My 12 '46 300w

"A story of ancient Rome whose twelve-year-old heroine casually speaks of Pompey as 'such a friend of my Uncle Gaius Caesar' should make teachers of second-year Latin come to attention. There are none too many good stories for twelve-year-olds on which to draw for such background material, and this good story covers much ground." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Je 9 '46 320w

LAWRENCE, JOSEPHINE. Double wedding ring. 301p $2.75 Appleton-Century

46-6102

Character study of a woman in her fifties. Her four children were grown-up and did not want their mother's help in solving their problems; her husband had his business problems and at times his eyes strayed to younger women. But Minnie was a wise woman after all; she solved her own problems.

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers
Book Week p10 O 27 '46 270w
Booklist 43:36 O 1 '46

"Written with Miss Lawrence's successful blend of shrewd insight and pleasant homeliness. . . Perhaps it is here and there a little sketchy and scattered in its interest; but it is serious in intent and at the same time lively in style, honestly concerned with what makes decent and happy living." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 27 '46 550w

Kirkus 14:260 Je 1 '46 110w

"Recommended for small public library purchase." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 71:1050 Ag '46 120w

"Miss Lawrence's perceptions are acute, her reporting accurate. Unfortunately—not for the book but for Miss Lawrence herself—she has a tidy mind, constantly struggling to put facts into some sort of pattern. The temptation to resolve her chaotic situations into order is almost irresistible. As there doesn't seem to be much of a solution for many of her characters, and she is too honest to offer phonies, it puts her in rather a spot." Jane Cobb

+ N Y Times p8 S 8 '46 500w

"The details are copious and photographic, but like the plot, more real than substantial." Grace Frank

Sat R of Lit 29:24 S 28 '46 230w

Spring'd Republican p6 Ag 24 '46 200w

"Minnie, as portrayed by Miss Lawrence, is an object of sympathy rather than pity. She is real, she is warm, she is generous. The essential integrity of character is hers. If there is no spark and no style in Miss Lawrence's writing to capture the imagination, there is plenty of good common sense and shrewd humor to give it substance and interest." Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Ag 25 '46 650w

LAWSON, MARIE (ABRAMS) (MRS ROBERT LAWSON). Sea is blue; il. by [the author]. 126p $2 Viking

46-7800

Short novel for older girls. It is the record of a sensitive Nantucket boy's thoughts and career from the age of eight to twenty-one, when he married Cissy.

"Don't be misled by the jacket blurb, erroneously announcing it to be 'a salty, breezy story of Nantucket.' Although it is the story of these sailing folk, it is delicate and haunting, elusive as the colors of the sea shimmering under a summer sun. . . The author's illustrations are imaginative and highly decorative. Their abstractness may be disappointing to some. But 'The Sea is Blue' tweaks the imagination. Reading it is an adventure away from the humdrum with a writer who believes there's magic in simple things." A. N.

+ Book Week p23 N 10 '46 190w

Booklist 43:171 F 1 '47

"There are exquisite word pictures in this imaginative tale. . . If you are imaginative and like poetry and rainbows and the stuff that dreams are made of, you will want to enter this realm of imagination which the gifted author-illustrator Marie A. Lawson created with words and beautiful pictures." H. F. Griswold

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 N 14 '46 180w

"There's great charm in this little story, though it has, perhaps, slow motion for the age for which it is designed."

+ Kirkus 14:457 S 15 '46 90w

Reviewed by A. H. McGinity
Library J 72 83 Ja 1 '47 70w

"There is a haunting quality in this story. The sound of the sea is in the wording. You can smell the sea all through it. . . It is a beautiful book, and a story that one will not forget." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:30 D 14 '46 320w

"This is one of the most beautifully produced books of the year. The story is spread too thin, the incidents are vague, but the illustrations, in the blue of old china, the gray of sea-mist and a deft use of white background, carry the story better than its words do." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Ja 26 '47 270w

LAXNESS, HALLDOR KILJAN. Independent people; an epic; tr. from the Icelandic by J. A. Thompson. 470p $3 Knopf

46-4757

Epic novel of Icelandic peasant life in a section of the country where living is reduced to its most elemental form. Yet in the midst of the desperate struggle for life and independence, the peasant Bjartur, who sacrificed everything to his desire for his own land, would burst into poetry. It is a study in contrasts, which proves the Icelandic assertion, "We are the independent people."

"Bitter and somber as the story is, there is a rare beauty in its telling, a beauty as surprising as the authentic strain of poetry that lies in the shoving, battering Icelandic, the master of 'Summerhouses.' It is a joy to find that such a book has a translator worthy of it. J. A. Thompson draws rich chords and harmonies as he renders the original Icelandic into English." Bruce Lancaster

LAXNESS, H. K.—Continued

+ Atlantic 178:150 S '46 430w

"One of the finest novels in years, a book which will be widely compared to Knut Hamsun's 'Growth of the Soil.'" Sterling North

+ Book Week p2 J1 28 '46 500w

Booklist 43:36 O 1 '46

Bookmark 7:13 N '46

"There is an almost unendurable pyramiding of misery in the story. In spite of gleams of sardonic humor, in spite of idyllic passages about the rare beautiful moments of an Icelandic summer, and the grudging respect due that implacable but honest man, Bjartur, and the alleviating touches of the bardic in him, the reader is certainly in no mood to be told by Mr. Laxness finally that it is of no use, anyhow, that there is no hope for the small independent farmer, not even with government grants and subsidies, for it is only the well-to-do who can afford to accept generosity. The author's vision of a socialistic State influences his conclusions, but does not affect the fine etching of his inexorable picture." W. K. R. Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 9 '46 600w

Reviewed by T. O. Sloane

Commonweal 44:482 Ag 30 '46 950w

"A sprawling, unselective, overlong folk novel of the Icelandic crofters, of sombre and superstition-ridden peoples, living from hand to mouth and yet stubbornly independent, preferring to slay their own rather than take from others. . . . A bleak and bitter book, with little to interest or attract the American reader."

— Kirkus 14:130 Mr 15 '46 150w

"Well recommended." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 71:978 J1 '46 100w

"As long and monotonous as an Icelandic winter, Independent People is without the slightest innovation either of character or theme. It is to define its excellences and limit its pretensions simply to say that it is in good taste."

New Repub 115:357 S 23 '46 180w

"The man Bjartur is a magnificent and complex symbol of peasant independence, and this whole great novel might be considered a profoundly imaginative projection of Hardy's poem." . . . The author is a sociologist writing in the naturalist tradition. . . . He knows that peasant individualism is not eternal, that it is disappearing fast in Russia, and may in many other parts of the world within this century. But as many of our American social novelists do not have, Laxness has also a poet's imagination and a poet's gift for phrase and symbol. . . . The variety and distinctiveness of Laxness' prose has come through beautifully in the natural English of J. A. Thompson's apparently admirable translation." R. G. Davis

+ N Y Times p1 J1 28 '46 1900w

"The author's saga, laid in Iceland, tells about a man who struggles for eighteen years to get hold of enough money to buy a sheep farm and then has to struggle just as hard to keep hold of it. Since such epic efforts cannot be confined within the dimensions of the ordinary novel, and since Mr. Laxness's theme is that of man against the universe, he lets himself go for four hundred and seventy pages of just about solid type. His book consequently moves at the pace of one of the livelier glaciers. I can't say that it is altogether enjoyable, particularly those long passages of somewhat murky philosophy that are as essential to an epic as the theme of man against the universe, but it's not altogether unreadable, either. Mr. Laxness's hero, it might be added, is as disagreeable a character as ever an epic was built around—hard, bigoted, and mean—and there are times when, despite his motto, 'This land will not betray its flocks,' he clearly hates the hell out of everything. The book has a certain impressiveness, but I can't get rid of the notion that much of what looks like impressiveness is simply bulk." Hamilton Bas-

— + New Yorker 22:88 Ag 17 '46 280w

"The writer himself is strangely absent from the book. His absence is more than an artistic and dispassionate detachment, such as Hardy achieved; it is marked by the almost complete lack of sympathetic characters. Only the children are invested with warmth or compassion; for the adults, Laxness seems to have only an objective kind of irony. He talks about them and they talk about each other, but never once does he take you inside an adult character. This is one of the causes of the bleak and chill atmosphere of the book, or, if you are kindly disposed to sagas, of its 'heroic proportions.' . . . It may be that 'Independent People' has suffered in the translation; Icelandic is 14th Century Norwegian, an archaic and highly inflected language. It is quite possible that the sharp edges of characterization, the harshly worded and awkward sentences were mellow and smooth-flowing in the original. Altogether, 'Independent People,' though officially described as an 'epic,' is not genuinely a great book. It is a mature piece of writing, and a complex book, but it suffers from an obscurely stated and self-contradictory philosophy." Carol Levene

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 4 '46 1750w

"This is a hard but truly great novel, which goes far to explain an entire nation. . . . With all its harshness and irony, 'Independent People' is a tender and poetic book." Roger Butterfield

+ Sat R of Lit 29:12 J1 27 '46 1000w

"A half-sympathetic, half-scornful portrait of the Icelandic peasant mind, done with broad 'epic' touches and special political intent. For Author Halldór Laxness uses his fine portrait, which is drawn in almost Holbein-like detail, as the text for a two-part sermon on the sins of capitalistic Iceland and the promised blessings of Marxism. . . . The preaching becomes a harangue only at the end. For the rest, there is a long, slow-moving narrative, often vivid, of daily life at Summerhouses farm."

Time 48:102 Ag 5 '46 650w

"I can imagine reading this book many times and always being surprised by it, surprised and moved. . . . The book is bold and forward-looking, melodramatic yet pensive, full of wry statements and sneers, and the harmony is dependent on the discordance. It is a story of today's struggles, and yet by destroying our narrow, journalistic sense of time, in opening his play with scenes from dateless history, reminder of that Iceland which was before religions came from either the West or East, we get double values." Ernestine Evans

+ Weekly Book Review p3 J1 28 '46 1450w

Reviewed by Orville Prescott

Yale R n s 36:190 autumn '46 200w

LAYHEW, JANE. R for murder. 252p $2 Lippincott

46-6101

Detective story.

Kirkus 14:262 Je 1 '46 80w

"The story moves more slowly than necessary, chiefly because of the constant inane wise-cracking of the two amateurs and the lawyer who is assisting them." Isaac Anderson

— N Y Times p25 Ag 18 '46 140w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p12 S 1 '46 50w

"Adequate."

Sat R of Lit 29:41 S 21 '46 40w

LAZARSELD, PAUL FELIX. People look at radio. 158p $2.50 Univ. of N.C. press
791.4 Radio broadcasting

"Report on a survey conducted by the National Opinion Research Center, University of Denver, Harry Field, Director, and interpreted by the Bureau of Applied Social Research, Columbia University, Paul F. Lazarsfeld, Director. Analysis of the United States public's understanding of radio and the reactions," (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by Ricker Van Metre
Book Week p20 N 24 '46 270w
Booklist 43:151 Ja 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:1715 D 1 '46 70w

"This book is remarkable on two counts; its conclusions are based upon what is said to be the first public opinion analysis of radio along sociological lines; and the survey was commissioned by the National Association of Broadcasters in the 'realization that its . . . [radio's] . . . service to the public is not beyond criticism.' . . . The book's main value is not in its statistically tabulated conclusions but in its sober approach into the too-long-neglected realm of radio sociology. The questions it raises must still await further evaluation if the social institution of radio is to discharge its full promise to the American community." Peter Irving

+ N Y Times p46 N 17 '46 500w

"A possible fault of these polls is that very few people reply critically to an offhand question and that critical opinions, when they do come, are formed on the basis of very little knowledge of what possible alternatives there are. The author seems to be aware of this, and, therefore, ventures only the most tentative conclusions." Millard Lampell

Weekly Book Review p24 D 8 '46 140w

LEACH, HENRY GODDARD, ed. Pageant of old Scandinavia. 350p $3.75 Princeton univ. press for the American-Scandinavian foundation

839.5 Scandinavian literature—Collections
46-5103

"An anthology of old Scandinavian literature from the earliest times to the fourteenth century. The selections, all translated by scholars in the respective fields, are chiefly from the Icelandic sagas and eddas, in which the Norse literary genius reached its highest expression, but there are also runic inscriptions, recipes, medical prescriptions and legal documents." Christian Century

"There will be a general agreement that the selections are well made. The author has used such translations as appeared to him to be the most worthy. A brief but scholarly survey of the beginnings and early sources of Scandinavian literature precedes the selections. Typographically the volume leaves nothing to be desired . . . One may confidently express the hope that the volume may find a generous reception by the reading public." H. B. Glason

+ Am Hist R 52:167 O '46 240w

"This is a truly fine anthology, a treasury of exciting and illuminating literary experience. It is emphatically a book to round out your library, for it is far better than any preceding work in this field." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 J1 14 '46 60w

Booklist 43:67 N 1 '46

"The volume fulfills its purpose admirably—to illustrate not only the literary virtues of the old Scandinavians, but also their history, customs and laws, religion, folk beliefs and general attitude toward life. An introduction by the editor orients the general reader, and a bibliography is appended for those who would pursue the subject further."

+ Christian Century 63:943 J1 31 '46 90w

"There is charm and entertainment in the collection."

+ Current Hist 11:230 S '46 100w

"As an introduction to a whole new field of literature, the book is one of the best ever produced, and anyone who can read it without wishing to dig deeper into the literature must be an insensitive reader indeed." Fletcher Pratt

+ N Y Times p26 S 22 '46 650w

"Dr. Leach, who for several decades has wisely and successfully guided the American-Scandinavian Foundation, has compiled an eminently readable, well documented volume." Holger Lundberg

+ Sat R of Lit 29:20 Ag 31 '46 390w

LEACOCK, STEPHEN BUTLER. The boy I left behind me. 184p $2 Doubleday

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 46-276

Brief autobiographical sketch of Stephen Leacock, describing his early years, first in England, and then in Canada. The story ends as he departs from a teaching job he disliked to study for his degree.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Book Week p7 F 3 '46 250w

Bookmark 7:13 Mr '46

"Perhaps the best of this fragmentary account of a rich life is Leacock's account of how he first realized that human kindness must be the great element of humor. For learning this lesson so early and so well we are deeply in his debt." E. W. G.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Mr 16 '46 300w

Kirkus 13:502 N 15 '45 150w

"This volume is filled with the kindly humor that marked [Leacock's] essays for many years. For general purchase and general reading." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 71:120 Ja 15 '46 80w

Reviewed by Richard Match

+ N Y Times p8 Mr 17 '46 360w

"A genial, pleasant, witty (occasionally barbed), discursive account of his boyhood in Victorian England and his life up to his twentieth year." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 29:17 F 23 '46 750w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 64:301 O 26 '46 500w

Springf'd Republican p4 Ja 26 '46 240w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ja 27 '46 950w

Wis Lib Bul 42:59 Ap '46

LEACOCK, STEPHEN BUTLER. Leacock roundabout; a treasury of [his] best works. 422p $3.50 Dodd

818 Humor

Omnibus volume composed of excerpts from some of Leacock's best works, including selections from his nonsense novels, the satires, burlesque memoirs and dramas, the hilarious reports of his experiences as a lecturer, etc.

"This book is indeed a treasury of Leacock thinking, gay, wry, shrewd and bland." Nancy Ladd

+ N Y Times p24 D 15 '46 550w

"Some of the humor may seem dated, and some of it may be a little broad for latter-day tastes, but you should find something in this book to make you laugh."

New Yorker 22:130 N 23 '46 90w

"This book is Leacock in his humor as he lived, alternately given to horse play and to horse sense, and equally admirable in either. You'll find your favorites here, from the historical drama on Napoleon to the noble series of parodies on the mystery novel. The ideal book for the bedside table in the guest-room—where you'll bed yourself down till you've finished it." A. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 D 1 '46 70w

"All of the writings in this anthology do not lie exclusively in the realm of humor. 'Eddie the Bartender' is exemplary of Leacock's simple, sympathetic treatment of the expansive bartender who is unconsciously heading toward a bucolic life through the advent of prohibition. The author's ironical treatment of life's contradictory episodes is also well illustrated in the inclusion of 'Simple Stories of Success.' The anthology would not be complete, however, without one of Leacock's plays, and the choice of 'Cast Up by the Sea' is excellent." A. C. Fields

+ Sat R of Lit 29:17 D 28 '46 230w

Weekly Book Review p17 D 29 '46 50w

LEADER, PAULINE (MRS MILLEN BRAND). Room for the night; il. by Garth Williams. 275p $2.50 Vanguard

818

46-3292

After the first World war the author's father built a large three-story rooming house back of the family home in a small Vermont town. The roomers were returned veterans, mill workers, some transients, and some permanent boarders. The book is an account of the life which went on in the Blocks, as the house was called.

Reviewed by Rosemary Taylor
Book Week p8 My 5 '46 600w
Kirkus 14:13 Ja '46 130w

"A good deal of noisy, fundamental living seems to have gone on in the Blocks, and it is unfortunate that Miss Leader is more concerned with facts than characterization. She catalogues pages of these facts, but, curiously enough, you almost never have any idea what these people are thinking or how they look. Even her mother, whom she helped constantly, keeping the drunks in order and cleaning up, is a shadow. There is no plot. 'A Room for the Night' is simply a series of reminiscences. Frequently a climax or conclusion giving some purpose to all this detail seems to be just a few pages ahead—but it isn't." Creighton Peet

N Y Times p10 Ap 28 '46 360w

Reviewed by Nancy Groberg
Sat R of Lit 29:44 Je 29 '46 450w

"A book that is just about as pleasurable and warm-hearted as a book can be. . . There were many people like these good-natured if careless, who moved through the Blocks, cherishing their tattered hopes and waiting for a change in fortune that seldom came." Herbert Kupferberg

Weekly Book Review p4 Ap 21 '46 850w

LEAF, MUNRO. Flock of watchbirds [il. by the author]. [44p] $1.50 Lippincott

170 Ethics—Juvenile literature 46-4844

Collection of watchbirds from three separate books: Watchbirds; More Watchbirds; and Fly Away, Watchbird. They portray in picture and brief descriptive text such pests as the Thumb-Sucker, the Show-off, the Nail-Biter, the Sulker, and others "that could be removed to advantage from every home."

Kirkus 14:274 Je 15 '46 70w

"Opinions vary among teachers as to the real value of Leaf's Watchbirds, as to whether children's manners are improved by caricatures of Thumb-suckers, Show-offs, Nail-biters, Squawkers, etc. At least, the pictures do furnish entertainment." Miriam Snow
Library J 71:1055 Ag '46 70w

"Somehow Munro Leaf can point out faults in children's behavior in the most uncompromising manner and yet retain not only respect but affection of the far-from-faultless." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p7 Jl 7 '46 100w

LEAF, MUNRO. How to behave and why [il. by the author]. 55p $1.75 Lippincott

170 Ethics—Juvenile literature 46-8358

Illustrated book on manners and behavior for very young readers, or even for those who are too young to read.

"Another of his honest but rather forced attempts at teaching basic rules of conduct. It is not mere captious criticism to wish Mr. Leaf would use simple, correct punctuation." Cath World 164:382 Ja '47 50w

"Honesty, fairness, strength and wisdom are the foundations of good behavior according to the author, who has liberally illustrated the text with his typical figures. Children will find the pictures more appealing than the message. More useful in the family reading circle than in public and school libraries." M. M. Smith

Library J 72:83 Ja 1 '47 70w

"A child old enough to read the book—whose vocabulary is very simple—or listen to it, laughs at the absurd drawings while attending to the words, which boil down to four things we have to be: honest, fair, strong and wise. And the direct, forceful manner in which these ideas are introduced into the young mind is such that the chances are they stay there." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Ja 5 '47 260w

LEAGUE OF NATIONS. Report on the work of the League during the war; submitted to the Assembly by the acting Secretary-general. 167p pa 50c Columbia univ. press [2s Allen, G]

341.1 International cooperation

"Report to the Assembly, including references to the United Nations, problems of transferring assets, etc., to the new organization, and activities during the war years." Current Hist

Reviewed by J. B. McConaughy
Am Pol Sci R 40:825 Ag '46 480w
Current Hist 10:536 Je '46 50w

LEDoux, EDWARD. Vapor adsorption; industrial applications and competing processes; with foreword by Donald F. Othmer. 360p $8.50 Chemical pub. co.

533.1 Adsorption. Vapors. Air conditioning 45-10049

"This work is intended primarily for chemical engineers, although the theoretical aspects of the subject are treated at length in Parts I, II and III, which deal respectively with static adsorption, saturation of air, and dynamic adsorption. Part IV discusses such industrial applications of adsorption as the dehydration of air, drying of hygroscopic material, dehydration of compressed gases, and vapor recovery. There are numerous reproductions of graphs and diagrams. Literature references are scattered throughout the text, but there is no systematic bibliography." N Y New Tech Bks

"Although the book should appeal especially to chemical and air conditioning engineers, it should also be of value to industrial hygiene engineers who are concerned with removal of toxic, inflammable, or valuable gases from air of industrial rooms." C. P. Yaglou

+ Am J Pub Health 36:410 Ap '46 220w

Reviewed by J. W. Hassler
Chem & Eng N 24:980 Ap 10 '46 450w

"A book of this nature cannot possibly contain all of the known information on adsorption. The operating engineer will find no trade secrets. However, the treatment offers an avenue of approach to the subject for the student exploring the field for the first time." E. R. McLaughlin

Chem Eng 53:313 N '46 250w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 70:1136 D 1 '45 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:51 O '45

LE DUC, THOMAS HAROLD ANDRE. Piety and intellect at Amherst college, 1865-1912. 165p $2 Columbia univ. press

378 Amherst college A46-2763

This book, published for the 125th anniversary of Amherst college, is a study of the ideas and ideals of the college during the second half of the nineteenth century. Partial contents: A college for training parsons; Stearns and Civil war idealism; Reason and righteousness; Julius H. Seelye; Ancient classics; Science and the evangelicals; Societies and fraternities; Hygiene and athletics; Diffusiveness of romanticism. Bibliography. Index.

Christian Century 63:1567 D 25 '46 70w

Reviewed by Ordway Tead
Sat R of Lit 29:26 S 14 '46 330w
School & Society 63:381 My 25 '46 50w

"All the appurtenances of careful historical scholarship are present in this first-rate volume: footnotes, manuscript sources, contemporary periodicals. The bibliography is brief, but well selected; the index, thorough and analytical. The period between 1890 and 1912 is treated too briefly, but the author succeeds in establishing that Amherst's reputation as a trainer of men was deserved." W. W. Brickman

School & Society 64:466 D 28 '46 1450w

LEE, ASHER. German air force; foreword by Carl Spaatz. 310p il $3.50 Harper

940.544943 Germany. Luftwaffe. World war, 1939-1946—Aerial operations 46-4374

Study of the Luftwaffe, describing in "a somber record how Germany nearly achieved world domination." It is the author's belief that Hitler and Göring crippled the air force, eventually, by forcing its growth as a political weapon, instead of a military one. No index.

Book Week p13 My 26 '46 140w

Booklist 42:344 J1 1 '46

"A first-rate, critical history of Hitler's air force."

+ Foreign Affairs 25:343 Ja '47 30w

Kirkus 14:168 Ap 1 '46 170w

"There is nothing somber about exhilarating style of book, which has clarity of diagram, excitement of an Eric Ambler thriller, and frequent rewarding bits of humor. . . Recommended for all libraries, especially those with war collections." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 71:755 My 15 '46 140w

Manchester Guardian p3 D 31 '46 30w

Reviewed by Lionel Heald

New Statesman & Nation 33:56 Ja 18 '47 1200w

Reviewed by H. W. Baldwin

N Y Times p4 Ag 4 '46 1100w

"An interesting, non-technical study . . . by one of Britain's foremost experts on the subject."

+ New Yorker 22:94 My 25 '46 100w

LEE, CHARLES, ed. Twin bedside anthology. 2v 384:363p ea $3; set $5 Howell, Soskin

808.8 Literature—Collections 46-7222

A pair of anthologies designed to please both masculine and feminine tastes. Included are short stories, poetry, essays, and excerpts from longer works, selected from the writings of authors of the past and present. Partial contents: v 1, The old demon, by Pearl Buck; The luxury of conversation, by Agnes Repplier; The adventure of the Clapham cook, by Agatha Christie; In the garden, by Emily Dickinson; The feminine mind, by H. L. Mencken; A packet of love letters; v2, Killers under the sea, by J. D. Craig; Pious Celinda, by William Congreve; A coquette's heart, by Joseph Addison; The fourth story: first day, by Giovanni Boccaccio; All women may be won, by Ovid; Advice on the choice of a mistress, by Benjamin Franklin; Fire and ice, by Robert Frost; Ulysses, by Alfred Tennyson.

"Good though it is, we didn't feel that 'her' selections quite measured up to 'his.' Yet this boxed duet will serve, until a better week-end bread-and-butter present comes along. After all, it's easy to poach on either side of a twin-bedside night-table." James MacBride

N Y Times p32 O 27 '46 500w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 14 '46 500w

"For hostesses furnishing a room for guests who can or may read, this anthology is recommended."

+ Weekly Book Review p17 D 29 '46 180w

LEE, MILDRED. Invisible sun. 307p $2.50 Presbyterian bd.

46-4003

"Story of a courageous, intelligent and consecrated preacher in a small Southern community." Weekly Book Review

Booklist 43:70 N 1 '46

"Readers who enjoyed James Street's 'The Gauntlet'—and their name is legion—should like this first novel of Miss Lee's—right through the climax of murder and manhunt. Of course, brother Gregory talks down a sullen lynch mob at the jailhouse steps and the story ends all right and trite." Richard Match

N Y Times p20 My 26 '46 300w

"John Paul Gregory is a man of patience and tact, and his battle against prejudice and avarice will claim your full sympathy, particularly because he has the gift of humor as well as the zeal of devotion. The author is a minister's daughter and knows her background." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p11 J1 28 '46 70w

Wis Lib Bul 42:132 O '46

LEE, TINA. What to do now; designed by [the author] pictures and charts by Manning Lee; working models by the author. 96p $2 Double-day

680 Toys. Handicraft 47-415

"An attractive book for younger children that tells how to make things out of wood and paper, how to design and make simple puppets, valentines, and Christmas cards, etc. Pictures in color, working models, and index." Sat R of Lit

Book Week p5 Ja 12 '47 140w

Booklist 43:106 D 1 '46

"An excellent how-to-do-it book for the young seven and eights, and for older boys and girls to use on their own."

+ Kirkus 14:541 N 1 '46 90w

"Recommended for home, school and public libraries." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 71:1718 D 1 '46 40w

Sat R of Lit 29:66 N 9 '46 40w

"What I like best about this book, and what will make it, to my way of thinking, especially useful for children's purposes, is that it doesn't pretend to be useful for those of any one else. . . A number of these ideas can and will be used as Christmas presents for Mother or Father. You can make a stocking box or a periscope—who knows how soon Daddy might need one?—a May basket. Aren't these useful purposes? I have kept, as a grown-up, things fragile as these, till they fell apart." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p10 N 17 '46 200w

LEECHMAN, JOHN DOUGLAS. Eskimo summer. 247p il $3.50 Humphries [12s 6d Hatchards]

917.19 Eskimos. Labrador—Description and travel [46-25150]

"The author's trip to the islands at the northern tip of the Labrador was made to study old igloo sites and remnants but the family of Eskimos who were his guides and companions for the summer proved far more interesting than the excavations. This is a straightforward account of one summer in the North." Booklist

Booklist 42:315 Je 1 '46

Foreign Affairs 25:346 Ja '47 20w

Times [London] Lit Sup p315 J1 6 '46 500w

LEEMING, JOSEPH (MERLIN SWIFT, pseud). Fun with plastics; drawings by Jessie Robinson. 79p $2 Lippincott

680 Plastic materials 46-6937

"A beginners' book, with directions and designs for the new art of making jewelry, boxes, vases, toys and dozens of useful and attractive gifts from all kinds of plastic materials." (Subtitle) Illustrated with diagrams and drawings. For grade seven and up.

Booklist 43:59 O 15 '46

"Though this is a beginner's book, some experience in woodworking and its tools is necessary, and both expensive and moderate cost methods are detailed. Definitely for those clever with their hands, the articles described range from ash trays and letter openers, to puzzles, etc."

LEEMING, JOSEPH—Continued

+ Kirkus 14:349 Ag 1 '46 110w

"Practical book on a new up-to-date hobby. Similar in make-up to the other crafts books by this author. No index, but the table of contents is a fairly adequate guide." A. H. McGinity

+ Library J 71:1468 O 15 '46 70w

School Arts 46:11a D '46 120w

LEEMING, JOSEPH (MERLIN SWIFT, pseud).
Fun with puzzles; drawings by Jessie Robinson. (Stokes bk) 128p $2 Lippincott

793.73 Puzzles 46-1259

"Puzzles of every kind for everybody, for fun and mental gymnastics: problems with coins, counters and matches, brain twisters, mathematical and number puzzles, pencil and paper problems, cut-out and put-together puzzles, anagrams and word puzzles." (Subtitle) Answers are given at the end of the book.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p15 Mr 10 '46 140w

Booklist 42:244 Ap 1 '46

Kirkus 14:105 F 15 '46 90w

"A useful book wherever people have leisure time to fill." Nelle McCalla

+ Library J 71:409 Mr 15 '46 100w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 3 '46 90w

"This is an especially good book for a rainy day and for all ages."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:45 Je 15 '46 40w

Wis Lib Bul 42:112 Jl '46

LEEMING, JOSEPH (MERLIN SWIFT, pseud).
Secrets of magic. 95p il pa $1 Watts, F.

793.8 Conjuring 46-6338

"Any person known to be interested in 'magic' is likely to be asked at any time to do some tricks, and [this book] tells how 186 of them can be performed. Every one can be done with simple equipment or with none at all, and some of the tricks explained are claimed to be so new as to be 'as yet unknown to the general public.' The author is an experienced magician. . . Most of the explanations are accompanied by sketches of the articles used and the position of the hands, as well as by advice on how to manipulate for the best effect on the audience." Springf'd Republican

Book Week p4 My 19 '46 50w

Springf'd Republican p4 Jl 27 '46 200w

LEEMING, JOSEPH (MERLIN SWIFT, pseud). Toy boats to make at home; with pictures by Jessie Robinson. 86p $2 Appleton-Century

649.55 Toys, Boats and boating 46-6533

Simple directions for the making of all sorts of boats for children; boats which will really sail on a pond or in the bathtub. Materials used are easily procurable. For grades four to seven.

Booklist 43:39 O 1 '46

"An easy, workable book with pictured directions that are easy to read and follow." + Kirkus 14:423 S 1 '46 130w

"Will delight any age interested in the subject. Recommended for all libraries." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 71:1335 O 1 '46 70w

Reviewed by M. M. Moses

San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 10 '46

200w

Sat R of Lit 29:66 N 9 '46 40w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p9 D 29 '46 360w

LEFFINGWELL, ALBERT (DANA CHAMBERS, GILES JACKSON, pseud). Case of Caroline Animus. 239p $2 Dial press

46-7099

Detective story.

New Repub 115:566 O 28 '46 20w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p32 S 22 '46 150w

"Chambers has achieved his own synthesis of the hard-boiled and the slick-magazine schools; and this latest Steele adventure should prove exciting to devotees of either." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 22 '46

50w

"Pretty good."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:30 O 26 '46 60w

"One of this author's most likable offerings."

Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p18 S 22 '46 140w

LEFFINGWELL, ALBERT (DANA CHAMBERS, GILES JACKSON, pseud). Death against Venus. 207p $2 Dial press

46-2408

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p17 F 24 '46 230w

Kirkus 14:50 F 1 '46 80w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p30 Mr 10 '46 130w

"Another large slice of psychiatry for mystery readers, who have been getting more than their quota of this sort of thing. . . A fast and expert job of writing."

+ New Yorker 22:100 F 16 '46 120w

"Beautiful gals and wicked gents go through succession of frenzied scenes. Plenty of drinking, violence and purple passages."

Sat R of Lit 29:42 F 23 '46 40w

"This is a speedy, easy-to-read offshot of the Hemingway-Hammett school, sadly marred by the use of italics for emphasis and supererogatory asides and explanations in parentheses." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p26 Mr 3 '46 230w

LEFFINGWELL, GEORGIA, and LESSER, MILTON A. Glycerin; its industrial and commercial applications; with a foreword by Walter J. Murphy. 259p $5 Chemical pub. co.

668.2 Glycerin 46-428

"This volume is a survey of the proved and potential uses of glycerin. There are thirty chapters with titles such as Adhesives and cements, Explosives, Lubricants, Paper, Photography, Plastics, Paints and protective coatings, Textiles and dyes, Tobacco, Cosmetics, Foods, Medicine and surgery, Pharmaceuticals, and Optometry. Under each of these headings is presented a compact statement of the uses of glycerin in the specific field, together with formulas, and a bibliography of the literature including patents. The final chapter is a classified list in tabular form of 1,583 uses of glycerin." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 42:277 My 1 '46

"For one interested in the uses and applications of glycerol, this is a very valuable and complete compendium. For one interested in the subject of any of the specific chapters, it gives an insight into that art in so far as it uses glycerol." F. D. Snell

+ Chem & Eng N 24:850 Mr 25 '46 190w

"If anyone is looking for a literature survey on the uses of glycerin, this is it. . . As a review of the literature of glycerin and a starting point for a study of its uses, this book is an important contribution."

+ Chem & Met Eng 53:300 My '46 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '46

Library J 71:183 F 1 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:57 O '45

LEFFINGWELL, GEORGIA, and LESSER, MILTON A. Soap in industry. 204p $4 Chemical pub. co.

668.1 Soap 46-2055

"Book on utilization of soap in manufacturing processes, soluble soap potash and soda soap, properties as a wetting agent, emulsifier and lubricant. Metallic soaps not included." Library J

Booklist 42:277 My 1 '46

Library J 71:486 Ap 1 '46 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:13 Ja '46

LE GRAND, pseud. See Henderson, Le G.

LEHMANN, LOTTE. More than singing; the interpretation of songs [tr. by Frances Holden]. 192p $3.50 Boosey, Hawkes, Belwin, inc, 43-47 W 23d st, N.Y. 10

784.9 Singing and voice culture 45-20813

"Mme. Lehmann is an artist of song, and her book has to do with song interpretation. . . It contains detailed accounts of her interpretation of some of the greatest German Lieder, of old English and Italian airs, and of modern French and Russian songs. But she warns the student in her introduction that her conceptions are to be regarded not as something final, but as an aid to individual interpretations." Christian Science Monitor

"Mme. Lehmann's book will be invaluable to the student of song." L. A. Sloper

+ Christian Science Monitor p17 Ja 12 '46 400w

Cleveland Open, Shelf p7 Mr '46

"In Madame Lehmann's introduction she asserts: 'It is only with the greatest hesitation that I dare put into words my ideas regarding the interpretation of lieder.' And, after perusing the book, one is impelled to regret that the 'hesitation' was not prolonged sufficiently to prevent her from adding gloom and obscurity to the twilight of a long and distinguished career as a lieder and operatic singer." Ashley Pettis

+ Sat R of Lit 29:25 Ja 26 '46 1100w

"It would be unfair to recommend this book to the general reader since, except for a few pages of delightful introduction, it is exactly what its subtitle indicates, an analysis of the interpretation of almost one hundred famous songs. . . The single analyses would mean little to anyone who did not know the songs or understand singing. And yet they are so expressive that, even with their phrases pulled apart, as they are for the purpose of analysis, they can reawaken the emotions of the song when it is known."

+ Theatre Arts 30:125 F '46 420w

"For all those, amateur or professional, who have at any time attempted to read through the great song literature, and for all those thousands who have acquired the habit of listening to it this book will exert a fascination." Vincent Sheean

+ Weekly Book Review p8 F 17 '46 600w

Wis Lib Bul 42:58 Ap '46

LEIDECKER, KURT FRIEDRICH. Yankee teacher; the life of William Torrey Harris. 648p $7.50 Philosophical lib.

B or 92 Harris, William Torrey

Biography of an American teacher, based in part on the subject's own unpublished diaries. William Torrey Harris was the introducer of Hegel to the United States; he was leader of the St Louis school of Hegelians; he was school superintendent in St. Louis; a United States commissioner of education; and an editor of Webster's New International dictionary.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p6 Ja 12 '47 130w

San Francisco Chronicle p31 D 1 '46 50w

"The volume as a whole represents a thorough, workmanlike piece of research and leaves little to be desired in the way of information about this great American educator. If anything, it is so thorough that it includes material of little consequence which could easily have been omitted in favor of a good bibliography and a better index." W. W. Brickman

+ School & Society 64:301 O 26 '46 280w

"This book is an extremely large peg for a relatively small hole. . . In fact, the more one contemplates the life work of W. T. Harris the more clearly it appears that his biography has come too late, though no one will be likely to complain that Mr. Leidecker has given us too little." G. F. Whicher

Weekly Book Review p18 N 24 '46 340w

LEIKER, SJOERD. Three witnesses; tr. from the Dutch by Johanna C. Fagginger Auer. 158p $2.50 Querido

46-22639

The background is the Frisian province of the Netherlands. It is the story of one Jeltema, who is portrayed thru evidence of three people over whom he has a hold. They are a rather stupid, fear-haunted farmer; a flighty young girl; and a sensitive, intelligent pastor.

"Unimportant but fairly interesting book, with slow choppy dialogue, inconsistent characters, little background color and no apparent point." Anne Whitmore

Library J 71:1542 N 1 '46 80w

"Actually none of the passions of the romantic Frisians (with the partial exception of Jeltema) are in the least analyzed. Another Dutch writer, Jan Albert Goris, has said that the Netherlands are a matter-of-fact people. 'Three Witnesses' seems to say that they are a fatalistic one, who take power and subjugation for granted. But there are some Dutch writers, like Adriaan van der Veen, Maurice Roelants and Cola Debrot, who grant them a great deal more complication. If Sjoerd Leiker is not so sophisticated as these, he nevertheless shares with them one quality that can be found in many European writers: an absolute rejection of evasiveness or affectation." Isa Kapp

N Y Times p12 D 8 '46 600w

"It is a narrative of violence but devoid of histrionics." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p36 N 17 '46 90w

LEMMON, LAURA ELIZABETH (LEE WILSON, pseud). This deadly dark. 200p $2.50 Dodd

46-7308

Mystery story

"The novel is refreshing in a number of ways. Blind detectives are not new but we met Max Carrados and Duncan MacLain long after their first spiritual scars had healed. Matt Foster has neither their fabulous skill nor their sleek settings. The background of This Deadly Dark is a poor street, a shabby cigar stand and an old but neat San Francisco boarding house. In the midst of the detective story's preoccupation with palatial country homes, resorts, penthouses, crack trains and planes this homeliness is refreshing." James Sandoe

+ Book Week p8 O 13 '46 160w

"The reporter's despair at the loss of his eyesight and his resentment at the necessity of depending upon others are well pictured, although the author's tangled sentence structure and his eccentric punctuation make the story something less than a joy to read." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p28 S 29 '46 140w

"A difficult subject well handled."

+ New Yorker 22:103 S 28 '46 110w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p10 S 29 '46 50w

"Grim and good."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:41 S 21 '46 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p31 O 6 '46 100w

L'ENGLE, MADELEINE. Ilsa. 416p $2.75 Vanguard

46-25101

Penetrating character study of a beautiful poised woman, who as an outsider had married into an upper class southern family. Ilsa's calm and poise were needed to carry her thru an unhappy marriage, and blindness. The story is told by Henry, three years younger than Ilsa, who loved her from the first day he met her as a child of ten.

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock
Book Week p11 My 5 '46 400w
Booklist 42:282 My 1 '46

"There is considerable charm here, an effectiveness compounded of subtlety and in-direction, giving this a very definite appeal for discerning readers."

+ Kirkus 14:75 F 15 '46 170w

"It is refreshing with the Deep South as the setting to have no discussion of race conflict. Recommended." L. R. Miller

+ Library J 71:406 Mr 15 '46 70w

"Miss L'Engle's second novel does not warrant the enthusiasm with which her first offering, 'The Small Rain,' was received. The novel is told in the first person by Ilsa's perennial admirer, a sapless youth of the old South, whose sensitivity and humility do little to relieve the tedium of his perpetual, unspoken devotion." Eunice Holsaert

— N Y Times p14 Ap 28 '46 140w

"The actual distinction of this book—for whatever the reader's objections to the two central characters, it is a nobly written novel—lies in Miss L'Engle's description of the clan. Each figure has his or her rightful three dimensions; and though it sometimes seems silly that, except for the servants and an occasional schoolmate, there appears to be no one in that town who isn't 'a kin,' the galaxy—not always a shining one—of those Porchers, Woolfs, and Silvertons of all ages creates an absorbing atmosphere of authenticity. Equally well done is the touching portrayal of the continuity of character amidst the changes of times and tunes." Robert Pick

+ Sat R of Lit 29:30 Jl 6 '46 600w

"'Ilsa' has the freshness and clarity and vitality of the woman for whom it is named. Though its scene is laid largely in white-pillared southern mansions, it has none of the claptrap of southern 'aristocracy,' on the one hand, or poor white, on the other. Its focus is on people, most of whom, and especially the children, stand out individually and convincingly. And Ilsa herself is a figure whom you will not soon forget." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Ap 21 '46 600w

LENGYEL, EMIL. America's role in world affairs. (American way ser) 318p il $1.60 Harper

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations 46-333

A textbook for high schools. The author's thesis is "that the historical background of American foreign policy is vitally important to any full understanding of the problems of today or tomorrow." (To the Pupil)

Booklist 42:228 Mr 15 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '46

Foreign Affairs 24:748 Jl '46 20w

Reviewed by C. H. Schutter
School R 54:560 N '46 950w

"It is the opinion of this reviewer that the shortcomings of this book outweigh its merits. It is unnecessarily inconsistent, as, for example, in regard to attitudes. . . In many instances the presentation is oversimple. . . It seems that these shortcomings are a result of the belief that the way to write for secondary students is to water down adults' materials. R. W. Burkhardt

Social Educ 10:283 O '46 600w

Social Studies 37:44 Ja '46 60w

LENSKI, LOIS (MRS ARTHUR COVEY). Blue Ridge Billy; il. by [the author]. 203p $2.50 Lippincott

46-6400

Regional story of life in North Carolina, written for grades four to seven. It is the story of a ten-year-old mountain boy whose first love is music. His father is not convinced, at first, that music is much use to a farmer, but when he is proved wrong he admits it handsomely.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb
Atlantic 178:162 D '46 90w

"Another warm, human, exciting, real story."

Martha King

+ Book Week p9 O 6 '46 200w

Booklist 43:39 O 1 '46

"The characters are drawn with skill, from sturdy Billy, with his loyalties and his inborn strain of music, to fearless Granny, a match for any of the mountain men. Miss Lenski's pictures are equally revealing of life on the farms in the Blue Ridge." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:467 N '46 120w

Kirkus 14:385 Ag 15 '46 80w

"Quaint expressions and distortions in spelling may hinder the reading for some, but an attractive format and appealing plot will make it generally welcome. Recommended for ages 9-12." R. M. Davis

+ — Library J 71:1545 N 1 '46 100w

"In this book, as in her two preceding regional stories—'Bayou Suzette' and 'Strawberry Girl'—Lois Lenski gives a wealth of information about the folklore, customs and traditions of a colorful backwoods people. The dialect of the region is skillfully handled, and eighty lithographs by the author follow the story, faithfully, adding countless details of mountain life. Children who read the book will grow in tolerance and understanding of people different from themselves." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p30 O 20 '46 230w

"The mountaineers, their language and folk songs, their habits and their wild countryside, even their illicit stills and frightening sheriffs, are all here, wrapped up in a good story. It might have been an even better one if the author, instead of giving the harsh father a change of heart, had let him stay mean to the end." K. S. White

+ New Yorker 22:141 D 7 '46 90w

"There is a glossary of mountain words and phrases in the back of the book, and if the expressions seem alien to urban readers it's only because they themselves are of a regional culture, too. Lois Lenski is doing children's literature a great service by her skillful handling of American sectional life." R. M. Ashlock

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 10 '46 270w

+ Sat R of Lit 29:48 N 9 '46 160w

Weekly Book Review p14 N 10 '46 230w
Wis Lib Bul 42:170 D '46

LENSKI, LOIS (MRS ARTHUR COVEY). Little fire engine. [48p] $1 Oxford

46-11996

Pictures and story describe for ages three to six just what happens when a fire alarm comes in and the fire engine goes to the rescue. The characters are all small people as in other books in this series.

"Page by page the story gets better. Young readers will turn them again and again. Nothing to get tired of in this book. Not if you're under 6."

+ Book Week p5 N 10 '46 120w

Booklist 43:106 D 1 '46

Kirkus 14:594 D 1 '46 90w

Reviewed by N. L. Rathbun

Library J 71:1809 D 15 '46 70w

"It worried us slightly that the family was told to move back in after the fire was put out, when we knew there was a gaping hole in the roof, but this age group probably knows of the housing shortage, too." R. A. Gordon

N Y Times p33 N 24 '46 140w

Reviewed by K. S. White
New Yorker 22:132 D 7 '46 30w

"This will make a very popular picture book." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 30:31 Ja 18 '47 80w

"The colors are real firemen's red combined with black, white and grey, and I believe the book is likely to be the chief attraction in the entire series." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 N 10 '46 200w
Wis Lib Bul 42:170 D '46

LENT, HENRY BOLLES. Fly it away. 108p il $2 Macmillan

629.134 Airplanes—Design and construction. Airplanes—Testing 46-8200

"What are the processes by which a small airplane is prepared for an individual buyer? Mr. Lent answers this question in an instructive volume, interesting to readers of different ages. His book is divided into two parts. In the first, Mr. Lent gives a brief account of the work of a famous pioneer in aviation, Eddie Stinson, from whom the Stinson planes take their name. The major part of the book is devoted to an account of a visit made by a prospective buyer to the factory in which the Stinson planes are building." Horn Bk

Booklist 43:158 Ja 15 '47

Horn Bk 22:360 S '46 120w

Kirkus 14:388 Ag 15 '46 80w

"Simple and readable, a book which should give one a feeling of security and confidence in flying. . . Recommended for ages 9-11. Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 71:1209 S 15 '46 80w

LENT, HENRY BOLLES. This is your announcer—; Ted Lane breaks into radio. 199p il $2 Macmillan

621.384 Radio broadcasting 46-901

Career story in which young Ted Lane, a returned Army pilot, takes a job with a small radio broadcasting station, and progresses from small parts in radio plays to a position as announcer, and then goes on to bigger things in a larger station.

Booklist 42:215 Mr 1 '46

Christian Science Monitor p12 Ap 25 '46 220w

Kirkus 13:423 S 15 '45 150w

"Not an essential book for libraries." Dorotha Dawson

Library J 71:109 Mr 15 '46 70w

"A good all-around view of a typical radio career." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p24 F 3 '46 70w

LEOKUM, ARKADY. Please send me, absolutely free 337p $2.50 Harper

46-6175

A satire on American advertising and advertising agencies, set forth in the story of young Gene Winter who wanted to be a writer, or at least an editor on a "little magazine," but found there was more money in the advertising game.

"Best parts of the book are those about how agencies scheme and the equally clever schemes by which, in his earlier days, the young man tried to hide his poverty. Will Arkady Leokum please do another book about clever ideas and crack (also crack-pot) agencies and leave out the love and sex and the ideals." Helen Woodward

Book Week p3 Ag 11 '46 320w

"The story is handled with integrity, and a keen sense of human relations and dramatic effect." Fergus Glenn

+ Canadian Forum 26:237 Ja '47 280w

Kirkus 14:228 My 15 '46 230w

"Description in this first novel is good in spots and the author may write something worth-while later on. Not recommended." E. S. Brown

+ Library J 71:978 J1 '46 110w

"Well worth your attention. If Mr. Leokum's huckster seems a bit too synthetic to be quite real, put that down as an occupational hazard of the species; if his novel has its loose ends and many an unrealized moment, it knows precisely where it is going and why. . . Discounting the author's yearning to reform his platinum-plated heel, and concentrating strictly on detail, the reader is guaranteed an absorbing excursion in Never-Never Land." C. V. Terry

N Y Times p5 Ag 4 '46 650w

"This seems to be the year for taking a fall out of the advertising business. Mr. Leokum's novel has a lot to say about the mechanics of that opulent occupation, but the author is not very adept with his hero. . . Quoted examples of the hero's creative prose may convince you that he should stick to his advertising firm."

New Yorker 22 71 Ag 3 '46 130w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 O 6 '46 200w

"[The book] was manifestly intended to be a serious book. But it seems lacking in depth. Moreover, the experiences that obviously are significant to the author are not likely to seem so important or be as personally identifiable to the reader. Yet it is a readable book, particularly to anyone already interested in the subject, though it lacks the requisites for wide popularity. . . In general, the book is clearly and unpretentiously written, though without particular style." Hobe Morrison

Sat R of Lit 29:8 Ag 10 '46 850w

"Mr. Leokum's presentation—to borrow a word from the jargon of the trade—is lively, cynical and comprehensive. . . As a counterweight to the rising success of the hero, the author puts forth the theory that Gene Winter's creative gifts have been blighted, that he has sold his birthright of genius for a mess of folding money, but the argument is not convincing." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 18 '46 550w

LEONARD, CHARLES L., pseud. See Heberden, M. V.

LEONARD, JOHN PAUL. Developing the secondary school curriculum. 560p $3.50 Rinehart

373 Education, Secondary—Curricula 46-4203

"Gives the author's point of view regarding the deficiencies of the secondary school in its attempt to educate modern youth with traditional curricula, and offers suggestions to teachers, student teachers, and administrators for a reorganization of the curriculum. Well indexed." School & Society

School & Society 63:367 My 18 '46 50w

Reviewed by P. R. Pierce

School R 54:428 S '46 1300w

LEONOV, LEONID MAKSIMOVICH. Chariot of wrath; a novel; tr. from the Russian by Norbert Guterman. 193p $2.50 Fischer, L.B.

46-6951

An episode in the Russians' war against Hitler told by the author of Road to the Ocean. The tale relates the experiences of the four-man crew of a Russian tank which, out of touch with its fellows, goes on a "dagger raid" against a German convoy.

Reviewed by Wendell Johnson

Book Week p15 O 27 '46 550w

"Leonov has been placed by Maxim Gorky in the line of such great Russians as Turgenyev and Tolstoy. The American reader will find a simpler comparison when he recalls Harry Brown's 'A Walk in the Sun.' Both novels are short; the protagonists in each are a group of ordinary men in danger—and cut off from the reassurance of a large fighting force. Both books are of a high literary quality. Both have constantly moving narrations which are irresistible. And, finally, both have the perhaps unintentional value of disclosing national differences but basic human similarities." Lawrence Lee

LEONOV, L. M.—Continued

+ N Y Times p16 S 15 '46 550w

"Since most of the Soviet novels published in this country have been rather embarrassingly inept, it is damp praise to say that Mr. Leonov's new novel looks like the best of the lot. I think it might be better to say that Leonov looks like the sole practicing Soviet novelist who writes as though he had only passingly heard of Communism and the party line, and that his novel is one of the few books about the war that anyone might want to read." Hamilton Basso

+ New Yorker 22:106 S 14 '46 750w

Reviewed by Alfred Kay

San Francisco Chronicle p16 S 8 '46 370w

"There is no room for the story of the entire thirty-year struggle of the Soviet people in Leonov's brief war novel—which makes it not the best of introductions to Soviet literature. To comprehend why, on the night before battle, the eighteen-year-old Soviet tankman writes a declaration of loyalty to the party you will have to read elsewhere. Leonov, however, does amply explore another source of Soviet strength in the recent war: the consuming hatred of German 'bestiality.' . . . In other respects, though—particularly that of character development—the novel is deficient." Richard Match

— + Weekly Book Review p12 S 15 '46 750w

LESLIE, JEAN. Two faced murder. 223p $2 Doubleday

46-3944

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p10 My 19 '46 200w

Booklist 42:349 J1 1 '46

"An engaging, enterprising sleuth team make this reading, if not too puzzling."

+ Kirkus 14:137 Mr 15 '46 80w

"If you have read Jean Leslie's earlier book, 'One Cried Murder,' you will know that Peter Ponsonby is a competent detective and that Jean Leslie knows how to blend mystery and humor in precisely the right proportion." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p30 My 19 '46 140w

"Exhilarating."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:36 Je 15 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p46 My 19 '46

LETTERS, FRANCIS JOSEPH HENRY. Virgil. 162p $2 Sheed

873.1 Virgil (Publius Vergilius Maro)

46-5485

"Written in contemplation of the time when a knowledge of Latin would have ceased to be necessary for matriculation, this book is in part an attempt to give general students some knowledge and even appreciation, of the most famous of Roman poets. For this reason every quotation from the poet is furnished with a translation. My general aim will, I trust, explain any features of style and method unusual in studies of classical authors, but at the same time I hope the work may not be altogether without interest to old Virgilians." (Foreword) The author is lecturer in classics and English at the New England University college, Armidale, New South Wales. No index.

"A long and interesting essay on the Latin poet. . . This is a book primarily for scholars, especially Latinists—though students interested in English literature and certainly those interested in English verse, will find much to help them here." E. D.

+ Book Week p10 Je 2 '46 180w

"This is an excellent introductory work. It presents, in simple though scholarly fashion, the background of Augustan poetry and the influences which molded Virgil's thought."

+ Cath World 163:571 S '46 200w

Reviewed by E. P. Richardson

Commonweal 44:361 J1 26 '46 700w

"Mr. Letters' book presupposes a rather extensive literary background—perhaps too extensive for many of the 'general' students for whom he writes—but the reader whose interest in literature is keen will enjoy the few hours required in the reading." John Day

N Y Times p28 Ag 11 '46 650w

Reviewed by H. W. Marr

Spring'd Republican p4d J1 14 '46 550w

LEVISON, WILHELM. England and the Continent in the eighth century. 347p $5 (20s) Oxford

942.01 Great Britain—History—8th century. Church history—Middle ages A47-153

"This volume contains the 'Ford Lectures' delivered at Oxford by the distinguished medievalist Dr. Levison, formerly of the University of Bonn and of late years a refugee from Hitler's Germany, attached to the University of Durham in England. As one of the editors of the renowned 'Monumenta Germaniae Historica,' he possesses an unrivaled knowledge of the printed and manuscript sources for the period with which he deals and is able, at innumerable points, to illuminate his general subject with fresh detail. The text of the lectures as delivered is now supplemented with learned appendices which occupy about half the book." Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by F. M. Powicke

Manchester Guardian p3 My 15 '46 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p428 S 7 '46 2300w

Weekly Book Review p18 O 13 '46 550w

LEVY, BABETTE MAY. Preaching in the first half century of New England history. (Studies in church hist) 215p $3 Am. soc. of church hist.

251 Preaching. Puritans A45-5250

"This study concerns itself primarily with the Puritan preaching of New England's first fifty years of settlement. During this period English-bred ministers were in control of the village pulpits, but in the 1650's and 1660's the first Harvard graduates began to take the places made vacant by the deaths of the first pastors. I have not included men who reached their preaching-prime in the last decades of the century. In dealing with earlier men, I have not hesitated to cite an occasional sermon delivered in the 1670's, if it seemed to be typical of a man's previous preaching; my theory in so doing has been that the thought and style of a mature minister would hardly suffer essential changes in a few years." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"The least rewarding chapter, 'Practical Teaching: Politics and War,' tells very little about either politics or war. . . 'Democracy' in early Connecticut as expounded by Hooker and his followers is somewhat uncritically admired. Miss Levy apparently fails to realize that Hooker's concept of 'the people' was not much broader than that held in the more conservative Bay Colony. . . In spite of these minor criticisms Miss Levy gives a competent account of her subject. However, the reader will not find in these pages a penetrating analysis of the contradictions in the tortured lives of the early New England preachers, or a significant inclusion of the social, economic, and political realities with which they had to deal. The book includes an excellently arranged bibliography and an index." Morrison Sharp

+ Am Hist R 51:507 Ap '46 550w

"In this book the student of New England will find many tempting suggestions for further study, and a very helpful bibliography of the early sermons." S. E. Mead

+ Christian Century 62:1351 D 5 '46 550w

"This is both a scholarly and an interesting book. The author has read widely in Puritan literature, its sources, and its modern interpreters. Here her chief sources are the sermons of the earliest Puritan ministers, most of whom were educated at Oxford or Cambridge or were among the first graduates of Harvard College. . . Occasionally there is unnecessary repetition in describing the qualities of a minister's mind or style and very rarely what seems a somewhat unwarranted statement. But these are minor faults. Miss Levy's study, which was awarded the biennial Brewer Prize, adds much to our knowledge of the early years of New England." A. M. Baldwin

+ J Religion 26:302 O '46 500w

"Patience and insight make this book more than a scholarly contribution to American history."

+ U S Quarterly BkI 2:187 S '46 250w
"A virtue of her work is its clarity, its statement of involved theories and sometimes confused theological tenets in straightforward and simple terms, borne along by a smooth and easy prose. This is a pleasant book to read and an entertaining book. It is also a sound addition to our knowledge of the history of ideas in America." L. C. Wroth
+ Weekly Book Review p20 Je 9 '46 1100w

LEWIS, CLAUDIA. Children of the Cumberland; phot. by William T. Buttrick, Jr. 217p $2.75 Columbia univ. press

136.7 Child study. Children in Tennessee. A46-6461

A comparison between the children in two nursery schools: one in Greenwich Village; the other in the Tennessee mountains. "The little Greenwich Villagers were noisy, demonstrative, aggressive, many of them the victims of serious psychological maladjustments. Verbal and even physical attacks on the teacher were daily occurrences in the Greenwich Village school. At Summerville the 3-to-5-year-old children of mountaineers were by comparison quiet, docile, comfortably related to their world. Attacks on the teacher were unknown. Trying to analyze these differences and discover the reasons for them, Miss Lewis concludes that the most potent factor lies in the differences in the home and family situations." (Book Week) Bibliography. Index.

"Her deep interest in these small people Miss Lewis shares with the reader constantly through concrete incidents, things actually said and done by the children, visits to the mountain homes: so that the book has the sustained vitality of narrative. I can see two groups for which this book holds especially valuable reading experience. The first is composed of those Americans who are trying to think clearly and constructively about the regional differences in our national life and their meaning. The other includes all parents of small children whether they live in city, town or country." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p7 O 13 '46 650w

"A charming and intelligent portrayal."
+ Christian Century 63:1215 O 9 '46 40w
School & Society 64:231 S 28 '46 30w

LEWIS, CLIVE STAPLES (CLIVE HAMILTON, pseud). The great divorce. 133p $1.50 Macmillan [7s 6d Bles]

237 Good and evil 46-1417

"Again Lewis has stated great spiritual truths in exciting fantasy. After an astonishing bus trip to Heaven, narrator and his companions become transparent ghosts and converse with the gay, understanding 'solid Spirits' already there. Typically weak, vain humans make up the newcomers, from meddlers to murderers, with the feminine half most cleverly satirized. Despite the gentle, wise endeavors of the Spirits to welcome them, many visitors return home; they simply cannot adjust!" Library J

Reviewed by F. E. McMahon
Book Week p2 Mr 17 '46 380w
Booklist 42:241 Ap 1 '46
Bookmark 7:4 My '46

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley
Cath World 163:88 Ap '46 300w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell
Churchman 160:13 My 1 '46 2100w
Commonweal 44:243 Je 21 '46 280w

"The meaning of this phantasy from the pen of the popular radio broadcaster and pamphleteer is rather elusive. Even those who have been delighted and inspired by his earlier writings in the field of religion and philosophy will have difficulty in determining what the author is trying to say in this volume. . . It is a disappointing book."

— Kirkus 14:100 F 15 '46 120w

Reviewed by L. R. Miller
Library J 71:120 Ja 15 '46 140w
Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 16 '46 240w

"A serious and witty book on eschatology. . . The author is a Christian, a rationalist and a romanticist. He claims to write the sort of books he would like to read but cannot find. His diction is pure and vigorous, simple and straightforward. And his simplicity is the result of knowledge and thought. Before long he will gain the Shakespearean reputation of being 'full of quotations.'" G. R. Stephenson
+ N Y Times p6 Mr 17 '46 900w

"If wit and wisdom, style and scholarship are requisites to passage through the pearly gates, Mr. Lewis will be among the angels."

+ New Yorker 22:99 Mr 16 '46 80w

Reviewed by W. H. Auden
Sat R of Lit 29:22 Ap 13 '46 1400w

"Quite truthfully one could remark that The Great Divorce is, in its own way, brilliantly clever, that it provokes thought, that it contains shrewd sayings dexterously phrased—with more to the same effect, until the allotted space was full. Yet to provide such an account would be to keep silence about those other characteristics which make the very cleverness of the thing seem repellent—the metallic hardness of its tone, its air of disdain, untouched by sympathy, for the various weaknesses of human nature, and, beyond all else, its manner of handling that most solemn of all themes, the ultimate fate of man's soul." A. C. Deane
Spec 176:96 Ja 25 '46 600w

"Mr Lewis writes with humor, clarity and distinction and handles one of the most difficult and subtle of literary forms with amazing skill." P. H. Bickerton

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Ap 7 '46 440w

"The Great Divorce' will be read to the end, with steady interest and mounting excitement, by those who have already some sense of the nature of transcendent reality. Those who find themselves in agreement with the arguments put up by the Ghosts for not being saved will be unlikely to finish the book."

Times [London] Lit Sup p58 F 2 '46 900w

"Mr. Lewis is a scholar, a philosopher and a most engaging writer, a combination so rare that it is hard to believe. But in one after another of his books, including 'The Screwtape Letters' and 'Perelandra,' he has written with charm and humor about subjects supposed now to be beyond the reach of popular writing. The success he has had—and it is considerable—shows that, as one might suspect, there are only two things necessary for the production of a good book: a subject with which every one is concerned and a writer with style and wisdom to treat it." Thomas Sugrue

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Mr 3 '46 1100w

LEWIS, CLIVE STAPLES (CLIVE HAMILTON, pseud). That hideous strength; a modern fairy-tale for grown-ups. 459p $3 Macmillan [9s 6d Lane]

46-3773

"A fantasy of the Perelandra type. Besides ordinary every day people, we meet megalomaniacs, intent on seizing all power by means of propaganda, scientific experiments and force; superior beings from the outer planets; Merlin, awake after centuries of sleep. There are mystery, suspense and exciting arguments." Library J

Reviewed by Leslie Collins
Book Week p13 My 26 '46 450w
Booklist 42:348 Jl 1 '46

"The plain fact is that Mr. Lewis has too many exceptional gifts. They sprout all over his latest work, draining away strength from a story which drastic pruning could have made timely and rousing. . . Most readers will agree that the author's flair for the occult has run away with him and that a less esoteric masterpiece would have been more profitable to a greater number." Joseph McSorley

LEWIS, C. S.—Continued
Cath World 163:277 Je '46 650w

"Lewis knows how to tell a story, and there are subtle, for the present reviewer sometimes incomprehensible, analyses of character and motives. It is doubtful whether this attack upon pseudo-scientific materialism will have any effect upon those who may be inclined in that direction, since it is all so wildly preposterous, but admirers of Lewis's fantasies will find this book fascinating." W. L. Caswell
Churchman 160:17 Je 15 '46 250w

"'Hideous Strength' is an allegory, as well as a fairy tale and a tall story. Dig hard and you may find: nostalgia for the nineteenth century, nostalgia for the Elizabethans, love of the real England, dislike of marxism, materialism and Dalí. But those are the author's personal bents. So much is involved in the battle that you can probably allegorise any action or situation that you find. Still, the novel is so much fun that I don't believe readers will stop for allegory." John Hay
+ Commonweal 44:241 Je 21 '46 420w
Kirkus 14:46 F 1 '46 190w

"Recommended." J. L. Ross
+ Library J 71:484 Ap 1 '46 70w

Reviewed by Theodore Spencer
N Y Times p10 J1 7 '46 800w

"In his usual polished prose, the author creates an elaborate satiric picture of a war between morality and devilry to prove that mixing science and ethics is often disastrous."
New Yorker 22:92 My 25 '46 130w

"In some respects the book isn't so exciting as the unloosed fantasies that Mr. Lewis has hitherto provided. The redemption of an intellectual opportunist seems cold mutton to the reviewer. . . This is just the sort of thing that pleases Mr. Lewis's admirers. And they are right to admire him. Win, lose, or draw—and the reviewer doesn't think that this book is wholly victorious—Mr. Lewis adds energy to systems he comes in contact with." Leonard Bacon
Sat R of Lit 29:13 My 25 '46 1600w

"There is less fantasy in 'That Hideous Strength' than in the first two books of the trilogy, and for that reason some may not care for it as well, but for many others it will be the most enjoyable of all. Mr. Lewis himself avoids calling it 'fantastic,' rather it is a 'fairy tale,' but by any name it is one of the most exciting, charming and wise books in years." R. F. H.
+ Spring'd Republican p4d My 26 '46 600w

"To compensate for the spate of literary circuses, Mr. C. S. Lewis offers the average reader real crusty, home-baked bread. His is the old-fashioned yeast variety, none of your self-raising, enriched, cellulose-wrapped, blotting-paper-flavored, synthetic stuff." Anne Fremantle
+ Weekly Book Review p12 Je 2 '46 850w

LEWIS, JANET (MRS YVOR WINTERS).
Good-bye, son, and other stories. 202p $2 Doubleday

46-2483

Collection of short stories, the longest of which is the title story. Others in the collection are: Proserpina; River; Summer parties; Nell; The house; Little helicat; Sunday dinner; With the spring; Apricot harvest; People don't want us; Picnic, 1943.

Reviewed by Sterling North
Book Week p2 Mr 10 '46 650w
Booklist 42:265 Ap 15 '46

"Any consideration of the writing of Janet Lewis becomes inevitably a consideration of style. In 'Good-bye, Son,' she exhibits a classical purity that is rare in an age of writing that is often either mannered or without craftsmanship. Each sentence is labored over, each paragraph put together with painstaking precision. Yet, as a story-teller, Miss Lewis succeeds best where she labors least. . . 'People Don't Want Us' is a simple analysis of the affectionate relationship between an American and a Japanese woman in California soon after the outbreak of the war. 'Good-bye, Son' is a ghost story, perhaps in the Jamesian school, yet wholly original and convincing. These two stories alone lift the volume above the rather dull category of just good writing." W. E. Wilson

+ N Y Times p32 Mr 24 '46 320w

"The tale that gives the book its title is a gentle ghost story, less static than the others, but Miss Lewis is not an expert story-teller and she is at her best when she does not bother with plot. The collection may remind you of some of the quiet stories of Willa Cather."
+ New Yorker 22:109 Ap 6 '46 150w

"Human courage, the blind functioning of chance and time, the shifts of the spirit under the pressure of circumstance are the themes which Miss Lewis touches with true tact and understanding. She is able, moreover, to deal with fantasy, because her strong sense of the real makes her intimations of the unreal plausible."
+ U S Quarterly Bk1 2:180 S '46 160w

"Janet Lewis, poet and novelist and the wife of Yvor Winters, has now written some very fine short stories, of which at least one ('Good-bye, Son,' the title story or novelette), I predict will live a long time, not only in memories, but in the anthologies of outstanding short prose in which it is bound to turn up. It is a story not easily classifiable among the different kinds of supernatural tales; it is, in essence, a story of divine guidance, and as such has nothing but the appearing of the dead in common with the usual 'ghost story.'"
L. T. Nicholl

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 14 '46 700w

Wis Lib Bul 42:75 My '46

LEWIS, JOSEPH. Ten commandments; an investigation into the origin and meaning of the Decalogue and an analysis of its ethical and moral value as a code of conduct in modern society. 644p $5 Freethought press assn, 370 W 35th St, N.Y. 1

222.16 Commandments, Ten 46-1239

"This book deals with the question of the origins of the ten commandments, the Biblical references to them, their anthropological setting and their ethical and moral significance in modern society. The author reflects the influences of Robert G. Ingersoll. He draws heavily on a variety of sources, particularly Frazer's 'The Golden Bough: A Study in Comparative Religions,' Westermarck's 'The Origin and Development of the Moral Ideas' and related studies." Book Week

"Lewis contributes little that is new, either by way of fact or interpretation, but he does use the Decalogue more or less effectively as a means of giving focus and organization to a considerable body of data. . . From the point of view of scientific scholarship, Lewis would appear to be lacking at times in essential restraint and objectivity, and to be riding a bias with spurs flashing and lariat whirling. From a lay point of view, 'The Ten Commandments' will probably be revolting, challenging, fascinating and sobering by turns. Its total effect will be different for different readers, according to the books they've read and what their mothers have told them." Wendell Johnson
Book Week p10 Ap 14 '46 230w

"This book is a sound piece of scholarship, yet the style is lively and lighted with no little humor. There is a good index, and a huge bibliography that amounts to being a catalogue of Rationalist works, and of many others whose authors would be surprised, and no doubt shocked, to find [themselves] included between these particular covers." Stewart Holbrook
+ Weekly Book Review p26 Ap 14 '46 460w

LEWIS, MRS MARY CHRISTIANNA (MILNE) (CHRISTIANNA BRAND, pseud). Crooked wreath. 184p $2.50 Dodd

47-218

Detective story.

"Miss Brand, with a deftness worthy of John Dickson Carr, gives us half a dozen solutions for the impossible crime, all the while conversing amusingly." James Sandoe

+ Book Week p15 N 3 '46 90w

N Y Times p44 N 24 '46 160w

"The will-changing is the only familiar facet in this fresh and intelligent mystery. Miss Brand writes with the social comedy of an Allingham and the plot technique of a Christie." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 10 '46 100w

"Agreeable."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:36 N 16 '46 40w

"Stuck with this will changing material, Miss Brand adorns it with generous amounts of babble by the young things and nice scenery, all of which might have flopped but for Inspector Cockrill, a whiz from Scotland Yard worth your attention. This is a literate item, aside from prose badly marred by staring used for emphasis." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p46 N 10 '46 200w

LEWIS, MONTGOMERY SMITH. Legends that libel Lincoln. 239p $2.75 Rinehart

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham 46-6962

Three legends about Lincoln are examined: the story that Lincoln's father was shiftless and no good; that Ann Rutledge was Lincoln's only love; and that Mary Todd, whom he married was a shrew and made his life miserable. It is the author's claim that all these stories were made up, and he attempts to discover the facts to prove them false. Index.

"A place should be made upon every shelf of Lincolniana for Lewis' illuminating and meticulously documented work. If, however, it should be used as a guide for blue pencilings, few of its shelfmates would escape unmarked." Charles Leavelle

+ Book Week p13 N 3 '46 400w

Booklist 43:116 D 15 '46

Kirkus 14:413 Ag 15 '46 190w

"The author's logic is easily followed. His style is straightforward, and simple enough for a child to understand. Two concluding chapters on Mrs. Lincoln contain good running narrative." Jay Monaghan

+ N Y Times p34 N 3 '46 700w

"A fine example of scholarship and detective work."

+ New Yorker 22:125 N 9 '46 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 N 17 '46 300w

LEWIS, NOLAN DON CARPENTIER, and PACELIA, BERNARD LEONARD, eds. Modern trends in child psychiatry; ed assistant, Gertrud M. Kurth. 341p il $6 Int. univs. press 618.92 Child study 46-3420

Collection of essays by sixteen writers who are specialists in their various departments of child psychiatry. Partial contents. Anxiety in infants and its disorganizing effects, by M. A. Ribble; Maternal overprotection, by D. M. Levy; Ego psychology applied to behavior problems, by M. S. Mahler; Personality diagnosis in childhood, by Bruno Klopfer; Male sex delinquency and community responsibilities, by L. J. Doshay; Psychoses in children, by Charles Bradley; Fantasy and reality in the art expression of behavior problem children, by Margaret Naumburg; Play analysis in research and therapy, by J. L. Despert; Child analysis, by M. S. Mahler; Psychiatric social case work with children, by L. M. Hambrecht. Chapter references. No index.

Kirkus 14:123 Mr 1 '46 120w

"The range of contents, both as to subject matter and attitudes displayed, is wide, but there is no apparent awareness of such recent additions to Freudian theory as that represented by the work of Karen Horney, Eric Fromm, and others. In that sense, the book falls somewhat short of being thoroughly modern, and also in its preoccupation with the Freudian concepts of libido, id, ego, super-ego, instinct, and psychic energy—concepts which have largely disappeared from more recent thought. There are nevertheless some very encouraging attitudes revealed. . . . The general tone of the book is far from hopeless. There is a reassuring feeling of hard work being done, and of a patient determination to overcome long standing difficulties by bringing all available resources to the task. The collection should be of interest to physicians, teachers, social workers, and also to parents." Elizabeth Lancaster

+ Survey 82:197 J1 '46 550w

"The viewpoints of the authors vary considerably, but the presentations are constructive, comprehensive, and on the whole free from the obstructive controversy which tends to befog research in this difficult field."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:149 Je '46 250w

LEWIS, WILMARTH SHELDON. Yale collections. 54p il $2 Yale univ. press

378 Yale university. Library. Yale university. Museums A46-5937

"A brief survey of Yale's libraries, Trumbull art gallery, Peabody museum of natural history, and anthropological museum. . . . In nearly 250 years, the collections have grown beyond all expectation. When the campaign was in progress, in 1843, for the fund to build what later student generations came to know as 'the Old Library,' the prospectus said: 'The building will cost $30,000, and will furnish to the several libraries of the college secure and ample accommodations for a century to come.' The prediction as to adequacy at the end of a century was about two per cent correct." Christian Century

Christian Century 63:1281 O 23 '46 130w

Reviewed by D. H. Moseley

Commonweal 45:172 N 29 '46 800w

Current Hist 11:511 D '46 50w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 24 '46 120w

"On October 18 and 19, the university held a series of celebrations and a convocation signaling the return of the collections described to peacetime uses. The publication of Mr. Lewis's book was timed so that it might be a source of information and illumination to the Yale family and the many visitors who attended the ceremonies of those two days. It remains a valuable and entertaining source of reference for the history and purpose of a notable group of institutions." L. C. Wroth

+ Weekly Book Review p49 N 10 '46 430w

L'HOMMEDIEU, MRS DOROTHY (KEASBEY). Robbie, the brave little collie; il. by Marguerite Kirmse. 60p $2 Lippincott

Dogs—Legends and stories 46-890

Robbie is a young collie whose idea that guarding sheep was a simple matter suffered a blow on the night when he had to find a lost lamb. For ages six to nine.

"The story is told with a gentle humour which will please young readers from 5 to 8." A. T. Eaton

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 D 17 '46 170w

Kirkus 14:104 F 15 '46 90w

"A pleasant story. Pictures by Marguerite Kirmse are delightful and are the most important part of the book." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 71:588 Ap 15 '46 70w

"Robbie is believable and engaging, and his mother, Lady, the lambs he saves, and the wild creatures he meets, are drawn with reality and a touch of humor. As a story of a

L'HOMMEDIEU, D. K.—Continued
collier's social evolution, 'Robbie' will make its point for young readers: it has more substance than some of its predecessors." A. T. E.
+ N Y Times p26 Ap 7 '46 140w

LICHTEN, FRANCES M. Folk art of rural Pennsylvania. 290p il $10 Scribner 745 Folk art. Art, Pennsylvania—German 47-1192

"Pennsylvania-Dutch folk art became a vogue in the thirties, and has been exploited by magazines and popularized by the flattery of imitation. . . . Now comes this substantial background book, tracing the arts and crafts of the Pennsylvania Germans from their first settlements to 1850, when machine made goods made handicrafts unnecessary. . . . The book is illustrated with photographs and drawings." Kirkus

Kirkus 14:441 S 1 '46 210w

"From the gay jacket right on down to the last delightful tailpiece, 'The Folk Arts of Rural Pennsylvania' is as finished a bit of book business as has turned up for some time in the market place, long curbed by the exigencies of war. It is a volume which may well receive recognition from the American Institute of Graphic Arts as the type of art book the picture-hungry public should regularly be getting. . . . Some readers may note the absence of a bibliography. . . . The majority of readers, however, are going to be too dazzled by the sheer outward allure of this offering to ask for anything more." A. E. Ford
+ — N Y Times p26 D 15 '46 550w

Reviewed by W. E. Parker
San Francisco Chronicle p8 Ja 4 '47
400w

"Miss Lichten's sumptuous and definitive book will stand as the authoritative word on the subject." Richardson Wright
+ Weekly Book Review p10 D 15 '46 800w

LIDDELL, DONALD MACY, ed. Handbook of nonferrous metallurgy. 2d ed 2v 656;721p il v 1 $6.50; v2 $7 McGraw

669 Metallurgy 45-8689

"Since the first edition of Liddell's nonferrous handbook appeared in 1926 [Book Review Digest, 1926] it has come to be recognized as a standard item on the metallurgical bookshelf, both as text and as reference work. . . . The handbook consists of two volumes, the first treating 'common denominator' materials and operations (crushing, classification, fuels, pyrometry and the like), while the second deals with the metallurgy of the individual non-ferrous metals. Each chapter is written by a specialist. Its scope is confined to production metallurgy and in general it does not go into processing of the metals beyond the point where they have been won from their ores. Incidentally, it is in this field that metallurgical and chemical engineering have most in common. As to the nature of the revising done in preparing the second edition, it appears that for the most part a straight modernization job has been performed of the old text." Chem & Met Eng

Booklist 42:229 Mr 15 '46 (Review of v2)

"Most of the book has now been rewritten and brought up to date by a staff of 24 specialists, which includes some of the best metallurgical talent in the country. It is to be regretted that some valuable wartime developments particularly in the light metal field have been omitted for security reasons which held at the time the book was written. . . . The handbook is designed for the student as well as for the practicing metallurgist and engineer." F. D. DeVaney

+ Chem & Eng N 24:264 Ja 25 '46 200w (Review of v2)

"The book edited by Mr. Liddell contains a large compilation of very worthwhile chapters by eminent men in their respective fields of endeavor. It is felt that this very worthwhile material could be more adequately treated by presenting the various subject matters in a more chronological order." S. F. Urban Chem & Eng N 24:980 Ap 10 '46 270w

Reviewed by E. C. Fetter
Chem & Met Eng 53:283 F '46 300w (Review of 2v)
Library J 70:891 O 1 '45 70w (Review of v 1)
Library J 70:891 O 1 '45 70w (Review of v2)
N Y New Tech Bks 30:59 O '45 (Review of v 1)
N Y New Tech Bks 31:9 Ja '46 (Review of v 2)

LIEB, FREDERICK GEORGE. Detroit Tigers. 276p il $3 Putnam

796.357 Detroit. Baseball club (American league). Baseball 46-6583

"This is Frederick G. Lieb's third baseball book (the others were 'The St. Louis Cardinals' and 'Connie Mack'). . . . Behind it is Mr. Lieb's long career as a baseball writer. Enlivening it are sketches not only of those who performed on the diamond but of those in the 'front office,' the management. There is, further, a picture of the growth of the great industrial city of Detroit, without some knowledge of which we could not understand completely the Detroit club." N Y Times

Booklist 43:31 O 1 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '46

Kirkus 14:321 J1 1 '46 170w

Reviewed by Eleanor Kidder
Library J 71:1336 O 1 '46 70w

"Only ten years ago it was very difficult to come by sports books that meant much to a sizable number of people. I am quite certain that Henry Chadwick, who invented the baseball box score, never dreamed the literature of the game would reach such heights as it has with Mr. Lieb's books and Frank Graham's and Warren Brown's. Father Chadwick would be pleased." W. L. Barber
+ N Y Times p35 S 22 '46 430w

"A scholarly, well reported story of the Detroit Tigers." Irving Marsh
+ Weekly Book Review p20 S 15 '46 110w

LIEBMAN, JOSHUA LOTH. Peace of mind. 203p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

150.13 Psychology, Applied 46-25090

"This book attempts to distill the helpful insights about human nature that psychology has discovered and the encouraging news from the scientific clinic about man's infinite capacity to change and improve himself, as well as to correlate these latest scientific discoveries with the truest religious insights and goals of the ages." (Pref) The volume is an outgrowth of material first presented in lectures at the Jewish Institute of Religion.

"A half loaf eaten in courage and accepted in truth is infinitely better than a moldy whole loaf." These words, from the chapter 'Grief's Slow Wisdom,' reveal both the limitation and the appeal of this book by the brilliant rabbi of Temple Israel, Boston. Some readers will miss the ringing affirmations that are natural to those who possess the 'whole loaf' of unclouded religious faith; but the book is not meant for them. Rather it is meant for those who have turned from traditional religion because they cannot adjust their confidence in the findings of science to the requirements of orthodoxy—Christian or Jewish. . . . To many such, this book will offer a 'half loaf' that will go a long way toward bringing them peace of mind and heart." F. M. Elliot
Atlantic 178:153 J1 '46 180w

"Writing devoted to the utilization of the new science of dynamic psychology for helping man toward the achievement of the good life presented so honestly, ably and confidently, would always command admiration. In these times in which the most diabolic attempt has been made to make use of psychodynamic knowledge for psychological warfare and for the education of youth to evil, destruction and the cynic adulation of the law of the jungle, in times in which we are using our mastery of nature's forces primarily for destruction, this book fills a need of unparalleled urgency." Franz Alexander

+ Book Week p4 Ap 7 '46 850w

Booklist 42:261 Ap 15 '46

Bookmark 7:3 N '46

Reviewed by J. M. Dawson

Christian Century 63:1248 O 16 '46
700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '46

"Rabbi Liebman is to be highly commended for his eloquent efforts to indicate lines of fruitful cooperation between religion and psychiatry." Harry McNeill

+ Commonweal 44:437 Ag 16 '46 390w

.Current Hist 10:130 Ag '46 50w

"This book from the pen of a Jewish scholar deserves a wide reading not only by his coreligionists but by those of other faiths and by those of no faith. . . This is a book which should be played up both for those interested in psychology and those interested in religion."

+ Kirkus 14:102 F 15 '46 200w

"'Peace of Mind' discusses the ills of our time and formulates a reasonable, tolerant faith, a persuasive course of action. In its positive features, at least, this book should obtain a wide and a sympathetic reception. . . Some readers will feel that Dr. Liebman is not always fair to what he calls 'the old theologies' and ascribes to psychology the introduction of ideas and techniques which are very old indeed. There will also be objections to some of the characteristics he assigns to 'Western religion.' . . There are, however, wide areas of agreement with Dr. Liebman possible to anyone truly concerned with the need of our harassed age for an affirmative faith." N. K. Burger

+ — N Y Times p5 Ap 7 '46 700w

"His book abounds . . . in scholarly and classical allusions, ably though one feels somewhat overused, as though they are brought in self-consciously to demonstrate knowledge rather than just to illustrate a point. The subject of the book, the search for peace of mind, is really one of simple human need, and it would be more strongly and convincingly presented if made with greater simplicity and directness. Again, though the book ends with a most interesting and able comparison of the complementary fields of psychiatry and religion and also a statement of the author's own religious belief, it really throughout deals with modern psychiatric and psychological treatments rather than with religion." Dean Campbell

Spring'd Republican p4d Je 16 '46
420w

Reviewed by E. H. Johnson

Survey G 35:300 Ag '46 650w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:285 D '46 160w

"The book is almost uniformly excellent. If I would name any chapters for special mention, it would be those on 'Fear Wears Many Masks,' and 'Grief's Slow Wisdom.' The chapter on 'Immortality' seems to me weak; it deals too much with 'intimations,' and the fire of passionate conviction is lacking. Yet this somewhat unsatisfactory discussion leads right on to the crown and climax of the book which are the closing chapters on religion." J. H. Holmes

+ — Weekly Book Review p16 Mr 31 '46
450w

Wis Lib Bul 42:83 Je '46

LIEBOVITZ, DAVID. Canvas sky. 439p $3 Harcourt

46-25102

A romance of circus life, as it appeared to Craig Johnson. Craig graduated from college in 1919, when jobs were hard to get. In Philadelphia, he met Long John Whittaker, proprietor of the The Plain Yankee Road Show. Craig had been an athlete in college; he was almost penniless, so he joined the circus. From that point on he describes the circus life, his loves, his successes and failures, under the Big Top, and out of it.

"Probably Liebovitz wrote 'The Canvas Sky' in its queer, archaic style to emphasize the make-believe character of the tented world, but it's pretty tough on the reader." Jack Conroy

Book Week p4 Ap 7 '46 450w

Booklist 42:283 My 1 '46

"It is no cheap sensational tale; rather, a carefully studied and skillfully written picture of personalities as affected by a strange environment."

+ Christian Century 63:433 Ap 3 '46 70w

"Interesting in circus detail, in its exploration of the exhibitionist impulse to perform before the public, but full of symbolism and allegory, and melodramatic writing, and never wholly believable."

— + Kirkus 14:160 Ap 1 '46 190w

"Picaresque novel skillfully crammed with details of circus life, some of them revolting." F. A. Boyle

Library J 71:484 Ap 1 '46 100w

"The book is badly written, clumsily organized, and inordinately long—precisely the rambling sort of tale that an aerialist and circus clown might scribble in his retirement. In so far as he has achieved this effect, Mr. Liebovitz should be credited with a rather questionable kind of artistic success, but it is by no means enough to make 'The Canvas Sky' worth reading." J. E. Cronin

— + N Y Times p18 Ap 28 '46 320w

"A full, rich and varied novel in which the author tries to communicate to his readers everything that the circus is, what it means to its performers and can signify to its spectators." J. P. Wood

+ Sat R of Lit 29:39 My 4 '46 600w

Reviewed by P. H. Bickerton

Spring'd Republican p4d Ap 7 '46 300w

"It is a wistful story, an allegory of the hopeful heart, well told and generously flavored with the happy sounds and curious yearnings of circus life." Thomas Sugrue

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Ap 7 '46 750w

LILLIE, RALPH STAYNER. General biology and philosophy of organism. 215p $3 Univ. of Chicago press [18s Cambridge]

574.01 Biology

A45-5288

"This short book is an essay on theoretical biology. Although in the broad sense philosophical in its aim, it is essentially empirical and naturalistic in its treatment and outlook. . . The following discussion is largely a recapitulation, continuation, and synthesis of contributions which I have made in past years to some of the philosophical problems of biology, in papers published chiefly in the American Naturalist, the Journal of Philosophy, and Philosophy of Science." (Pref) Index.

"The author is a well-known biologist with many writings both in scientific and in philosophical journals. His scientific contributions have been largely on protoplasmic activity and on the general physiology of the cell. Psychologists may know him best for his iron-wire model of the nerve. The present study is, in the author's words, 'an essay on theoretical biology.' It is an expanded formulation of a point of view espoused in earlier articles, which have usually appeared in philosophical contexts. The book is brief, it is written in an appealing manner, and the exposition is clear." M. W. Horowitz

+ Am J Psychol 59:321 Ap '46 1200w

"Professor Lillie is a distinguished physiologist. He has here written a book on the philosophical aspects of biology which is not so distinguished. It does little more than set the problem of the relation of the physical and the psychological, and I fear it omits a good half of the relevant considerations. . . But I feel disposed to praise Professor Lillie for not being taken in by the usual dogmatic assumptions of biologists. And his discussion of randomness and directiveness and natural teleology has real merit. But he uses too many words to say so little." H. T. C.

— + J Philos 43:475 Ag 15 '46 240w

.Scientific Bk Club R 17:3 Ja '46 420w

LIN, ANOR (LIN TAIYI, pseud). Golden coin.
306p $2.75 Day

46-2976

Story of modern China. Sha, the daughter of a poor family living in Shanghai, marries a biology professor fifteen years her senior. Their natures clash from the beginning, but Sha maintains her youthful ideals of helping her people in the face of her husband's unbending belief in security and science.

"In both story and storytelling, 'The Golden Coin' is great reading. It is the more astonishing when one considers that the author of this mature work is only about 20." Edith Roberts
+ Book Week p10 Ap 7 '46 700w

"Of limited appeal." A. R. Eaton
Library J 71:406 Mr 15 '46 70w

"It was the cherished conviction of some critics during the war that affirmation, not disillusion, would characterize the literature of the peace. So far the prophecy has only partly come true. If the bitter books are the exception, the novels of real affirmation are even more rare. What we seem to get instead is a confused compound of the two—a blind groping toward a faith that blots out reality and denies reason. Lin Taiyi's 'The Golden Coin' is a case in point. Written with disarming earnestness, it tells a falsely reassuring story of the power of superstition in the life of an ignorant Chinese woman; it is all the more disappointing because it fails to realize the larger underlying theme it suggests." Nona Balakian

— + N Y Times p12 Ap 7 '46 500w

"Miss Lin's performance does not always equal her intention, and as one reads one is torn between admiration of her youthful boldness and her flashes of brilliance on the one hand, and distress over her exclamatory prose and her repetitious analyses on the other. The novel as a whole is, like its predecessor, a remarkable and interesting work, especially so considering the age of its author, which, however, one wishes it were not necessary to stress." J. J. Espey

+ Weekly Book Review p16 Ap 7 '46
800w

LIN TAIYI, pseud. See Lin, A.

LINCOLN, ABRAHAM. His speeches and writings. 843p il $3.75 World pub.

308.1 U.S.—History

46-11909

Compilation of nearly 250 of the most important speeches, state papers, and letters of Abraham Lincoln. Contains an introduction and critical notes by the editor, Roy P. Basler, and a preface by Carl Sandburg. Bibliography. Index.

"The greatness in these pages is that of Lincoln. The function of the editor, admirably performed, is that of discriminating selection, competent presentation of text, and illuminating literary comment. Many editorial problems have had to be perceived, studied, and solved—problems of authorship (as of pseudonymous or anonymous writings), of date, of deciphering to get the right word and of informed interpretation to get the intended meaning. . . . The textual faithfulness, achieved at no small cost, is a notable feature of the Basler edition. The book is not merely a garland of beautiful passages. It is representative rather. It runs the gamut of Lincoln's output: letters to wife or friends, party speeches (not always on the highest level) great speeches on exalted themes, philosophic discourses, public papers, occasional trivialities (which bring us close to the everyday man) and those incomplete fragments which preserve his thoughts in the process of becoming. We even have lines of Lincoln's poetry. Though Victorian in pattern, Basler does not consider them the cheap doggerel that some writers would have us believe. The introduction amounts to a distillation of years of research concerning Lincoln as literature." J. G. Randall

+ Book Week p2 S 29 '46 600w
Booklist 43:65 N 1 '46

"Dr. Basler comments, briefly as a rule, upon the origin and significance of each paper, and he provides a list of his sources. In a few instances, he discusses at some length important problems. Such a work, done with conscientious fidelity and scholarly skill, is, of course, of the highest value." F. L. Bullard

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 N 9 '46
500w

"This volume has many features of distinction. In the first place Carl Sandburg has written the foreword. His followers will want to examine this selection of Lincolniana through the great poet's gold-rimmed spectacles, but they will miss something if they stop with that. True, many other books contain the selections Basler has assembled. Some print many more besides, in ten and twelve volume sets, but such works should not give this book serious competition. Basler's only rivals in the one-volume field are three somewhat similar compilations by Luther Robinson, Daniel Kilham Dodge and Philip Van Doren Stern. More than twenty years have passed since the first two publications appeared. The last is six years old. All three abridged Lincoln's best work to spotlight the striking sentences that appealed to the compilers. Basler, on the other hand, has taken pains to give every word of the original documents." Jay Monaghan

+ N Y Times p6 S 29 '46 1100w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 17 '46
150w

"Much of Professor Basler's scholarly essay on Lincoln's English is devoted to the way he changed and grew as a speaker and writer from his arrival in New Salem in 1831 until his death. But the editor insists that he rose to greatness in statesmanship as well as style through a 'constant development of his personality.' Therefore he rejects as half-truth Charles Francis Adams's famous statement that Lincoln had such a tremendous growth from 1861 to 1865 that he 'became in fact another being,' and that history 'hardly presents an analogous case of education through trial.' Mr. Basler contends that in no essential did his hero become a different being, with the inference that he was born full grown in greatness. I think this does Lincoln's memory a distinct disservice." G. F. Milton

Sat R of Lit 29:11 S 28 '46 1200w

"The book has been hailed by Lincoln authorities as among the most important one-volume editions of Lincoln's writings yet published. . . . Dr. Basler, author of 'The Lincoln Legend' has corrected many errors found in existing editions of Lincoln's writings, and wherever possible has checked his material against original manuscripts."

+ Springfield Republican p4d S 15 '46 200w
Time 48:109 O 14 '46 750w

"Mr. Basler's compilation naturally challenges comparison with earlier compilations, particularly with the recent volume edited by Philip Stern. As far as textual criticism goes, Basler has done a better editorial job than any of his predecessors. Wherever possible, Mr. Basler has gone to the original document, given us the letter or paper as Lincoln wrote it, and where various drafts exist he has indicated the variations. He has, too, preferred the complete text to an abridgement, even though this has required the omission of many important public papers. His editorial notes (unfortunately at the end instead of the beginning of each document) are sound and informative, though less complete than might be desirable." H. S. Commager

+ Weekly Book Review p26 O 27 '46 850w

LINCOLN, EDWIN STODDARD. Conductors and wiring layouts; industrial electric wiring. 342p il $3 Essential bks.

621.328 Electric conductors. Electric wiring
46-2140

"Describes construction and operation of every type of conductor and conductor insulation, with N.E.C. requirements. Instructions for wiring motors, welders, capacitors, switchboards, lighting and communications systems. Covers appliances and layouts for services, feeders and branch circuits. Cables and cable splicing thoroughly covered. Resuscitation directions. A.I.E.E. symbols. Tables, well illustrated." Library J

Booklist 42:243 Ap 1 '46

Library J 71:486 Ap 1 '46 80w

LINCOLN, EDWIN STODDARD. Industrial electric heating and electrical furnaces. 192p il $3 Essential bks.

621.396 Electric heating. Electric furnaces. 46-5565

"Principles and fundamentals of electric heating-resistance, infra-red and induction, with applications of electrical heating units and various uses of electric steam boilers, industrial heating cables and furnaces. Illustrated." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:9 S '46

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1129 S 1 '46 100w

LINCOLN, EDWIN STODDARD. Industrial electric wiring; wiring methods and fittings. 336p il $3 Essential bks.

621.328 Electric wiring 46-25075

"Industrial wiring practice with National electrical code regulations that apply to subject. Well illustrated." Booklist

Booklist 42:243 Ap 1 '46

"Practical, usable book."

+ Library J 71:486 Ap 1 '46 80w

LINCOLN, EDWIN STODDARD. Primary and storage batteries. 168p il $3 Essential bks.

621.35 Electric batteries 46-2208

"A brief text covering instructions for the selection, use and maintenance of all types of batteries and battery accessories, with methods of charging storage batteries, generators, rectifiers and control equipment." Library J

Booklist 42:277 My 1 '46

Library J 71:486 Ap 1 '46 70w

LINCOLN, JAMES FINNEY. Lincoln's incentive system; covering the basic principles of the incentive system in manufacturing. 192p il $2 McGraw

658.323 Wages, Lincoln electric company 46-3347

"This purposeful book concerns the fundamentals and applications of the incentive plan of management in the Lincoln Electric Company over a period of years." Library J

Reviewed by C. L. Gabriel

Chem & Eng N 24:2414 S 10 '46 300w

Library J 71:346 Mr 1 '46 70w

Reviewed by Paul Anderson

Sat R of Lit 29:30 Ap 27 '46 1400w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:205 S '46 240w

"Although one may question whether Mr. Lincoln's plan is the complete and perfect answer to industry's No. 1 production-price problem, at the same time one must acknowledge that Mr. Lincoln has had the courage to follow a principle to its logical conclusion. Mr. Lincoln's book has this great additional merit—that he writes from practical experience, not theory, on some of the most hotly argued industrial questions of the day." E. M. Herlick

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Je 9 '46 2500w

LINCOLN, VICTORIA ENDICOTT (MRS VICTOR AUGUSTUS LOWE) Wind at my back; three short novels. 234p $2.50 Rinehart

46-7629

Three novelettes, each dealing with some phase of childhood and youth. Contents: Before the swallow dares; In another country; The wind at my back.

Reviewed by Marion Strobel

Book Week p8 N 17 '46 430w

Christian Science Monitor p16 N 30 '46 450w

"There's a glitter disturbingly reminiscent of Scott Fitzgerald in the first two, but on the whole, a certain luminous quality to the writing and a tender feeling for the ignorance of youth gives this a memory-haunted appeal."

+ Kirkus 14:435 S 1 '46 180w

"Reminiscent of shorter bits in Grandmother and the Comet, these are more fully developed, more satisfying. Her style is lyrical, admirably suited to the subject. Her utterly feminine approach cloys occasionally, but hers is a rare gift. Recommended." E. H. Kennedy

+ Library J 71:1542 N 1 '46 90w

"Victoria Lincoln's three stories . . . will disappoint the readers who enjoyed her successful novel, 'February Hill.' It may also disappoint admirers of Miss Lincoln's sketches in the New Yorker, because the new stories have a preciousness and self-consciousness that one has not usually noticed in her short fiction. . . Too carefully styled, too delicate in its perceptions, too thin in its narrative materials, 'The Wind at My Back' is another instance of the exaggerated sensibility that is such a large part of women's current effort in literature" Diana Trilling

Nation 163:591 N 23 '46 150w

"A clean, cool breeze sweeps through Victoria Lincoln's latest book, 'The Wind At My Back,' a collection of three short novels, and the reading of it becomes a very refreshing experience." Florence Crowther

+ N Y Times p6 N 24 '46 700w

"In 'Before the Swallow Dares,' the longest and most successful one, the author does a difficult thing charmingly—she writes about first love and first tragedy with clarity and directness and even humor. Her insight into unhappy young love is tender and altogether affecting."

+ New Yorker 22:123 N 9 '46 80w

"To most readers Victoria Lincoln's name means 'February Hill,' a memorable first novel composed of raffish incident and characterization. Those who expect the same qualities in her new book, 'The Wind at My Back,' may be disappointed at the start but they will be rewarded by other values in her writing. The youthful laughter, the ebullience and rebellion of her early work have mellowed into a deeper perceptiveness and sensitivity. Miss Lincoln is still amused at life but it is with an ironic wisdom that holds understanding rather than gaiety. Less successful as a character portrait but extremely effective in its ironic import is the third story in the book, 'In Another Country.'" Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p2 N 24 '46 650w

LINDHORST, FRANK ATKINSON. The minister teaches religion. 125p $1 Abingdon-Cokesbury

263 Religious education. Pastoral work 45-9815

"An analysis of the process of religious education, with stress upon the pastor's part in it, and many specific and practical methods for 'carrying out the pastor's part in educating his people.'" Christian Century

Christian Century 62:1417 D 19 '45 40w

"Dr. Lindhorst's contribution to the educational aspect of the ministry deserves the most thoughtful consideration, and one can easily supplement the study of this book by making use of the excellent bibliographies appended to each chapter. Christian education is here placed at the heart of the minister's task in its whole range of obligation and is shown to be both an opportunity and a privilege." C. N. Arbuckle

+ Crozer Q 23:194 Ap '46 600w

LINDMAN, MAJ JAN (MRS MAJ LINDMAN-HULTEN). Flicka, Ricka, Dicka and a little dog. [27p] $1 Whitman, A.

Another story of the three little Swedish sisters. This time a little dog adopts them, has to be returned to his owner, and then solves the difficulty in his own way.

Kirkus 14:125 Mr 1 '46 90w

"Definitely not literature, but child-like and appealing—something the youngest readers can read for themselves." S. J. Johnson

Library J 71:588 Ap 15 '46 70w

"Another easy story for pre-school and primary grades—which, if not exactly distinguished, has its own homely quality." E. L. Buell

N Y Times p20 Mr 3 '46 90w

"This is an interesting story for reading to preschool children, and first and second graders will enjoy it too. The author's illustrations are sympathetic and colorful." M. C. Meehan

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 16 '46 240w

+ Weekly Book Review p12 My 19 '46 230w

LINDNER, ROBERT MITCHELL. Stone walls and men. 496p $4 Odyssey

364 Crime and criminals. Prisons 46-898

"A book dealing with every imaginable aspect of crime today, from its economic motivation to such matters as involuntary homosexuality in prisons and the mess that society has made out of crime prevention and control." New Yorker

"In the entire book there are but few dates of identifiable events from the history of the past; there are no footnotes and no citations to other sources or views or theories; there is not a single statistical item, figure, graph, or table; there are actually no data of any kind in it except the highly selected case histories presented as illustration of points of view. . . . Within the limitations noted, Stone Walls and Men is an interesting, popularly written presentation of the psychiatric or psychoanalytic approach to criminology, with a ringing indictment of the uselessness of much of that which is the content of modern 'progressive' penal procedure. It has little to recommend it as a balanced, well rounded presentation of the more important and pertinent data on criminology and it wastes no space on the balanced examination of other interpretations or research approaches." G. B. Vold

Ann Am Acad 246:174 Jl '46 550w

"The author is a well-known psychologist with a long clinical experience of the criminal mind, but the most striking thing about his book is that he doesn't write like one; he says what he has to say with humor and understanding and without flummery and pretentiousness. He also says it, for the most part, in lay English, and what technical terminology he uses he is careful to explain."

+ New Yorker 21:87 Ja 26 '46 130w

Reviewed by W. S. Meacham

Sat R of Lit 29:40 F 16 '46 1050w

"Small wonder that Bucknell students urged the writing of the book. Well supplied with case material valuable for classroom discussions, even for dramatization, it is a peerless companion volume for any instructor in criminology to use to brighten up a dull and faulty text—or lecture." L. M. Brooks

+ Social Forces 25:235 D '46 600w

"'Stone Walls and Men' is offered as 'a modern criminology' but turns out to be at least ultra-modern, if not slightly surrealist, in its views on the handling of criminals." R. F. H.

Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 20 '46 600w

"Taking the book as a whole it is stimulating. It has the value of dislodging smugness on the part of those who feel that they have found all the solutions, but it should not be accepted as proof of complete failure. There are many who have labored most earnestly in the fields of research and in the various approaches toward crime treatment who can show progress, although they would be the first to admit that the millennium is still to be achieved." E. R. Cass

+ Survey 82:157 My '46 350w

"This is not a book for the layman wishing to acquaint himself with the field of criminology; it is not representative of criminological writing in the United States. But although it may seem opinionated, the book will be of interest to the criminologist, who will find in it many original and provocative ideas and suggestions for new developments in the field."

U S Quarterly Bk 2:235 S '46 250w

Weekly Book Review p16 Ag 4 '46 200w

LINDSAY, CATHERINE. Country, of the young. 220p $2.50 Reynal

46-6842

"Spring, 1945. Three merciless rebels in their early twenties—Ted Rasko, reporter, football star; John Illsley, instructor in art, Ph.D. candidate; Ann Bjornstad, instructor in English literature, all of the same Midwestern university. Ted abhorred his paper's policies, John escaped his over-loving mother, and Ann, with whom both men were in love, fled her teaching job to meet a horrible death alone." Library J

"The author's emphasis on the youthfulness of her three major characters seems somewhat exaggerated, for it is hard to believe that these are typical young people. And obviously it is more than their youth that betrays them. Nevertheless, this first novel has a real emotional impact and is a very creditable production for a 22-year-old writer." Dorothy Sparks

+ Book Week p6 S 15 '46 200w

Kirkus 14:304 Jl 1 '46 150w

"A first novel, not for this small library!" F. A. Boyle

Library J 71:1050 Ag '46 100w

"Though the colors are vivid, the pattern itself is more than a little fuzzy." Margaret Ford

— N Y Times p12 S 29 '46 440w

"A writer of the hardboiled school Miss Lindsay is often shrill and staccato, but she has penetrating flashes, and deep poetic feeling. Rasko's gentle, pious Ma, and Pa, so understanding, are drawn with a glowing affectionate touch." P. H. Bickerton

Springf'd Republican p4d S 15 '46 280w

"Catherine Lindsay's first novel runs a high temperature and lashes out with more violence than clarity against evils in modern society which incite youthful defiance—family discipline, college smugness, legal injustice and conventional codes of morality. The author is only twenty-two, and her credo is that 'there is a bond in the desires and fears and emotions of those who are young, regardless of their separateness in class or space.' Her story, which she says is designated to 'articulate this bond,' is a confused and depressing narrative. If these are the fruits of youthful revolt, they seem hardly worth harvesting." George Conrad

— Weekly Book Review p15 S 8 '46 360w

LINDSAY, FRANK WHITEMAN. Dramatic parody by marionettes in eighteenth century Paris. 185p pa $3 King's crown press

791.5 Marionettes. Parody. Theater—France A46-3007

"A thoroughly documented study, which not only covers the marionette parodies themselves but throws light on the Comédie Française and Opéra productions on which they are based, and also includes a discussion of the théâtre de la foire in general." (Theatre Arts) Bibliography. No index.

"This scholarly work is authoritative, fair and generally comprehensible to the reasonably well-informed reader. This volume should be of genuine interest to libraries with collections of French literature as well as being a must for marionette and puppet collections. Well selected bibliography and extensive notes. Recommended." George Freedley

+ Library J 71:405 Mr 15 '46 70w

Theatre Arts 30:744 D '46 60w

LINDSAY, HOWARD, and CROUSE, RUSSEL. State of the Union; a comedy; with a foreword by Thomas L. Stokes. 226p il $2 Random house

812

46-3010

Play based on the postwar period. A successful wartime builder of airplanes is being groomed for the presidency in 1948. Grant Matthews is sincere and honest, and it takes his clever, outspoken wife to call the real turns. Pulitzer prize play for 1946.

Reviewed by H. T. Murdock

Book Week p9 My 19 '46 250w

Booklist 42:279 My 1 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '46

"Highly recommended."

+ Library J 71:760 My 15 '46 40w

"If 'State of the Union' is more fun behind the footlights than under the library lamp no one has a right to complain. If some of it seems more competent than brilliant under the latter light the reader should remind himself that competence in the theatre of today is prized above rubies. . . 'State of the Union' is still an actor's paradise, even if it does not belong on the shelf with Wilde and Congreve." C. V. Terry

N Y Times p16 My 19 '46 290w

"The ladies, to be sure, may be regarded as symbols of the larger forces, and no doubt Ibsen could so have manipulated them. But here they seem to suggest a too obvious triangle story, of tested audience appeal, and the triangle becomes on the authors' part a compromise which they would not permit in the political life of their hero. It is none the less a skillful and interesting play, by two men who know their theater."

Weekly Book Review p16 Je 9 '46 220w

LINDSAY, NORMAN. Cousin from Fiji. 286p $2.50 Random house

46-2494

Tale of family life in Australia, in the 1890's. A flighty widowed daughter of the house returns from Fiji with her half-grown daughter, and between them they set off a train of amusing fireworks.

"In spite of its ridiculous wrappings, the actual story has suspense and quality. There is some extremely shrewd philosophy, some real wit and some very deft characterizations." Clare Jaynes

+ Book Week p8 Ap 7 '46 400w

"A frivolous, gay family story—quite entertaining despite slow spots."

+ Kirkus 14:45 F 1 '46 130w

"Not a very important idea now even when it is put across in a way likely to bring a twinkle to some eyes. Could be a dark horse in the pay duplicates." R. E. Kingery

Library J 71:344 Mr 1 '46 70w

"'Cousin From Fiji' is lively, pleasant, mediocre." Christina Stead

N Y Times p10 Ap 7 '46 200w

"Mr. Lindsay works with the energy of a steam pump, trying to make the widow gay and amusing, but, as he never offers any more substantial proof of her charm than a habit of omitting all punctuation from her chatter, she remains just a rather rattlebrained lady badly in need of punctuation. And that, you will probably agree, isn't really funny enough."

New Yorker 22:90 Mr 30 '46 80w

"If Mr. Lindsay had seen fit to condense the first mad portion of his book and get right down to what turns out, half way through, to be rather an amusing story, we might feel a good deal more kindly disposed toward him. But Mr. Lindsay belongs, among other things, to that school of writers who believe in tossing their readers ruthlessly around before getting down to anything in particular." Nancy Groberg

+ Sat R of Lit 29:19 Ap 6 '46 650w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p10 Mr 31 '46 500w

LINK, HENRY CHARLES, and HOPF, HARRY ARTHUR. People and books: a study of reading and book-buying habits. 166p $10 Book manufacturers' inst, Bk. industry com, 25 W. 43d st, N.Y.

028.9 Books and reading. Booksellers and bookselling

46-3470

A "study of reading and book-buying habits" of the American people based on statistics gleaned from interviews with men and women from all walks of life.

Reviewed by Leon Shimkin

Book Week p3 My 12 '46 700w

Booklist 42:292 My 15 '46

Kirkus 14:219 My 1 '46 140w

"Most of the information given is as confusing as it is unenlightening." A. V. A. Van Dym

— New Repub 114:735 My 20 '46 900w

"Unlike 'The Cheney Report,' which made lively reading, pointed out the many glaring faults of the industry and showed definite ways of overcoming them, 'People and Books' by the Messrs. Link and Hopf, is a cold batch of statistics, giving information already well known even to the least astute publisher and bookseller." J. A. Margolies

N Y Times p6 My 12 '46 1000w

Spring'd Republican p4d Ap 28 '46 370w

"Despite the vagueness of some of its general conclusions, 'People and Books' does contain numerous findings that justify the effort that went into the project." A. R. Leventhal

+ Weekly Book Review p10 My 12 '46 750w

LINKLATER, ERIC. Private Angelo. 267p $2.75 Macmillan [8s 6d Cape, J]

46-8554

Angelo, an Italian soldier of World war II, had not the "gift of courage," but a tremendous fund of realism which served him very well. He fought with the Italians, with the Germans, and with the British armies, but his heart was never in the business. His heart was with Lucrezia and Annunziata, and their three children (none of them his) and so he set up housekeeping with all five.

Reviewed by Warren Beck

Book Week p3 D 22 '46 380w

"A book that is better in its parts than in its whole, and more significant for its urbane dissection of the Italian peasant, than for its cohesive story. . . It is a loosely constructed, good humored tale, of no profound importance."

Kirkus 14:466 S 15 '46 160w

"Despite the unmoral note, the novel is unsensational and the reader is inevitably reminded of Voltaire's immortal Candide, of which Linklater's volume is a not unworthy literary descendant." R. H. McDonough

+ Library J 71:1625 N 15 '46 110w

"If our charming Angelo is the chief person of the story, there are many others that are of little less interest, and perhaps the greatest achievement of the book as a whole is the sense it gives us of national character, Italian, German—for which Mr. Linklater has no more admiration than his rogue Fest,—English, and American. The manner of the telling throughout is faintly ironical." J. D. Beresford

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 15 '46 300w

"His story is a good and intelligent one, but no more than a picture rail from which he hangs his garish Mediterranean canvases and his little tracts of ironic wisdom. An agreeable book, defiantly unimportant." Philip Toynbee

+ New Statesman & Nation 31:343 My 11 '46 650w

"Better than anything else, Mr. Linklater's novel illustrates the value and uses of emotional wit in fiction. By means of this combination, he is able to cover a great deal of ground. His characters are many, varied, marked firmly with the author's personal and entertaining imprint. They are presented very much in the state of classic caricature, and he particularly well handles the looting yet esthetic German officer, in comic retreat. The plot, which is coincidental in the extreme, is composed of choppy, shadow-play incidents, clear in outline and sharp in effect. Color and detail are specific and personally observed."

LINKLATER, ERIC—Continued

B. V. Winebaum

+ — N Y Times p7 D 8 '46 800w

"Mr. Linklater indulges his neat talent for pleasantly cockeyed characters and situations, but in spite of the right-up-to-the-minute events of the story, Angelo seems to have been shaken out of one of the author's oldest hats."

New Yorker 22:142 D 14 '46 90w

Reviewed by William Hogan

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ja 2 '47 650w

"Mr. Linklater's little book is brimful of brilliantly observed anecdotes and many good stories. Mr. Linklater's style is uncommonly careful. To those who do not think the war is over and done with, 'Private Angelo' can be recommended." Robert Pick

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 Ja 11 '47 500w

Reviewed by V. C. Clinton-Baddeley

Spec 176:306 Mr 22 '46 600w

"In nicely rounded and urbane phrase Mr. Linklater anatomizes a part, possibly a large part, though certainly not the whole, of the Italian temperament—the exuberance, the engaging ease, the shrewd and unheroic good sense. . . . In spite of Mr. Linklater's accomplishment, too little of all this hangs together. For the rest, much of the detail is well observed or smoothly invented, though set down with more verbal elegance than imaginative vigour."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p125 Mr 16 '46 500w

"Eric Linklater has written a most satisfying novel about our second world war. He is an old hand both at soldiering and writing; he has seen clearly the rise of a new historical flood in the wars of nationalism in our century; he has implied skillfully the parallel between the Dark Ages and our own so brightly illuminated times. . . . 'Private Angelo' is a rich experience, human, magnanimously objective, softly satirical, a fine mixture of comedy and tragedy. It bestows what Angelo finally achieved and what the world most dreadfully needs, a sufficiency both of realism and of the dono di coraggio." Thomas Sugrue

+ Weekly Book Review p7 D 8 '46 900w

LITTEN, FREDERIC NELSON. Kingdom of flying men; a story of air cargo. 247p $2 Presbyterian bd.

46-7179

Novel for older boys. It tells the story of a group of discharged army and navy fliers who pool their resources to establish their own air freight service.

Reviewed by Martha King

Book Week p13 O 20 '46 250w

Booklist 43:72 N 1 '46

"The characters, throughout, are convincing, drawn as they are with greys as well as black and white."

+ Kirkus 14:459 S 15 '46 120w

"Recommended for young people's collections." M. C. Scoggin

+ Library J 71:1811 D 15 '46 70w

"Theme is a worthy one if such discrimination does exist, but the great number of characters, irrelevant situations and strands of plot weaken it. Too involved for most junior high school boys." M. B. Snow

— + Library J 71:1811 D 15 '46 70w

"Skillfully handled. The story of a small mixed group of veterans in setting up a cargo airline is told with skill and accuracy." Frederick Graham

+ N Y Times p26 N 17 '46 150w

"Working out a sense of values in tumultuous present-day conditions gives a story no chance for dull moments. It causes a somewhat different type of villain to come into the melodrama, for a story of this sort must have some adverse influence to keep it on the boil."

+ Weekly Book Review p28 N 10 '46 450w

LITTEN, FREDERIC NELSON. Rendezvous on Mindanao. 237p $2 Dodd

45-10322

This story for older boys relates the adventures of an American family, a father and his two sons, in the Philippines during the war.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p62 D 2 '45 400w

Kirkus 13:438 O 1 '45 90w

"Convincing picture of jungle warfare and war flying. Racial problem well handled. Recommended for boys twelve to fifteen." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 71:124 Ja 15 '46 60w

"The book is especially recommended for its sound ethnic approach to the inter-racial problems of the Philippines." David Dempsey

+ N Y Times p30 F 17 '46 150w

"The dramatic facts of recent western Pacific history are superb material for a patriotic adventure story for older boys, and Frederic Nelson Litten has missed few opportunities to make the most of them in this story of Mindanao guerrillas." Barrett McGurn

+ — Weekly Book Review p6 Ja 27 '46 450w

LITTLE, CONSTANCE, and LITTLE, GWE-NYTH. Black stocking. 220p $2 Doubleday

46-6292

Mystery story.

"Flighty but fun."

Kirkus 14:286 Je 15 '46 80w

"A patient who escapes from a lunatic asylum, a headless nurse, a corpse which will not stay put—these are some of the ingredients in this sometimes hilarious and sometimes boring mélange of comedy and murder. . . . The boring part of the story comes near the end when the detective who solves the case goes over in his mind all the possibilities and wonders where he is to find the evidence to prove that he has found the right answer to the problem. It is quite possible to skip that part and take the whole thing as a farce comedy." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p25 Ag 25 '46 140w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p12 S 1 '46 50w

"Foul."

— Sat R of Lit 29:35 S 28 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p19 Ag 25 '46 90w

LITTLE, IRENE. Michael Finnegan; pictures by Carol Yeakey. [32p] 50c Grosset

Cats—Legends and stories 46-2254

"This is the short and simple annal of an enterprising kitten who insisted on making his own way in the world, eventually landing a berth as ship's cat in the Merchant Marine." N Y Times

Kirkus 14:66 F 1 '46 90w

"Text is superior to the pictures by Carol Yeakey, for they are unattractive and not too cat-like, especially those in color. Not up to the usual Story Parade Picture Book standards. Not recommended for libraries." D. M. MacDonald

— + Library J 71:408 Mr 15 '46 70w

"There isn't as much action as Michael's curiosity promises and he deserves more flattering pictures but a pleasant humor spices this book for 4 to 7 year olds."

N Y Times p30 F 17 '46 60w

LIVINGSTONE, C. R. The earth is red. 111p
$1.75 (6s) Macmillan

[46-17061]

Short novel with Madagascar as a setting. The story takes place in the days following the British landing in World war II, and the central character is a sturdy British sergeant.

Book Week p11 Ap 28 '46 40w

"The unusual background, the description of the native Malgaches and their still-surviving ancient superstitions, the sharply defined characters, give interest to this swift narrative." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 My 11 '46 480w

"Obviously a personal experience so far as the setting is concerned, but weak in narrative and more a protracted short story than a novel. The artificial and disappointing climax represents a desperate attempt to achieve some kind of dramatic ending." J. D. Beresford

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 18 '46 120w

Reviewed by Paul Griffith

N Y Times p18 My 26 '46 100w

"If it were possible one would take the intention for the deed in this short novel written round Mr. Livingstone's observation of Madagascar during a term of war service there. But he is as yet too inexperienced a writer to know what to do with the material at his disposal."

Times [London] Lit Sup p41 Ja 26 '46 240w

"Mr. Livingstone almost saves his story by the one dramatic device he employs, involving Bailey's death because of a stupid Cockney's flirtation with a native girl; but even this fails a little flat." W. M. Kunstler

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Ap 21 '46 400w

LOBAUGH, ELMA K. The devil is loneliness. 253p $2.50 Current bks

46-4928

Saga of a girl from the hill-country of the South who went to work in a steel mill during war time. "This is a story of the wanderer, a heroine who cannot justify her homesickness by her sordid, hazy memory of childhood in a Southern hill-country home. Devoid of both a sense of origin and goal, she is left only with an indefinable loneliness. Her time in the steel mills merely continues her personal doom." (N Y Times)

"Miss Lobaugh is a practitioner of the short word and short-sentence school, and sometimes her zeal for casualness and brevity seems excessive. . . . Despite her serious intention, Miss Lobaugh has failed to a large degree in her ambition to communicate her pity and liking for the Babe to the reader." Jack Conroy

Book Week p4 Ap 14 '46 450w

Kirkus 14:23 Ja 15 '46 130w

"The novel might have been successful had the narrative been more evocative of its tragic theme. Lapses into mechanical reports of realistic detail often dissipate the drama. The author has an exact ear for the talk of the workers, an eye for their minute routine. One feels, however, that her intention is confused: is this intended to be a panoramic social picture or the narrative of one character's conflict? One result of this confusion is that the characters often become mere silhouettes." Fredrick Brantley

N Y Times p45 Ap 14 '46 320w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Jl 28 '46 150w

"The early part of the book is somewhat aggressively hardboiled in style, with the tedious overuse of simple sentences and telegraphic dialogue which since 'The Sun Also Rises' have been de rigeur with the tough school. But the novelist drops these mannerisms after a while and allows Babe's pathetic story to unfold easily and naturally. . . . Those who prefer a more relentless objectivity may wish that the author had concealed her affection for Babe; they may feel that a completely detached treatment of character and material would have given the story greater sharpness and lent it greater power." R. A. Cordell

Sat R of Lit 29:40 Je 29 '46 480w

"Besides her full and candid and often quite shocking picture of the Babe, Mrs. Lobaugh offers half a dozen extremely lifelike portraits of Babe's fellow workers, and gives a good account of the rough, often very cynical, camaraderie of the job. In an atmosphere that reeks of red-hot steel, spiced with petty animosities, laced with apprehensions and redeemed with little loyalties, it is live and let live, as it is in the world outside. Mrs. Lobaugh loses her surefooting, however, when she introduces into her story and handles with singular ineptness such visitors from Mars as the boss's pretty wife and a girl called 'Little Sunshine,' a kind of younger generation version of Lady Bountiful turned war worker." F. H. Bullock

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Ap 14 '46 700w

LOBAUGH, ELMA K. Shadows in succession. 187p $2 Doubleday

46-5743

Mystery story.

"Her characterization might have been stronger, and the flat style the author has adopted sometimes leaves one with a sense of sparseness, but all in all this Gary author has done a fine job."

+ Book Week p5 Ag 4 '46 110w

"Not too good."

+ Kirkus 14:232 My 15 '46 80w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p18 Ag 4 '46 180w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 4 '46 80w

"Detection is slight, as this is a love-is-all story." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p12 Jl 28 '46 140w

LOCKREY, ANDREW JULES. Plastics in the school and home workshop. 3d ed 239p il $3.50; text ed $2.75 Van Nostrand

668.4 Handicraft. Plastics 46-5629

"This practical book for the amateur craftsman describes the processes and tools used in working those plastics which can be machined and which are available in rods, sheets, or tube form. A new chapter entitled 'Forty projects in lucite-plexiglas' has been added, and the section on sources of supplies has been revised and brought up to date." (N Y New Tech Bks) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1938.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1129 S 1 '46 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:45 Jl '46

LOCKRIDGE, MRS FRANCES LOUISE (DAVIS), and LOCKRIDGE, RICHARD. Death of a tall man. 248p $2 Lippincott

46-7663

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Book Week p12 N 17 '46 100w

Booklist 43:133 Ja 1 '47

Kirkus 14:468 S 15 '46 90w

New Repub 115:774 D 9 '46 30w

"Mystery and comedy are agreeably blended in this, as in all the other Mr. and Mrs. North stories." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p40 N 10 '46 140w

"There have been more astounding denouements and the Norths are, if possible, cuter than ever."

New Yorker 22:127 N 2 '46 80w

"All Lockridge items are fun to read and well constructed, but some former ones have been more solidly satisfying." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 24 '46 70w

"Enjoyable."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:42 N 23 '46 50w

LOCKRIDGE, F. L.—Continued

"There's a genuine thrill in the first chapter of this one and the authors keep excitement going at an impressive rate, what with more fatalities, the top detecting of Lieutenant Bill Weigand, Pam's winning hunches and a climax surprisingly violent for this series. . . A diagram of the doctor's office is provided for any Lockridge fans who may be slow on the uptake, heaven forbid." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p40 O 27 '46 270w

LOCKRIDGE, MRS FRANCES LOUISE (DAVIS), and LOCKRIDGE, RICHARD. Murder within murder. 240p $2 Lippincott 46-402

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p10 F 10 '46 140w
Booklist 42:227 Mr 15 '46
Bookmark 7:16 My '46
Kirkus 13:548 D 15 '46 80w

"Diverting."

+ New Repub 114:166 F 4 '46 70w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p16 F 10 '46 180w

"Highly recommended for the Norths' admirers, who by this time have turned into a sizable pressure group."

+ New Yorker 21:80 F 2 '46 100w

"Well-plotted and suspenseful—though less exuberant than earlier Norths. Standard brand."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:38 F 9 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p21 F 3 '46 250w

LOCKRIDGE, RICHARD. Murder cavalcade. See Mystery writers of America, Inc.

LOCKWOOD, MRS MYNA. Mystery at Lone-some End. 219p $2 Oxford 46-8238

Mystery story for young readers.

"Here is a rare commodity, a crackjack, streamlined, mystery for teenagers. Good characterization plus natural dialogue enhance the story." Martha King

+ Book Week p12 O 27 '46 60w

"A plausible but thrilling adventure mystery yarn."

+ Kirkus 14:526 O 15 '46 70w

"A real mystery story. . . Will be popular with girls 12 to 15." E. E. Frank

+ Library J 71:1811 D 15 '46 70w

"This follows the adult models with murder, espionage and romance but no reader will take the murder too seriously and girls will enjoy the working out of the plot, far-fetched as it may be." Margaret Scoggin

+ Weekly Book Review p20 N 10 '46 150w

LODGE, RUPERT CLENDON. Philosophy of business. 432p $5 Univ. of Chicago press 650.1 Business A45-4287

"Systematic attempt . . . to bring together two sides of human experience which have been growing rather far apart: namely, the academic speculations of philosophers and the practical reflections of businessmen." (Pref) The author is professor of logic and history of philosophy at the University of Manitoba. Among his previous books are Plato's Theory of Ethics (1928), The Questing Mind (1937), and Philosophy of Education (1937).

"Much mischief is caused throughout the book by the author's sweeping triple classification of philosophical views. The chapter 'Business and the State' is marred by an inexcusable juxtaposition of pragmatism and fascism, little softened by the pointing out of 'a difference' between the two. Professor Lodge deserves much praise for his industry in bringing together the cognate literatures of business and philosophy in such a way as to facilitate the future forging of a philosophy of business." H. A. Larrabee

+ Ethics 56:320 Jl '46 440w

"Classification is the beginning of knowledge, here as in all fields. But we can not be satisfied by the conventional labels. If Professor Lodge had cast these labels aside, or followed accurately his own definitions of them, it might have produced a book novel and illuminating to the philosopher reader, and completely confusing to the business man dipping into philosophy. But even as it stands, all the book, including many clever little insights in the notes, is worth reading for its suggestiveness, most of all by one who knows enough philosophy to question the author's interpretations." H. T. C.

+ J Philos 43:503 Ag 29 '46 300w

"The net result is to give businessmen a misleading insight into philosophy, and philosophers a misleading approach to an understanding of business. . . With all these objections, however, the book does strike a new note. Where Lodge does not attempt to force his interpretations of business into line with philosophic schools, there is much worthwhile analysis along new lines." L. O. Kattsoff

+ Social Forces 24:482 My '46 700w

LODWICK, JOHN. Aegean adventure. 214p $2.50 Dodd 46-2918

Novel describing a raid on a Nazi-held island in the Aegean sea by a small British force.

"Here is an adroitly executed novel. . . The writing is stripped down into a terse olived-metal language of action, admirably suited to the subject, and has that clarity and simplicity which only a talented writer can attain." Martin Savelle

+ Book Week p8 Mr 31 '46 270w

"It's a good yarn—with a little too much chit-chat on the fallacies of conquest, and ample situation to support the gun and dynamite tempo." Austin Stevens

+ N Y Times p14 My 5 '46 180w

"Honestly, haven't there been enough of these underground and occupation stories, all tarred with the same brush? The information which has come out of liberated countries should have furnished writers by now with material far less dramatic but far more poignant than most of them, this one included, manage to bring to life." Robert Pick

+ Sat R of Lit 29:27 Ag 24 '46 450w

"The officers and the plain British fighting men are so skillfully presented . . . that you enter into their hopes and share their fears to an extraordinary degree. Mr. Lodwick is no less successful in depicting the Germans, and when it comes to the natives of the minuscule island in the Aegean—stupid or crafty, valiant or terror-stricken, proud or servile, according to their nature—his touch is equally firm and revealing. There is the stuff of real experience here. There are flashes of beauty and stabs of savage humor." George Conrad

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Mr 31 '46 300w

LOEB, HAROLD. Full production without war. 284p $3.50 Princeton Univ. press

330.1 Economics. U.S.—Economic policy A46-2894

"A study of topics basic to the country's economic health—monopoly, competition, prices, demand-supply adjustment, the business cycle, and full production. The author (writing in 1944) believes that full production is possible without war. He finds both the 'old deal' and the 'new deal' inadequate, but suggests a series of . . . governmentally operated 'adjustments' which might be applied as needed." Christian Century

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Ag 25 '46 180w

"A solid and scholarly study. . . The book will reward careful study."

+ Christian Century 63:893 J1 17 '46 120w
Current Hist 11:232 S '46 110w

Reviewed by Eugene Forsey
Nation 163:477 O 26 '46 420w

"His present book, largely written while the war production program was showing concretely how tremendous our productive capacities really are, demonstrates beyond question Mr. Loeb's capacity to handle the subtle abstractions of modern economic analysis with skill, resourcefulness, and imagination. But I am not so sure that he does not substitute the 'blueprint planning' of the modern economic theorist for that of the engineer, and I am quite sure that in his policy proposals he underestimates the difficulties resulting from the 'complicated procedures' of the American political system of checks and balances which make it so difficult for the Federal Government without unusual wartime powers to be an expeditious and competent economic manager no matter how good its blueprints." P. M. O'Leary

+ Sat R of Lit 29:18 J1 27 '46 1400w
U S Quarterly Bkl 2:205 S '46 230w

LOEFFLER, REBECCA WELLS, comp. Our country is India, by young Indians and their leaders. 180p il map $1; pa 60c Friendship press

275.4 Missions—India. India—Social conditions 46-4429

A collection of articles written by young Christian missionary workers on the economic, social and spiritual problems of India.

Christian Century 63:723 Je 5 '46 40w
Foreign Affairs 25:346 Ja '47 20w

"Excellent map, glossary and an annotated selected reading list. Valuable information, worthwhile addition to other books recently purchased on India. Recommended for ages twelve and up." Sonja Wennerblad
+ Library J 71:984 J1 '46 70w

LOEWENSTEIN, PRINCE HUBERTUS. Germans in history. 584p $5 Columbia univ. press [33s 6d Oxford]

943 Germany—History A46-280
For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"The American reader will like the author, whose kindly spirit and broad sympathies are evident on every page; and yet it is the sort of book which no American or Englishman would have written." Preston Slosson

Ann Am Acad 245:188 My '46 450w
Booklist 42:224 Mr 15 '46

Current Hist 10:57 Ja '46 110w
Foreign Affairs 24:751 J1 '46 60w

"It would be unfair to judge this rambling disquisition by professional standards; it is the work of a man of considerable ability, with some first-hand experience of affairs and an entire hive of bees in his bonnet. . . But the strangest thing is to reflect that this book, published by a university press, is taken seriously as history in the United States: ponderous and written without grace, it will be accepted by countless thousands of university students and help to make American policy even more unrealistic than it is at present." A. J. P. T.

— Manchester Guardian p3 N 22 '46 300w

"This book is described in an advance notice as 'a broad historical survey of the German people in a frankly controversial interpretation.' To this reviewer it is five hundred pages of historicism, mystification, scholarly pretension and propaganda, adding up—in so far as it is coherent and comprehensible—to a flatly controvertible fabrication." Elizabeth Simon

— N Y Times p30 Mr 17 '46 1000w

"This latest work by Prince Loewenstein is a thoughtful contribution, beautifully printed and bound. With much scholarship and erudition—and unevenness—it traces the historical development of the Germans from the time of Tacitus' description to Hitler's assumption of the title Reichsfuehrer in 1934. The volume is especially interesting and informative on the intellectual and literary aspects of German development. Much of the rest of the book, however, is based on certain views which are axiomatic to the author, but which are not axiomatic to historians in general." W. C. Langsam

+ Pol Sci Q 61:457 S '46 850w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Sat R of Lit 29:28 F 2 '46 250w

"Though one may not agree with all his interpretations, his volume ought to stimulate a better understanding of Germany in the past and the present."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:46 Mr '46 280w

"There are a freshness of approach and a breadth of vision in this book which make it provocative reading for those who wish to look beneath the surface of European affairs." F. E. Hirsch

+ Weekly Book Review p6 F 10 '46 1400w

LOEWENSTEIN, PRINCE HUBERTUS. Lance of Longinus. 166p $2 Macmillan

Jesus Christ—Fiction 46-234

A story of the last week of the life of Jesus of Nazareth, told from the point of view of the Roman centurion, Longinus, the "soldier who with a spear, pierced His side."

Cath World 162:573 Mr '46 180w

"The gospel's narrative cannot be improved upon, and while this account of a Roman soldier has an appeal, it cannot be accounted a great piece of religious fiction." R. C. Batchelder

Churchman 160:17 S 1 '46 150w

"It is an interesting and plausible tale, but lacks dramatic power and suspense. After the opening pages one can be quite sure what the outcome is to be and therefore has but a mild interest in the processes through which the end is reached. There is no sectarian slant."

+ Kirkus 14:100 F 15 '46 150w

Reviewed by L. R. Miller

Library J 71:121 Ja 15 '46 70w

"In Prince zu Loewenstein's presentation, the spear is Longinus's 'most cherished possession. Something of priceless value was attached to it, and it was no ordinary staff. Few officers could boast such a one. In a split second, by pressing two buttons, it could be elongated to three times its length, like a toasting fork. This device had been invented by a Greek sword-cutter about fifteen years ago, but so far it had not been introduced as part of the general army issue.' Some readers, the present one included, may feel that such details do not add to the poignancy of the simple text of the Gospel. The author obviously wants to emulate the efforts of medieval legend tellers. It is his own erudition that stands in his way." Robert Pick

Sat R of Lit 29:37 F 23 '46 450w

Wis Lib Bul 42:46 Mr '46

LOEWENSTEIN, KARL. Political reconstruction. 498p $4 Macmillan

320.157 Self determination, National. Intervention. Political science. Reconstruction (1939-) 46-900

"A frontal attack on the idea of national sovereignty. Dr. Loewenstein believes that the internal affairs of other countries are our business, as ours are theirs, and that the Atlantic Charter, which promises all peoples the right to determine their sovereignty, can very well become the Magna Charta for another gang of war lords. He believes that an international bill of rights which would guarantee each people its internal freedom is a prerequisite for world peace; as a historian and a political scientist, he has no fear that a free people—even German, Spanish, or any other—will ever elect and maintain in office an autocratic form of government." (New Yorker) Index.

Reviewed by A. J. Zurcher

Am Pol Sci R 40:586 Je '46 1050w

LOEWENSTEIN, KARL—Continued

Reviewed by C. A. M. Ewing
 Ann Am Acad 246:146 J1 '46 600w
 Booklist 42:344 J1 '46
 Christian Science Monitor p12 My 4 '46 500w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook
 Current Hist 10:442 My '46 1150w

Reviewed by W. O. Eddy
 Ethics 56:317 J1 '46 1650w
 Foreign Affairs 24:742 J1 '46 70w

"Scholarly, speculative as well as factual; controversial, within narrow limits of appreciation."

+ Kirkus 14:15 Ja '46 180w

"His thesis, long and heavily documented as it is, is so lucidly argued and written with such humor that there is pleasure as well as profit in reading it."

+ New Yorker 22:104 Mr 9 '46 160w

Reviewed by L. H. Chamberlain
 Pol Sci Q 61:288 Je '46 900w

"'Political Reconstruction' is a forceful statement of a basic principle that must be faced by the United Nations. It is apt and thoughtful, as you would expect of any book written by the author of 'Brazil under Vargas' and 'Hitler's Germany.' It is forceful without being frenzied, a weakness of many other books on reconstruction." W. S. Lynch

+ Sat R of Lit 29:27 Ap 20 '46 1000w

"This is a valuable book. It merits a prominent place on any shelf on postwar political planning. Even though the foundation concrete has by now been poured for the edifice of peace, there are ideas here essential for the designing of its superstructure and for its subsequent occupancy. The book shows the marks of haste. One might have wished a discussion of that supreme obstacle to international collaboration—an understanding between Soviet Russia and the Western powers on the criteria for testing acceptable forms of government. Nevertheless the exploration within its bounds, has value. It attacks with courage, sincerity and vigor some, if not all, of the problems of political reconstruction. It should prove stimulating and disturbing reading to the dogmatists of nonintervention." D. G. Morgan

+ — Spring'd Republican p4d J1 7 '46 600w
 Times [London] Lit Sup p411 Ag 31 '46 900w

"Although not altogether free from bias, the book should be instructive to informed readers."

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:130 Je '46 210w

"Professor Loewenstein's main purpose in this book is to argue that if we continue to believe in the dogma of non-intervention in the internal affairs of other nations, then we are choosing the road which leads to World War Three. His statement of the case is clear, vigorous and easy to read, and is based on a wide knowledge of history and international law." H. B. Parkes

+ Weekly Book Review p22 Mr 10 '46 1050w

LOFTS, MRS NORAH (ROBINSON). To see a fine lady. 248p $2.50 Knopf [9s 6d Joseph, M.]

46-5944

The story of a dairy maid, Araminta Glover, whose capability put her above most girls of her class in early nineteenth century England. Araminta ran away from a good job, because she fell in love with a farm laborer, but could not face the dire poverty which she knew marriage would bring her. In her next place, under the firm hand of a cruel mistress, she found the better life she had longed for: she married a young aristocrat.

Book Week p5 Ag 25 '46 180w

Booklist 43:17 S '46

Christian Science Monitor p14 S 9 '46 400w

"A story that carried conviction wound up with a murder and a fairytale ending that this reader, at least, found wholly unreal. But it was good reading, often charming and attractive, and a novel setting—through two thirds of the tale."

+ — Kirkus 14:328 J1 15 '46 230w

"Recommended." Mary Clark
 + Library J 71:1050 Ag '46 40w

"With its mixture of bucolic poetry and almost melodramatic horror this novel of Essex farm life in the early nineteenth century ought to please a great many people." Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 F 8 '46 320w

"Norah Lofts is a top-notch teller of stories. She has a flair for making even a humdrum day in the life of Araminta Glover, an English working girl of the early nineteenth century, into a most absorbing chapter. In 'To See a Fine Lady' she has a plot of character conflict that is as hair-raising and suspenseful as a flaming penny-dreadful, though it is told in restrained and simple style." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p8 S 8 '46 400w

"Miss Lofts evokes the picture of a dairy farm in England at the end of the Napoleonic Wars with apparent veracity and enough charm to get her foot in the front door, and then proceeds to unroll as sleazy a piece of goods as has come off the publishers' looms in quite a while."

+ New Yorker 22:70 Ag 24 '46 80w

"At the beginning of 'To See a Fine Lady' I was afraid it was going to be heavy going. But I was wrong. The pace is slow, except for a few moments of high excitement; and a slow pace is best suited to this record of an England which was still feudal in tradition and, in the country, feudal in habit. The book has deep colors, the richness of land and sky and dairy, the stubborn courage of people who love the land only because they will get the better of it. Miss Lofts's writing has no affectations. . . It is grave and serious; and Miss Lofts's general approach to her people and her theme reminds me of Sheila Kaye-Smith and Doreen Wallace. There are only two complaints I would make against Miss Lofts's truth to period. Her dialogue is occasionally too modern. . . And I think the country parson would have been likely to have occupied a rather more prominent place than is given to him here." R. E. Roberts

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:25 S 14 '46 400w

"Araminta herself is very good indeed, and so are all the scenes of labouring life. They have the very smell of reality. But reality goes out of the window as soon as the fine gentleman, for all he's a Radical, comes in at the door." Walter Allen

+ — Spec 176:152 F 8 '46 120w

"It is a pity that the author has not conceded a little more to normality in Araminta's love affair. Country gentlemen may fall in love at first sight with dairymaids, and their love may even survive the test of time. But in real life there are psychological factors and intricacies for which a writer on a small canvas has no room."

Times [London] Lit Sup p101 Mr 2 '46 360w

"In the course of the story, you will acquire an astonishing knowledge about dairying and marketing in England more than a century ago—information you will be unlikely to utilize, but so fascinating and so illuminatingly presented that you will be grateful for it." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p4 S 8 '46 700w

LOGAN, MRS CAROLYNNE (CHITWOOD), and LOGAN, MALCOLM. One of these seven. 272p $2 Curl

46-6100

Detective story.

"For many readers the chief interest of the story lies in the character of Quinton himself. As depicted by the author he calls to mind a certain flamboyant American artist who frequently made the newspaper headlines some thirty or forty years ago." Isaac Anderson
 N Y Times p13 S 1 '46 160w

"Reasonably sound and ingenious story; but atmosphere of cultured sophistication rings spurious." Anthony Boucher

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 18 '46 60w

"Entertaining."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:28 D 21 '46 50w

LOGAN, RAYFORD WHITTINGHAM. Negro and the post-war world; a primer. 95p $1.50 Minorities pubs. [7s 6d Mitre]

325.26 Negroes 46-376

"A brief review of the status of the Negro in all parts of the world today. . . The author is professor of history at Howard university." Booklist

"Written frankly toward the end of raising the status of the Negroes in the post-war world, the book fails largely because its irrefutable facts are presented in an uninspiring and confusing style and because the opinions it expresses are frequently vague, unrealistic, and contradictory. The tone of the volume is egotistic and pontifical." E. N. Palmer

— + Am Soc R 11:493 Ag '46 500w

Booklist 42:276 My 1 '46

Foreign Affairs 24:746 Jl '46 10w

LOGAN, SPENCER. Negro's faith in America. 88p $1.75 Macmillan

325.26 Negroes 46-4456

A Negro businessman gives his own experiences as a starting point for his discussion of some phases of the Negro problem in this country. He includes his experiences as a soldier in World War II, where he served both in the European theater and in Okinawa.

"If there was ever a book the importance and interest of which were inversely proportional to its length, it is this analysis of one of American democracy's most pressing problems. . . Mr. Logan's book should be ranked with An American Dilemma and Black Metropolis as a book of first importance, for both whites and Negroes, in the understanding and solution of America's race problem. A Negro's Faith in America is not a sociological and historical study, such as the two books just mentioned, but it is an unusually keen, critical appraisal of the present situation; and its author's deep faith in democracy and his objective analysis of the problems of his race make this a book of dynamic significance." R. A. Brown

+ Ann Am Acad 247 206 S '46 360w

Booklist 42:344 Jl 1 '46

Reviewed by M. J. McLaughlin

Cath World 163:571 S '46 400w

"His view of the race problem is marked by clear and dispassionate thinking and by great restraint. He speaks frankly but without bitterness."

+ Christian Century 63:843 Jl 3 '46 140w

"The book shows an inadequate understanding of history as well of the social forces which have given the Negro whatever minimum of decent human treatment that he now enjoys. The book deserves attention, but not the prize which it received from its publisher in a contest for a manuscript best expressing the aspirations of the American Negro." Harold Preece and Celia Kraft

Churchman 160:17 O 1 '46 200w

"A Negro's Faith in America' was written while the author still was a member of the armed forces. In the Macmillan Centenary awards, the book won top honors in the non-fiction field. The author's style keeps pace with his thoughts; it does not scintillate or sparkle, but does an effective job of self-expression. This is a good book to put in the hands of the racially unconscious." L. J. Trese

+ Commonweal 44:339 Jl 19 '46 200w

Foreign Affairs 25:341 Ja '47 20w

"It is a slim unpretentious book, but it packs a punch. It differs sharply from the average plea for Negro opportunity, for the author does not hesitate to criticize both white and Negro for some of the false standards, false objectives and false processes used to promote Negro rights."

+ Kirkus 14:61 F 1 '46 150w

"Sincere, straightforward and without bitterness is this author's 'personal opinion' which will not be shared generally by those of his own group. A Macmillan prize book. Many libraries will want to add to their collection on race relations." D. R. Homer

+ Library J 71:483 Ap 1 '46 140w

"Not all of his essays hang together. The chapters offer contradictory approaches to the main theme—the status of the Negro in American life—and reveal a degree of confusion in the author's mind. . . Negro life in America rests upon social and economic contradictions that make a straight appraisal of this book as difficult as the author has found writing it. . . No matter what its confusion of standards, its revelation of some color prejudice against lighter-skinned Negroes and whites, Mr. Logan's book is an excellent study of the mind of the average Negro who has reached the common level of American life." George Streator

+ — N Y Times p29 Je 23 '46 750w

"At the outset it must be said bluntly that this book will please most white people and displease at least a majority of Negroes. Mr. Logan's volume is interesting chiefly because it represents the reflections of a young Negro soldier on his race and his country. The preface was written in Okinawa. It is sincere, but rather confused, gentle in language and kindly in thought, with only a sentence here and there suggesting the sharp, deeply etched feelings of most Negroes in uniform. . . The book is honest, without malice, and with no special personal axe to grind." Roy Wilkins

+ Weekly Book Review p18 Je 30 '46 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 42:111 Jl '46

LOHAN, ROBERT, ed. Christmas tales for reading aloud. (Stephen Daye press bk) 397p $3.75 Ungar

Christmas stories. Christmas poetry

46-11955

"The themes of the 52 stories and poems are directly associated with Christmas and present an assortment of reverence, legend, sentiment, and humor. Some of the pieces are traditional, such as Dickens' Christmas Carol and O. Henry's Gift of the Magi, but many are less familiar and more modern. Some selections are abridged to meet the requirement of good oral interpretation." Booklist

"The stories are short, and have been chosen, as the title points out, for their suitability for reading aloud. They are vivid, colorful, and fast paced. It is unnecessary to mention their artistic merit." Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 178:166 D '46 80w

Book Week p22 N 24 '46 80w

Booklist 43:86 N 15 '46

"Good family reading aloud—where a collection is needed which suits all ages and tastes. In addition to the old standbys such as Dickens, Andersen, Lagerlof, there are many lesser known authors whose stories and poems are well adapted to the holiday season."

+ Kirkus 14:541 N 1 '46 120w

Reviewed by Bertha Handlan

Library J 72:86 Ja 1 '47 100w

"Here is an anthology in which any reader will find things he likes, and the encouragement the volume will give to the pleasant custom of reading aloud en famille is all to the good." N. K. B.

+ N Y Times p12 D 1 '46 500w

School & Society 64:318 N 2 '46 10w

LOHSE, HENRY WILLIAM. Catalytic chemistry. 416p il $8.50 Chemical pub. co.

541.39 Catalysis 45-8719

"Factual presentation of underlying principles of catalytic phenomena and application of catalytic reaction on industrial processes. Dr.

LOHSE, H. W.—Continued

Lohse lays stress on the possible importance of traces of other metals in silver, copper, iron and nickel used as catalysts. Types of catalytic reactions, nature and properties of catalysts, specific types of catalytic reaction and industrial catalytic reactions are discussed. Many references." Library J

"The reviewer is of the opinion that Dr. Lohse's book is a worthwhile addition to any library of chemistry." Homer Adkins

+ Am Chem Soc J 68:1869 S '46 160w

"The book adds little to the knowledge of a specialist; however, it presents a good general orientation in the field of catalysis. It has a valuable bibliography, including recent literature, and as such will serve for the further progress of this important field." V. I. Komarewsky

Chem & Eng N 24:264 Ja 25 '46 350w

Library J 70:1090 N 15 '46 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:53 O '45

LOIZEAUX, MARIE DUVERNOY. Publicity primer; an a b c of telling all about the public library. 3d ed rev 103p pa $1 Wilson, H. W.

021.73 Advertising—Libraries. Publicity 46-3758

"Written primarily for public libraries, but contains much information useful to special libraries as well. This 3rd edition includes a new section devoted to school library publicity, a publicity calendar of basic publicity reminders and anniversaries as well as a bibliography." (Special Libraries) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1938.

"Those in need of solving library public relations problems will find reading some of the references in the bibliography of great value." H. L. Hamill

+ Library Q 16:364 O '46 300w

Special Libraries 37:119 Ap '46

LOKEN, NEWT, and DYPWICK, OTIS. Cheerleading and marching bands. (Barnes sports lib) 95p il $1.25 Barnes, A. S.

371.898 Cheers. Bands (music) 45-10161

"This is a book for which many public and school libraries must have been looking. Cheerleading, in particular, seems to have been a neglected subject. With its many illustrations and diagrams should prove a helpful guide in both of the fields covered." (Wis Lib Bul) Index.

Booklist 42:130 D 15 '45

Wis Lib Bul 42:57 Ap '46

LONDON, KURT. Backgrounds of conflict; ideas and forms in world politics. 487p $5; college ed $3.75 Macmillan

340.5 World politics. World war, 1939-1945 —Causes. Fascism. Communism. Democracy 45-4415

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"Throughout the book the tone is reserved, the lurid aspects of an age of frightfulness are avoided, and there is shown little inclination to let sympathies temper facts. A useful selected bibliography is appended to each section; one misses in that on Nazi Germany the extremely enlightening, if ponderous and almost unreadable, War against the West, by Aurel Kolnai." Alexander Baltzly

+ Am Hist R 51:351 Ja '46 400w

"Among the numerous comparative studies of the clashing political systems in World War II, Kurt London's book deserves to be extolled as one of the most informative and delightful publications. London has given us a commendable demonstration that a political and historical presentation can be authentic and fair without being impartial; that it can be popular without sacrificing factual content." Ernest Mannheim

+ Am J Soc 51:497 Mr '46 450w

"For sociologists the main interest in the volume is probably the way it makes clear the institutional complex of functioning systems. There is a very lucid delineation of the interdependence of political, economic, educational, religious and other groups in the countries described and the relationship between them and the rest of the world. The book is well written. It reads easily, if not entertainingly, and may be commended as a useful handbook for the topics it covers." L. P. Edwards

+ Am Soc R 11:132 F '46 450w

Foreign Affairs 24:347 Ja '46 90w

Reviewed by Frances Witherspoon

Weekly Book Review p18 F 3 '46 650w

LONDON, PIONEER HEALTH CENTRE. The Peckham experiment. See Pearse, I. H.

LONG, AMELIA REYNOLDS. Once acquitted. 254p $2 Phoenix

45-11423

Detective story.

"A knowledgeable job cleverly handled." E. H.

+ New Repub 114:62 Ja 14 '46 60w

"Average."

Sat R of Lit 29:88 Ap 13 '46 40w

LONG, FRANK BELKNAP. Hounds of Tindalos. 316p $3 Arkham house

46-1779

Twenty-one short stories dealing with weird and fantastic themes. Contents: A visitor from Egypt; The refugees; Fisherman's luck; Death-waters; Grab bags are dangerous; The elemental; The peeper; Bridgehead; Second night out; The dark beasts; Census taker; The ocean leech; The space-eaters; It will come to you; A stitch in time; Step into my garden; The hounds of Tindalos; Dark vision; The flame midget; Golden child; The black druid.

"In spite of a notable variety of weird conceit the collection does not avoid monotony and the general reader will probably not have stomach enough for so monstrous a feast. Then, too, Long exhibits very little sense of structure and has clearly no patience with the slow cumulation of nasty suggestion. He leaps in medias res, scattering his horrors rather prodigally than effectively." James Sandoe

Book Week p10 Mr 10 '46 180w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p20 Mr 24 '46 100w

LONG, GRAYCE E. Tiny tunes; ll. by Betty Bacon Blunt. 32p $1.75; pa $1.25 Day

784 Children's songs

"An attractive collection of twenty-five songs growing out of the every-day experiences of children in the nursery school and kindergarten. Some of the songs have the melody first while others grew from the original stories and poems. Especially suited for the nursery school and kindergarten age groups." Library J

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p10 S 24 '46 210w

"Illustrations by Betty Bacon Blunt make the book more appealing and delightful to the young child. Recommended for ages three to six." S. J. Robinson

+ Library J 71:669 My 1 '46 80w

"The feature that commends them most for actual use, in kindergarten or in the home, is the very fact that they are so brief—especially as they are also tuneful and adapted to the experience of children at the kindergarten age. For a very tiny child naturally sings in snatches, like this; I can well believe that these songs are the result of actual collaboration with such small singers; sometimes the rhythm controls the patterns, sometimes a tune has given it shape. The drawings are all amusing." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 21 '46 120w

LONG, HANIEL. Grist mill [poems]. 79p $1.50 Rydal

811

45-10344

"The author of Pifion Country, and The Power Within Us; Cabeza de Vaca's Relation of his Journey from Florida to the Pacific, is not well known for his poetry, but the poems here reprinted from magazines have a distinctive appeal. A few are personal, several have themes from Greek literature." Booklist

"I shall not be distressed if I am called old-fashioned for liking this book. It has nothing of certain current poets' frantic passion for effect—any effect at any cost; nor is it marked by the studied and smug obscurity which gives to some modern poetry all the emotional significance of a first-rate crossword puzzle. There is instead, in such poems as 'May Your Dreams Be of the Angels' and 'The Grist Mill,' such quiet and sure integration of form and substance as makes for lasting satisfaction." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 F 24 '46 180w

Booklist 42:326 Je 15 '46

+ Commonweal 43:657 Ap 12 '46 20w

"If anyone happens to be interested in American poetry he or she cannot afford to neglect this writer." J. G. Fletcher

+ Sat R of Lit 29:24 Mr 16 '46 800w

LONGACRE, LINDSAY BARTHOLOMEW.

The Old Testament; its form and purpose. 264p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury

221.6 Bible. Old Testament—Introductions
46-1106

"Within the compass of a small volume, Professor Longacre (recently retired from the chair of Old Testament at Iliff School of Theology, Denver) has given a popular synthesis of the results of modern criticism of the Old Testament. While the debates of critics are not intruded in the text nor quoted in the footnotes, one may detect from carefully chosen phrases an awareness of the problems of Old Testament scholarship. The critical position of the author is cautious and orthodox from the point of view of 'higher criticism.'" Crozer Q

"This book proves that modern biblical scholarship is able to arrive at vital religious conclusions. Dr. Longacre has brought together the mature results of his many years of study and teaching to present what is more than another 'Introduction to the Old Testament.' It comes near to being a philosophy of Old Testament literature, if such a conception is possible." E. F. George

+ Christian Century 63:306 Mr 6 '46 650w

"As an introduction to the literature of the Old Testament for the general reader, this book can be highly commended. It is thoroughly up-to-date in its scholarship, yet simply enough written for the non-scholarly to follow. And it is so fresh in its approach that even those who have read other works of a similar kind, will find a new interest in following Dr. Longacre through his account of the development of the Old Testament Canon." F. J. Moore

+ Churchman 160:17 Ap 15 '46 210w

"This book should find a place of wide usefulness as a popular and nontechnical introduction to the study of the meaning of the Old Testament." J. B. Fritchard

+ Crozer Q 28:204 Ap '46 280w

LONGRIGG, STEPHEN HEMSLEY. Short history of Eritrea. 196p il $3.50 [10s 6d Oxford]
963.5 Eritrea

"A concise, strictly factual review from prehistoric times, by a Brigadier in the British Army who was Chief Administrator of Eritrea 1942-44." Foreign Affairs

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Am Hist R 52:100 O '46 480w

Reviewed by H. R. Rudin

— Ann Am Acad 246:148 Jl '46 450w

"The confused and eventful history of this land and these people is admirably told by Longrigg, concisely but with the indispensable vitalizing details, with unfailing perspective and general grasp. What gives this small book value beyond that pertaining to its special field, however, is the author's formulation of general principles which should be applied to many other problem areas of the world today; must be applied, indeed, if these areas are not to become the sources of another war." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 My 12 '46 360w

Foreign Affairs 24:757 Jl '46 30w

Manchester Guardian p3 F 20 '46 240w

"Since Brigadier Longrigg makes or hints at important historical deductions, it is important to assess the value of his evidence. It must at once be pronounced first rate. He has not, it is true, tapped any new sources, but not one of the respectable authorities who have written about Ethiopia since the early seventeenth century has escaped his net. Some of his deductions are, however, open to doubt. . . . When he comes to recent times and current conditions, Brigadier Longrigg writes with an authority which is above criticism. He governed the country about which he writes for nearly three years. He himself is a skilled and objective observer and a practised writer. He was helped by a very able staff. His account of Eritrea, its geography and economics, its people and problems, is a first-class piece of work, to be widely read and closely studied." Lawrence Athill

+ — Spec 176:174 F 15 '46 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p68 F 9 '46 480w

LONGSTREET, STEPHEN (THOMAS BURTON, DAVID ORMSBEE, pseud). The sisters liked them handsome [drawings by the author]. 256p $2.50 Messner

818

46-5908

Reminiscences of the life of the early 1900's as exemplified by the author's pretty mother and her sister, both of whom were adventurous and in some kind of trouble most of the time.

Kirkus 14:93 F 15 '46 150w

"Amusing if taken in small doses. . . . A good many entertaining lines and enlivening episodes." M. C. Manley

Library J 71:1048 Ag '46 70w

"The Longstreets were an amusing and eccentric lot. Mr. Longstreet writes about them with gusto, admiration and considerable cockiness. He manages to slide in some criticisms of art and literature as he plucks hilarious episodes from their mad careers—this in his role as author, not as the tagging small boy. It makes a jolly, rambunctious book, but this reader's response to Mama is beginning to flag, whether her name is Mrs. Day or Mrs. Longstreet or I Remember." Beatrice Sherman

N Y Times p10 Ag 11 '46 360w

"One more of the bumper crop of biographical memoirs, this one canned in a heavy syrup with a fictional flavor. The author presents his mother and aunt as rather more worldly ladies than we are accustomed to meet in nostalgic sketches, but otherwise their pictures are right out of any of the current family albums."

— New Yorker 22:67 Ag 10 '46 110w

"It's a 'daffy, charming world' that once really was, that Mr. Longstreet conjures up with rollicking humor and a smooth mixture of cynicism and tolerance." Jane Volles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 8 '46 160w

"The book has zest and verbal felicity, and its author's admiration for a way of life destroyed by wars and tensions and economic pressures permeates a warm and rambling chronicle." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p16 Ag 25 '46 180w

LONGSTRETH, THOMAS MORRIS. Two rivers meet in Concord. 286p $2.50 Presbyterian bd.

Thoreau, Henry David—Fiction 46-230

Novel based on the life in Concord, Massachusetts, of about a hundred years ago. The hero is one Jim Minot, a friend of Henry Thoreau. The Emersons, the Alcotts, and Margaret Fuller all appear, but Thoreau and Jim hold the center of the stage. Thru his friendship with Thoreau, Jim comes to hate slavery and joins in the dangerous business of helping runaway slaves. In this work he nearly loses his life, but he wins the love of a fine woman.

"The fictional characters, although they emerge with effort, do become real people... But the famous Concordians are wooden historical figures throughout. This is particularly true of Thoreau. Although Longstreth makes attractive incidents of the writer's move to Walden, his failure to appear at his own birthday party, and his jailing for refusal to pay the poll tax, Thoreau nevertheless remains a figure in American literature, not a man... Longstreth's writing is happily dotted with picturesque figures of speech which freshen his style and carry the reader past a slow start to the exciting latter half of the book." A. J. Hiken

+ Book Week p10 Ap 21 '46 240w
Booklist 42:317 Je 1 '46

"This unpretentious story of old Concord is a rewarding one—for it has, indeed, a tableland air and it leaves behind a taste of huckleberries and blue sky." Adin Ballou
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ap 13 '46 800w

"It is an excellent presentation of Thoreau's homespun philosophy against the background of a pleasant romance. Because of the vivid style and modern presentation, the book should be particularly valuable for young people interested in the life and literature of this period. Recommended." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 71:587 Ap 15 '46 70w

"The story of Jim Minot is well and strongly told, a more vivid tale than the reader might expect in this setting with these associations. Thoreau's part is well and pleasingly handled, with accuracy to the facts of his life and writing. . . . It is unquestionably picking a minor flaw to say that the author's device of putting Thoreau's written words into his mouth as conversational speech is not too effective. It makes for accuracy, but also for a kind of jarring awkwardness. The whole is both an intelligent and highly readable novel and a pleasant picture of Concord life in the days of Concord's greatness." J. P. Wood

+ Sat R of Lit 24:11 Ap 27 '46 850w

Reviewed by E. H. Dexter

Spring'd Republican p6 My 7 '46 340w

"Mr. Longstreth's novel deftly recaptures those memorable days and is as beguiling as such a stroll would have been—a stimulating and savory excursion. . . . 'Two Rivers Meet in Concord' is reflective, persuasive and rich in incident. There is humor in the writing, and the solid framework of story sets off the known facts without distortion." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p18 Ap 21 '46 270w

Wis Lib Bul 42:87 Je '46

LOO PIN-FEI. It is dark underground. 200p $2.75 Putnam

951 World war, 1939-1945—China 46-4376

"In 1938, a Chinese variant of the Children's Crusade was secretly undertaken against the Japanese. In this book, one of the youths who organized the movement tells, concisely and emotionally, how it functioned and what damage it did. The record of the Fire Gods, as the children called themselves, is startling: high-school boys and girls, with the aid of eleven- and twelve-year-olds, destroyed millions of dollars' worth of Japanese military and industrial stores, killed traitors and collaborators, and harassed those whom they considered, next to the invaders, their most formidable enemy—

'the young who were without rebellion.'" New Yorker

Booklist 42:326 Je 15 '46

Bookmark 7:9 N '46

"In some sections of Mr. Loo's story . . . there seems to be at least slight evidence that he is stretching things a bit. . . . Much of the book, however, seems to have a ring of authenticity. Most of it does not read like fiction; but like an account of things that actually happened, including the stupid blunders made by some of the young people who formed the Fire Gods. At any rate, it is an exciting account of sabotage in the Chinese cities behind the Japanese lines; and, if everything did not happen exactly as Mr. Loo remembers it, there is reason to suppose that much did." Floyd Taylor

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 My 23 '46 330w

Current Hist 11:228 S '46 60w

Foreign Affairs 25:340 Ja '47 20w

Kirkus 14:145 Mr 15 '46 130w

Reviewed by Francis Scott

N Y Times p24 Je 9 '45 370w

"This is one of the most exciting stories of underground activity to derive from the war, and it is certainly an unusual one."

+ New Yorker 22:94 Je 1 '46 140w

Reviewed by W. J. Parker

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 21 '46 300w

Reviewed by Helena Kuo

Sat R of Lit 29:15 Je 29 '46 900w

"An adult's book, and yet it is to be sincerely wished that all our young people, so untouched by war, could read it and could understand the mixture of modesty and heroism, of deference to one's parents, and of daring accomplishment that are ingrained and demonstrated in this picture of young China at war." L. S. Munn

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Je 2 '46 390w

"The casual way in which the author tells of his exploits adds to, rather than detracts from, the effectiveness of his story. . . . It all adds greatly to the interest of a valuable document on China's war and China's youth. There is every reason to believe in its authenticity, and some of the exploits it recounts, such as the killing of a collaborator in a movie house to the accompaniment of the on-screen shooting in the American film, 'Gunga Din,' were reported in American newspapers at the time." Richard Watts

+ Weekly Book Review p2 My 19 '46 1000w

LOOK (periodical). How to keep your family healthy. 95p il pa $1 Watts, F.

613 Hygiene. Medicine, Popular SG46-248

Twenty articles on health and home safety which have been previously published in Look magazine. Contents: Truth about your allergy, by R. H. Berg; Take it easy with your heart, by H. M. Marvin; Don't minimize measles; Colds need not be common, by Joseph Alexander; Calm down and go to sleep, by John Oliven; Infantile paralysis: summertime menace, by D. W. Gudakunst; Keep your feet on the ground, by R. H. Gross; Tuberculosis must be blitzed, by C. E. Lyght; Help for stutterers begins at home; You needn't die of diabetes, by Cecil Striker; Alcoholism is a disease, by E. R. Groves and G. H. Groves; Be sensible and enjoy your summer, by Herman Sharlit; Rheumatic fever: your child's arch-foe, by E. P. Boas; Ulcers ahead—slow down, by B. B. Crohn; You must understand your arthritis, by A. E. Phelps; Sinusitis: our common enemy, by Lester Coleman; What to do when your child is sick; What you need to know about nutrition; What you need to know about vitamins; First aid and safety in the home, by Thomas Fansler. Index.

"Any one of the articles is worth many times the price of the whole book. Let us hope that many will read the article 'Colds Need Not Be Common' and apply its recommendations. The presentation is simple, lucid and intelligible."

gent. The illustrations, photographs and diagrams are well chosen, excellently done, and instructive in the best sense of the word. The high standard of factual information, in text and illustrations, so characteristic for Look, is conspicuous in this compilation. The publication of this book is a public service." I. Davidsohn

+ Book Week p9 Ap 28 '46 210w

"As a popular and scientific discussion of common diseases, the book gives real help toward being intelligent about health matters."

+ Christian Century 63:463 Ap 10 '46 90w

"These articles supply clean-cut, illustrated, useful information on many common health problems ranging from alcoholism to ulcers; they attack, for example, allergy, tuberculosis, foot trouble and the common cold. Particular attention is paid to children's diseases, as well as to nutrition and first aid in the home. Leading medical writers are contributors." J. E. English

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Je 29 '46 150w

LOOK (periodical). Look at America; the country you know and don't know. 342p 11 maps $12.50 Houston

917.3 U.S.—Description and travel 46-8215

Prepared by the editors of Look magazine this is a panorama of America today. It has more than 400 gravure illustrations (selected from 11,000 pictures), of which ten are in full color, and there are twenty-four double-page spreads and fourteen maps. The text is the work of thirty-five editors, and each section of the country is described as to manners and customs, struggles and material achievements. No index.

"The volume is what one might call spontaneously educational in the happiest sense. The publishers adroitly make a bid for your interest by the beauty of the full-color landscape on the dust cover. Having opened the book, few people young or old will not feel the urge to keep turning the pages. Here is geography in panorama, but nothing to suggest the limitations of the schoolroom. In the entertainment of its pages, you cannot help achieving a freshly vivid appreciation of America—its vastness, its diversities, breath-taking possibilities. Grown-ups will study and enjoy this volume, and a more eloquent book about America could hardly be put into the hands of any boy or girl whom you would like to begin to realize what the American heritage is." J. W. Rogers

+ Book Week p1 N 24 '46 360w

Current Hist 12:61 Ja '47 70w

"A beautiful book which should be a good holiday gift item and at the same time provides a round the year glorified geography for all ages."

+ Kirkus 14:575 N 1 '46 120w

"The technical sharpness is what vulgarizes most other places, making most of the South a candy-box selection of yummy plantations, shiny, happy Negroes, dripping Spanish moss and Corinthian porticos crunchy as icing. You would suppose—from this ceaseless over-filtering, these gleaming blacks and whites, this hard wonderful technical finish—that almost nowhere in America is there a wispy willow, or mild rain, or half-tones, or gray skies. . . It's time, even in the age of Kodachrome, to hold a mirror up to America and show us patient and revealing things about it, not conditioned by anything but observation. This first volume mainly shows America flexing its pretty muscles, and big, sure—in front of a full-length mirror." Alistair Cooke

New Repub 115:884 D 23 '46 700w

"A reviewer who hasn't seen the 10,570 pictures that were rejected cannot be certain that the selections were exactly right. The best he can do is to say that most of them are excellent examples of modern photography, that the color pages are glowingly done and that the reproduction processes seem to have worked well. . . The text comes closer to the old school geographies than the pictures do. It is extremely smooth, but it is not crammed with original ideas—nor even with detailed information. . . This is not to say that the text is poor. It just doesn't quite add up to what one sees in traveling around, or even what one reads in the newspapers. It is fairly informative but it is superficial. Its very smoothness makes it hard to read—one keeps skidding off. It lacks the individuality to which old-fashioned people are accustomed in books written by one, or at most two authors. It has no vagaries. It does not wander. It is efficient." R. L. Duffus

+ — N Y Times p7 N 17 '46 1100w

"The pictures are often excellent, but the book has the weaknesses of its type—an inconsistency of emphasis and a tendency toward meaninglessness. Picture editors are apt to find too much significance in a shot of a rustic fiddler or a closeup of a mule's face, and many of the pictures in this volume might have appeared just as appropriately in a book called 'Look at Russia' or 'Look at New Zealand.'"

New Yorker 22:98 D 21 '46 90w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 21 '46 850w

"No other country could have produced such a book, for no other has such a fabulous variety of scenery, such a mingling of peoples, such a welding of heritages. The book is not just flag-waving, but an increasingly impressive statement of accomplishments and beauty. . . In a sense 'Look at America' is a magnificent paean of self-congratulation. Invariably it shows our best side to the world. No document of propaganda could be more effective in rousing the admiration and envy of other peoples. And yet it is almost too perfect. We search in vain for dramatic pictures of our slums, our hillside stripped of forests, our dust bowls, eroded land, racial intolerances." Richardson Wright

+ — Weekly Book Review p1 D 8 '46 650w

LOOK (periodical). Santa Fe trail. 271p $3.50 Random house

979 Santa Fe trail. Southwest—History. Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railway company 46-8267

The history of the Santa Fe trail and its part in the opening of the West, told in pictures and text. Contains a list of the pictures, which gives credit to the source from which they were procured

Reviewed by E S Watson

Book Week p6 D 22 '46 360w

"The pictures are full of interest, well-chosen, and well-produced. The text skillfully interprets the background of events of which the pictures are climactic moments. This reviewer wishes the editors had included some views of the railhead towns from which cattle were shipped to the East. Other readers will wish for other pictures. By some oversight, one woodcut is produced twice, on pages 60 and 84. But, on the whole, the Editors of Look have done a magnificent job." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 4 '47 550w

Kirkus 14:619 D 1 '46 90w

"Here is a new kind of book about the Santa Fe Trail, one that presents a wide range of possible use. It would make an excellent text book for schools, a most useful bit of required collateral reading for universities, and by and large is about as handy and illuminating a book in its field as has been published in a long while." Struthers Burt

+ N Y Times p5 D 15 '46 700w

Reviewed by Ruth Tesser

San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 19 '46 160w

"Most of the pictorial treatments of American history that have become popular in the last few years have suffered from diffuseness and from lack of understanding by their compilers, usually scholars or literary men, of the techniques of illustration. Neither weakness characterizes 'The Santa Fe Trail,' and as a result it establishes a new and high standard.

LOOK (periodical)—Continued

It is focused sharply on its subject; it has unity and therefore impact. And the business of its compilers, the editors of 'Look,' is pictorial illustration. . . Here is a visualization from which even the specialist can profit."

Bernard De Voto

+ Weekly Book Review p5 D 15 '46 900w

LORAC, E. C. R., pseud. See Rivett, E. C.

LORANT, STEFAN, ed. The New World. 292p
11 maps $20 Duell

973.1 America—Discovery and exploration—
Sources 47-125

"The first pictures of America made by John White and Jacques Le Moyne and engraved by Theodore De Bry; with contemporary narratives of the Huguenot settlement in Florida, 1562-1565, and the Virginia colony, 1585-1590, edited and annotated." Subtitle

"The volume is not only beautifully designed and stoutly made—as if it had taken on some of the vigor of these long-lived chronicles—but the text and illustrations have been superbly printed. And notable is the apparently admirable faithfulness with which the full color plates have caught the delicate brown, blues and reds of John White's extraordinarily sensitive water colors." J. W. Rogers

+ Book Week p1 N 24 '46 600w

"Stefan Lorant, the able editor who conducted the 'Munich Illustrated Press' until he was thrown into a Hitler concentration camp and who went on to make a new career in England as editor of the popular 'Lilliput' and 'Pictures Post,' has brought a refreshingly objective approach to his examination of American beginnings. As he did in 'Lincoln: His Life in Photographs,' published several years ago, Lorant has again in 'The New World' made a contribution to the fuller understanding of our history, for which we can be grateful." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Times p5 D 1 '46 900w

"The book is valuable as Americana and is a work of art in itself."

+ New Yorker 22:97 D 21 '46 80w

Reviewed by Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 D 15 '46 500w

"Just 361 years ago an English water-colorist named John White wandered along the shores and through the lush forests of primitive Virginia, making the earliest pictures that are now known to exist of life on the North American Continent. In this book, for the first time, John White's pictures of America are reproduced in their original lovely colors, and in their entirety, so far as they have survived. . . It is an amazing thing, in our picture-minded age, that these beautiful and historically priceless sketches should have remained so long in comparative obscurity. Much credit for their rescue must be given to Stefan Lorant, tireless researcher of things pictorial, who edited this handsome volume; to Randolph G. Adams, director of the William L. Clements Library at Ann Arbor, who supplied the tinted facsimile copies from which the plates were made; and to the publishers, Duell, Sloan & Pearce, for undertaking such an expensive and worth-while venture. . . It is unfortunate, however, that Mr. Lorant decided to rewrite, smooth down, and 'modernize'—as he says in his introductory notes—all the original English narratives. This does strange and unpleasant things to such robust Elizabethan prose-masters as Thomas Hariot, author of the classic 'Briefs and True Report on the New Found Land of Virginia.'" Roger Butterfield

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:15 N 30 '46 1250w

"All in all, this book must be pronounced not only the most important historical volume of the year but incontestably the best book bargain of many years." H. S. Commager

+ Weekly Book Review p1 D 1 '46 1350w

LORD, LINDSAY. Naval architecture of planing hulls. 305p 11 $5 Cornell maritime 623.823 Hulls (naval architecture). Motor boats 46-7500

"New branch of naval architecture. Author lifted the small boat design into the scientifically exact field usually reserved for big ships. In this technical presentation Mr. Lord shows his application of revolutionary new principles of design in designing Army, Coast Guard and Navy fast power craft in seagoing types during the war. The constant angle plane, or monohedron, described, was developed to meet the necessity for better mathematical correlation between a planing bottom and its designed performance." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1332 O 1 '46 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:47 J1 '46

LORENTOWICZ, IRENA. What's in the trunk? 11. by [the author]. [28]p $1.50 Roy pubs.

46-22119

"Bill and Mary had a daddy who flew all over the world. Whenever he came home, they plied him with questions about the boys and girls in the countries that he visited. One day he surprised them by bringing back a trunk full of costumes. These Bill and Mary try on in turn as the reader turns the pages. With each costume they learn something about the country it represents." N Y Times

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

Atlantic 178:170 D '46 110w

"A gorgeously colorful book with a real idea back of it."

+ Kirkus 14:489 O 1 '46 120w

Reviewed by Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p30 O 20 '46 90w

"The Polish artist who has illustrated some outstanding picture books presents a book that is partly a toy in which two children 'dress up' in the costumes of various countries. It has spirited, humorous drawings in full color."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:43 N 9 '46 50w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 O 6 '46 180w

LORING, EMILIE (BAKER) Bright skies. 299p
$2.50 Little

46-8106

Love story of a Red cross worker in postwar Honolulu. She is courted by two men, works her way through a welter of Nazi intrigue, and marries the colonel with whom she had been in love two years before.

"The plot is intricately woven and full of suspense." O. C.

+ Book Week p27 N 24 '46 50w

"Genteel romance, hypoped up with flag waving, Hawaiian scenery, feminine fashions and almost strictly W.C.T.U. (only a touch of sherry permitted)—this is sure substance for the rental market."

Kirkus 14:465 S 15 '46 120w

"The pace is fast, the prose palpitates and love stages a hold-out until the very last page." Anne Richards

N Y Times p42 N 24 '46 110w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p36 N 17 '46 140w

LORING, JULES. West we go. 199p $2 Putnam
46-4284

The gold rush days of '49 are the background of this book for older boys. The hero is a fourteen-year-old orphan boy who joins the newly widowed Mrs Tracy and her small daughter, and guides them safely to California after the wagon train had left them.

"This is a vast improvement on many of the covered wagon sagas intended for adults." Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 178:166 N '46 70w
Booklist 43:20 S '46

"As the reader travels along with the ox-drawn covered wagon, he gets an authentic picture of the western land over which the pioneers paced off so many miles. The story rings true and the characters are ones long to remember." H. F. Griswold

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 29 '46 240w

"This is good and exciting frontier adventure." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:270 J1 '46 90w

"Convincing background, fresh handling of a setting that had become hackneyed, this has good characterization, humor, adventure, better than average writing, compelling interest."

+ Kirkus 14:242 My 15 '46 90w

"Interesting reading for older boys. Recommended." H. M. Brogan

+ Library J 71:920 Je 15 '46 70w

"The grown-up characters are not very plausible, and golden-haired little Patsy is rather trying, but Thomas is a real pioneer boy, whose adventures will be followed with excitement." N. B. B.

+ N Y Times p14 J1 7 '46 180w

Sat R of Lit 29:58 N 9 '46 40w

LOTHE, ADA BELINDA, and others. Best from Midwest kitchens. 284p $2.50 Mill
641.5 Cookery 46-2800

Recipes for cookery of the American mid-west; in Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Minnesota. Includes recipes for some cocktails, and some menus. Recipes are basic rather than elaborate, but do not include full directions. Number of servings in a recipe are not indicated. Index.

"While I can heartily recommend the volume to experienced cooks (they will love it) and to those searching out time-honored recipes of distinctly international origin, it certainly is not a book for beginners. Its meat recipes in particular are dangerous for beginners, as too much is left to experience. . . . Cooking times are not always given, nor complete directions of how to do it. . . . Even beginners, however, would like very well the sections with basic recipes and their variations, like the ones on salad, biscuits, muffins, waffles and griddle cakes." Ethel Somers

+ Book Week p23 Ap 14 '46 320w

Booklist 42:295 My 15 '46

Reviewed by Esther Taylor

J Home Econ 38:606 N '46 30w

Kirkus 14:118 Mr 1 '46 190w

Wis Lib Bul 42:71 My '46

LOUD, RUTH MCANENY, and WALES, AGNES ADAMS. New York! New York! a Knickerbocker holiday for you and your children; il. by Eileen Evans. 78p $1.25 Duell

* 917.471 New York (city)—Description 46-25182

Brief, up-to-date guide book to New York city, giving data on things to see in the city, on clear days and even on rainy ones. Altho useful for visitors with children, can be used by anyone, young or old. Illustrated with line drawings and picture maps.

Booklist 42:333 Je 15 '46

Kirkus 14:178 Ap 1 '46 130w

"Delightfully gay line drawings by Eileen Evans match the text of this informative and entertaining little volume which holds the key to the treasures of New York. . . . Recommended for all ages." H. M. Brogan

+ Library J 71:920 Je 15 '46 70w

"This is the meatiest, most entertaining, yet the simplest New York City guide book ever published. It will serve bewildered strangers, native adults and their eager offspring better than anything of the kind hitherto offered. The text is light and racy but done without strain. The line drawings are a delight, both vignettes and in the illustrated maps." Meyer Berger

+ N Y Times p28 My 19 '46 340w

"The material has been very competently handled, but the writing—well, never mind the writing. A good prescription for those interminable Sunday afternoons when the young fry are hanging around the house and yammering to go to the movies."

+ New Yorker 22:108 Je 8 '46 70w

"This brisk little guide . . . has been brought up to the moment and now deserves high favor not only among juvenile visitors but with those adults who want their children to make the most of their advantages in living here. . . . The style is lively, the data sound: the book has already made me restless to see a number of things I didn't know were here. Also the compilers don't show delusions of grandeur in their price range." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Je 2 '46 170w

LOVE, MRS ADELAIDE WARREN (PETERSON). Star and the leaf. 94p $2 Dodd

811

46-3152

Collection of short poems by an American author.

"Adelaide Love is adept at turning a felicitous epigram, her poetry is professional, formal, arch and neat as a trivet; there is not a hair—or a word—out of place. . . . It is agreeable minor verse. It is bounded on the one hand by the formalities and prescriptions of the slick magazines, and on the other by a perception that is sharp but unadventurous. It is traditionally pretty and sentimentally wry in its approach to emotion; on another view, one may say that many a more sophisticated poet has not the deftness and accuracy of this lady." Leo Kennedy

Book Week p4 Ap 7 '46 320w

"Mrs. Love is one of the most consistently satisfying of contemporary poets. Her thought is strong, her feeling sincere and sensitive without being overintense, her words inevitably right."

+ Christian Century 63:627 My 15 '46 30w

"I think that in the matter of exact epithet this poet still has something to learn. [Mrs] Love's work has the virtue of being entirely understandable, but her phrase can always be easily anticipated." W. R. Benét

Sat R of Lit 29:9 Mr 23 '46 60w

LOVE, KATHERINE ISABEL, ed. Pocketful of rhymes; il. by Henrietta Jones. 134p $1.75 Crowell

821.08 Children's poetry

46-7716

Collection of poems for children, selected with three things in mind: "It must be enjoyed for its subject or its sound by the child who reads it, or to whom it is read; it must be of such quality that the parent or teacher who reads it aloud will enjoy reading it; it must be able to give pleasure to the child throughout his life and become part of a permanent store of beauty." (Publisher's note)

Booklist 43:106 D 1 '46

"Type and page are inviting and the many gay and charming drawings by Henrietta Jones add to the appeal of the book. Parents and libraries and schools will be grateful to Miss Love, and the child who finds 'A Pocketful of Rhymes' in his stocking Christmas morning is fortunate, for this little volume contains so much genuine poetry that it can be enjoyed for many years." A. T. Eaton

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 D 17 '46 220w

Kirkus 14:593 D 1 '46 90w

Reviewed by J. D. Lindquist

Library J 72:83 Ja 1 '47 70w

"A great deal of joy is packed between the pretty red covers of this not-so-very-large book. It is more than a pocketful. It is rather a shepherd's wallet, for no matter how much you take out there is still much of value left in. Since it is not a selection of any one type of verse, nor for any definite age, it is obviously chosen with a true love of poetry and a real knowledge of what a child likes."

LOVE, K. I.—Continued

Phyllis Fenner

+ N Y Times p26 N 3 '46 200w

Sat R of Lit 29:64 N 9 '46 30w

LOVELACE, MAUD (HART) (MRS. D. W. LOVELACE). Betsy, in spite of herself; a Betsy-Tacy high school story; il. by Vera Neville. 272p $2.50 Crowell

46-11995

Betsy and her friends have now reached sophomore year in high school, and this is the story of their dances and beaux and gay times and quarrels. The time is 1907; the place a small Minnesota town. For older girls.

Booklist 43:104 D 1 '46

Kirkus 14:348 Ag 1 '46 100w

"The 1908 atmosphere is recreated with a good deal of charm. Girls 12 to 14 will find this a very convincing story. . . Recommended."

H. M. Brogan

+ Library J 71:1468 O 15 '46 40w

"This is a book in a series, and proud of it—with good reason. For an author to take not only one girl, but also her two 'best friends' year by year from little girlhood in Deep Valley, Minn., through sophomore year in high school, with delighted readers rolling up their numbers as the books go on, is in itself something of a feat. . . An older person recognizes a large part of what goes on in the story, but so does a child who has never experienced it in real life." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p10 D 8 '46 330w

LOW, DAVID. Years of wrath; a cartoon history: 1931-1945; with a chronology and text by Quincy Howe. [320p] $3.75 Simon & Schuster

741.5 World war, 1939-1945—Humor, caricatures, etc. Caricatures and cartoons

46-4830

Selected cartoons from the work of this famous English cartoonist, covering the years from 1931 to 1945, with running commentary by Quincy Howe.

Booklist 43:10 S '46

Bookmark 7:7 N '46

"An important book, not to be viewed as just another book of cartoons."

+ Kirkus 14:266 Je 1 '46 170w

"A cross section of the best work of the world's leading political cartoonist."

+ New Repub 115:233 Ag 26 '46 100w

"More praise for Low's cartoons is simply additional gilt for a lily whose superlative quality is generously recognized already. . . You will do well to get the book and look at these wonderful cartoons; or better, give them a close study. They will reward the most intensive inspection." C. H. Grattan

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 18 '46 1600w

"Low is very likely the best political cartoonist in the world today. . . Low's draftsmanship may not be inspired, but it is impeccable, his drawings have point and thought and humor; they are editorials in mass and line rather than illustrations for ringing platitudes evolved in editors' conferences."

+ New Yorker 22:71 Ag 24 '46 140w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 21 '46 700w

"The variety of his composition prevents a collection of his work from becoming tiresome or monotonous. Apart from their subjects the drawings are interesting in themselves. It is for this reason that it is to be regretted that the publishers of 'The Years of Wrath' saw fit to reproduce them on so small a scale. The book is sub-titled 'A Cartoon History of the War,' yet although the pages are about eleven by eight inches the drawings are less than half that size. Almost as much space is taken up to remarks by Quincy Howe, which though interesting seem to me almost entirely unnecessary." S. J. Woolf

+ Sat R of Lit 29:16 S 21 '46 900w

"This is the most complete book of Low cartoons, and therefore the best. It is also one of the best running stories of the war. It is easy to guess that Low's lack of bitterness and of cynicism explains his enormous popularity here and in Great Britain, while he remains all but unknown as a cartoonist on the Continent of Europe. He would rather lance the infections of the world we live in than carve them out with an ax. His skill at this gives us good heart besides good laughs, because it reinforces our belief that we can use the same technique for curing them." Joseph Barnes

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ag 18 '46 800w

LOWDEN, LEONE. Proving ground. 455p $3 McBride

46-3288

The setting is Indiana in the days of the Civil war. The story revolves around a typical frontier family, with their neighbors and friends. Morgan's raid, and the battles of Shiloh, Missionary Ridge, and Lookout Mountain, are included in the story.

"Much drab material, such as proclamations and detailed strategical moves, apparently inserted to show Mrs. Lowden's historical competency, should have been omitted. . . With all its faults, to which must be added a highly sentimental ending, and a frequent disregard of the past perfect, 'Proving Ground' contains some brilliant writing and, all in all, is an impressive book whose commendable features far outweigh its shortcomings." Otto Eischen

+ Book Week p4 Mr 31 '46 300w

Kirkus 14:21 Ja 15 '46 110w

Reviewed by Richard Match

N Y Times p12 Mr 31 '46 400w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 18 '46 480w

Reviewed by W. M. Kunstler

Weekly Book Review p12 Ap 14 '46 400w

LOWE, CORINNE B. Quicksilver Bob; a story of Robert Fulton; il. by David Hendrickson. 273p $2 Harcourt

Fulton, Robert—Fiction

46-6631

Fictionized biography of Robert Fulton, for boys in grades seven to nine. Not so much space is devoted to his boyhood days, as is usual in books of this type, but his productive years are fully represented.

Booklist 43:59 O 15 '46

"Good reference and background book." + Kirkus 14:424 S 1 '46 100w

"A readable-looking book not to take the case of Clara Ingram Judson's Boat Builder, but intended for older boys and girls though a little too juvenile for young adults." F. W. Butler

+ Library J 71:1468 O 15 '46 90w

"Fulton's is at best a complicated and difficult story. The author's fictionalized biography of this temperamental genius should prove interesting to young people. Many of the illustrations by Mr. Hendrickson are splendid." R. A. B.

+ N Y Times p50 N 10 '46 180w

Sat R of Lit 29:68 N 9 '46 60w

"There is unusually complete background material, far more than is generally offered young readers, and excellent illustrations by David Hendrickson." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 22 '46 120w
Wis Lib Bul 42:154 N '46

LOWELL, JULIET. Dear sir or madam. 92p
$1 Duell

817 Letters 46-6941

Letters written during wartime and just after by various bewildered persons, asking for help of one kind or another. Altho most of them were intended for serious consideration by the OPA, draft boards, etc., they were all chosen for their unintentional humor.

"By actual count there are only two letters in 92 pages that did not produce a laugh—on any of the 33 people to whom I have already read this book aloud." E. D.

+ Book Week p4 O 6 '46 100w

Kirkus 14:367 Ag 1 '46 90w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 1 '46 70w

Spring'd Republican p6 S 26 '46 300w

LOWELL, ROBERT. Lord Weary's castle. 69p
$.60 Harcourt

811 46-7958

Except for a limited edition, this is a first book of poems by a young American poet, whose conversion to Catholicism colors some of his work. A few of the poems have appeared in such periodicals as The Commonweal and Poetry.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Book Week p20 D 8 '46 230w

"He writes with subtlety—sometimes with over subtlety—but with enormous sincerity; and if his passion for peace and for God lead him often into the half-way house of satire, one knows his stay there will be short. . . He is tremendously worth watching." Katherine Brégy

+ Cath World 164:374 Ja '47 300w

"A slender volume of skillfully turned verse by a writer whose poems, we are told, 'have been accorded extraordinary praise.' . . Appreciation of them will be keenest among those whose taste is for poetry in which clever phrases and detached vivid flashes of scene and character add up to a general unintelligibility through which breaks an occasional glow of lofty but undefined meaning."

Christian Century 63 1473 D 4 '46 70w

"He writes in tight, tapestried metres, hierarchic in form and feeling. His verse, though full and rich, is trim as a yew quincunx, tailored as a box edging; he seems to have pared and whittled away every excrescence, every unessential, till the taut lines, clean as a whistle, dovetail effortlessly, polished like old, warm ivory. And always, at all levels, there is that continual awareness of his Maker, which Wallace Fowle, writing of Rimbaud, said increased in the ratio of a poet's greatness." Anne Fremantle

+ Commonweal 45:283 D 27 '46 400w

"In this first volume to reach the general public, one recognizes a strong and unusual talent, with a fine grasp of hard, clear, classical rhythms. His characteristics, still obscure, include Catholicism, erudition, a New England background, and a knowledge of, and hatred of, war. One feels that with his grasp of language, something more strong and definite may come."

+ Kirkus 14:589 N 15 '46 90w

Nation 164:74 Ja 18 '47 3900w

"One would have to go back as far as 1914, the year that saw the publication of Robert Frost's 'North of Boston' or to T. S. Eliot's 'The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock' to find a poet whose first public speech has had the invention and authority of Robert Lowell's. . . At their best there is a great hope for poetry, and indeed for America, in these poems. Without Whitman's loose though buoyant optimism, they are directed just as surely at a people and a land of infinite, unfulfilled promise. The voice is vibrant enough to be heard, learned enough to speak with authority and savage enough to waken all but the dead." Selden Rodman

+ N Y Times p7 N 3 '46 1550w

"A tremendous struggle is still going on in Lowell's difficult and harsh writings, and nothing is resolved. These poems bring to mind the crucial seventeenth-century battle between two kinds of religious faith, or, in fact, the battle between the human will and any sort of faith at all. They are often at what might be called a high pitch of baroque intensity. . . He also bears some relationship to Herman Melville, the American with Puritan hellfire in his bones. The more timid reader would do well to remember these forerunners, and the conditions that fostered them, when confronted with young Lowell's fierce indignation." Louise Bogan

New Yorker 22:137 N 30 '46 700w

"Robert Lowell's particular gift is his energy of rhythm, his just use of relevant image, and his ability to transmute image and event into allegory. This allegorical method is evident from his choice of title. It controls his series of family portraits and his slashings from personal and public history. Most distinguished among his poems are the sequences, 'The Quaker Graveyard at Nantucket' and 'In Memory of Arthur Winslow.' The allegorical method also controls the excellent single poems, 'Winter in Dunbarton,' 'Mary Winslow,' 'Salem,' and 'The Soldier.'" Jeremy Ingalls

+ Sat R of Lit 29:16 N 16 '46 500w

"Robert Lowell has more than the usual share of the poet's gifts. He is generally skillful in his handling of meter, rhyme and stanzaic form. His mastery of language is even more remarkable than is his grasp of these technical devices. He has a well furnished mind. He is capable of passionate feeling. And he is not without a myth, for though a scion of the family that is said to talk only to God, Mr. Lowell, a Catholic convert, can talk with the conviction of the neophyte about God, and more especially about Christ. . . The Catholic tenor and Bostonian background of the poems impose strict limitations upon them, but they have a value that transcends these. . . His work has a thrust and a density that are admirable." Babette Deutsch

+ Weekly Book Review p16 N 24 '46 1050w

LOWENSTEIN, PRINCE HUBERTUS. See Loewenstein, H.

LOWIE, ROBERT HARRY. The German people; a social portrait to 1914. 143p il maps pa $1.75 Rinehart

914.3 National characteristics, German.
Germany—Civilization 46-1039

A study of the social psychology of the German people based on a review of their cultural history from medieval times to 1914. An introductory chapter discusses the "German race" from an anthropologist's point of view.

Reviewed by E. H. Ackerknecht

Am Anthropol 48:455 Jl '46 950w

Reviewed by William Ebenstein

Am Hist R 52:179 O '46 320w

"All in all, this is, despite occasional trivialities, a very readable and informative book. The author is intimately familiar with the German language and literature, and he possesses a feeling for German civilization which manages to catch, here and there, the finer points in the German picture. The book suffers from extreme brevity, and it is to be hoped that Professor Lowie will plan his promised volume on contemporary Germany on a much broader scale." William Ebenstein

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:386 Ap '46 450w

"On every page the reader is impressed with the incisiveness and conciseness of the treatment; the understanding insight; the unflinching fairness of the analysis and depiction, which become by virtue of that fact all more devastating as a record of historic consistence. He will be impatient to see the second portion of this work, which will deal with Germany during the last three decades." W. D. Wallis

+ Am Soc R 11:375 Je '46 250w

LOWIE, R. H.—Continued

Reviewed by G. N. Shuster

Ann Am Acad 244:214 Mr '46 450w

"Never blind to any real achievement, nor sparing with justified criticism, the author presents in brief compass an interesting character sketch. At the same time, his analysis constitutes a strong argument against the axiom of an historical continuity which does not allow for any changes from a given direction."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:219 S '46 200w

LOWNSBERRY, ELOISE (MRS C. S. CLANCY). Marta the doll; il. by Marya Werten. 118p $2 Longmans

46-7311

Marta was brought from the market to a little Polish girl on her name day. The doll had to be shown all over the house and farm, and in the course of that trip much of the life in a little Polish village, untouched by war, is made plain to other children.

"A truly warm and human story, tenderly written, about a little Polish girl and her first doll. The plot is brisk and dramatic, and the background of Polish farm life is charming and unforced, with a lovely quality of kindness!" Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 178:162 D '46 90w

"Spun from memories of a Polish artist cut off from her people in war, this story is a delicately sketched record of a rich and charming way of life. It is so poignant and heart-warming that all who read it will long to have that life find new expression again. Mothers who read to their daughters will share with them a sense of great closeness." Martha King

+ Book Week p10 N 3 '46 300w

Booklist 43:75 N 1 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '46

Horn Bk 22:352 S '46 120w

"A charming girl's story that catches the rhythm and color of life in a mountain village in Poland, untouched by war."

+ Kirkus 14:296 Jl 1 '46 90w

"A truly charming story of Poland for little girls." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 71:1718 D 1 '46 80w

"The story of this loving Polish family and of their simple, happy life (every day and on special days) is beautifully told. The illustrations are a real part of the book." Phyllis Fenner

+ N Y Times p26 N 17 '46 100w

Reviewed by Yvette Schmitt

San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 10 '46 100w

"There is warm affection and trust in Hanka's family. Each one does his share of the work, each one enters joyously into the festivities. In the background is the solemn beauty of the mountains and the steadfast love of country. There is a poignant quality in this story of a people who are living under a shadow, and who yet find happiness in simple things." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:28 D 14 '46 360w

"This is more than a lovable story of a little girl on a farm in Poland just before World War II. . . . But because to little Hanka Marta the Doll is alive and capable of understanding anything, she shows her everything and quite naturally tells her about it—and apparently without trying, creates an atmosphere in which the family, the clan, the country come to life."

+ Weekly Book Review p10 N 10 '46 300w

Wis Lib Bul 42:170 D '46

LOWREY, LAWSON GENTRY. Psychiatry for social workers. 377p $3.50 Columbia univ. press [23s 6d Oxford]

616.8 Psychology, Pathological A46-2895

"Dr Lowrey has written a text which is a useful introduction to the subject material of psychopathology. The reader is given an overall view of the various psychopathological states and the less serious conditions affecting social adaptation. The advanced student will want to read further in the psychiatric textbooks for more detailed study and different theories expounded by various psychiatrists." (Survey) Selected reading list. Index.

"The author is conservative in his evaluation of the various kinds of psychiatric treatment, pointing out its limitations with certain types of cases, as well as the encouraging results with other types. The material contained in his book will give the social workers certain assurance both in understanding and working with patients who show some mental deviation. It will also help her to accept limitations as to what can be done for patients with serious mental ills. . . . Since the aim of the book is to increase the social worker's diagnostic acumen rather than to give method and procedure, it will be a useful source of reference for nurses, as well as social workers who are working with individuals to promote their health and welfare." H. B. Crutcher

+ Am J Pub Health 36:1447 D '46 400w

"The task of determining what is relevant psychiatric knowledge for the caseworker to master is engaging the casework field today. Each contribution is important because it stimulates further thoughtfulness and new ideas. Dr. Lowrey is particularly helpful in the chapter in which he develops the 'Data of Psychiatry' and methods for history taking. . . . One might wish for more development of such helpful suggestions as appear in one chapter where the author is specific and concrete about attitudes to be taken toward the paranoid person who remains in the community under supervision." L. N. Austin

Survey 82:339 D '46 450w

LOWRY, CHARLES WESLEY. The Trinity and Christian devotion. 162p $1.50 Harper [4s 6d Eyre]

231 Trinity

46-1480

"This volume enjoys the double distinction of having been selected as the Lenten book for 1946 by the late William Temple, archbishop of Canterbury, and also by Bishop Tucker, presiding bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States. Its aim is to interpret the doctrine of the Trinity not as a metaphysical dogma but as a statement profoundly significant for the religious life." Christian Century

Christian Century 63:307 Mr 6 '46 70w

"The book flowers forth out of both a rich and a long cultivated soil. Dr. Lowry, in fact, wrote his doctoral dissertation at Oxford on the subject. To know a subject well, one must know its history comprehensively and intensively. The work exhibits such knowledge. Such knowledge also poses the problem, however, of what to include and what to exclude. For this reason the book somewhat lacks full evenness, and contains, besides, much historical material that may prove difficult in one sitting for the general reader. The thoughtful and persistent person will, nevertheless, benefit from the inclusion of this background material." N. F. S. Ferré

+ Crozer Q 23:184 Ap '46 360w

"This is the last (1946) of the Lent books arranged by the late Archbishop Temple, and Canon Baker, the co-editor, regards it as one of the best of the series. Although about Devotion it is not a devotional book. It is an exposition and analysis of Christian Devotion designed to show that in any full and adequate sense this is dependent on the strict trinitarian conception of God. The author has given his subject an unduly miscellaneous and discursive treatment. The first two chapters, on 'Doctrine and Devotion,' include summaries, too brief to be of real value, of some modern philosophies and also not particularly relevant references to theologies both ancient and modern. . . . Dr. Lowry is loyal through thick and thin to his God in triplicate, and it goes without saying that especially in his last two chapters on 'Devotion and the Trinity' and 'Worship, Action and the Trinity,' there are things, old rather than new, worth saying. Both his A roads and his B and C roads are already well sign-posted, but the reader will require a good supply of petrol in his internal combustion engine all the same for his journey through this book." R. N. Cross

+ — Hibbert J 45:91 O '46 1250w

"It is a well argued brief for more thinking about religion, for deeper convictions, for a soundly based faith, in brief, for a return to theology... An aid to the devotional life of the Christian."

Kirkus 14:97 F 15 '46 320w

Times [London] Lit Sup p226 My 11 '46 480w

LOWRY, ROBERT JAMES. Casualty. 153p $2 New directions

46-7271

Bitter novel about army life in World war II. A broken engagement sets off a train of events which ends in a drunken debauch, and death for one Joe Hammond, run over by a truck in an Italian village.

"Writing knowingly and with much restraint, Lowry conveys powerful impressions of mood and atmosphere." Jex Martin

+ Book Week p7 D 15 '46 300w

"Thomas Heggen handled this theme better in Mr. Roberts, with more relief of humor and humanity, and without the brutal viciousness of this. While there's force to the writing, there's no compulsion to the reading."

+ — Kirkus 14:529 O 15 '46 120w

"This very slight, but completely convincing, book... is the most uncompromising indictment of the military system to appear since 'The Brick Foxhole.' Mr. Lowry not only treads on a number of already well-calculated toes, but stamps on them with spiked boots." David Dempsey

N Y Times p24 D 1 '46 320w

"It isn't a delightful study, but it has the clear, cold ring of truth." Paul Speegle

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 1 '46 220w

"'Casualty' is a powerful novel, and no young man who reads it will want for a long time to put on a uniform of his country and go off to any war. Here is the pattern of 'Three Soldiers' revealing itself again. There will be many novels like this to follow. If there are enough of them, and if they are as well written, if they burn with as much bitterness as Robert Lowry's, they will in the end bring about the same result as the almost forgotten books of twenty years ago." Harrison Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 29:21 N 16 '46 600w

LUCK, JAMES MURRAY. War on malnutrition and poverty: the role of consumer co-operatives. 203p $2.50 Harper

334.5 Cooperation. Nutrition 46-3823

This volume, written by a biochemist discusses "a liberal diet" for all as an attainable social objective. It also touches on public health measures. But the bulk of Professor Luck's constructive and well-documented comment deals with consumer's cooperation, which he presents as the great contribution of the nineteenth century to the solution of the problem of poverty. He pins his faith on non-statist methods." (Commonweal) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Margared Peters

Book Week p14 My 26 '46 250w

Commonweal 44:174 My 31 '46 70w

Kirkus 14:61 F 1 '46 120w

New Repub 115:181 Ag 18 '46 160w

Reviewed by S. L. Jackson

Spring'd Republican p6 Ap 25 '46 220w

"The book makes stimulating reading and should win converts to cooperative enterprise." R. M. Wilder, M.D.

+ Survey G 85:268 J1 '46 900w

"A striking and somewhat novel exposition is here made of the importance and potential values of the co-operative movement. The approach used stems from the fact that the author is not only president of the Consumer's Cooperative Society of Palo Alto, California, but also a professor of biochemistry at Stanford University."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:206 S '46 220w

LUCKIESH, MATTHEW. Applications of germicidal, erythral and infrared energy. 463p il $5.50 Van Nostrand

614.48 Radiation. Disinfection and disinfectants. Ultra-violet rays. Infra-red rays 46-7506

"Dr. Luckiesh, the eminent authority on light and its components, discusses in this book the methods and means by which radiant energy can be of major use to mankind. Deals with the health of human beings by destruction of air- and water-borne bacteria by means of germicidal energy, and with other uses of these methods. Discusses production of artificial sunlight in therapeutic applications and in lighting, and many uses of infrared energy. Bibliography." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1129 S 1 '46 90w

"Brevity of treatment of some timely subjects, such as sterilization of solid objects by irradiation, is disappointing, and the discussion of infrared energy is insufficient to warrant a place in the title. The book is well documented by 124 references, although there are unfortunate omissions. The references are principally to articles in physical, engineering, biological and medical journals. Physicians and workers in the fields of radiometry, bacteriology, public health, and illuminating engineering will find the book very useful. Much of it is not too technical for the general reader, who should have access to accurate, reliable data regarding devices now so extensively promoted."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 2:347 D '46 280w

LUDEWIG, WILLIAM FAY, and ZUFFANTI, SAVERIO. Electronic theory of acids and bases. 165p $3 Wiley

541.37 Acids. Bases (chemistry). Chemistry, Physical and theoretical 46-7819

"Presentation of relationship of the electronic theory of acids and bases to chemistry as a whole and how it can perform a useful function in chemistry. Chapters include electrophilic and electrodotic reagents, acidic and basic radicals, displacement, titrations with indicators and neutralization." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1332 O 1 '46 40w

Reviewed by James Stokley

Weekly Book Review p56 D 1 '46 200w

LUNN, ARNOLD HENRY MOORE. Third day. 177p $2.75 The Newman book shop, Box 150, Westminster, Md. [10s 6d Burns]

239 Christianity—Evidences 46-984

"An argument, with the imprimatur of the Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, to prove the historicity of the resurrection of Jesus. A foundation is laid by showing the reasonableness of belief in miracles—(a) 'there is no scientific or philosophic reason which forbids us to believe in miracles,' and (b) 'there exists unimpeachable evidence for certain modern miracles,' the illustrations being chiefly from Lourdes—and by defending the early date and the credibility of the Gospels." Christian Century

"In this able apologetic treatise Arnold Lunn provides the earnest seeker after the truth with a scientific and philosophical defense of miracles, devotes a special chapter to the unimpeachable proof of the miracle of Lourdes, and states clearly the external and internal evidence of the Gospels."

+ Cath World 163:188 My '46 170w

Christian Century 63:307 Mr 6 '46 120w

LUNN, A. H. M.—Continued

"The only grave defect of 'The Third Day,' in our opinion, is a certain absence of right emphasis and construction. . . As a sound and often witty popularization, and for one whose shelves are unlikely to contain the heavier work of Fathers de Grandmison, Arendzen and Lagrange, this is an indispensable book for anyone concerned with the fascinating subject of Christian Evidence." Cuthbert Wright

+ Commonweal 43:434 F 8 '46 800w

"Mr. Arnold Lunn is too practised a controversialist not to make full use of all the opportunities afforded him by the unguarded statements of his critics. From beginning to end of 'The Third Day' he is thoroughly enjoying himself, and the reader enjoys himself also. Not that he is always tightly held to the matter in hand. An index, which unfortunately the book does not possess, would hold the names of persons and subjects not conspicuously connected with a discussion of the Resurrection. Lourdes, spiritism, the religious education of the young, incidents of his mountaineering experience, schooldays at Harrow—all find a place in this hospitable volume. Occasionally Mr. Lunn's exuberance betrays him into mere cleverness."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p22 Ja 12 '46 480w

LUSH, CLIFFORD KEITH, and ENGLE, GLENN E. Industrial-arts electricity. 144p il $2.20 Manual arts

621.3 Electric engineering 46-4880
Fundamentals of electricity, intended for those training in the electrical trades. Contains questions. Index.

Booklist 43:9 S '46

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:1627 N 15 '46 40w

LUTZ, HARLEY LEIST. Tax program for a solvent America. See Committee on postwar tax policy

LYNCH, DAVID. Concentration of economic power. 423p $5.50 Columbia univ. press

330.973 U. S. Temporary national economic committee. Monopolies. A46-3167

"This study presents an analysis of the testimony presented before the Temporary National Economic Committee (TNEC) established in 1938 at the request of President Roosevelt for an investigation of the concentration of economic power in American industry and its effect upon the decline of competition." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by T. J. Kreps
Ann Am Acad 248:286 N '46 600w

Reviewed by Walter Johnson
Book Week p10 D 8 '46 420w
Current Hist 11:330 O '46 60w

"Splendid reference work systematically developed, fully documented." Alfred Lindsay
+ Library J 71:976 J1 '46 140w

"This is a friendly warning to those anxiously waiting for an up-to-date analytical study of the rise of big business before the war, its speeded growth during the war, and its alarming further gains in reconversion: David Lynch's studious book will tell them little about concentration of economic power. If the catchy title entices them to pay the price it will not gain them admission to a panorama of monopoly on the march. They will find, instead, that it is the price of admission to a monumental sepulcher wherein Mr. Lynch performs an artful autopsy on the Temporary National Economic Committee (TNEC). . . . The useful service David Lynch has rendered in his summary and appraisal of TNEC will be cherished by many. His book is more than a ready guide to the unwieldy, and therefore neglected, five-foot shelf of significant statistics which TNEC culled mostly from previously published sources. The needed guide that he does provide is prefaced by a well-woven background of the committee's origins, the changing cast of its characters, and a sketch of the growing public recognition of the forces stifling competition in the upper and nether strata of finance, industry, and trade. His study ends with a nostalgic postlude—an appraisal of TNEC's wasted opportunity." Boris Shishkin

+ Nation 163:132 Ag 3 '46 950w

"Mr. Lynch rightly attributes the weakness of the TNEC to its hybrid character, its planlessness and its marked reluctance to probe for real causes. Its failure was tragically emphasized when basic economic questions were ultimately answered by war."

New Repub 115:21 J1 8 '46 180w

"Lynch's compression is sound and precise, and his evaluations are both severely critical and eminently fair." R. A. Brady

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 18 '46 900w

LYND, HELEN (MERRELL) (MRS ROBERT STAUGHTON LYND). Field work in college education. (Sarah Lawrence college. Publications) 302p $2.75 Columbia univ. press

371.393 Colleges and universities. Sarah Lawrence college, Bronxville, New York A46-866

"The field work of Sarah Lawrence College, including 'systematic observation, participation, and research carried on outside the college,' is taken as a basis for the presentation of what field work in postwar liberal education may mean for student-community relationships. Well indexed." (School & Society)

Reviewed by F. D. Watson

Ann Am Acad 246:165 J1 '46 440w

School & Society 63:39 Ja 12 '46 60w

"Mrs. Lynd is well known to the reading public as co-author of the highly popular community studies, Middletown and Middletown in Transition. The present report is interestingly written, but its loose organization and journalistic style seem designed to persuade rather than to inform. The reader is disappointed when he finds that the work reported in this volume is largely limited to projects related to the field of the social sciences. . . . However, the book contains thought-provoking, practical suggestions for the teacher and the curriculum builder, and it is a necessary addition to the library of those interested in new and significant ventures in educational philosophy and practice." J. R. Mook

+ School R 54:306 My '46 1100w

"For those who want to know how it is done at Sarah Lawrence, this is an excellent book. Also, since Sarah Lawrence is doing a splendid job of its kind, there is a wealth of material here which could be used in other colleges with profit." E. C. Bye

+ Social Educ 10:191 Ap '46 500w

LYONS, DOROTHY. Golden Sovereign; il. by Wesley Dennis. 259p $2 Harcourt

Horses—Legends and stories 46-6304

Connie McGuire, a girl who has a way with horses, is the heroine of this story. Connie's idea was to establish the Shamrock stables, and to that end she bent all her energies. The luck of the Irish was with her, and Connie got her stables and a college education too. For older girls.

"It is beautifully written, exciting, interesting in its information, and totally unexpected as to plot. The dialogue is natural and amusing, and the book as a whole has a rare overtone of humorous enjoyment. As a novel it is superior to 75 per cent of the average lending library books, though it remains, unquestionably, a 'book for girls.'" Jane Cobb and H. D. Boylston

+ Atlantic 178:164 N '46 240w

Book Week p23 N 10 '46 90w

Booklist 43:39 O 1 '46

"This is an interesting story and one that teaches you a great deal about the business of training and handling horses. Don't miss watching Connie ride in the race or finding out if she gets to State College." H. F. Griswold
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 12 '46 220w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 22:467 N '46 90w
Kirkus 14:387 Ag 15 '46 100w

"Plenty of suspense and action hold the reader's interest to the end." E. E. Frank
+ Library J 71:1336 O 1 '46 60w

"Sure fire for the horse lovers, with enough romance and mystery to sweeten it for the girls who like 'girls' stories." M. C. Scoggin
+ N Y Times p11 S 1 '46 180w

Reviewed by Dorothy Hamilton
San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 10 '46 150w

"This is a sure-fire story for all lovers of horses, regardless of age. It will also be likely to appeal to adolescent girls, regardless of their interest in horses. It has action, suspense, and mystery. The illustrations are very fine." R. A. B.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:62 N 9 '46 250w
Springf'd Republican p4d S 8 '46 130w

LYSENKO, TROFIM DENISOVICH. Heredity and its variability; tr. from the Russian by Theodosius Dobzhansky. 65p pa 50c King's crown press

575.2 Heredity. Variation (biology) A46-818

"Genetics has been under fire in Soviet Russia for years, partly for pseudo-scientific reasons, mainly for ideological reasons. Under the Marxian dispensation environment is everything and heredity virtually nothing. . . . The leading anti-geneticist of Soviet Russia is T. D. Lysenko, a disciple of Mitchurin, who was a sort of Burbank and who had his doubts about heredity. Lysenko is an academician and the head of an important agricultural research institute where he has introduced the procedure of 'vernalization,' meaning that by controlling such environmental factors as moisture, temperature and nutrition, he is able to change winter wheat permanently into spring wheat and vice versa. . . . In the book before us, the first of his to appear in English, Lysenko presents his arguments." N Y Times

"This is of some importance to American readers even though they have no great interest in what plant and animal breeders are doing with genetics in the way of producing faster race-horses. . . . We are presented with an example of what a State-imposed ideology can do to science. With Einstein's theory of relativity regarded as 'bourgeois idealism' because the rejection of the infinite universe of Newton in some strange way violates the Marxian gospel, we have here another example of totalitarianism influence. Lysenko's monograph has to be read in the light of this State control of science in Soviet Russia. Unless it is so read it will strike the informed reader merely as another effusion from a crackpot." Waldemar Kaempffert

N Y Times p6 Mr 3 '46 1100w

"The translation into English of Academician Lysenko's theory of heredity has set the stage for a controversy that should be heard around the world. The importance of Lysenko's work lies not in his views as an individual but in the extent to which they represent Soviet doctrine and the bearing this doctrine has on such issues as the nationalization of science and its international control in the Atomic Age." Robert Simpson

Sat R of Lit 29:28 Mr 9 '46 3650w

LYTLE, CHARLES WALTER. Job evaluation methods. 329p il $6 Ronald 658.322 Job analysis 46-2122

"Rather than a study of individual job evaluation methods, this work is a general, analytical approach to the whole problem. Under such chapters as Determining policies and organizing, Methods and techniques, Setting up measuring scales, Locality surveys

—Setting the general wage level, and Operating and adjusting, the author, who is Professor of Industrial Engineering at New York University, discusses principles and techniques. Case histories and literature pertaining to successful job evaluation systems and successful solutions of particular problems are cited freely, however. Two appendices discuss rate-setting for women workers, and current government regulations on wages and salaries." N Y New Tech Bks

"In the opinion of the reviewer, this is the best digest of these techniques that has appeared. It is of value to all manufacturers interested in these practices that are of increasing interest, and to advanced students in college courses in management." D. S. Kimball

+ Ann Am Acad 246:160 Jl '46 320w
Library J 71:346 Mr 1 '46 80w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:9 Ja '46

"The book should be suitable for graduate courses in the field of management training. For the general industrial reader it clarifies principles and codifies practice in a useful way."

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:110 Je '46 240w

LYTLE, JOHN HORACE. Simple secrets of dog discipline. 63p $1.50 Putnam 636.7 Dogs—Training Agr46-259

"Essential pointers for the prospect who expects to be owned by his first dog. Conversational style." Cleveland Open Shelf

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '46

"A useful and compact guide which will tell you not only how to handle your dog, but how to handle yourself when training your pet." R. O'B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 O 13 '46 90w

LYTLE, EILEEN JEANETTE. See Garrett, E. J. L.

M

MAASS, EDGAR. Imperial Venus. 421p $3 Bobbs

Borghese, Maria Paolina (Bonaparte) principessa—Fiction 46-2718

Novel based on the life of Napoleon's favorite sister, Pauline.

Reviewed by Arthur Meeker
Book Week p9 My 5 '46 460w
Booklist 42:317 Je 1 '46

"An opulent addition to the mass of writings on Bonaparte—this highly interpretative novel of his sister, Pauline . . . gives a more detailed picture of Napoleon's family and background. . . . This is thoroughgoing historical fact into fiction."

+ Kirkus 14:180 Ap 15 '46 260w

"As a biography, the book is not wholly successful; it is, however, an informal and remarkably vivid chronicle of the fortunes of the Bonaparte family and of the times in which Napoleon rose and fell."

New Yorker 22:110 My 4 '46 100w

"Mr. Maass is a far better researcher than story-teller. Saddled with a subject of his own choosing like Pauline, he makes use of every last bit of data he has so conscientiously gathered, instead of inventing a semi-fictional Bonaparte family history or concocting another version of the story of Napoleon and Josephine, those overworked but worthy friends to novelists. Except when handled by a superlative writer or a downright devil-may-care romancer, a second-rate figure out of history usually engenders a novel of corresponding value." E. V. Winebaum

+ N Y Times p10 My 5 '46 500w

MAASS, EDGAR—Continued

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Jl 7 '46
200w

"[This book] turns out to be, not a rival to 'Don Pedro and the Devil,' but a revival in other terms of 'Forever Amber.' . . . [There] are defects in the approach to the subject, but the defects of manner are nearly as bad and go far toward destroying even what value Mr. Maass gets out of his material. He is very careful with his history and if he makes errors in it, they are far less numerous and serious than those usually associated with historical fiction. But he is too careful; the fiction often comes off second best. . . . In addition the technique of the movies, which has had so much influence on lending-library fiction, is also evident here. The build-up is long in every case; the emotional scene for which it has been made is over in a flash before anyone has time to feel hurt or disturbed. The entire book gives the unfortunate impression of having been produced for the market, to cash in on the reputation of a good novelist tackling a highly popular theme." Fletcher Pratt

— Sat R of Lit 29:29 Jl 6 '46 500w

"A book which is eventful and faithful to the facts of history, or to reasonable deductions based on the facts. But it is an undistinguished narrative. The early pages, dealing with the time when she was still the young and untamed Corsican, with a curious, awakening eagerness about the life into which she was being thrown, have much merit. In them Pauline really becomes, for a moment, a genuine individual, not just one of the family. This situation, however, does not last." Donald Derby

— + Springf'd Republican p4d Je 9 '46 550w

"Pauline was inadequate to her times, and she is equally inadequate as the heroine of a story which seeks to interpret the Napoleonic Era and its colossal guiding personality. 'Imperial Venus' shows flashes of moody brilliance, but it may disappoint admirers of Mr. Maass's earlier novel, the powerful 'Don Pedro and the Devil.'" Richard Match

— + Weekly Book Review p10 My 5 '46
800w

MCADOO, MRS ELEANOR RANDOLPH (WILSON). Julia and the White House. 187p $2.50 Dodd

46-6885

The story of a girl from a small mid-western town whose father is elected president. Julia is very young and almost has her head turned by her experience of living in the White House, but the sensible young doctor from her home town attends to that. The author is a daughter of Woodrow Wilson.

Booklist 43:72 N 1 '46

"Characters and incidents are fictional. Physical make-up and the social life and romance portrayed make this definitely a book for young adults." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 71:1547 N 1 '46 90w

"Eleanor Wilson McAdoo, herself the daughter of a President, has written with authority of the complications and delights of life in Washington. Her affectionate descriptions of the White House highlights a very real story of a very likable girl, written for senior high school girls." K. Dombaugh

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 10 '46
230w

"There is much in it, rapidly and sincerely told, that has the ring of reality, though names, dates and most of the places have been carefully transmuted." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 O 6 '46 200w

MACARDLE, DONALD. Summer in April [Eng title: Tansy]. 324p $2.50 Lippincott [8s 6d Hodder]

46-5571

Story of a young English girl faced with difficulties in the process of growing up. Expelled from a select boarding school for a foolish prank, Tansy is thrust into the adult world before she is quite ready. Dominated by her mother, a successful couturiere, Tansy is still unhappy because of the mystery surrounding her father. When that mystery is cleared up Tansy finds womanhood in making her own choice of a future course in life.

"There isn't in this book the dullness nor the tenseness that one usually finds in a 'psychological development' novel. It is light and fresh and amusing and amazingly convincing to have been written by a man." Olive Carruthers

+ Book Week p7 Ag 4 '46 320w

Booklist 43:36 O 1 '46

Kirkus 14:257 Je 1 '46 210w

"Amusing dialogue and likeable, human characters. Excellent entertainment for light vacation reading." Barbara Overton

+ Library J 71:978 Jl '46 70w

"The author has succeeded in creating an appealing and believable adolescent. Tansy is precocious, but no more so than her rather unusual circumstances warrant. . . . At times the author employs an awkward flashback treatment to bring in family history. The reader is given a good deal of unimportant detail, but once the story gets under way, the style tightens and the reader is swept along by a series of events that ends in Tansy's discovering the truth—not only about her father but about herself." Julia Palmer

+ — N Y Times p16 Jl 28 '46 400w

"There is a patently contrived ending, but the novel is easy to read, and probably just as easy to forget."

New Yorker 22:67 Jl 27 '46 80w

"This is essentially a woman's book, its femininity of viewpoint underscored by a lavish dwelling upon clothes and interiors of houses, upon appearance as a clue to fact. Though intended as a psychological study, it is not burdened by profound research into motive and reaction. Its storms are no more threatening than April showers, its joys as tenuous as the April sun." Virgilia Peterson

Weekly Book Review p6 Jl 28 '46 800w

Wis Lib Bul 42:132 O '46

MACARDLE, DOROTHY. The unforeseen [Eng title: Fantastic summer]. 278p $2.50 Doubleday [8s 6d Davies]

46-25192

Records the events of one summer in the life of an Irish widow who finds that she has the power to foresee events. The psychiatrist whom she consults has a son, who falls in love with the widow's daughter. This, coupled with Virgilia's power of prevision almost brings about disaster.

Booklist 42:329 Je 15 '46

"Many readers, who seek full-bodied flavor in the novels they read, will find little to satisfy them in this psychological soufflé."

Cath World 164:94 O '46 260w

Commonweal 44:438 Ag 16 '46 150w

"It's good reading—and I found it more convincing [than The Uninvited],—though still in the realm of the search for new understanding of the psychic powers. She writes extraordinarily well."

+ Kirkus 14:134 Mr 15 '46 150w

"Characters are well-drawn and convincing, while charming descriptions of the countryside make an attractive background for a pleasant romance. Somewhat melodramatic ending seems a bit forced. Recommended." R. F. Tubby

+ — Library J 71:758 My 15 '46 70w

"The uninitiated will discover certain facts about extra-sensory perception, but the book is not [just] a pleasant substitute for The Journal of Parapsychology. It is a new kind of mystery story, well-planned and well-executed." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Times p4 Je 9 '46 250w

"Only a reader with some knowledge of psychic phenomena can say how good the book is as a case history; as light fiction, though, it is very readable, even if you don't believe a word of the lady's visions."

+ — New Yorker 22:103 Je 8 '46 80w

"The plot itself is of short story dimension; and the bulk of the novel is filled with pleasing descriptions of a summer in prewar Ireland. The general effect is highly agreeable, in a lulling sort of way; but the handling of its major theme left this reader, at least, hungry and frustrated." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 J1 4 '46 150w

Spring'd Republican p4d J1 7 '46 180w

Miss Macardle has a sure feeling for Anglo-Irish ways and talk, and her characters are sympathetic and lively. She marshals the intricacies of her plot with skill, though its outcome is too cheerful for its macabre setting. For her creation of an uncanny atmosphere is once again impressive, and the riddle of Virgilia's visions still teases through the happy ending."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p281 Je 15 '46 360w

"In a story that ventures boldly but imaginatively beyond the borders of reality—into the realm of premonitions, second sight, disturbed emotional equilibrium and the twilight zones of consciousness—Dorothy Macardle writes compellingly and with distinction. Dealing with unstable personalities, with hidden and intangible forces, she remains balanced and logical, always in control of her intricate and swiftly unfolding narrative. 'The Unforeseen' probes deeply in obscure places of the mind, but its author presents her findings without evasion or psychological fumbling." George Conrad

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Je 16 '46 300w

MACARTNEY, CLARENCE EDWARD
NOBLE. Trials of great men of the Bible. 189p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

252 Sermons 46-3923

"The minister of the First Presbyterian Church, Pittsburgh, adds another volume to his published sermons. The title is sufficient indication of what this series is about. . . The sermons are simple: the re-telling of the Bible story, with the pointing of the religious or moral lessons discovered in it." Churchman

Christian Century 63:499 Ap 17 '46 20w

Reviewed by F. J. Moore
Churchman 160:17 N 1 '46 90w

MCBRIDE, ROBERT MEDILL (MARSHALL REID, pseud.), ed. Treasury of antiques. 160p il $4 McBride

708.051 Antiques. Art objects. Collectors and collecting 46-5080

"The editor calls this book 'a kind of sampler' of antiques. It consists of chapters by many authors, each a specialist in some field, many of them designed to serve as an introduction to a subject which can be carried farther. Others are of a practical nature, with considerable emphasis on modern uses for antiques. Oversize, double column, very fully illustrated. For library use should have had an index." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 43:10 S '46

Bookmark 7:7 N '46

"It is just as good an amateur's guide in the realms of antiquarianism as a professional's; useful to a person of moderate means as well as to one with much cash to spend."

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 17 '46 100w

"Lovers of old furniture and other objects made in times past will revel in 'A Treasury of Antiques'. . . This unusual volume not only indicates the extent of the collector's field but acquaints the general reader with an appealing subject." D. B. B.

+ Spring'd Republican p6 My 31 '46 300w

Wis Lib Bul 42:113 J1 '46

MCBRIDE, ROBERT MEDILL (MARSHALL REID, pseud.), ed. When you build. 160p il $4 McBride

728 Architecture, Domestic—Designs and plans 46-5452

"Panorama of contemporary American domestic architecture. Houses selected are the work of some leading architects. Chapters by George Nelson on advice in building and details of structure, followed by descriptions of houses grouped regionally—New England, the South, etc. About 400 illustrations and plans." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:981 J1 '46 70w

"Pictures and descriptions of homes of low and moderate cost are given, and, though it is claimed that 'large and elaborate' houses have been avoided in this compilation, some of them do seem rather pretentious. . . The book includes floor plans and hundreds of appealing photographs, inside and outside the house. The brief articles are written by specialists, the first third of the volume by Architect George Nelson giving advice and information on many problems in more than a dozen short chapters." D. B. B.

Spring'd Republican p6 Je 19 '46 300w

Reviewed by Richardson Wright

Weekly Book Review p15 Ag 25 '46 140w

Wis Lib Bul 42:128 O '46

MCCARTY, JOHN LAWTON. Maverick town; the story of old Tascosa; with chapter decorations by Harold D. Bugbee. 277p il $3 Univ. of Okla. press

976.4 Tascosa, Texas. Frontier and pioneer life—Texas 46-6343

A history of a Texas Panhandle town which after twenty-five years as the booming center of a vast cattle range, fell victim to various ills and became one of the lesser known 'ghost towns' of the Southwest. The author, a newspaperman, bases his story on interviews with old timers and extensive research into old newspaper files and other records.

"If some of McCarty's writing is a bit pedestrian because he dwells at unnecessary length on seemingly unimportant details, that can be forgiven in the excellence of the overall picture he gives of a town that was for a brief time the capital of a vast empire in Cattleland and of the inevitable conflict between the cattle barons and the homesteaders for domination of the open range which contributed to its becoming a ghost town." E. S. Waton

+ — Book Week p3 Ag 25 '46 320w

Reviewed by Hoffman Birney
N Y Times p20 S 29 '46 550w

"Unfortunately, the author suffers from a professional deformation common to writers about the West, and especially about Texas—an overzealousness for detail that is irrelevant to all but the most exacting old-timer. Just the same, a lively book, which gives you what seems an authentic picture of a life which, curiously, appears to have been just about the way it is in the horse operas."

+ — New Yorker 22:90 Ag 17 '46 160w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 18 '46 100w

"It seems strange to New Englanders, surrounded by the relics of three centuries, that a town which didn't exist before the Civil War should be regarded as 'old,' but to the lively and still blossoming West, Tascosa is ancient history, and the story of its rambunctious heyday is excellently told by Mr McCarty in one of the most entertaining books yet produced in the admirable southwestern series being published at the University of Oklahoma." R. F. H.

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Ag 25 '46 550w

"John L. McCarty, an Amarillo newspaper man who for many years has shown a lively and intelligent interest in Southwestern history, has done a conscientious job in recon-

MCCARTY, J. L.—Continued
 structing the gaudy days of Tascosa. His research has been painstaking, his presentation is orderly, his style is clear and sober. He has no great gift for anecdote, and his manner of telling history is by no means exciting, but he has done a sound job—in most respects, indeed, a model of factual reporting." Stanley Walker
 + Weekly Book Review p6 S 1 '46 650w

MCCASLIN, HERBERT JOHN. Wood pattern-making; a textbook. 4th ed 366p il $2.60 McGraw

621.72 Pattern making 46-5170

"The fourth edition of this book has been enlarged so as to bring the discussion of present-day shop practice up to date. As in earlier editions, this is a practical book designed for the student who wishes to learn patternmaking. It deals with the principles of wood patternmaking and presents a series of problems graded according to their difficulty, with instructions pertaining to the order of operations. There are sixty-four pattern lessons in the present edition, and many new illustrations. The glossary contains new terms, and there is a list of 16-mm. sound motion pictures, produced by the U.S. Office of Education, suitable for use with the book." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index. For third edition, see Book Review Digest, 1942.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:762 My 15 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:44 J1 '46

MCCLOY, SHELBY THOMAS. Government assistance in eighteenth-century France. 496p $6 Duke Univ. press [33s Cambridge]

360.944 Charities—France 46-1596

"The author is Professor of History at the University of Kentucky. In this volume he relates in detail the many forms of assistance extended by the French government to its citizens, ranging from food and flood relief to unemployment and war victims. Despite its scholarly treatment, there is much in it of general interest, and there are situations which parallel somewhat the efforts of governments in our own times." (Current Hist) Bibliography. Index.

"Without some sort of summarizing paragraphs, the narrative is hard to follow. The facts are assembled without much comment, and there is almost no general interpretation of the material. . . . Extended use has been made of archival sources and of printed materials gathered in the libraries of France and the United States; it is a work of careful and thorough scholarship. It covers much new ground and is an important contribution to the history not only of the Old Regime in France but also to the general social and economic history of modern Europe." F. B. Artz
 + — Am Hist R 51:705 J1 '46 400w

Reviewed by H. I. Clarke

Am Pol Sci R 40:1219 D '46 250w

"The book has value as a social study as well as an addition to history."

+ Current Hist 10:446 My '46 100w

"The purpose of this volume is to give an account of government assistance to the needy in France in the eighteenth century. As such, it is a valuable contribution to historiography, narrowly viewed."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:120 Je '46 320w

MACCOLL, LEROY ARCHIBALD. Fundamental theory of servomechanisms. 130p $2.25 Van Nostrand

621.8 Servomechanisms 45-10608

"A mathematical approach to the study of the basic principles and theory of servomechanisms. The volume is intended for the engineer concerned with the analysis and design of servomechanisms and covers such topics as: the steady-state theory of servomechanisms; stability of servomechanisms and feed-back paths; sampling servomechanisms; the theory of linear servomechanisms. A two-page bibliography is included. The author is a member of the technical staff of the Bell Telephone Laboratories." (N Y New Tech Bks) Bibliography. Index.

Library J 70:1090 N 15 '45 140w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:62 O '45

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:69 Mr '46 240w

MCCORMICK, RENEE (DE FONTARCE)
 (MRS LEANDER J. MCCORMICK). Rustle of petticoats; tr. by Leander J. McCormick. 314p $2.75 Houghton

46-7818

A sequel to Little Coquette, a story of a French girlhood. In this volume Simone d'Entremont is in her late teens, the war of 1914 is raging, and there are a variety of adventures and escapades as Simone and her friend Françoise find their way into the world of adults.

Book Week p15 N 17 '46 110w

Kirkus 14:414 Ag 15 '46 170w

"Simone has a literary forerunner in France—Claudine, a creation of the writer Colette, who started in the early Nineteen Hundreds a vogue for tomboys and bobbed hair. Like Claudine, Simone turns at the end to an older man, stern and indulgent by turns, an expert at l'amour. But Renée de Fontarce McCormick is not mistress of Colette's sensuous and artful prose, nor does she have Colette's insight into the secret minds of women in love." Mary Mian

N Y Times p24 N 10 '46 450w

"The little girl gets less amusing as she grows older, but this book does contain some notably clear snapshots of a number of very lively mondains during the war of thirty years ago. A diverting change from our own currently popular brand of nostalgia."

New Yorker 22:125 N 2 '46 80w

"As a picture of a fabulous way of life, of a society clinging to a fin de siècle elegant corruption, 'Rustle of Petticoats' has undeniable piquancy and charm. But its candor skirts the edge of sensationalism; it lacks the subtlety and delicacy of Mrs. McCormick's first book." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 29 24 D 28 '46 550w

"With its carefully sustained air of ingenuous matter-of-factness, Renée McCormick's 'Rustle of Petticoats' adds up to a pretty vicious satirical attack upon what Françoise always spoke of as 'the stagnant aristocracy.' And Mrs. McCormick who obviously writes an inside story, becomes, I suspect, a blithe and effective traitor to her class." F. H. Bullock

Weekly Book Review p12 D 8 '46 950w

MCCOWAN, DANIEL. Outdoors with a camera in Canada. 102p il $2 Macmillan (Toronto)

574.971 Natural history—Canada. Nature photography 46-4547

"A series of nature photographs, each accompanied by a one page description of the animal or plant represented. Some are quite familiar to us—the pasque flower, flicker, ruffed grouse—others are native to the region in which the pictures were taken, the Canadian Rockies." Wis Lib Bul

"In 1939, when King George and Queen Elizabeth toured western Canada, the author was invited to accompany them on the royal train as field naturalist. For nearly half a century, he has studied the wildlife of the Canadian Rockies. This experience undoubtedly has given him a vast store of personal observations and it is to be regretted that more of this original material was not added to the factual matter of the text. It would have gone far in lifting the interest-level of an informative book."

Weekly Book Review p32 My 19 '46

200w

Wis Lib Bul 42:71 My '46

MCCRACKEN, HAROLD. Great white buffalo; il. by Remington Schuyler. 268p $2.50 Lippincott

46-7680

"The story of Waken, a Dakotah Indian boy, and a rare white buffalo in the days before the white settlers. For older boys and girls." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 43:106 D 1 '46

Kirkus 14:348 Ag 1 '46 120w

"The strange friendship between boy and buffalo makes an unusually fascinating story. Print and binding attractive. Lively black and white pictures by Remington Schuyler add interest to this recommended title for teen-age readers." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 71:1720 D 1 '46 90w

"The subject matter of this book might well assure it popularity among older boys even if Mr. McCracken had written carelessly. But his respect for the courage, the imagination, and above all the point of view of the Indian has provided a sincere book in which the characters are individuals and not types." Winifred Snedden

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 10 '46 150w

Sat R of Lit 29:63 N 9 '46 30w

MCCULLERS, MRS CARSON (SMITH). Member of the wedding. 195p $2.50 Houghton

46-2022

A fictional study of child psychology. Twelve-year-old Frankie is utterly bored until she hears about her older brother's wedding. He returns from Alaska to his Georgia home, and Frankie decides she will go, uninvited, on the honeymoon. The few days of excitement of the wedding are pictured in terms of Frankie's reactions, with her six-year-old cousin, and the Negro cook as chorus. Aside from one unpleasant episode very little happens, and the story ends with Frankie gaining a sympathetic friend.

"The author succeeded in creating an uncomfortably unforgettable child in Frankie. . . She succeeded less well in examining the tendencies which drive Frankie to steal, threaten to run away, throw knives, date a soldier, and contemplate suicide. She is also only partially successful in making believable the philosophical dialogues (with Berenice often out of character) on war, sex, God, circus freaks and race problems between a 6-year-old boy, 12-year-old girl and the gentle warm-hearted Negro servant. But the novel is near enough to being completely successful (for all its labyrinthine self-assignments) so that it will create intelligent controversy among all who read it carefully. As a study of a difficult girl at a difficult age it goes rather deeply into many of the current reasons for juvenile delinquency." Sterling North

+ Book Week p2 Mr 24 '46 700w

"The tremendous feeling of the world lost, and meaning lost; of life recovered and meaning recovered; the merciful power of the young to forget, and thus be healed of fractures, is one of the realest things about this fine book." Francis Downing

+ Commonweal 44:148 My 24 '46 850w

"An odd, unhappy little story, with the bizarre, neurotic atmosphere Carson McCullers achieves."

Kirkus 14:20 Ja 15 '46 100w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling

Nation 162:406 Ap 6 '46 650w

Reviewed by Isaac Rosenfeld

New Repub 114:633 Ap 29 '46 650w

"This author has apparently known all the exclusion and protest of a Thomas Wolfe. But rarely has emotional turbulence been so delicately conveyed. Carson McCullers' language has the freshness, quaintness and gentleness of a sensitive child." Isa Kapp

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 24 '46 800w

"The kitchen scenes are very well done in the sense that they create an atmosphere and that the characters are droll and natural: the maid is particularly good; the way she is made to talk is perfect. But they have no internal structure and do not build up to anything. The whole story seems utterly pointless. . . I hope that I am not being stupid about this book, which has left me feeling rather cheated." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 22:87 Mr 30 '46 500w

"Miss McCullers is a suggestive rather than an eloquent writer, and often seems to present us less with a meaning than with a hint. And yet the lines of her work are clear and firm. I do not know how this is done; but my ignorance will not deter me from attempting to provide an explanation. Though she has an acute observation she does not use it to make rounded people. Her characters invariably remind one of faces one may have seen, in a dream perhaps, in a tabloid newspaper possibly, or out of a train window. . . Carson McCullers' work has always seemed to me to be a form of self-dramatization. It is true that this can be said of most immature fiction. But Miss McCullers is both a mature and fine writer. She does not dramatize herself in the sense that she is merely autobiographical; but she does dramatize herself in the sense that she seems to invest the various sides of her personality with attributes skillfully collected from the outside world." George Dangerfield

Sat R of Lit 29:15 Mr 30 '46 1200w

"A serious attempt to recapture that elusive moment when childhood melts into adolescence. The result is often touching, always strictly limited by the small scope of its small characters. Like childhood, it is full of incident but devoid of a clear plot; always working its way ahead, but always doubling back on itself; two-faced, two-minded."

Time 47:98 Ap 1 '46 650w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:180 S '46 170w

"Carson McCullers's two earlier novels—'The Heart is a Lonely Hunter' and 'Reflections in a Golden Eye'—were works of depth and originality. Both qualities are displayed again in this third book, with notable results in a character like Berenice. What is lacking is breadth—even in what the jacket blurb calls a 'novella.' And the kitchen forum imposes a static effect." Richard Match

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Mr 24 '46 750w

MCCULLOCH, ROBERT W. Come, Jack! il. by Duncan Coburn. 202p $2.50 Houghton

Dogs—Legends and stories 46-3587

"Adventures of a dog, toward the end of covered wagon days in Nebraska. When the boy with whom he left home was attacked by a ruffian, Jack's life became that of an outlaw and full of danger. But, escaping from the bad man, he found another boy, younger than the first, to whom he gave his loyalty. Many of the perils of homesteading in prairie country, from wolves, fires, snakes, grasshoppers and evil men, are seen as they affect Jack and the family of his new friend." Horn Bk

Book Week p16 Je 2 '46 230w

Booklist 42:320 Je 1 '46

"Excellent story."

+ Christian Science Monitor p6 My 9 '46 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '46

"Those readers who like dog stories and others who like pioneer life will follow Jack's changing fortunes with absorption." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:134 Mr '46 80w

Kirkus 14:36 Ja 15 '46 80w

"Recommended." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 71:829 Je 1 '46 70w

Reviewed by Creighton Peet

N Y Times p31 My 26 '46 90w

"Jack is a dog to be long remembered. His personality and his fine intelligence are understood and interpreted here with restraint and sensitiveness and completely without sentimentality. The reader feels that he is seeing pioneer days in Nebraska through the eyes and brains of a dog, uncluttered, direct, lacking certain nuances perhaps, but sharp and true.

MCCULLOCH, R. W.—Continued

This is not only a dog story that can stand with the best, it is a pioneer story, bringing out with starkness and severity the courage, tenacity, and humor of the pioneers." R. A. Hill

+ Sat R of Lit 29:41 My 18 '46 400w

Springf'd Republican p4 Ag 18 '46 120w

MCCULLOUGH, CONDE BALCOM, and McCULLOUGH, JOHN RODDAN. The engineer at law; a resumé of modern engineering jurisprudence; with forewords by James T. Brand and J. M. Devers [issued and sponsored under the Engineering and legal research program of the Oregon state highway department]. 2v 447;442p ea $3 Iowa state college press

620.07 Engineering law. Law—U.S.

[46-16315]

"A discussion of the basic principles, processes, and forms in those branches of the law which control engineering operations. It includes such topics as contracts; engineering specifications; rights and titles in real property; torts incident to construction work; employment relations; laws of evidence; trial work of the engineer as technical witness or assistant; patents, copyrights, and trade marks; powers and liabilities of corporations, public utilities and carriers; the law of sales; the issuance and transfer of negotiable instruments; and the rules of pleading and procedure. The senior author is Assistant Chief Engineer of the Oregon Highway Department and like his son and co-author, a member of the Oregon Bar." N Y New Tech Bks

"As might be expected, much of the subject matter is devoted to the problems of engineers in public agencies, but since so many engineers and contracting organizations either work for or have contact with public agencies an understanding of this viewpoint is of considerable value. . . . The two volumes appear to be written so that they are usable both as a text for the study of engineering law and for use by practicing engineers and contractors."

+ Eng N 137:127 D 12 '46 200w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1332 O 1 '46 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:40 Jl '46

MCDERMAND, CHARLES. Waters of the golden trout country. 162p il $3 Putnam

799.1755 Trout fishing. California—Description and travel 46-4872

Description of three trips in the high Sierras of California, made by a fisherman who carries all his own equipment.

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '46

Kirkus 14:146 Mr 15 '46 100w

"This book is a nicely written, easily readable narrative. . . . McDermand covers [his subjects] with clarity, modesty, real knowledge and an engaging manner. His comments on clothing for the trail, packing methods and necessary equipment will be valuable to any camper, anywhere. His notes on the fishes and fishing are, of course, for a more specialized group, but for that group they're first rate." J. R. De la Torre Bueno

+ Weekly Book Review p13 Je 9 '46 400w

MCDIARMID, ORVILLE JOHN. Commercial policy in the Canadian economy. 397p $4.50 Harvard univ. press [19s Oxford]

337 Canada—Commercial policy. Tariff—Canada A46-1195

"A well-documented, historical treatment of the rôle of the customs tariff, and complementary techniques such as subsidies, shipping regulations, exchange rates and imperial preferences in Canadian commercial policy, from 1763 to 1939." Foreign Affairs

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 Mr 24 '46 50w

Foreign Affairs 25:171 O '46 30w

"The author eschews all the elegances of exposition and concentrates on his investigation without a spark of wit or a gleam of brilliance. He is formidably dull, scrupulously just and slightly condescending. His thesis is not only supported by thirty-seven statistical tables drawn from official sources, but is crammed with facts and figures which the critic must take on trust unless he is willing to check their accuracy by repeating the author's researches. Mr. McDiarmid's evident industry and good sense seem to show that he has proved his case."

Times [London] Lit Sup p446 S 21 '46 600w

"The book is a valuable addition to the case studies of the history of commercial policy."

+ U S Quarterly BkI 2:111 Je '46 250w

MACDONALD, GOLDEN, pseud. See Brown, M. W.

MCDONALD, PHILIP BAYAUD. Personality and English in technical personnel. 424p $3.75 Van Nostrand

607 Technical writing. Technical workers 46-4395

"Discursive advice to young technical workers on how to broaden their intellectual interests, improve their written and spoken English, and correct those faults of personality which are often the result of over-specialization in work. The book is an expansion of the author's English and Science (1929), and reprints fifteen of its sixteen chapters on the writing of engineering reports. In the nineteen new chapters the author analyzes personal characteristics and defects; offers suggestions on reading, vocabulary building; and forming habits of thought. The author is Professor of English, College of Engineering, New York University." (N Y New Tech Bks) No index.

"Chapters 9 to 25 comprise a text, and an excellent one, covering report writing, letter writing, common mistakes made by the novice, sentence structure, vocabulary, and cultural reading. These chapters are crammed with practical aids to better English. . . . The other chapters, 1 to 8 and 26 to 33 comprise a catch-all, part good, part controversial, all presumably having to do with the technical man's welfare. These chapters belabor the technical man at length for shortcomings which though possibly deserved, seem to the reviewer to be defects of adult beings in general." Chaplin Tyler

+ Chem Eng 53:273 Ag '46 250w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:24 Ap '46

MACDONALD, WILLIAM COLT. Wheels in the dust. 273p $2 Doubleday

Western story.

46-3352

Booklist 42:318 Je 1 '46

"Definitely dependable."

+ Kirkus 14:118 Mr 1 '46 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p33 Ap 28 '46 240w

MCDUGALD, ROMAN. Purgatory street. 246p $2 Simon & Schuster

46-7842

Mystery story.

Booklist 43:103 D 1 '46

"Good."

+ Kirkus 14:402 Ag 15 '46 90w

New Repub 115:774 D 9 '46 30w

"The author has succeeded admirably in picturing the uncertainty and suspense that harrow Mona and in presenting the extraordinary denouement with which the story ends." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p36 O 27 '46 160w

"Fairly frightening, in spite of the author's hopped-up method of presentation."

New Yorker 22:128 N 9 '46 80w

"Wordy, pretentious, hysterical and synthetic, this is a brilliantly precise job of hitting exactly on the nose a certain current fashion in mysteries. It is undoubtedly Mr. McDougall's worst book, and will probably make his fortune." Anthony Boucher

— San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 20 '46 60w

"Odd—but intriggin'."

Sat R of Lit 29:44 N 2 '46 70w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p20 O 20 '46 270w

MACDOUGALL, ARTHUR RAYMOND. Dud Dean and his country; il. by Milton C. Weller. 171p $3; de luxe ed $12.50 Coward-McCann

46-5161

A collection of stories of hunting and fishing in the Upper Kennebec country. Many of the stories have been previously published, some in magazines, some in small limited editions. Contents: Dud's country, its men and fishermen; The angler from Athens; Dark of the moon; Crazy Stiller goes afishing; Once in the stilly night; Men and mice; Dud guides a lady; Bass are bass; A moonlight cannonade; Red flannel; The latest dog; Dud's Irisher.

Booklist 43:70 N 1 '46

"There's humor here as well as excitement, to be taken at your armchair ease."

+ Kirkus 14:159 Ap 1 '46 120w

Reviewed by Leo Marceau

Spring'd Republican p6 Je 15 '46 240w

MACDUFFIE, LAURETTE. Stone in the rain. 246p $2.50 Doubleday

46-1387

A novel about intolerance in a North Carolina town, of about 40,000 inhabitants. Luther Perrin, a rich, self-made man decides to add to his riches by building up a "restricted" summer colony. The restrictions applied to the Jews; the Negroes already "knew their place." During the preliminary work Luther's son-in-law found courage to leave his unhappy situation, and a cowardly young salesman undertook to act as Luther's handyman. As the result of the latter's machinations there was a suicide and Luther died of a stroke.

"This is a peculiarly disappointing book. It is well written and seems to promise so much that it is rather dismaying to discover in the end how inconclusive it all is." Dorothy Sparks

+ Book Week p11 Ja 27 '46 500w

"An unpalatable tale, with unlikely and unconvincing people against an unreal background. I found it dull reading."

— Kirkus 13:496 N 15 '45 170w

"The Stone in the Rain" borrows The New Yorker's habit of understatement, but leaves something more than the bitter after-taste of many New Yorker stories. Because its situations are unpatterned, carefully selected and patiently carved out, the novel is, in a narrow sense, harshly tragic. The impression it gives of being 'finished' comes less from any externality in the writing than from its cold, serious plunge into causes. The title is from W. H. Auden's poem, 'The Orators,' which describes the same kind of defective or paralyzed emotion that this author examines." I. K.

N Y Times p16 F 3 '46 400w

"This is the author's first book. Its weakness is that of a first novel which attempts to crowd too many elements into its scope. To encompass what Miss McDuffie sets out to do would have taken a much longer book, and taxed the skill of a more expert psychologist than she is at present. But her talent is so considerable, her sincerity so unmistakable, and her sympathy and humanity so warm and vital that she is a writer well worth watching." S. H. Ray

+ Sat R of Lit 29:36 Mr 2 '46 750w

"Miss MacDuffie writes with feeling and urgency; she has something to say and the book is commendable on that score alone. If the performance is not quite up to the level of the theme that is mainly because she has not exercised sufficient selective judgment. She has found herself with more material than she needs, and the narrative is crowded rather than climactic. The focus of attention shifts back and forth, and there is no center of balance for the reader's emotions. Such defects are outweighed by a sharp sense of character, and the skill with which she brings off significant scenes." George Conrad

Weekly Book Review p8 Ja 27 '46 500w

MCELRAVY, MAY F. Tortilla girl; pictures by Laura Bannon. 26p $1.25 Whitman, A.

Picture-story book about a little Mexican girl who sold tortillas in order to get a dog of her very own. Ages eight to eleven.

"An entertaining story. Laura Bannon has done the charming pictures of the little Mexican girl and her family and the dogs she meets."

+ Book Week p23 Je 2 '46 110w

Booklist 42:350 Jl 1 '46

"Humor, brilliant color and true understanding of children mark Laura Bannon's pictures for a realistic story bound up with a fiesta in New Mexico." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:265 Jl '46 80w

"The bright, colorful illustrations of Laura Bannon add much to this story of Lupe."

+ Kirkus 14:148 Mr 15 '46 110w

Reviewed by A. H. McGinty

Library J 71:588 Ap 15 '46 90w

Spring'd Republican p4d Je 23 '46 120w

MCELVAIN, SAMUEL MARION. Characterization of organic compounds. 282p $3.40 Macmillan

547 Chemistry, Organic. Chemistry, Analytic—Qualitative 45-8026

"A new laboratory manual designed to teach good, practical procedures for the identification of organic compounds. It is intended for use in courses offered to seniors and postgraduate students specializing in chemistry, but certain elementary basic procedures are reviewed in the preliminary chapters. Sixty experiments are described. A feature of the book is the inclusion of data on the boiling points and other properties of a considerable number of organic compounds in order to enable the student to spend time in the laboratory that would otherwise have to be spent in searching the literature." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by W. C. Lothrop

Am Chem Soc J 68:157 Ja '46 330w

"Dr. McElvain has stressed the relationship between molecular structure and the common physical properties such as solubility, boiling points, etc. In fact, the excellent opening chapters dealing with this topic represent the outstanding feature of this book." R. T. Arnold

+ J Phys Chem 50:73 Ja '46 300w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:53 O '45

MACFADDEN, CLIFFORD HERBERT. and others. Atlas of world affairs. 179p $5; pa $2.50 Crowell

912 Atlases. World politics—Maps 46-7020

"As its title suggests, this is a book of maps accompanied by an explanatory text and supplementary drawings, most of which are pictographs. . . A deliberate choice of items to be illustrated on maps has been made. Some items are those of the physical setting, climate, landforms, and the like; others are historical; illustrating changes through time; and still others are military, illustrating the course of campaigns. All have in common the objective of demonstrating distributions basic to world appreciation. To this world survey is added a group of maps emphasizing representative

MACFADDEN, C. H.—Continued
types of problems which must be faced in the determination of any peace solution." Scientific Bk Club R

School & Society 64:351 N 15 '46 30w

"The maps are excellent illustrations of the cartographer's art, and the pictographs and other sketches are clear-cut and informative. The text is well written and includes statements of the authors' opinions as well as descriptions of salient facts. All in all, the handsome volume may be highly recommended both for systematic perusal and frequent reference."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 17:2 Je '46 270w
Social Studies 38:44 Ja '47 330w

MACFARLAND, CHARLES STEDMAN. Pioneers for peace through religion; based on the records of the Church peace union (founded by Andrew Carnegie) 1914-1945; introd. by Arthur J. Brown. 256p $2.50 Revell 172.4 Peace. Church peace union 46-3933

"A comprehensive sketch of the work of The Church Peace Union, founded by Andrew Carnegie, from 1914 to 1945. It tells a graphic story of the part played throughout the world by this organization in the field of warless efforts at internationalism." (Churchman) Index.

"This is a useful contribution to the history of the development and fluctuation of peace sentiment within the churches and of the influence of religion in developing a mind to peace even in the midst of untoward circumstances which brought on two world wars."

+ Christian Century 63:807 Je 26 '46 70w

Reviewed by T. F. Opie
Churchman 160:17 Je 15 '46 60w
Commonweal 44:270 Je 28 '46 70w
Foreign Affairs 25:338 Ja '47 30w

"Two of the most helpful chapters are 'World Friendship Through the Churches' and 'Best Chances for Peace in Our Time.' For here, as in the whole book, is found evaluation of the peace efforts and directed thinking about future efforts." J. Z. Nichols

+ Spring'd Republican p6 S 11 '46 350w

MC FEE, WILLIAM. In the first watch. 334p $3 Random house

B or 92 Seafaring life 46-5281

Reminiscences of the author's life aboard English and Scottish tramp ships thirty years ago, where he served as third, second and chief engineer.

"In the First Watch is a most engaging book, fresh as the breeze blowing the oily smells from the boiler room and lively as the winches when cargo comes aboard." Ellery Sedgwick

+ Atlantic 179:110 Ja '47 380w
Cath World 163:573 S '46 180w
Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 3 '46 700w

"A deep dredging of memory that gives a vivid portrayal of the worthwhile little cosmos on a ship. For his special market."

+ Kirkus 14:93 F 15 '46 130w

"A good book for men of all ages and for people generally." E. S. Brown

+ Library J 71:483 Ap 1 '46 70w

"For those who find upon that animated desert isle which is a ship the sprout of truth unsmothered by stronger growth, William McFee is rewarding, and I, for one, when he writes a second and third book of reminiscence, hope to stand the second and the third watch beside him." Lovell Thompson

+ N Y Times p4 J1 14 '46 750w

"Mr. McFee has managed to create from the creaking old ships, from his mates of long ago, from his portrait of his own eager and sympathetic self an autobiography that the reader will always remember with delight." Harrison Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 29:12 Je 29 '46 600w
Time 48:107 J1 15 '46 280w

"In the First Watch' is a rewarding book, deliberately unromantic in tone but filled with mellow wisdom and an honest nostalgia for days that are no more. The author wonders, not very hopefully, whether the sailors of 1946 will be able to look back on their sea-going days as he does on his and think of them as having been a beautiful life." Jennings Rice

+ Weekly Book Review p3 J1 7 '46 800w

MCGINLEY, PHYLLIS (MRS C. L. HAYDEN). Stones from a glass house; new poems. 169p $2 Viking

811 46-7717

A book of light verse, the first which the author has published in five years. The poems appeared originally in The New Yorker and other periodicals.

"I find her pleasant, usually unexciting reading. Sometimes she is more than pleasant. In her bitter-brief 'Funeral' and 'Lady Selecting Her Christmas Cards,' Miss McGinley recalls Hardy's satires of circumstances. Not infrequently, she writes couplets and quatrains that are as quotable as Dorothy Parker's or Ogden Nash's." H. C. Webster

+ Book Week p11 O 27 '46 240w

Booklist 43:98 D 1 '46

"There's irony and not a little wisdom throughout—the whole is a neat-handed selection of McGinley's macrocosm."

+ Kirkus 14:380 Ag 1 '46 120w

Wis Lib Bul 42:164 D '46

MCGRATH, MRS BETHEL J. Nursing in commerce and industry [prepared] for the National organization for public health nursing. 356p il $3 Commonwealth fund

331.822 Nurses and nursing, Industrial SG46-141

"Designed for the nurse in industry and business, but helpful for the company executive sponsoring the health service in his organization. It is a working guide, based on experience, of the responsibilities of the industrial nurse in her broad duties as nurse and as aide in maintaining morale. It describes also insurance benefits, workmen's compensations, rehabilitation and adjustments for the handicapped worker. Illustrated." (Library J) Index.

"The book is recommended particularly for those nurses interested in an industrial career, and for those women now in industrial nursing who have not realized the rich potentialities, fascinations, and rewards of the full health program now being executed in modern industry." J. S. Felton

+ Am J Pub Health 36:1175 O '46 400w

Reviewed by J. J. Williams
Am J Soc 52:170 S '46 360w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:1129 S 1 '46 80w

"Although addressed primarily to the nurse in industry or business, this book is a most informative guide to the company executive who wishes to launch a new health service or to improve the efficiency of an existing one."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:144 Je '46 200w

MACGREGOR, GORDON. Warriors without weapons: a study of the society and personality development of the Pine Ridge Sioux; with the collaboration of Royal B. Hassrick and William E. Henry. 228p il $3.75 Univ. of Chicago press

970.3 Dakota Indians A46-646

"The second of five integrative studies of Indian personality produced as part of the Indian Education Research Project, which was undertaken jointly by the Committee on Human Development of the University of Chicago and the United States Office of Indian Affairs." (Introd) The book describes Sioux Society, both historical and economic, and how the Sioux child grows up, and gives ten case histories. It also contains plans for working out programs for greater social welfare. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by A. I. Hallowell
Ann Am Acad 247:209 S '46 650w

"The detailed accounts of such Sioux children as Red Bird Wolf, Charlie Charging Bull, Priscilla Judson and Ginny Reynard make fascinating reading." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 F 10 '46 90w
Booklist 42:211 Mr 1 '46

Reviewed by E. G. Eastman
N Y Times p28 My 12 '46 360w

Reviewed by E. G. Burrows
Sat R of Lit 29:37 Je 8 '46 1300w
School & Society 63:103 F 9 '46 40w

"While this study may seem remote to the enormous problems of our post-war world, it is of definite value not only for the people involved, but as a guide for the study and treatment of many other minorities."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 17:3 Mr '46 420w

Reviewed by E. G. Eastman
Springf'd Republican p4d Je 23 '46 550w

Reviewed by Paul Radin
Weekly Book Review p25 O 13 '46 450w

MACINNES, HELEN (MRS GILBERT HIGH-ET). Horizon. 213p $2 Little [7s 6d Harrap] 46-3853

"[Peter Lennox] is a prisoner of war in north Italy when Italy surrenders, and he has then to relinquish plans for escape in order to serve as a liaison agent in the Tyrol. For a long spell of inactivity there could be hardly a pleasanter setting than the Tyrol. Life in the mountains is not, however, really so uneventful. Aircraft may crash, but the Germans find no survivors; they have been smuggled away by the paths poor Lennox is forbidden to take. And one day two more airmen turned up at the chalet. They are watched, attentively appraised, and then, at a nod from Lennox, sent non-committally away as agents-provocateurs; it is the first time he has felt himself useful. From this point not even he can find his story dull." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Book Week p14 My 26 '46 250w
Booklist 42:299 My 15 '46
Bookmark 7:13 N '46

"The suspense and excitement, the unfolding of Lennox's character, the staunchness of the Tyrolese, their customs and way of living, above all the effect of the landscape on the inhabitants and on the stranger in their midst, make this something more than just another story about the war or another adventure novel. Like the Alps, it has elevation." W. K. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 5 '46 400w

"A slight tale, but a sure touch."
Kirkus 14:135 My 15 '46 170w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse
Manchester Guardian p3 N 2 '45 60w

"At times, 'Horizon' shows signs of life—and then nose-dives into vagueness again as the novelist struggles with frustrations too heavy to handle. Dramatized in exterior terms, it might have done well as a short story. As a scamped novel, that locks itself deliberately in the brain of a dull young man, it is worse than disappointing." James MacBride
— N Y Times p22 My 26 '46 380w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 7 '46 70w

"It is a credible and occasionally vivid story, of the kind that loses something after its background of events is no longer current. It is preoccupied with escape, with the next move in strategy and the imminent stuttering of machine guns. In it there is an absence of reflection, and one feels less interest in people than in the circumstances that inclose them. 'Horizon' adds one more account of men in plight and peril, but nothing to the literature of war." Walter Havighurst
+ — Sat R of Lit 29:38 Je 1 '46 430w

Reviewed by John Hampson
Spec 175:472 N 16 '45 180w

"The book is written with constraint and deep feeling, a book of emotions and atmosphere rather than of action." M. M. Dickey
+ Springf'd Republican p4d My 26 '46 330w

"Miss MacInnes manages the adventure with great skill. Nothing is lacking, and nothing is forced or improbable. Miss MacInnes is fully conscious of her powers, and she attempts nothing beyond them. What she does attempt she carries off very well indeed."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p521 N 3 '45 360w

"In 'Horizon,' her new novel, Helen MacInnes again has written a story about Allied underground support during the war. This time her scene is laid in the South Tyrol. Compared to her former books, the plot material is slight, but the work is well worth reading for the excellent description of Tyrolean scene and character." Rose Feld
+ — Weekly Book Review p10 My 26 '46 500w

MCINTIRE, ROSS T. White House physician [written] in collaboration with George Creel. 244p $3 Putnam

B or 92 Roosevelt, Franklin Delano 46-7774
"Personal physician to Franklin D. Roosevelt for twelve years, Admiral McIntire came upon the scene some ten years after FDR's affliction. Here he recounts 'a chronicle of courage and gallantry that may well be of value in these dreary times.' Admittedly no politician, granting that his judgment may be warped by devotion, the author nevertheless offers interpretations of most of Mr. Roosevelt's plans and actions according to the physical, spiritual and mental vigor of his famous patient." Library J

Reviewed by W. F. Morse
Book Week p27 N 10 '46 180w
Booklist 43:169 F 1 '47

"Altogether, it is a clinical picture. But through it, the personal triumph of Franklin D. Roosevelt over severe affliction shines, and to this fact the historians of the future will undoubtedly give the most respectful attention." E. D. C.
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 N 8 '46 700w

"Recommended to round out Rooseveltiana."
H. S. Taylor
+ Library J 71:1462 O 15 '46 100w

Reviewed by A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.
Nation 164:105 Ja 25 '47 450w

"In the expanding literature on the life and times of Franklin D. Roosevelt—a field that seems already somewhat congested by too much too soon—this slender, reverent and unpretentious contribution by Vice Admiral Ross T. McIntire has much that is solid and informative to recommend it. It unlocks the one aspect of the late President's life that was assiduously guarded from public inspection, his infirmity from poliomyelitis. This is important not so much because it satisfies the morbid and the simply curious, but because it sheds new light on the character of the greatest single figure of these times—a light that not only re-emphasizes his great courage and humanity, but also one that helps interpret his drives and motivations." Cabell Phillips
+ N Y Times p18 N 24 '46 650w

"There will be other books which will be more valuable in throwing light on the problems which Roosevelt faced. But this will certainly be one of the most essential books to all those who undertake to understand Roosevelt the man. As friend as well as physician, Dr. McIntire has told his story with both warmth and clarity. He has written from affection for history." Jonathan Daniels
+ Sat R of Lit 29:12 D 21 '46 800w

"Dr. McIntire's memoirs of these years is fiercely protective of his patient, generally devoid of spectacular revelations and gossip."
+ Time 48:114 N 4 '46 700w

"Aside from the medical aspect of it, this is an exceptionally fine book on Roosevelt the man. In putting it together Dr. McIntire had the expert assistance of George Creel, which means that it is well written; the terse, nervous, lucid English that makes it easy reading no doubt is Creel's, but the ideas unquestionably are McIntire's own. For one thing, who but a doctor would dismiss the New Deal, social security, collective bargaining, the Atlantic Charter, the victories over Germany and Japan and the establishment of the United Nations, to say that Roosevelt's real monument is what he did at Warm Springs to carry forward the fight against infantile paralysis? Yet in any study of the man rather than the statesman, that must loom large." G. W. Johnson

MCINTIRE, R. T.—Continued

+ Weekly Book Review p5 N 10 '46 900w

MACIVER, ROBERT MORRISON, ed. Civilization and group relationships; a series of addresses and discussions. (Institute for religious studies. Religion and civilization ser) 177p $2 Harper

323.1 Minorities. U.S.—Civilization. U.S.—Race question 46-332

"The Institute for Religious Studies has been carrying forward in various ways its deep interest in the challenge to unity and brotherhood raised by the prejudice and discrimination that separate group from group. This volume contains the addresses delivered in the second course devoted to the subject under its auspices. They are presented in their original form. . . We are concerned here not with the particular problem of any one group but with the problem of America, or rather with a world-wide problem that has a peculiar meaning for our democracy and is becoming continually more insistent among us. The leaders in every field of thought and of action are acutely aware of its magnitude and of its urgency. In this volume a number of them throw light on it from various angles, each approaching it from the viewpoint of his special competence." (Pref) Index.

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek

Am Soc R 11:762 D '46 300w

Bookmark 7:5 My '46

"This is one of the most important books published in a long time. It is a symposium of the addresses delivered at the second course of the Institute for Religious Studies held at the Jewish Theological Seminary of America in New York City. Its twelve contributors represent the best scholarship of Catholics, Jews, and Protestants, focused upon the grave threat and increasing fact of discrimination of group against group within America and the world." C. L. Willard

+ Churchman 160:17 Ap 1 '46 240w

"This book should make a contribution to the reader's understanding of the basic causes underlying prejudice and discrimination. It should also provide a rich source of suggestions as to practical ways by which individuals and groups can aid in the solution of the problem created by discrimination. The value of the book is enhanced by the carefully reasoned, well-documented presentation of the contributors. While it cannot be said that this volume is easy reading, it is an intelligent analysis of one of the major problems confronting us, and it does contain a carefully reasoned approach to the solution of that problem. It is the type of book that should prove enlightening and stimulating to the thoughtful Christian leader." J. W. Thomas

+ Crozer Q 23:200 Ap '46 1000w

Foreign Affairs 24:749 J1 '46 30w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p4 D 16 '45 950w

School & Society 62:391 D 15 '45 40w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 64:68 J1 27 '46 540w

"As a collection of after-luncheon speeches the book has both the advantages and disadvantages of the type. Clear, brief, and easy to follow, the addresses repeat much that is obvious and commonplace. Perhaps the book's defense is that the obvious needs to be repeated wherever and whenever possible. . . The volume will be of value to teachers if it will stimulate them to think about any particular interracial problem in a large, complex setting of group relationships." R. W. Edgar

+ — Social Educ 10:186 Ap '46 600w

Reviewed by E. R. Clinchy

Survey 82:274 O '46 600w

MACKAY, MRS MARGARET (MACKPRANG). Great lady. 410p $3 Day

46-4756

The great lady was Mrs Dale, daughter of a famous Sinologue, and widow of a British diplomat. Starting with a large reception in her Chinese home in December 1941, the story then goes back to cover the days of her youth in China and her experiences during the Boxer rebellion. Then, with the new war's beginning, Mrs Dale and her granddaughter, with other internationalists, make good their escape into Free China.

Booklist 42:366 J1 15 '46

Christian Science Monitor p12 J1 27 '46 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 J1 '46

"Long, but essentially light, reading."

+ Kirkus 14:156 Ap 1 '46 150w

Reviewed by H. S. Taylor

Library J 71:758 My 15 '46 80w

Reviewed by R. E. Pitts

N Y Times p10 Je 23 '46 700w

"Not an unusual novel or one that pretends to significance, philosophic, political, social, or any of the other possibilities, 'Great Lady' is a very readable story built around an attractive and well developed protagonist, and peopled with a score of believable lesser characters." J. P. Wood

+ Sat R of Lit 29:10 J1 13 '46 700w

Spring'd Republican p4d J1 7 '46 350w

"By confining the novel to two periods of danger and violence, Mrs. Mackay has given her story a great deal of excitement and tension. The major portion of the narrative is a tale of adventure, and as such it rarely lets the reader down, even if he knows the details of the Boxer Siege and is convinced, in the second half, that Mrs. Dale and her granddaughter, despite checks and accidents, will make good their escape." J. J. Espey

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Je 16 '46 750w

MACKAY, MRS RUTH. Just like me; pictures by Pelagie Doane. [28p] 50c Abingdon-Cokesbury

Short sentences and colored pictures show the similarity in activities between little animals, like the kitten and the rabbit, and a small person. "The kitten drinks her milk all up—Just like me!"

Kirkus 14:344 Ag 1 '46 50w

Reviewed by Margaret Miller

Library J 71:1467 O 15 '46 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p6 S 15 '46 140w

Wis Lib Bul 42:154 N '46

MCKELVEY, BLAKE. Rochester: the water-power city, 1812-1854. 383p 11 maps $4 Harvard univ. press [17s Oxford]

974.789 Rochester, New York A45-4785

"The task of the scholarly historian in writing municipal history is a difficult one. He must first satisfy local groups. . . Then, if his work is to have more than local and antiquarian value and interest, the historian must place the story of his city in its broader regional and even national setting and show the interplay between local and larger forces and the effect of one upon the other. . . Dr. McKelvey has been, in the main, successful in giving proper heed to these two sometimes conflicting aims. His history of Rochester from 1812 to 1854 has its share of 'firsts,' and due attention is paid to those early residents who contributed their efforts to building the new community on the banks of the Genesee River. But he also accords proper emphasis to the geographic factors in the development of Rochester." Am Hist R

"Dr. McKelvey has obviously done a thorough job of research. The copious footnotes reveal the investigation of a wide variety of sources, of which the most important are letters, diaries, and others manuscripts, local newspapers, city government publications, and numerous studies published by the Rochester Historical Society. Illustrations, including early maps of the region, pictures of the town in its younger days, and portraits of the early citizens add to the attractiveness of a well-edited and well-printed book." Dorothy Culp

+ Am Hist R 51:515 Ap '46 550w

Am J Soc 52:380 Ja '47 10w

Reviewed by C. H. J. Snider
Canadian Hist R 27:66 Mr '46 160w

Reviewed by R. H. Brown
Geog R 37:170 Ja '47 390w

"For reference purposes as a sort of encyclopedia of the Rochester of the period covered, the book should be very useful. As the story of an interesting American city, to be read for the sake of reading, it is disappointing. Warmth and color seem to have been sacrificed to fullness and accuracy of detail."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 2:121 Je '46 160w

MACKENZIE, COMPTON. Again to the North [Eng title: North wind of love, v 2]. 302p $2.75
Dodd [10s 6d Chatto]

46-2009

"'Again to the North' concludes 'The Four Winds of Love,' in which through six novels and nearly 2,700 pages Compton Mackenzie has followed the life of John Ogilvie. The first volume, published in 1937, opened with the turn of the century, when John was a school boy of seventeen; this last, bringing the saga to the spring of 1937 finds him well into the fifties." Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by Claire Armstrong
Cath World 163:182 My '46 360w

"My main objection in the case of 'The Four Winds of Love' is not so much to subject-matter as to manner, and it is the same old manner. In the first place, the Mackenzian circumference is that of nice, rich people, and there are no greater bores in fiction than nice, rich people when taken as seriously as Mr. Mackenzie takes them. In the second place, that rich, overripe, Keatsian vocabulary . . . has worn terribly thin with the years, and even occasionally rancid." Cuthbert Wright

— Commonweal 44:267 Je 28 '46 650w

"Of limited appeal and seems dated. The interest would be in the author and period." H. A. Wooster

Library J 71:181 F 1 '46 100w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott
Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 27 '46 300w

"Mr. MacKenzie has written some thirty-five novels, and in this case practice does not seem to make perfect." Elliott Merrick
N Y Times p12 Mr 24 '46 180w

"On the whole, aimless and tedious going, but those who have followed Mr. Mackenzie's boxing of the compass this far will probably enjoy seeing him through to the end." New Yorker 22:87 F 23 '46 100w

"There is something rather dismaying about the word 'saga' as applied to a piece of fiction which deals with the lives and fortunes of twentieth-century people. . . . The 'Four Winds of Love,' having blown themselves through five successful books, end up in a flat calm. For I cannot help thinking that 'Again to the North' is a somewhat unnecessary book. . . . It is because I have a great respect for [Mr. MacKenzie] that I rather wish he had not written this book. After all, there is some difference between resting on one's laurels and sitting on them." George Dangerfield
Sat R of Lit 29:20 Mr 16 '46 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p185 Ap 21 '46 550w

"For a just 'verdict,' as the author called it in his initial preface, on the whole work which has engaged his efforts for the last dozen years, one should go back to the beginning and give 'The Four Winds' the continuous reading that the disrupted process of publication has made impossible up to this point. Even without giving it that due, the spaciousness, variety and unity of his accomplishment are impressive. This is not a work into which one can dip lightly. Mr. Mackenzie had something to say, and for its full appreciation one should follow the telling throughout its development. 'The Four Winds' demands shelf-room, time and attention." Mary Ross

Weekly Book Review p8 Mr 3 '46 800w

MACKENZIE, DEWITT. Men without guns.
47p pl $5 Blakiston

940.547573 U.S. Army. Medical department.
World war, 1939-1945—Medical and sanitary affairs 46-124

One hundred and eighteen color reproductions representing the work of twelve artists attached to the Medical corps during the war, with descriptive text. It shows the work of the medical corps on all fronts, from front-line first-aid stations to reconditioning centers.

"The book, which is very well printed, is a fascinating review of the dangerous, heroic work of the medical officer and soldier. It should be of interest not only to medical veterans of the World War, but to doctors, nurses, and veterans generally." J. A. Tobey

+ Am J Pub Health 36:407 Ap '46 180w

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 177:154 Ap '46 800w

Reviewed by Dorothy Odenheimer
Book Week p16 F 17 '46 300w
Booklist 42:182 F 1 '46

Reviewed by E. L. Keyes
+ Commonweal 43:362 Ja 18 '46 350w

"Tucked away in the text are some interesting facts. . . . But nowhere is there the horrible color and drama of war as it was reported in words during and after the conflict. There is no first impression of the beaches, the hospitals, the compelling urgency of wounded laid out waiting their turn for operations, the acrid fumes of the disposal fires, the rows and rows of stiff bodies wrapped in sheets and shrouds. In this book the pictures are really the story. They tell it well." Don Dresden

+ N Y Times p10 F 17 '46 450w

"The text, by DeWitt Mackenzie, which quotes liberally from first-hand reports by the artists, adds considerably to the book."

+ New Yorker 21:100 F 9 '46 80w

Spring'd Republican p6 Mr 5 '46 340w

"At the moment, when the war seems to have been forgotten in a thousand dissensions, it would be a fine thing if every American gave sober consideration to the text and pictures of 'Men Without Guns.' Among the innumerable books dealing with World War II it stands alone, a ghastly, terrifying work and a monument to the men and women recruited to bind up the wounds of boys unlucky in battle." Thomas Craven

+ Weekly Book Review p16 F 10 '46 850w

MCKEOGH, MICHAEL JAMES, and LOCKRIDGE, RICHARD. Sgt. Mickey and General Ike. 185p $2 Putnam

940.548173 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American. Eisenhower, Dwight David 46-4075

Describes the war and General Eisenhower as both looked to the young New Yorker who was the general's orderly from prewar days at Fort Houston to the end of the fighting in Europe.

"There is little that is controversial in Mickey's book and the only villains, unlike those of Ralph Ingersoll's shocker, are the enemy fliers who piloted bombers over North Africa and London. Everyone else seems to be characterized by Mickey, either as 'a great soldier' or 'a nice man.' Herman Kogan

MCKEOGH, M. J.—Continued
Book Week p14 My 19 '46 310w

"A nice naïfete, (deliberately) ingenuous interpretation of a great man as he seemed to lesser folk, whose admiration is certainly catching, warming."
 + Kirkus 14:143 Mr 15 '46 170w

"We are told that the book sounds like Mickey talking, but the talk is dull. Will not be needed by many libraries." G. D. McDonald
Library J 71:755 My 15 '46 130w

"This cheerful little book is filled with anecdotal material. . . The fact that many of Mr. Lockridge's paragraphs are repetitious and there are cloying references to the General—such as calling him 'a Clark Gable in his summer uniform'—should not deter Eisenhower's fans. For the book contains minutiae that only Sergeant Mickey could observe." Herbert Mitgang
N Y Times p12 Ag 4 '46 410w

"A fine story it is. Former naval Lieutenant Richard Lockridge wrote the story for Mickey, and the writing is as plain, simple and sincere as the problems it deals with." Paul Grindle
 + Weekly Book Review p28 My 19 '46 750w

MACKEY, JOSEPH. Froth estate. 236p $2.50
 Prentice-Hall

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 46-3253

Stories and random jottings by the "nut editor" of the New York Sun. They include stories of celebrities, ghost chases, animals, and hardier representatives of the press.

Reviewed by E. D. Branch
Book Week p2 Ap 28 '46 360w
Kirkus 14:56 F 1 '46 130w

"Though entertaining enough, 'The Froth Estate' does not generally measure up to the humor field's very best in polish and verbal economy, nor to H. Allen Smith of 'Low Man on the Totem Pole' in imaginative zaniness. Nevertheless, it is more refreshing, and perhaps more genuine, than the pontifical tomes of more celebrated journalists." Murray Schumach
 + — N Y Times p17 J1 14 '46 300w

"Coming in the wake of the best-selling H. Allen Smith and Earl Wilson books of the same type, this one is slightly anticlimactic. Too often, Mr Mackey's stories fizzle out with a punch line that doesn't quite come off. But his book still makes bright and frequently very funny reading. The author has a breezy way with the English language and a vast fund of zany experiences from which to draw." N. S. Kazin
 + — Spring'd Republican p6 Je 1 '46 270w
Weekly Book Review p14 My 5 '46 200w

MCKINLEY, CHARLES. Harriett; with pictures by William Pène Du Bois. 44p $2 Viking 46-2803

Delightful nonsense story about a London delivery horse who liked pretty hats. Part of Harriett's adventures take place in London, part of them in the country, where Harriett and her hat go to live.

Book Week p21 Je 2 '46 300w
Booklist 42:267 Ap 15 '46

"For this fresh and original nonsense story about a horse who admired hats, wanted one and got it, William Pène du Bois has produced a delightful accompaniment of pictures, imaginatively conceived, beautifully executed and exactly right for the absurd tale." A. M. Jordan
 + Horn Bk 22:207 My '46 80w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Horn Bk 22:216 My '46 150w

"There's a general air of quaintness, overlaid with a vague and very English mist of charm. But the William Pène duBois illustrations will take it over some hurdles."

— + Kirkus 14:35 Ja 15 '46 90w
 "Has charm and style." K. H. McAlarney
 + Library J 71:588 Ap 15 '46 110w

"'Harriett' is in true nonsense vein, told with a straight face, in mischievous text and drawings. . . Boys and girls from 9 on respond with delight to the sheer fun of story and drawings, and their elders, too, find Harriett a lasting joy." A. T. Eaton
 + N Y Times p14 Mr 24 '46 100w

Reviewed by K. S. White
New Yorker 22:138 D 7 '46 90w

"Harriett's book, in design, printing, type, and illustration is a joy to the eye. Something should be done to celebrate the return of its illustrator to the field of children's books. Like Harriett's birthday party, it is a joyful occasion." M. G. D.
 + Sat R of Lit 29:53 Ap 20 '46 300w

"William Pène du Bois has created fresh, free illustrations for all these happenings. His sure line, his spirited style, bear testimony to his own enjoyment of this spring absurdity. He evokes the quality of London shops and streets, and delineates the very ecstasy of joy when Harriett, hatted, takes off at a gallop; and the high mystery of moonlit midnight is also made visible. A book for spring reading, calculated to produce general light-heartedness." F. C. Sayers
 + Weekly Book Review p6 Mr 24 '46 320w

MCKINLEY, SILAS BENT, and BENT, SILAS.
 Old rough and ready; the life and times of Zachary Taylor. 329p $3 Vanguard

B or 92 Taylor, Zachary 46-4715

Biography of Zachary Taylor, covering his early years, his years as a soldier in the Indian wars and the Mexican war, and his sixteen months as president of the United States. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Wendell Johnson
Book Week p5 J1 21 '46 500w

Booklist 42:364 J1 15 '46
Christian Science Monitor p16 J1 18 '46 330w

"This biography is competent though it devotes too little space to the man himself and possesses a style something less than inviting. . . Best complete biography we have at present, though when the second volume of Holman Hamilton's work appears, his will undoubtedly be the definitive biography. Recommended for college and public libraries." G. W. Wakefield
 + Library J 71:483 Ap 1 '46 140w

Reviewed by W. B. Hamilton
N Y Times p27 J1 14 '46 700w
New Yorker 22:79 Je 29 '46 80w
San Francisco Chronicle p17 S 8 '46 100w

"Messrs. McKinley's and Bent's biography is competent, scholarly, and dull. Perhaps they stuck too closely to the career of their subject instead of letting their gaze wander to the fascinating world about him. For it is an almost impossible task for anyone to make fascinating the career of a Zachary Taylor." Ron Schiller
 + — Sat R of Lit 29:19 J1 27 '46 1400w

Reviewed by Bob Price
Spring'd Republican p4d Ag 25 '46 210w

"The volume is well written but has more than its share of factual errors. Some of the interpretations are a bit old-fashioned, but they do not seriously impair the refreshing picture of an honest, earnest man of ordinary ability who did his best to give his nation a fair and decent administration." Avery Craven
 + — Weekly Book Review p5 Je 30 '46 1250w

Wis Lib Bul 42:131 O '46

MACKINNEY, LOREN CAREY, and others, eds. A state university surveys the humanities. 262p $4 Univ. of N.C. press

378 Humanities. North Carolina. University. Colleges and universities—U.S.
45-37385

"No educational question is now more to the front than the place of the humanities and their relation to other disciplines, to technical and professional training, and to the public welfare generally. In this well organized symposium, about twenty members of the University of North Carolina faculty survey various aspects of all these problems, not narrowly with reference to the particular problems of their own institution, though that is not neglected, but with a broad view of the modern world's conditions and needs." Christian Century

Reviewed by J. E. Pomfret
Ann Am Acad 216:168 J1 '46 400w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 F 3 '46 180w

Reviewed by J. H. Fichter
Cath World 162:475 F '46 550w
+ Christian Century 63:19 Ja 2 '46 80w
Current Hist 10:59 Ja '46 40w

"For the most part, the authors are modest and reasonable in pointing out the humanistic values of their subjects, though the essay on mathematics and the physical sciences is unfortunately exaggerated in this respect, as well as in style. More than one skeptical eyebrow will be raised upon reading the statement, in the chapter on 'Business,' that 'Business or economic processes are themselves opening the paths by which the Christian Humanist principle and democratic ideal can penetrate its area.' . . . Members of the philosophical profession will find much in the book to interest them." Marten ten Hoor

+ — J Philos 43:275 My 9 '46 750w

Reviewed by W. G. Rice
Library Q 16:168 Ap '46 1950w

"Those who already know something of the unusual record of the University of North Carolina—surely one of the two or three best state universities in the country—will not be surprised at the fact that Wallace E. Caldwell's survey of the humanities at Chapel Hill between 1795 and 1945 is the most impressive of the seventeen essays in this collection. . . . Since the survey is placed at the beginning of the book, the other sixteen essays, contributed by representatives of all the main fields of knowledge, form a somewhat rhapsodic—and lengthy—anticlimax. . . . There is one essay in the book, however, which is not part of the anti-climax. This is a remarkable piece of nearly sixty pages by Norman Foerster entitled 'The Future of the Humanities in State Universities.'" Eric Bentley

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:17 Ja 19 '46 800w
School & Society 62:360 D 1 '45 60w

"I do indeed congratulate the University of North Carolina on sticking to the world of the mind in place of putting up another building or financing class reunions. Nor do I deny that many of these essays have thoughtful things to say. . . . [But] it just doesn't add up to anything. There is one essay in the collection that does make sense—explosive sense. It is Gerald Johnson's essay on 'The Humanities and the Common Man.' . . . A state university has, indeed, surveyed the humanities. But it has not faced squarely its own dilemma as a tax-supported institution." H. M. Jones

Social Forces 24:357 Mr '46 700w

MACKINNON, ALLAN. Money on the black [Eng title: Nine days murder]. 283p $2 Doubleday [8s 6d Collins]

[46-2019]

Detective story.

Booklist 42:283 My 1 '46

Kirkus 13:549 D 15 '46 80w

New Repub 114:422 Mr 25 '46 60w

"Such stories should whizz along, but Mr. MacKinnon never manages to get into top gear. Still there is a pleasant whiff of Edgar Wallace about the finale." Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 31:31 Ja 12 '46 80w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p20 Mr 3 '46 180w

"Hard to beat!"
+ Sat R of Lit 29:40 Mr 2 '46 40w

Reviewed by John Hampson
Spec 175:630 D 28 '45 110w

"A first mystery, this struck us as a find for general competence and likeable qualities to boot, including a touch of fun." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p22 F 24 '46 140w

MCAHON, AMOS PHILIP. Preface to an American philosophy of art. 194p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press

701 Art—Philosophy. Art, American. Esthetics—History A45-4157

"The book is a synoptical review of the various esthetic philosophies that have bedeviled artists and confounded laymen since the days of the old Greek hemlock-drinkers, with special emphasis on the romantic idealists of Germany, a few recommendations to Americans, and a short chapter on Hitler, who is accepted as an artist—a German type and an evil type naturally." Weekly Book Review

"There are some interesting, if oversimplified and distorted, historical analyses of the concepts of 'art' and 'aesthetics' in this book. There are also parts of the author's own theory which are sound enough so far as they go, although quite unoriginal and commonplace. But the positive merits of the book have little chance in so chauvinistic a context." H. D. A.
+ — J Philos 43:328 Je 6 '46 1350w

"This is a distressing book. . . . Xenophobia might explain the tendentious obtuseness with which Professor McMahon seeks to reduce the whole basis of aesthetic thought from Descartes to the present century to a series of gross fallacies. The Western tradition of art philosophy has committed many errors, and I hold no brief for idealism, but it did greatly advance and clarify the subject. To deny these achievements and call for a return to Aristotle is obscurantism." Clement Greenberg

— Nation 162:377 Mr 30 '46 1100w

"This book carries into the field of art the tendency of certain scholastic minds to burrow into the deposits of antiquity in search of a program for educational guidance. From the title of the book, one might reasonably expect to find in the contents an inquiry into the nature of American life and thought, and more important, an examination of the characteristics and attainments of those responsible for our art, the practitioners themselves. But incredible as it may seem, there are no references of any kind to the needs and requirements of the American people; nor is there a single reference to an American artist, living or dead, nor to any artist whatsoever except two or three Renaissance figures who happened to put their theories in writing. Such reasoning is comparable to the curious mental processes of the abstract, or non-objective artists, who attempt to convey the beauty and power of the human body in paintings, or patterns, having no discoverable connection with the human body or with any viable organism." Thomas Craven

Weekly Book Review p12 Ja 6 '46 1100w

MACMANUS, M. J. Eamon de Valera. 310p $3 Ziff-Davis [8s 6d Gollancz]

B or 92 De Valera, Eamonn [44-7808]

"This biography is the work of an able journalist, who, for twelve years has been one of the editors of de Valera's own newspaper, The Irish Press, and it is passionately on the side of its hero. Mr. MacManus is convinced that in all the violent controversies which have raged in and concerning Ireland since the Easter week revolt in 1916, Dev has been right and those who opposed him wrong." N Y Times

MACMANUS, M. J.—Continued

"A careful study, extending over thirty years, of the man against the background of his times. The book is perhaps a little too discursive for Irish readers, but this may be an advantage for others." R. M. F.

Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 17 '44
500w

"Necessarily a political biography, this lacks the personal detail that would make it of general interest. It is largely a book for men."

Kirkus 14:476 S 15 '46 220w

"Quite the best life of de Valera that has yet appeared. Well-written and fascinating biography. . . Recommended for a place alongside must books on Ireland." M. H. Zipprich
+ Library J 71:1462 O 15 '46 100w

"This concise but detailed biography by a gifted Irishman of letters is far the most instructive book that has yet been written about Mr. De Valera, and provides a much more adequate account of him than can be obtained from any one of the many works devoted to the last thirty years of Irish and Anglo-Irish history." Frank Pakenham

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 22 '44 390w

Reviewed by Frank Pakenham

New Statesman & Nation 28:407 D 16 '44 600w

Reviewed by Richard Watts

N Y Times p6 O 27 '46 1100w

"The book is limited by being written not only without the help but without the knowledge of Mr. de Valera. . . Within these limitations it is a performance worthy of one of the most brilliant of Ireland's journalists." J. M. Minifie

Sat R of Lit 29:50 D 7 '46 1050w

"Mr. MacManus adds nothing to our knowledge of his subject. He corrects the spelling of the Christian name of Mr. de Valera's father . . . and he refuses sanction to the first biographer, Mr. David Dwane's, hysterical account of the Taoiseach's ancestry. That is the entire of Mr. MacManus's information. The rest of the book is stale and adulatory, and it leaves Mr. Sean O'Faolain's biography still the best book that Mr. de Valera has yet provoked." St. John Ervine

— Spec 173:388 O 27 '44 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p2 Ja 6 '45
240w

"A preference for rhetoric over facts is the major weakness of what is otherwise an interesting—if frankly partisan—biography." H. W. Baehr

+ — Weekly Book Review p40 D 1 '46 800w

MCMMASTER, VERNON. The church's way; with a foreword by Henry St George Tucker.
94p $1 Fell

46-2851

In story form describes the teachings and customs of the Protestant Episcopal church.

"The aim is to help people to feel at home in an Anglican church, and the presiding bishop commends it as well suited to that purpose."

+ Christian Century 63:463 Ap 10 '46 140w

"Though the book is about the Episcopal church and was written primarily for workers in religious education in this denomination, it has much of general value and interest to all church people; and the informal 'storybook' style is so readable that one can run through the approximately 100 pages in one sitting and know it to be time well spent." D. J. Campbell

+ Spring'd Republican p6 Ap 2 '46 240w

MCMECKIN, MRS ISABEL (MCLENNAN). Louisville, the gateway city. (Cities of America biographies) 279p il $3 Messner

976.9441 Louisville, Kentucky 46-5240

"Our Town" from its earliest settling to the present day, which, for love and affection and pride, reads like a family album. Through a fictionization of details, based on historical fact, the story of the original pioneers who insisted on joining a military venture, headed by George Rogers Clark, is told with full color and costume. . . Social, economic, political, family, domestic, educational, literary and artistic worlds in generous exploration, this has a wide range of specialties besides—cooking, horse racing, outstanding native sons, family records—and contributes a full length story of the city." Kirkus

"Mrs. McMeekin has added to study of old newspapers the reading of books, diaries and letters and the collection of the traditional stories and reminiscences of many old Louisville families, including her own. She has not quite mastered the resulting wealth of detail. The earlier chapters portray the new settlement clearly and pleasingly; but as the city grows and its story becomes correspondingly more complex and many-sided, selection and organization falter and fail altogether." J. T. Fredrick

Book Week p2 Ag 11 '46 450w

Reviewed by M. W. Bayley

Christian Science Monitor p16 Ag 29 '46
460w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '46

+ Kirkus 14:166 Ap 1 '46 190w

"Mrs. McMeekin's book is obviously a labor of love. It will be welcomed by individuals who share the love and by libraries that stand in need of the labor. It is compiled with an 'energetic pencil,' and does not scintillate. But it does seem to be inclusive." Thelma Brackett

+ Library J 71:667 My 1 '46 80w

"The book is lively only in brief narrative passages, which leads one to the conclusion that the author should never have strayed from Clark McMeekin and light fiction. This reviewer is, however, grateful to her for certain information which a less deep-grained Louisvillian might have neglected." Ruth Telser
San Francisco Chronicle p14 S 15 '46
300w

"If the book is superficial, the surface it presents is as gay and varied as can be. It has been said earlier that Mrs. McMeekin is like a hostess to her characters; she is also hostess to her readers, anxious that they shall see all the beauty and none of the ugliness during their stay, that they shall talk to everybody worth knowing, that they shall have a delightful and somewhat breathless time. She will take you on a visit to a city which not only Louisvillians, but all its visitors, declare to be one of the most charming in America." Basil Davenport

+ Sat R of Lit 29:91 D 7 '46 1000w

"Isabel McMeekin's ancestors were among the founders and early settlers of Louisville, while her husband is racing executive at Churchill Downs. She is admirably fitted to present the past and present of her beloved city of which she writes with appreciation and even great detail, without any critical appraisal whatsoever." Lorine Pruette

+ — Weekly Book Review p4 J1 21 '46 800w

MCMILLAN, GEORGE. Uncommon valor: Marine divisions in action. See Uncommon valor

MCMILLEN, WAYNE. Community organization for social welfare. 658p $4.75 Univ. of Chicago press [27s Cambridge]

361.8 Social work. Charity organization
A45-5162

"Wayne McMillen, of the University of Chicago and the Chicago Housing Authority, surveys specifically the methods followed in the organization of the community for social service. . . The book is divided into two sections: one, entitled 'Process,' deals with such topics as 'Community Organization,' 'The Relationship Between Public and Private Agencies' and 'Public Relations'; the second part of the book concerns itself with, among other things, 'Co-ordinating and Planning Agencies,' 'Charities Indorsement,' and local State and national agencies, each in a separate chapter. A large amount of source material relating to the field is also reprinted." N Y Times

"This well organized and well documented discussion for social welfare is primarily for teachers and for beginners in social welfare work. Mr. McMillen has rendered a valuable service in bringing together a vast amount of data and a thoughtful interpretation based on his own broad experience in this field. The volume will be of great value, to all engaged in any form of community organization activities." Bleeker Marquette

+ Am J Pub Health 36:553 My '46 360w

"This book provides a current and comprehensive review of one of the major aspects of social work in practice and meets a special need in professional education. Though it was designed to be concrete and helpful to beginners it will be read with profit by experienced social workers as well. It is enriched by documents which follow nearly every chapter; these the author has accumulated over the years, often from fugitive sources. Throughout the book, the emphasis is on administrative and interagency relationships of social agencies in their community setting. However, much of the specific material presented is of interest to sociologists, especially to students of social institutions, the professions, voluntary associations, and the structure of the community generally. They will find data and insights which can be recast in the theoretical formulations of sociology." Arthur Hillman

Am J Soc 52:68 Jl '46 900w

"A valuable book for those who are studying or functioning in social work." Mona Fletcher

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:177 F '46 230w

"Professor McMillen has written a very readable treatise, well documented and of great value to teachers in this field, as well as to the public spirited citizen interested in developments in private and public social work." W. W. Pettit

+ Am Soc R 11:762 D '46 750w

"Mr. McMillen undertook a sizable task. His volume, despite its lacks, is the most valuable contribution so far prepared toward a more precise clarification of process in community organization for social welfare. Workers and other students whose volumes are in production will remain in Mr. McMillen's debt for many years to come." A. E. Fink

+ Ann Am Acad 244:225 Mr '46 450w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 F 3 '46 50w
Booklist 42:221 Mr 15 '46

"A valuable textbook for students, social workers and community leaders." N. K. B.

+ N Y Times p22 D 16 '45 300w

"This is an unusually significant volume because it is the first treatment of the subject with just this scope and focus, and because it will be useful to student, teacher, and practitioner alike. . . . A fine selection of supplementary readings and documents (which happily are not relegated to fine print in an appendix) add greatly to the substance of the book and to its usefulness as a tool of teaching." E. M. Moore

+ Survey 32:27 Ja '46 600w

MACNAIR, HARLEY FARNSWORTH, ed.
China [contributors: Han Yu-shan, and others]. (United Nations ser) 573p il $6.50
Univ. of Calif.

951 China

"This fifth volume in the 'United Nations' series contains a wealth of diversified material on China. Leading Chinese and American authorities have contributed concise informative chapters, each on his specialty, each covering one broad phase of the country's history, culture, politics or economics. There are several good illustrations, an excellent bibliography and a thorough index." Library J

Booklist 43:167 F 1 '47

Kirkus 14:443 S 1 '46 190w

"Although scholarly, this well-designed and competently executed survey was intended for the general reader and should prove especially valuable as a one-volume reference for anyone seeking accurate information on China and the Chinese people. Recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 71:1463 O 15 '46 140w

"The general editor, the editor, the 33 experts who contributed chapters, and the University of California Press, are to be congratulated on compiling so distinguished a volume on so vast and ancient a country. They have made a valuable contribution to that mutual understanding set forth as an aim of the series. Under such blows as this one, the Orient's mystery is fading like last month's hit song, and a good thing, too." E. D. Breed

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 D 14 '46 800w

MACNAIR, HARLEY FARNSWORTH, ed. See Ayscough, F. W. and Lowell, A. Correspondence of a friendship

MCNAIRN, JACK, and MACMULLEN, JERRY.
Ships of the redwood coast. 156p il $3 Stanford univ. press

387.2 Ships. Shipping—California A45-5289

"An account of the little ships with the huge deckloads of lumber that piled the California, Oregon, and Washington coasts, and of the men who operated and sailed them. It is the story of the lumber country, 'Paul Bunyan's Country'; of the Mendocino dog-holes, the open coves where the ships were loaded for wire chutes; of the cargoes, the wrecks, the tycoons, the famous old skippers—Hog Aleck, Flat-foot Hanson, Caspar Charlie, Midnight Olsen, and many others." Publisher's note

"The romance and danger of this trade, the colorful skippers and famous ships it developed, form the basis of a descriptive narrative which is lively, informal, and yet carefully documented—an excellent piece of social history. Spirited drawings and many well-chosen photographs are included." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p4 D 30 '45 90w

Current Hist 10:61 Ja '46 30w

Kirkus 13:505 N 15 '45 130w

MACNALT, SIR ARTHUR SALUSBURY, and MELLOR, W. FRANKLIN. Health recovery in Europe. 180p 7s 6d Muller [English publication]

614.094 Public health—Europe. Reconstruction (1939-)—Europe. World war, 1939-1945—Civilian relief [A46-4299]

"The authors present an interesting review of information from many sources on health conditions and public health organization in Europe, especially in the Allied countries during German occupation and during and immediately after World War II. The public health and related economic chaos which World War II brought to Europe is well described. Organization and medical work of voluntary agencies and several official agencies which have been assisting in relief and rehabilitation activities are discussed in considerable detail." Am J Pub Health

Reviewed by L. A. Scheele

+ Am J Pub Health 36:667 Je '46 210w

Foreign Affairs 25:338 Ja '47 20w

"It is because of the magnitude of the task ahead that wide publicity should be given to what must be done and what is being done. This modest little book admirably succeeds in stating the case for action and telling the story of how that action is being implemented to-day."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p86 F 23 '46 220w

MCNAUGHTON, MILDRED. Four great oaks. 327p $2.75 Creative age

46-4120

A romantic tale of an English family, laid first in the seventeenth century and then in the twentieth. The earlier story concerns the tragic fate of John Beausire and the maid he loved and lost when he was exiled to America during the aftermath of Monmouth's rebellion. The second part tells how John's American descendant returns to the home of his ancestors and how his love story reaches a happier ending.

MCNAUGHTON, MILDRED—Continued

Reviewed by Dorothy Sparks
Book Week p6 Je 2 '46 310w
Kirkus 14:231 My 15 '46 120w

"The first part set in late 17th century England, is entertaining reading. The second part, 250 years later, with the same cast of characters and the same setting, does not carry conviction. Not recommended." Thelma Brackett

— + Library J 71:758 My 15 '46 30w

"Miss McNaughton's tale is sentimental, but not disagreeably so. Though her pedestrian style is coy in spots, she manages to be divertingly romantic. If the reincarnation theme has a contrived effect, the story is nevertheless well worked out. It moves, and carries its reader with it." Catherine Maher

+ — N Y Times p14 Je 16 '46 290w

"The same theme has been handled more successfully in such stories as 'Berkeley Square,' for it is much easier to accept pure fantasy than the mixture of realism and romanticism in the modern part of Miss McNaughton's story. Perhaps the chief fault lies in the character delineation, for all the present-day major personalities seem to be personifications of qualities rather than real people. But in spite of these obvious failings Miss McNaughton's knowledge of historical England and her colorful style make 'Four Great Oaks' worth reading." M. L. H.

+ — Spring'd Republican p4d Je 23 '46 420w

"Mrs. McNaughton does not, in fact, present the theory of rebirth; rather does she imply it. The inference can be drawn or not drawn by the reader. The plot will not be spoiled for him if he prefers coincidence to spiritual law. For the story of the Beausires, as Mrs. McNaughton has written it, is exciting and diverting." Thomas Sugrue

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Je 9 '46 800w

MCNICOL, DONALD. Radio's conquest of space; the experimental rise in radio communication. 374p il $4 Rinehart

621.384 Radio—History

"Radio's evolution and its achievements. Written by a past president of the I.R.E., an eminent radio engineer, it is a readable record of radio outlines. Treatment is chronological. Presented without mathematics it is a narrative of experimental achievement from the time of Hertz's wave to to-day and shows for the layman how radio operates. Illustrated." (Library J) Index.

"An authoritative but essentially nontechnical history. . . . Anyone who wants to know how this modern miracle works will find this book interesting, readable and instructive, as will many professionals in this field. It is illustrated." Richer Van Metre

+ Book Week p20 N 24 '46 50w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:1627 N 15 '46 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:46 Jl '46

Reviewed by Paul Speegle
San Francisco Chronicle p31 D 1 '46 100w

Reviewed by James Stokley
Weekly Book Review p56 D 1 '46 230w

MCNULTY, JOHN LAWRENCE. Third avenue. New York [il. by Beatrice Tobias]. 188p $2 Little

46-3682

Seventeen stories, all of them previously printed in the New Yorker. They describe some Third Avenue characters: Paddy the bartender, Slugger the handy man, Grady the cabman, and others of these very human men of East Side New York.

Reviewed by Dale Harrison
Book Week p4 My 26 '46 270w

"Masculine humor and phonographic reproduction give these a special quality of appeal, that is somewhat reminiscent of—but superior to—say, Damon Runyon."

+ Kirkus 14:133 Mr 15 '46 170w

"These McNulty stories gain feeling in collected continuity. Even when maudlin sentiment comes dangerously close it is avoided by sensible simplicity and understanding. Beatrice Tobias did the illustrations, and they are happy in their creation of the scene. This Third Avenue may never be renamed the 'Avenue of the United Nations,' but it certainly will not suffer the ill-fame of the night club about which a McNulty character said, 'Nobody goes there anymore. It's too crowded.'" W. G. Dooley

+ N Y Times p5 My 26 '46 700w

"You may have read these stories in the New Yorker. Be grateful none the less that they are bound and available for ready review. Be grateful too that they have been illustrated by Beatrice Tobias, whose sketches fit these tales as Dore's fit the Inferno." W. S. Lynch

+ Sat R of Lit 29:23 Je 29 '46 600w

Spring'd Republican p4d Je 29 '46 600w

"It takes a very special type guy to write about Grogan and Grady and Paddy. It takes a very special type guy to write such stories as 'Two People He Never Saw' and 'Two Bums Here Would Spend Freely Except for Poverty,' the latter a masterpiece in a thousand words which illuminates mankind like a naked electric light bulb flooding a furnished room. It takes a type guy who is a genius." Thomas Sugrue

+ Weekly Book Review* p2 My 26 '46 550w

MCPHEE, COLIN. House in Bali; with phot. by the author. 234p $4 Day

919.2 Bali. Music—Bali. Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 46-6989

An American-born (Montreal) composer, trained in Paris, the author became fascinated by the music of the gamelan. He went to Bali and spent five years there, living in his own house, but consorting with Balinese musicians, princes, priests, servants, and scholars, while he studied the native music. His scientific reports on the music have already been published. This book is an account of his daily life while he was engaged in his studies.

Reviewed by Donald Fairchild
Book Week p42 D 1 '46 360w

Booklist 43:68 N 1 '46

Kirkus 14:218 My 1 '46 160w

"His book will be of interest to travel as well as music minded readers." Leonard Burkatt

+ Library J 71:1205 S 15 '46 120w

"Altogether, it is a distinguished and delightful book, to be read both quickly and slowly, to remember and to return to." Margaret Mead

+ N Y Times p7 S 29 '46 1000w

"The story is no less enchanting for being true. A series of remarkable photographs shows us the grave beauty of the people; arrangements of their exquisite music have now been heard; the young man, Colin McPhee, is a composer whose gifts were recognized before he left on this adventure; and the island of course is Bali." Minna Lederman

+ Sat R of Lit 29:19 N 23 '46 900w

"There are a few precious books in the world which capture the charm and color of an alien way of life. . . . Colin McPhee's first book on Bali is one of these precious books. He brings to it not only a rare experience of years in Bali spent in listening and in seeing, but also an ability to put into words the movements of the dance, the sound of the music and the special quality of the people." Ruth Benedict

+ Weekly Book Review p4 O 6 '46 1600w

MCQUARRIE, L. M. Half-angel. 219p $2
Doubleday

46-1197

Character study of an exceptionally beautiful woman, who was obsessed with the idea that she brought unhappiness to everyone she knew. A man who met her casually is drawn into her mystery, and probes for her secret. He decides that she has been less guilty than the people whom she was supposed to have injured.

Reviewed by Barbara Bond
N Y Times p10 Mr 10 '46 180w

"In [a] contrived and not very subtle fashion, L. M. McQuarrie begins a complicated story. He tries earnestly to create the portrait of a restless and gifted composer whose career is strewn with the wreckage of her appeal to men, but the results are as deficient in music and magic as the repertoire of a hand organ. . . . But parts of 'Half Angel' describe human behavior which is erratic and contrived with inner motives almost as opaque as the fogs that drift over the Golden Gate." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p8 Ja 27 '46 360w

MCSORLEY, EDWARD. Our own kind. 304p
$2.50 Harper

46-4737

Novel about an Irish-American family living in Providence, Rhode Island. Ned McDermott had not had much education in the old country, nor had his son, Will, in this country. But Old Ned was determined that his grandson, Willie, was to have the advantages his father and grandfather had lacked. Gradually the old man built up his version of the American dream for the boy, who accepted it gladly, but when his grandfather died the dream ended for Willie.

Booklist 42:348 J1 1 '46

Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 18 '46
480w

"Fortunately, Mr. McSorley is always able to distinguish between things that are vulgar and things that are merely unpleasant and tedious, a quality that makes it possible for him to write effectively about the orphaned grandson's mental-emotional growth without stopping off for a monotonous examination of those adolescent struggles that many writers find so fascinating. The combination of all these things make this a fine novel, and it is good to know that Mr. McSorley is now in Maine working on a second book." John Broderick
+ Commonweal 44:194 Je 7 '46 430w

"A warm, sometimes exciting, portrait of a family, a believable rather than theatrical portrait of a community, and a moving relationship between boy and old man, this should—as a first novel—win critical interest."
+ Kirkus 14:134 Mr 15 '46 190w

"A first novel of tremendous power. Evidence that the U.S.A. still breeds first-class writers of our peculiar American stamp: tough, humorous, tender, tragic, scrappingly real. . . . If you read one novel a year, read this." E. L. Lewis

+ Library J 71:758 My 15 '46 80w

"A painful and sad little tale that at times seems to have difficulty in going on with itself, as if the telling were too much to bear. But when the old man is present there is warmth and hope, and the sentences break into song. It is Edward McSorley's first novel, and a good one. No doubt he will go on with Willie, and Willie, no doubt, will go on in the pattern of his grandfather, which is to live like a man, love like a god, and fight like a fool, as do the Irish when they are at their best." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Times p6 Je 2 '46 800w

"I should call this a most successful novel. It is a limited work, to be sure, and therefore a minor work. But good minor works such as this are rare. And Mr. McSorley has a rare gift of concentration. He illuminates only a very small corner of human experience; but the light is clear and it is steady; and it is his own." George Dangerfield

+ Sat R of Lit 29:9 Je 1 '46 700w

"It is the simple story of simple people, but so richly and beautifully told that Ned McDermott and his family and friends become one's own friends. An era that is past is brought to life again in the story of Ned and his grandson." R. M. Morgan

Spring'd Republican p4d J1 7 '46 420w
Time 47:102 Je 10 '46 110w

"Now and then the book is lifted by humor and now and then with an owlish wink, Mr. McSorley has something to say about the defections of his own kind and their priests, but only now and then. On the whole he has given us an accurate but somewhat superficial picture." Harry Sylvester

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Je 2 '46 650w
Wis Lib Bul 42:133 O '46

MCSPADDEN, JOSEPH WALKER. Robin Hood and his merry outlaws; ill. by Louis Slobodkin; with an introd. written by May Lamberton Becker. (Rainbow classics) 285p $1 World pub.

398.2 46-25026

"This edition, out of print for many years, is enlivened by humorous, robust illustrations by Louis Slobodkin. The first of a new series of classics edited by May Lamberton Becker." Booklist

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p11 F 10 '46 180w

Booklist 42:202 F 15 '46

Cath World 164:382 Ja '47 60w

"Robin Hood is a must in every 9 to 12 year olds' reading, and in her introduction, Mrs. Becker gives one a sense of his place in history as well as legend. The McSpadden text follows the traditional tales, with careful selection and arrangement, and a style that does not give the child a sense of the stories being dated. Louis Slobodkin has done some successful and some not so successful drawings, in black and white and in color."

+ Kirkus 14:67 F 1 '46 230w

Reviewed by R. M. McEvoy
+ Library J 71:281 F 15 '46 60w

+ Sat R of Lit 29:44 Je 15 '46 150w

"Mr McSpadden has done well by the great robber hero, and Mr Slobodkin's illustrations capture the spirit of Sherwood forest far better than in many previous editions aimed [at] the juvenile trade." R. F. H.

+ Spring'd Republican p4d F 10 '46 90w

MCSWIGAN, MARIE. Hi, Barney! ill. by Corinne Dillon. 174p $2 Dutton

46-3211

Barney, the young son of a British fighter pilot, is the hero. Barney was living in America and his small pals refused to believe Barney's father was away at war. Then one day his father came to Barney's school, covered with medals, and the enthralled children took him to their hearts. For ages six to ten.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p15 My 19 '46 300w

"Undistinguished."

Kirkus 14:149 Mr 15 '46 90w

Reviewed by Dorothea Dawson
Library J 71:763 My 15 '46 70w

"The tale flows fast, smoothly, humorously. Both boys and girls of Barney's age should find fun and suspense in it." Latrobe Carroll
+ N Y Times p14 Ap 21 '46 90w

"Barney is a kid grownups like, but children will be unable to find anything even remotely priggish about him." R. F. H.
Spring'd Republican p4d Ap 23 '46
100w

Weekly Book Review p18 My 19 '46
360w

MCWILLIAMS, CAREY. Southern California country; an island on the land. (Am. folkways ser) 387p $3.75 Duell
917.949 California 46-25084

"Defining Southern California as the coastal strip bounded on the north by the Tehachapi range just north of Santa Barbara, the author calls it a 'paradoxical land with a tricky environment.' He writes of its past and its present, its climate, politics, and eccentrics, and of Hollywood. Although not a debunking book, the cold eye of a social economist viewing romantic mission legends, booms, and the treatment of Mexicans, results in a provocative and possibly controversial treatment, and the book will have more than local interest." (Booklist) Index.

"Should Hollywood producers and directors read this book—they should, but probably won't—they will find it rich with potential movie scenarios. . . As an adopted but loving son, and as a man concerned and conversant with the economic, political and sociological aspects of the territory, Carey McWilliams is eminently qualified for the job in hand. His book is highly readable, at times exciting, and consistently interesting. Anyone who has ever been perplexed by the screwiness of Los Angeles should read this book. He will be just as perplexed, but more intelligently so, when he finishes." A. A. Liveright

+ Book Week p3 Mr 31 '46 400w

Booklist 42:245 Ap 1 '46

Bookmark 7:11 N '46

Reviewed by J. F. Thorning
Cath World 163:570 S '46 450w

"Mr. McWilliams is inclined to be factual, but he has woven his material into a delightfully readable book." M. W. Bayley

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ap 10 '46 700w

Current Hist 11:230 S '46 70w

"A somewhat arbitrary but provocative recapitulation by a man who has known and loved the region from 1922."

+ Kirkus 14:84 F 15 '46 190w

Reviewed by E. L. Lewis

Library J 71:483 Ap 1 '46 140w

"Like other historical series, the Folkways volumes are of uneven merit; however, the present study of the California area south of the Tehachapi range is a highly satisfactory account." E. N. Saveth

+ Nation 162:697 Je 8 '46 450w

Reviewed by F. O. Matthiessen

New Repub 114:739 My 20 '46 1150w

"Some of the absurdities and agonies endured in Southern California might lead you to wonder why Mr. McWilliams and more than 4,000,000 others, most of them immigrants, remain there. Yet, finally, you will know that his story will be likely to increase, not stem, the steady flow of people to the newest place in the world, the last outpost on the last frontier of the West. For he loves the place, and he deeply holds and lends new realism to the common conviction of all Southern Californians that a destiny awaits them. A 'strange hungry question.'" Alan Cranston

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 7 '46 1050w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

Sat R of Lit 29:22 My 4 '46 1300w

Reviewed by Farnsworth Crowder

Survey G 35:333 S '46 650w

"The amount of work that went into the preparation of this book is staggering. The author has obviously dipped deep into the prodigious mass of printed material about the region—books, magazine articles, government publications, newspapers, fiction, booster literature—and his paragraphs are studded with brief and pertinent quotations from an extraordinary variety of sources. 'Southern California Country' is far and away the most detailed, authoritative and shrewdly reasoned analysis of the whys and wherefores of Los Angeles and its environs now in print or likely to appear for some time." Oscar Lewis

+ Weekly Book Review p1 Ap 14 '46 900w

MCWILLIAMS, MRS VERA (SEELEY). Laf-cadio Hearn. 465p $3 Houghton

B or 92 Hearn, Lafcadio

46-2994

This "biography is the result of 14 years of research and writing. . . Born of an Irish father and an Ionic mother, the little boy was early an outsider when he was sent to his father's family; few understood, or tried to understand the queer, myopic child, and when an injury blinded one eye, he was further estranged from normal life. Troubles in school, in England and France, ineffectual jobs, and the family decision to send him to America, where he finally made his way to a relative in Cincinnati. There he found the impetus for writing, began his long career in newspaper work, enlarged his scholarship and courted the sensational. New Orleans next where antlike industry battled ill health, the West Indies, and growing fame with the publication of Chita. From New York to Japan, where his teaching, writing and his Japanese wife and children brought him some content" Kirkus

"The biographers of the self-styled 'civilized nomad' have been a motley crew, ranging from slightly hysterical women to a slanderous male oculist. Mrs. Vera McWilliams is the first to bring to her subject long training as a professional writer, adequate scholarship, and fifteen years of devoted research. The result is a sane and readable account." John Ashmead

+ Atlantic 178:160 S '46 380w

"This is a romanticist's biography of a romanticist. It is warm, well written and sympathetic, but fails to provide a frame of reference." Sterling North

+ Book Week p2 Ap 21 '46 650w

Booklist 42:298 My 15 '46

Christian Science Monitor p14 My 11 '46 1050w

Reviewed by Charles Duffy

Commonweal 44:122 My 17 '46 450w

"Important literary biography."

+ Kirkus 14:92 F 15 '46 230w

"Of greatest interest today is detailed account of Hearn's life in Japan, where he married a Samurai woman and supported his family by teaching at the Imperial University." H. W. Hart

+ Library J 71:584 Ap 15 '46 140w

Reviewed by Harry Levin

New Repub 114:588 Ap 22 '46 850w

"A strong and in some respects new light has been thrown upon 'the exotic little non-conformist' in this finely written biography. Two Hearn's appear. The one loved Japan and wrote about it. The other hated Japan and kept quiet about it. How this double standard was possible on the part of a man quite free from intellectual dishonesty becomes clear as we read. . . This is a valuable book on Japan and on Hearn." Willard Price

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 14 '46 1100w

Reviewed by Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 22:114 Ap 13 '46 380w

"Ever since Lafcadio Hearn's death in 1904 there has been a continued search for material to complete the portrait of this exotic and sensitive writer. It is ironical that the first completely two-dimensional study of Hearn should appear at a time when the country that he adopted and loved has been defeated and occupied by the armed forces of America. It is unfortunate that Vera McWilliams's biography has come too late to revive a wide interest in the man or his work, for only a few of the young people of today know his name or have ever looked into a single one of his many books." Harrison Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 24:19 Ap 20 '46 1400w

"An excellent biography, free from bias." C. K. Bauman

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Je 23 '46 800w

"An honest, sympathetic, thoroughly readable account of a compelling personality."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:191 S '46 330w

"It is a relief to read a book which eschews Freudian analysis, tendentious theorizing, and the imaginative reconstruction of scenes for which no documentary evidence exists. Nevertheless Mrs. McWilliams's method leaves a sense of incompleteness. No biography of a man of letters has done its full job unless it includes a reasoned critical appraisal of its subject's work, and makes some effort to place him within the frame of the life and literature of his day. Mrs. McWilliams has by-passed these necessary tasks. . . . After all, perhaps Mrs. McWilliams is right; perhaps Hearn's life is more interesting than any of his books." De Lancey Ferguson

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ap 14 '46
1300w

Wis Lib Bul 42:87 Je '46

MAGARET, HELENE. Gallhac of Béziers. 262p
$3.50 Longmans

B or 92 Gallhac, Pierre Jean Antoine
46-8167

Presents the life of a French priest, who founded the religious congregation, the Sisters of the Sacred Heart of Mary. "Based on a translation from the French Un Apôtre by M. L'Abbé Leray, the well-known Catholic author recounts the spiritual conquest of poverty, slander, jealousy, anticlericalism and sickness. Several miracles are attributed to Father Gallhac." (Library J)

"The most noteworthy thing about Miss Magaret's story is the degree of genuine emotional intensity it succeeds in maintaining. Sanctity of the heroic sort is the dominating theme and yet not in such a way that the rest of us grow disheartened at the vast gulf which extends between the tenor of Father Gallhac's way of life and our own. Very few books which deal with pressing current problems and at the same time delineate the satisfying portrait of a man could also serve as effective spiritual reading. This book could. Anyone who wants a comprehensive, everyday grasp of what sanctity does mean—how positive is its orientation—should turn to this life of Father Gallhac." Edward Skillin

+ Commonweal 45:262 D 20 '46 330w

"This story of his life, based on a translation from the French, reveals the Catholic Church at its best, meeting the needs of the lowliest and the lost. It is the sort of story that could be told again and again, not only of Catholic priests, but of Protestant ministers and missionaries, and Jewish rabbis."

+ Kirkus 14:498 O 1 '46 170w

"Primarily for Catholic readers. Highly recommended." R. J. Hurley

+ Library J 71:1463 O 15 '46 100w

MAGUIRE, THEOPHANE. Hunan harvest. 191p il $2.50 Bruce pub.

275.1 Missions—China. Roman Catholic church—Missions 46-2853

"Catholic mission literature of China is enriched by this simple narrative of Father Maguire's valiant work in Northwest Hunan some twenty years ago. Famine, war, disease, persecution and personal hardships are calmly accepted by shepherd and sheep." Library J

"This book will certainly urge many a young man and woman to devote their lives to the spiritual have-nots of the pagan world." B. L. Conway

+ Cath World 163:472 Ag '46 270w

"Roman Catholics who are interested in missions will find this simply told tale of a priest's missionary activity in Hunan Province, China, interesting and revealing. Father Maguire tells of the every day life of a missionary in such a way as to make it seem very real and much more prosaic than is commonly thought."

+ Kirkus 14:194 Ap 15 '46 210w

"Pleasing style (author is editor of Sign Magazine) and pen drawings by Weda Yap make it A-1 offering for popular reading. Human appeal and adventure will transcend religious differences. Recommended for public libraries and all Catholic libraries." R. J. Hurley

+ Library J 71:405 Mr 15 '46 90w

MAHLER, ALMA MARIA (SCHINDLER)
(MRS FRANZ WERFEL). Gustav Mahler; memories and letters; tr. by Basil Creighton. 277p il $5 Viking [18s Murray, J]

B or 92 Mahler, Gustav 46-3769

"Concerned primarily with last ten years of Mahler's life—the years of his marriage with Alma Maria Schindler. Author is straightforward in her presentation of the composer as a man and as an artist with no attempt to gloss over the truth concerning him or the circle in which they moved. Of particular interest to musicians are the descriptions of how Mahler's symphonies came into being. Scene is mainly Vienna but includes his New York sojourns." Library J

Reviewed by Felix Borowski

Book Week p12 My 12 '46 500w

Booklist 42:347 J1 '46

Reviewed by W. H. H. Squire

Christian Science Monitor p14 N 16 '46
1000w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 J1 '46

"It is a very personal book, often more of a self-apologia of the widow than a well balanced biography of the composer. But because of the enclosed letters and other intimate biographical material this book will have a permanent place in the literature on Mahler." Max Fischer

+ Commonweal 44:123 My 17 '46 390w

"Despite the fact [that the book] is almost unbelievably uninspired piece of writing, and exhibits a certain incapacity on the part of the wife to gauge or appreciate the stature of her husband, it is a touching story and reveals some very interesting glimpses of Mahler."

Kirkus 14:141 Mr 15 '46 240w

"The translation by Basil Creighton from the German edition published in Amsterdam in 1940 while adequate lacks some of the dynamic sparkle of the original. Highly recommended."

H. E. Bush

+ Library J 71:584 Ap 15 '46 140w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 24 '46 100w

Reviewed by M. D. Zabel

Nation 163:326 S 21 '46 1500w

"This book is chiefly an odd collection of memories, anecdotes and impressions, excerpts of diaries and purely personal comments carelessly thrown together in a sort of hodgepodge, with no attempt at organization or discrimination between the relevant and the trivial. But it is also biographical raw material, a highly subjective and entirely uninhibited testimony that may be of great value for every future attempt to give a real interpretation of Gustav Mahler's work and personality. . . . The artless, fragmentary testimony of the only person close to him—perhaps too close to be an objective witness—has some of the merits and certainly all the weaknesses of a spontaneous human document. It may contribute to a deeper understanding of Gustav Mahler and his music. Perhaps we would know more about Beethoven if his 'immortal beloved' had become his wife and had recorded her most intimate memories." Franz Schoenberner

+ N Y Times p7 My 26 '46 1000w

"These 'memories,' based on Alma Mahler's diaries, throw a vivid light on that fascinating period [1901-1911]. She has a gift for the revealing anecdote, a keen ear for the self-portraying conversation, and she can sketch a scene or person with brief strokes in an unforgettable manner. . . . The translation is smooth and idiomatic. Unfortunately, an index is lacking. Altogether a fine book that should be enjoyed by every music-lover." Nathan Broder

+ Sat R of Lit 29:18 My 11 '46 1350w

"This is a book only for people who love music or human beings, not, of course, music as Mahler loved it; that is not given to many, and it is the source of his greatness. But all true music-lovers will read it with intense interest and will be (according to their virtue) moved to love this great musician who in spite of all his imperfections left at least one masterpiece, Das Lied von der Erde, and many other fine works behind him, created a new standard of opera production in Europe, and was the greatest conductor who lived between Nikisch and Toscanini. The translation from the German by Mr. Basil Creighton is well done, but I understand that Part Two, which consists of letters, has been much shortened from the Amsterdam edition published in 1940. This is a great pity and a sad error on the part of so eminent a publisher as the house of Murray, for the book is by no means over long!" W. J. Turner

MAHLER, A. M.—Continued
+ Spec 176:354 Ap 5 '46 750w

"The biography suffers from the faults which easily beset writers who stand too near to their subjects. Not only is Gustav Mahler out of focus to the rest of the world when presented through the eyes of his widow, but his contemporaries are distorted by her all too feminine vision. . . . The book, however, has the merits of its defects, for it has all the vividness of contemporary, firsthand description of a world that has vanished."

Times [London] Lit Sup p381 Ag 10 '46 800w

Reviewed by J. N. Burk

Weekly Book Review p6 My 19 '46
1200w

MAIAKOVSKII, VLADIMIR VLADIMIROVICH. Mayakovsky and his poetry; compiled by Herbert Marshall. (Life and lit. in the Soviet Union) rev ed 157p il $3.75 Transatlantic [12s 6d Pilot]

891.71 45-20843

"This volume, one of a series entitled 'Life and Literature in the Soviet Union,' edited by Ivor Montagu and Herbert Marshall, is a revised edition of a 1945 publication. We are assured by no less a literary authority than Joseph Stalin that 'Vladimir Mayakovsky was and remains the best and most talented poet of our Soviet epoch.' Mayakovsky died in 1930. The present seems to be the only book in English devoted to him. Besides a foreword, a series of translated poems, a bit of prose autobiography and two or three essays about him, there are also pictures, caricatures and the reproductions of posters for which Mayakovsky wrote the texts." N Y Times

"Whether Mayakovsky is the most talented poet of the Soviet epoch only time and criticism can tell. The translations ought to be judged by someone possessing a thorough command of the original, which I do not; but in general either Russian poetry does not translate easily into English or else it suffers from inadequate translators, and the present group of translations, however well intended, does not convey a real sense of intensity and exaltation." H. M. Jones

N Y Times p10 S 15 '46 390w

Reviewed by Alfred Kreymborg

Sat R of Lit 29:45 J1 27 '46 550w

MAILLAUD, PIERRE. English way. 312p $3.75 (10s 6d) Oxford

914.2 England—Civilization. National characteristics, English. Great Britain—Politics and government. 46-3180

The author is a French newspaperman who has lived for many years in England and during the war was a broadcaster on the French service of the B.B.C. In this volume of more or less connected essays he writes on English roads, English manners and customs, and English politics, as well as on England's achievements in the war.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 J1 21 '46 270w

Booklist 42:364 J1 15 '46

"This is a thoughtful rather than a brilliant book, and requires thoughtful reading." F. C. Brophy

Cath World 164:86 O '46 700w

Reviewed by Henry Rago

Commonweal 44:312 J1 12 '46 850w

Foreign Affairs 24:754 J1 '46 40w

"'The English Way' deals with the English scene during and just before the war, and in the opinion of this reviewer it is the most illuminating work that has yet appeared on that period. There is little sparkle or rhetoric in the book, but a great deal of shrewdness and clarity, insight and analysis. One might expect a Frenchman to be rather critical of certain phases of British character and policy; Maillaud is, but with persuasive reasonableness and understanding." L. D. Baldwin

+ N Y Times p20 Je 16 '46 1150w

"M. Maillaud's book on England is not a simple introductory explanation of the way the English people live. It can be fully appreciated only by those who already know a good deal about England past, and preferably also about England present. Nor is it a neat, systematic treatise on English politics, religion, customs, social structure, international relations, though it deals with all of these, and more. M. Maillaud is too good a Frenchman to write obscure or heaven-storming sentences. On any given topic he is always clear, and usually reasonable. If the total structure of the book is often a little less clear—well, M. Maillaud is not writing a textbook for American students, but a commentary on the place of England in the Western world today." Crane Brinton

+ Sat R of Lit 29:29 Je 8 '46 1050w

Reviewed by Alzada Comstock

Springf'd Republican p4d J1 7 '46 750w

Reviewed by H. S. Commager

Weekly Book Review p24 O 6 '46 1550w

MAINWARING, DANIEL (GEOFFREY HOMES, pseud). Build my gallows high. 213p $2.50 Morrow

46-2892

"Red Bailey, formerly a private op, has settled down to the less arduous business of running a gas station near Reno. Through the efforts of a Miss Mumsie McGonigle, with whom he had been somewhat intimate ten years before, Bailey is persuaded to resume his career, and he gets involved in a case that takes him to New York, where all kinds of gangsters are lying in wait for him." New Yorker

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p10 My 5 '46

Booklist 42:283 My 1 '46

Kirkus 14:51 F 1 '46 60w

N Y Times p18 My 5 '46 260w

"A rather expert account of mayhem."

New Yorker 22:120 Ap 13 '46 80w

"Thumping good bloodletter for those who like tough types doing their stuff against variety of colorful American backgrounds."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:44 My 4 '46 90w

"'Build My Gallows High,' unlike the author's previous efforts, is not a mystery. But Homes mystery fans need not feel cheated. Before the violent activities narrated here have run their course, no less than five bullet-ridden corpses have been strewn about here and there—not to mention a sixth which got that way by means of a blunt instrument, and still another which wound up in the river with the help of a fish hook." J. S. K.

Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 14 '46
300w

"Mr. Homes tells the tale mostly in dialogue, ever and anon describing the scenery with Western relish, often dropping into pulpy, purplish italics and mangling his time scheme cruelly, perhaps for more suspense. Still and all, it's a speedy affair with enough whodunit routine to keep most readers happy right up to the unusual last line. Four or five murders in all, not counting the first violent death." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p28 Ap 14 '46
230w

MAJDALANY, FREDERICK. The monastery. 148p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Lane]

940.542 Monte Cassino (Benedictine monastery)—Siege, 1944. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, English. 46-11910

Brief account of the battle on Monte Cassino written by an English officer of the 78th

Division, who arrived on the scene after the battle had gone on for nearly four months.

Reviewed by Herman Kogan
Book Week p46 D 1 '46 420w
Booklist 43:70 N 1 '46

Reviewed by Richard Flower
Commonweal 45:101 N 8 '46 260w
Kirkus 14:406 Ag 15 '46 100w

"As a book it may lack stature, but to readers who still wonder about the crucial struggles of the past war, it is recommended." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 71:1048 Ag '46 120w

"Mr. Majdalany gives a picture of battle, of the individuals taking part in it, that is as vivid and complete as any I have read. If he had waited ten years before writing, The Monastery would have been a different and, I believe, a far less valuable record of experience." G. W. Stonier

+ New Statesman & Nation 30:392 D 8 '45 700w

Reviewed by Gladwin Hill
N Y Times p16 O 27 '46 500w

"The book is interesting for its military information and particularly so for its writing, which, based on close observation, is sharp in detail and more characteristic of a work of art than of a work of history."

+ New Yorker 22:114 O 12 '46 60w

Reviewed by Jack Feisle
San Francisco Chronicle p17 O 20 '46 350w

"Major Majdalany gives us one of the best pictures of the life of an infantry officer that I have ever read. Picture is perhaps the wrong word; vignette would have been better" S. H. F. Johnston

+ Spec 176:98 Ja 25 '46 270w

"The account he gives in this short book of his observation of the concluding phases of the struggle is graphic and powerful. He is what is called a natural writer, simple and vigorous in style, selective in detail, unaffected in sympathy. What he observed and thought he sets down with extreme accuracy, imagination working quietly and deeply in him as he writes; he has little conscious thought, it would seem, for the effect he makes."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p3 Ja 5 '46 800w

"Major Majdalany writes of the battle, one which was headlined throughout the world almost as a detached observer rather than a participant. He seems never to have been too occupied with his own troubles, i. e., Germans, to overlook a blazing tank or dead horse, burning farmhouse or tangled telephone wires, a gallant feat or a bit of comedy. In the hottest kind of action he saw the dozens of incidents which make up war and has remembered them in unaffected but engaging phrases. His style is so calm and matter of fact that not until the close does the reader realize that he has found a minor masterpiece, one that demands a second reading or a third." P. J. Searles

+ Weekly Book Review p3 S 29 '46 700w

MALAPARTE, CURZIO. Kaputt; tr. from the Italian by Cesare Foligno. 407p $3.75 Dutton 46-7374

"Neither straight memoir nor novel, this book by an Italian war correspondent represents a horrifying spectacle of Europe during the war years, seen, for the first time, from the Axis side. As title indicates, there is the complete moral and physical degradation of a continent. Using an impressionistic technique employing flashbacks and relating isolated incidents, Malaparte conveys an effect of the horror of war as much by gruesomely gay conversations he has with German generals as by actual descriptions of fighting or suffering." Library J

Reviewed by Emily Schossberger
Book Week p3 N 3 '46 700w
Kirkus 14:449 S 1 '46 280w

"Though it says a good deal more to the subtle than to the naive, the book can be read with interest and profit on any level. Recommended." C. C. Mish

+ Library J 71:1540 N 1 '46 180w

"I doubt that a single incident in Kaputt can be taken as possessing literal truth. What is important is that the whole leering, grimacing, corrupt and degenerate picture he paints of Fascist Europe before the tide had turned against it has, whatever the inventions and the arrogant fancies he may have added to it, an inescapable inner truth. The details may be lies, but the total effect is but too hideously and decadently true." Richard Watts

New Repub 115:737 D 2 '46 750w

"This is a puzzling and disturbing book... If we are not to forget, a book like this from an eyewitness is important. It would have been vastly more important if it had been published years ago. Mr. Malaparte could have done so. In 1942 he was in neutral Sweden. He had powerful friends there, he tells us, among them Prince Eugene, brother of King Gustav... Why did he not stay in Sweden, finish it and publish it there? His book does not provide a satisfactory answer." Howard Taubman

N Y Times p5 N 3 '46 900w

"Malaparte writes a phrenetic prose. As he sweeps along through purple patches, through mystical threnodies, through stark and bloody paragraphs, you feel that he is barely keeping himself under control. It is an appropriate style for the content, but it occasionally betrays the writer into absurdities and obscurities. Whether or not every conversation he has recorded is verbatim is unimportant. What is important is that this book is, subjectively and objectively, a composite portrait of what is called Fascism—with all its senility, all its decay, its cynicism, its sad weariness exposed. Malaparte's word for it is perhaps as good as any 'Kaputt,' the dictionary says, means 'Done, broken, finished, gone to ruin.'" Albert Hubbell

New Yorker 22:131 N 30 '46 1350w

"[An] exciting and terrifying book, as well as a composite portrait of Fascism. Signor Malaparte's personal and political traits may be the subject of conjecture and controversy, but there can be no controversy on the subject of the book he has written." Spencer Barefoot

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 12 '47 700w

"The legerdemain with which his contributions to the cause of fascism are passed over in the book itself is a masterly achievement. When 'Kaputt' appeared in Italy, reviewers of established anti-fascist standing protested violently, but could not check its very considerable popular success. Italians know a good piece of writing when they see one. And they have as a rule not too high an opinion of the singleheartedness of man anyway... The basic plan of 'Kaputt' has the subtle simplicity of a Decameron... You won't do justice to your experience in reading 'Kaputt,' if you take it as straight autobiography or journalism. I suppose the thing to do is to read it as fiction based on facts. You may also call it a fantasy about factual themes. But whatever you call it, you won't escape the strange, grisly beauty of these stories. Even the occasional repetitiousness of the style does not impair their fascinating effect on the reader." Robert Pick

Sat R of Lit 29:13 N 16 '46 1300w

Time 48:110 N 11 '46 600w

"It is a horrible book but it is impossible not to read it through, once you have begun. For, like Galeazzo Ciano's diaries, it exhibits with absolute shamelessness the full degradation of the Fascist mind... The book is well translated, although with American colloquialisms which sound odd from a 'professor emeritus' of Oxford." Vincent Sheehan

Weekly Book Review p6 N 17 '46 1300w

MALEEY, VLADIMIR LEONIDAS. Internal-combustion engines; theory and design. 2d ed 636p $5 McGraw

621.43 Gas and oil engines 45-8989

"This text, for engineering students and practicing engineers, presents the fundamental principles of internal-combustion engine design and operation. Although the author presupposes a knowledge of thermodynamics and mechanics, the essentials of these subjects are reviewed in the chapters on fuels, combustion, and engine cycles. New material in this edition, particularly that relating to combustion in compression and spark-ignition engines, and fuels, accounts for more than 200 additional pages. A chapter on gas turbines has been added, and the number of problems given at the end of chapters has been increased from 225 to 543." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

MALEEV, V. L.—Continued

Library J 70:687 Ag '45 90w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:57 O '45

MALET, ORIEL. My bird sings. 248p $2.50
Doubleday [8s 6d Faber]

46-7661

Fragile little story about the childhood of three French girls in the early nineteenth century. A young present-day bride finds an old greenish mirror from a French chateau, and in it sees the reflected lives of the three: Pauline, Camille, and Cosette.

Reviewed by Dorothy Sparks
Book Week p23 N 24 '46 400w
Booklist 43:156 Ja 15 '47

"A sensitivity, a delicacy, distinguishes this and gives it ground for a certain succès d'estime in England. Though not for a popular audience, this should find a discriminating following here."

+ Kirkus 14:396 Ag 15 '46 130w

Reviewed by Harold Brighthouse
Manchester Guardian p3 N 30 '45 40w

"Without straining for historical accuracy, Oriel Malet gives a sympathetic picture of a romantic young girl of the period... To say that it is a delightful book for teen-age girls does not exclude it from adults who have periodic spells of this nostalgic past-fever, and who have a preference for the Romantic Age in France. It is a book like a tune on an old French music-box." Mary Mian

+ N Y Times p12 O 20 '46 270w

"This little parcel of whimsy... will delight or irritate you, according to how thick you like your whimsy spread and what you expect to find underneath when you wipe it away to look at the substance." N. G. Chaikin
Sat R of Lit 29:90 D 7 '46 500w

"Has a certain fairy-story charm about it; but the plot was already sufficiently undisciplined without the introduction of an enchanted mirror to tell their story, dialogue and all, a century later." V. C. Clinton-Baddeley
Spec 175:498 N 23 '45 50w

"A charming story... Miss Malet has imagination, tenderness and humour, she understands children and adolescents very well and she has a pleasant, straightforward style, but there is an indecisiveness about her book which is at once a fault and a virtue."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p581 D 8 '45 240w

"This novel is hardly a novel at all. It is a fantasy seen in a mirror... The little tale is at once nothing at all, and like an emanation, a little ghostly play found half-documented in some old Gloucestershire Dower House attic. The artificial device of the mirror, the unexplained relation of the old puppeteer to Melanie de Rosignole or to the three girls in the house called La Maison des Saintes, give a touch of mystery, a screw or two of tension to the narrative. For the most part, the story moves like a little company of dragon flies floating on some placid tributary of the Loire." Ernestine Evans

+ Weekly Book Review p6 N 3 '46 650w

MALINOWSKI, BRONISLAW. Dynamics of culture change; an inquiry into race relations in Africa; ed. by Phyllis M. Kaberry. 171p $2.50 Yale univ. press

572.96 Africa—Race problems. Ethnology—Africa. Acculturation A45-2174

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"Whether or not one agrees with all the theories and statements set forth in this posthumous book, the fact that such a well-organized work could be produced from mere scattered notes, previous publications and lectures attests to the fundamental consistency and vigor of Malinowski's thought and principles, as well as to the unusual editorial ability of Dr. Kaberry... For the specialist the book as a whole offers little or nothing which is absolutely new since it presents topics and theories with which Malinowski has already dealt in previous publications and lectures, but it does serve to clarify some of his earlier statements and viewpoints and to bring them together in a pointed and concise form. Furthermore, it provides not only interesting but stimulating reading, as Malinowski always does." H. E. Hause

Am Anthropol 48:116 Ja '46 950w

"For the intelligent pains taken by the editor no praise would be too high. Her discrimination, restraint, good taste, and unobtrusiveness are equaled only by the extraordinary patience and skill with which she has fitted together the scattered fragments of this jigsaw puzzle. She has also added much of value by her bibliographic and other notes. It is only to be regretted that she limited the Bibliography to the references made in Malinowski's manuscripts." Clyde Kluckhohn

+ Am J Soc 51:571 My '46 2150w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 D 23 '45 140w

Reviewed by H. J. Fleure
Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 10 '46 300w

Reviewed by John Butler
New Statesman & Nation 32:31 Jl 13 '46 700w

MALLESON, LUCY BEATRICE (ANTHONY GILBERT, ANNE MEREDITH, pseudos). Black stage. (Smith & Durrell bk) 215p $2 Barnes, A.S. [8s 6d Collins]

47-298

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Book Week p18 D 8 '46 50w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p18 D 15 '46 140w

"All very orthodox and British, and rather soothing, too."

+ New Yorker 22:148 D 14 '46 90w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 15 '46 60w

"Anthony Gilbert has a special touch which gives his mysteries more than one kind of appeal. You can smile at the way he employs rather outrageous whodunit stuff—for the amusement of the carriage trade, no doubt—or you can take him seriously as many of his most earnest admirers do. Either way you take them, there's entertainment in the inhabitants of Four Acres." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p20 D 15 '46 120w

MALLESON, LUCY BEATRICE (ANTHONY GILBERT, ANNE MEREDITH, pseudos). Death lifts the latch [Eng title: Don't open the door!]. 176p $2 Barnes, A.S. [8s 6d Collins]

46-1796

Detective story.

Booklist 42:300 My 15 '46

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p16 F 10 '46 180w

"Humdinger!"
+ Sat R of Lit 29:40 Mr 2 '46 40w

"Mr. Gilbert has more than a twinkle in his eye as he puts familiar whodunit gambits through the wringer and they come out different. He gives you certain ideas, anywhere from sly comment to all but parody. Better see what you think of this recommended item." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p21 F 3 '46 230w

MALLON, MRS CAROLINE H. Story of the sandman; pictures by Mary Gehr. [26p] $1 Follett

Picture-story book about the Sandman, who came to call on Mickey and Ann and took them to Dream Land, where they visited the castle from which happy dreams come.

"This is a book which opens vistas of imagination and makes bedtime more attractive." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p7 D 30 '45 150w

"Rather pleasing story for children with imagination, but not particularly well done." Marian Webb

+ Library J 71:124 Ja 15 '46 60w

MALLOWAN, MRS AGATHA (MILLER) CHRISTIE. See Christie, A. M.

MALLY, EMMA LOUISE, ed. Treasury of animal stories; with a foreword by [the author]. 624p $3 Citadel

Animals, Legends and stories of 46-21574

"This anthology is primarily fiction and largely prose. It contains the whole of David Garnett's 'Lady into Fox,' Chaucer's 'Nun's Priest's Tale' modernized by the editor as 'Chanticleer and Pertelote,' the climactic chapters of 'Moby Dick,' and stories or poems by writers as different as Edith Wharton, James Thurber, Rudyard Kipling, Poe, Robert Brown-ing, Gorky, Dostoevsky, Turgenev, H. G. Wells, Saki, Homer, Anatole France, T. S. Eliot, Pirandello, Chesterton, Balzac, Chekhov, W. H. Hudson, Oliver Herford and John Collier." Weekly Book Review

"The Mally 'Treasury' is not so rich in out-of-the-way lore as Mr. Sanderson's handsome anthology, nor does it maintain the same exotic charm and flavor. It is, quite unpretentiously, an assemblage of good stories about animals, for the reader whose interest in zoology stops short at the cocker spaniel." Richard Match

+ N Y Times p16 O 13 '46 180w

"Apparently the editor of this anthology is satisfied that any story or poem that mentions a beast is an 'animal story,' quite often the beasts in these tales are merely catalytic agents in human dramas. . . It's a good collection, but one wonders if these categorical anthologies are not getting out of hand. Miss Mally might well have thrown in a chunk of 'Don Quixote' (Rosinante, horse)."

New Yorker 22:101 S 28 '46 100w

Reviewed by A. Foff

San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 20 '46 70w

"It is miscellaneous literature, but almost all of it good."

+ Weekly Book Review p35 O 6 '46 150w

MALONEY, RUSSELL. It's still Maloney; or, Ten years in the big city. 207p $2.50 Dial press

817

46-1424

A collection of articles on a variety of subjects reprinted from the New Yorker. Mr Maloney describes them by saying they are what English instructors know as "the familiar essay. At the New Yorker, because such a piece is produced according to a tradition as intricate and unbending as Javanese temple rites, it is called a 'casual.'"

Reviewed by E. D. Branch

Book Week p10 F 10 '46 330w

Kirkus 14:16 Ja '46 130w

"Like most books of humorous purport, 'It's Still Maloney' is best when taken in small doses. Read through at a single sitting, the wit grows wan, the formula transparent. Singly, all the pieces in 'It's Still Maloney' are amiable, observant, flecked with satire, yet when read in sequence they give evidence of a labored contrivance." Richard Maney

N Y Times p7 Ja 20 '46 750w

"Ten or eleven years have elapsed since Maloney first (and probably last) saw Grant's Tomb. In that decade, he remarks with justified chagrin, 'writers have entered the world of letters, left it, got into fights with Ernest Hemingway, spoken at Book and Author Luncheons, written trilogies, lectured at Bread Loaf, gone to Hollywood, taken to drink, joined Alcoholics Anonymous, or otherwise improved themselves. As far as I can tell, I have managed to stand completely still.' While granting his main premise, a magnanimous critic can point out that even on a treadmill Maloney's footwork is a thing of beauty." Richard Match

+ Weekly Book Review p18 Ja 27 '46 700w

MALLOY, MRS LOIS. Toby's house [il. by the author]. [32p] 50c Grosset Simple picture book for the very young. It shows in color where the insects and animals and Toby all live, and what happened when Toby found a homeless puppy.

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p9 O 29 '46 50w

Horn Bk 22:349 S '46 50w

Kirkus 14:323 Jl 15 '46 70w

"A story little children will enjoy. Bright, colorful pictures." M. A. Webb

+ Library J 71:1055 Ag '46 40w

MALVERN, GLADYS. Gloria, ballet dancer. 184p $2 Messner

46-6362

Career book for junior high school girls. Gloria was unable to continue her dancing lessons because of financial troubles. In a tryout for a corps de ballet she fails because of stage fright and so for a time she gives up dancing. But her sincere love of ballet calls her back to her lessons when she finds a part-time job.

Booklist 43:73 N 1 '46

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 14 '46 200w

"Good balance between proverbial inspiration and perspiration, some failure, lots of hard work, and ultimately the reward of satisfaction and success in a chosen field. Good handling of emotional areas of family, friends and boy-friends. Plays down glamour and intensifies good values of deep personal satisfaction in work well done."

+ Kirkus 14:72 F 1 '46 110w

"Recommended for junior high school girls." Eileen Riols

+ Library J 71:1468 O 15 '46 70w

"An absorbing, realistic story of a natural and appealing girl."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:56 N 9 '46 20w

MAMMEN, EDWARD WILLIAM. Old stock company school of acting; a study of the Boston museum. 89p il $1.50; pa $1 Boston public lib.

792 Acting. Boston museum

This "study of the Boston Museum" (a stock company or theatre organization producing a number of plays each season) is but one part of a larger projected treatise which is expected to include treatment of modern stock companies, little theaters, university schools and professional schools of acting. The Boston Museum company, flourishing during the mid-nineteenth century, was chosen as a representative example of its type.

Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 19 '46 1200w

"Mr. Mammen's work is not only valuable for its research but rewarding in its presentation."

+ Theatre Arts 30:190 Mr '46 240w

MANDEL, WILLIAM. Guide to the Soviet Union. 511p $5 Dial press

947.084 Russia 46-6947

"This book is a factual description of the Soviet Union as it is today. Space is devoted to history to afford an understanding of the background of the current situation. It is not an eyewitness account, but a documented study. However, in choosing his sources and documentation, the author has been guided by the experience of a year's residence in the U.S.S.R. . . His judgement and conclusions are based on six years of professional study of Russia. One purpose of this book is to present data much of which is not yet available in English literature on the subject. The author has used original sources wherever possible. These, of course, are in the Russian language or official translations. But, for purposes of certification, reference is made to the observations and opinions of responsible American observers. For reasons of space, it has been impossible to list all sources. The references are therefore selective rather than inclusive." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 43:98 D 1 '46

Reviewed by W. H. Melish

Churchman 160:19 D 15 '46 150w

"Factual information from many sources, both Russian and English, presented with narrative continuity which makes it valuable as an aid in teaching, a reference source, or as an interesting account—historical and current—of developments in almost every phase of Soviet life. . . Highly recommended for all libraries." Toby Cole

+ Library J 71:1048 Ag '46 140w

"The skeptic and the scholar may wish to go beyond the 'Guide' for interpretation more to their liking. But for the very many who need and want an interesting, uncritical reference book on Soviet society, Mr. Mandel has provided a valuable compendium." R. E. Lauterbach

+ — N Y Times p80 D 8 '46 950w

"At first glance his treatise appears impressive, but as you read along, you become increasingly aware of his almost official tone and of his severely uncritical approach. It is not that Mr. Mandel upholds the present regime on issues like purge trials and censorship; he just breezes past them and goes on to talk of more pleasant things."

New Yorker 22:135 O 19 '46 120w

"Mr. Mandel would have performed a public service had he done nothing but gather together in one volume, and translate into English, the great collection of information he has on Soviet government, industry, agriculture, and life in general. He has performed a further service by setting down his information in a mild, terse prose which avoids the extremes which usually afflict both Soviet partisans and Soviet critics. . . Mr. Mandel concerns himself only with the bright side of Soviet life. Readers will find but the barest mention of prison labor camps, the secret police or the famous 'liquidation of the kulaks as a class' which caused such an uprooting of Soviet life before the war." G. F.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 24 '46 250w

"A wealth of highly interesting information on almost every phase of Russian life. His book is encyclopedic in its scope, but both the arrangement of material and a clear, narrative style make it highly readable over and above its value as a reference work. Moreover it is as completely up to date as any such book could be." F. R. Dulles

+ Weekly Book Review p28 N 3 '46 550w

MANIFOLD, JOHN. Selected verse. 85p $2.50 Day

821

46-17299

A collection of all the poems which the author, an Australian, has thought worthy of keeping during the past twelve years. They are folk ballads, satires and lyrics, some of them written while Mr Manifold was serving in the British army.

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle
Commonweal 44:601 O 4 '46 380w

"Most of these verses have appeared before in current English and American journals, but they are of inconsiderable quality and importance."

— Kirkus 14:236 My 15 '46 80w

"Nothing in this volume is great poetry, and nobody knows it better than Mr. Manifold; but there is nothing in it, either, which is not thought and felt and written cleanly. The lyrics remind you of early MacNeice; but the satires show Mr. Manifold's unpretentious virtues most clearly." Arthur Mizener

+ Nation 163:302 S 14 '46 230w

"Mr. Manifold would have done better to have written fewer poems and destroyed fewer. As it is, his poems gallop along from page to page, much as if he were on his way to another battlefield and did not have time to stop and speculate long on any single poem or to consider the arduous problems which should enter into its composition. . . There are false folk ballads, creaking with artificiality; slight personal songs, satires and the usual conventional sonnets. The ballads, presumably based on Australian character and legend, do not suggest the folk ballad or any other impersonal art." M. Y. N Y Times p23 Ag 18 '46 700w

"The elegy to a friend and countryman killed in Crete is straightforward and moving, and his plain dislike of sham and cruelty and his occasional bright song make his volume a pleasant one" Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 22:123 O 5 '46 80w

Reviewed by W. T. Scott

Poetry 69:43 O '46 700w

"Introduces a vigorous new talent from Australia, mature and lyrical." George Snel

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 11 '46 60w

MANLEY, MARIAN CATHERINE (MRS GERALD H. WINSER). Library service to business; its place in the small city. 72p pa $1.25 A.L.A.

026.65 Business Libraries. Business—Bibliography 46-25027

"This book is intended to show the relation of business library service to library administration as already established and to the community. It is planned both as a working tool and as a simple introduction, showing that 'good business service is simply the extension of general library service' organized to meet fundamental needs." Pref.

Booklist 42:195 F 15 '46

"This concise pamphlet by one of the outstanding business librarians in the profession is a welcome addition to library literature. . . It is good to have an able statement of a program which clearly shows how the library can be useful in the day-to-day operation and in the improvement of the community's economic machinery. For those librarians seeking to put the public library in the mid-stream of tangible community activity and need, Miss Manley's admirably detailed guide is most helpful." W. H. Kaiser

+ Library J 71:751 My 15 '46 550w

MANLEY, R. G. Waveform analysis; a guide to the interpretation of periodic waves, including vibration records. 275p $4 Wiley [21s Chapman]

516.56 Harmonic analysis. Fourier's series [45-7956]

"The author is mainly concerned with exposition of the envelope method of wave analysis, a method developed chiefly by him while he was a member of the staff of the Vibration Department of the de Havilland Aircraft Company, Ltd. However, he has included also discussions of analysis by superposition, mathematical analysis (Fourier series), numerical methods of analysis, and analysis by mechanical and electronic instruments. His first two chapters constitute a compact, systematic treatment of the general characteristics and properties of sine waves in combination, and harmonic series. The final chapter treats Lisajou figures. The book is intended for graduate engineers." (N Y New Tech Bks) Glossary. Index.

Library J 70:892 O 1 '45 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:63 O '45

MANLY, HAROLD PHILLIPS. Drake's heating, cooking and air conditioning handbook; a reference manual and practical instruction book. 706p il $4 Drake, F. J.

697 Heating. Ventilation. Air conditioning 45-9296

"This volume is intended for practical workers engaged in the installation, and maintenance of heating and air conditioning equipment. Computations regarding heating and cooling loads, duct sizes, and heat losses and gains, require only the use of simple arithmetic. The first eight chapters outline the basic principles governing heat and temperature, heat transfer, evaporation and relative humidity. The remainder of the book deals with the installation of steam, hot water, and warm air heating systems; cooling systems; use of air filters and fans; duct design; oil and gas burners; coal stokers; and automatic controls." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 70:1136 D 1 '45 140w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:51 O '45

MANN, GOLO. Secretary of Europe; the life of Friedrich Gentz, enemy of Napoleon; tr. by William H. Woglom. 323p il $4 Yale univ. press

B or 92 Gentz, Friedrich von A46-2406
Biography of Friedrich von Gentz, a German diplomat, friend of Prince Metternich. The book furnishes also a picture of the conflicting political states of Europe during the Napoleonic era. Index.

Reviewed by S. B. Fay
Am Hist R 52:115 O '46 600w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 My 26 '46 400w
Christian Century 63:722 Je 5 '46 210w
Current Hist 11:47 J1 '46 150w

"If Gentz were not so inconsequential and vacillating a personality and if the author could have made him live, the historical background would have taken proper perspective. As it is, it seems muddled and dead, there are familiar names and events, but no living characters nor live events. Heavy going."

— Kirkus 14:89 F 15 '46 140w

"Detailed, scholarly, fascinating biography. . . In rescuing this great political writer from partial oblivion, author has produced a book to be read in the light of the present world crisis—one which will increase our historical understanding of political and social revolution." G. O. Kelley

+ Library J 71:585 Ap 15 '46 140w

"Golo Mann's superbly executed biography of Gentz is recommended reading not only for students of a bygone age but also for students of history-in-the-making." Robert Strausz-Hupe

+ N Y Times p4 My 19 '46 1750w

"The book is written with fine scholarship by the youngest son of Thomas Mann and is interesting in that it illumines a little-known though important figure of the period, but his treatment of the subject is a shade too heavy-handed."

+ — New Yorker 22:99 My 11 '46 80w

"The name of Friedrich Gentz has fallen into oblivion; Dr. Mann has done well to devote what must have been the labor of years to retracing the course of his life. The result is a volume that will fascinate its readers, in addition to all other reasons, because of the striking historical parallel to our own times which its author uncovers." Robert Pick

+ Sat R of Lit 29:40 Je 8 '46 950w

Times [London] Lit Sup p638 D 28 '46 900w

"Friedrich Von Gentz, has been the subject of an excellent scholarly biography by Paul R. Sweet, titled Friedrich Von Gentz, Defender of the Old Order, 1941. Now Golo Mann has devoted a second biography to Gentz. It lacks the scholarly apparatus of the former work, but it is valuable in the more penetrating evaluation of the problems created in Europe by a great revolution and the collapse of traditional, social, and cultural values, by the military attempt at Europe's unification, and by Russia's sudden advance into a leading position of power and influence. . . It is regrettable, however, that no references are given for the many interesting quotations from original sources with which the book abounds."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 2:191 S '46 240w

"It is a well written study addressed to the more intellectual half of the reading public. It is doubtful, however, that many Americans can be persuaded to take much interest in a political commentator who died more than a century ago. The life of Gentz lacked any real drama or dignity; he was an historical source rather than an historical subject, and his writings have little importance save for the student of diplomatic history." Geoffrey Bruun

+ — Weekly Book Review p20 My 5 '46 550w

"Golo Mann has written a book which makes fascinating—and terrifying—reading for men who have lived through the convulsions of the past few years. . . This is a biography of Gentz, but is biography in the best sense. The figure of the eminent publicist is sketched against the changing background of his time." D. C. McKay

+ Yale R n s 36:152 autumn '46 850w

MANNERS, DAVID X. Memory of a scream. 224p $2 Curl

46-20738

Mystery story.

"The tale's action jerks about as wildly as a fish on a hook, breaks out in a wild rash of murders and comes to a confused close with a bevy of murderers." James Sandoe

— Book Week p4 O 6 '46 50w

"The story is wildly improbable and very loosely put together." Isaac Anderson

— N Y Times p32 S 22 '46 170w

"Good debut." Anthony Boucher
+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 S 15 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p42 D 8 '46 140w

MANNING, CLARENCE AUGUSTUS. Soldier of liberty. Casimir Pulaski [with a pref. by Hugh Gibson]. 304p $3 Philosophical lib.

B or 92 Pulaski, Casimir 46-2998

Full length, popular biography of Count Casimir Pulaski, a Polish patriot exiled from his own country who fought under Washington in our Revolution and died at the battle of Savannah in 1779.

"Clarence A. Manning's book is by no means an original study of Pulaski's life and times. It gives, however, an exhaustive account of the hero's deeds and of the political pattern in Poland and America at the end of the 18th century. Pulaski's personality remains rather dim which perhaps, is not the author's fault. For Casimir Pulaski belongs to those rare men whose lives are consumed by action almost to the extent of obliterating their personalities." Mendel Kochanski

Book Week p6 F 10 '46 550w

Reviewed by A. B. Lindsay
Library J 70:1088 N 15 '45 100w

MANNING, GEORGE CHARLES. Basic design of ships. 212p $3.75 Van Nostrand

623.81 Naval architecture 46-472

"A treatise on the fundamental principles and processes involved in the preliminary design of commercial and military vessels for the use

MANNING, G. C.—Continued
of naval architects and ship designers." (Subtitle) The author is Professor of Naval architecture, Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Library J 71:346 Mr 1 '46 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:13 Ja '46

"The book is well written, touches practically all phases of ship design, and contains many of the equations and formulae involved, with tables and graphs for their solution. . . . Although it is not a full compendium of information on ship designing, the book should be a valuable introduction and reference work to the subject."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:158 Je '46 280w

MANTELL, CHARLES LETNAM. Industrial carbon, its elemental, adsorptive, and manufactured forms. 2d ed 472p il $7.50 Van Nostrand

661.126 Carbon 46-6337

"Second edition. Author and contributors furnish all known facts on the raw materials and manufacture of the various forms of carbons. Includes their fabrication into finished products, also properties, varieties, methods of manufacture and use in the chemical and electrical industries and other fields. Chapter on history of manufactured carbon. Bibliographies." (Library J) Index. For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1929.

"Of particular interest to chemical engineers are the new chapters on construction carbon and refractory carbon by Frank J. Vosburgh, and porous carbon by C. E. Ford. New chapters on arc light and illuminating carbons have been contributed by F. T. Bowditch and C. E.
Greider, on electronic tube anodes by H. W.
Abbott, and on brushes by H. W. Abbott and
M. S. May. The inclusion of these contributions in the second edition serves the purpose of rounding out the uses of industrial carbon and presenting in one volume the available information on carbons in many industrial forms." S. Klosky

+ Chem & Eng N 24:2554 S 25 '46 350w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1129 S 1 '46 70w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:348 D '46 240w

MANTLE, BURNS, ed. Best plays of 1945-46; and the Year book of the drama in America.
515p il $3.50 Dodd

808.82 Dramas—Collections

The "ten best" chosen are: State of the Union, by Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse;
Home of the brave, by Arthur Laurents; Deep are the roots, by Arnaud d'Usseau and James Gow; The magnificent Yankee, by Emmet Lavery; Antigone, by Lewis Galantiere and Jean Anouilh; O mistress mine, by Terence
Rattigan; Born yesterday, by Garson Kanin; Dream girl, by Elmer Rice; The rugged path, by R. E. Sherwood; Lute song, by Will Irwin and Sidney Howard. The book also includes a summary of the theater in New York, Chicago, San Francisco, and Southern California, and other theater statistics. Contains a short section on the Equity-Library Theatre and an index.

Booklist 43:129 Ja 1 '47

"This annual volume is a stand-by for libraries all over the country. . . . Highly recommended for all libraries." George Freedley

+ Library J 71:1714 D 1 '46 80w

"Burns Mantle's series of 'Best Plays' has taken a unique place in the American theatre, and probably in the publishing business as well. . . . Librarians and other scholars bite their nails until each autumn brings forth a new book. . . . It probably is not too much to say that by now, which is time for the twenty-ninth volume, the author of the 'Best Plays' has become the voice of the theatre." Lewis Nichols

+ N Y Times p32 D 1 '46 700w

Theatre Arts 31:71 Ja '47 70w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Weekly Book Review p30 D 1 '46 280w

MANTOUX, ETIENNE. Carthaginian peace; or, The economic consequences of Mr Keynes; with an introd. by R. C. K. Ensor and a foreword by Paul Mantoux. 203p $4.50 (12s 6d) Oxford

940.3142 Keynes, John Maynard Keynes, 1st baron—Economic consequences of the peace. Peace treaties, 1919. Reconstruction (1919-1939)—Germany. Economic conditions
A46-5949

In this study a young French economist who was killed in World war II, attempted a systematic examination of J. M. Keynes's Economic Consequences of the Peace. His book
"advances facts and figures to show how disastrously that book misinterpreted the effects of the Versailles Treaty and established an erroneous theory of Allied responsibility for Germany's political and financial collapse and subsequent military recovery. The author produces evidence in support of his contention that German resources were fully adequate to meet the Reparation requirements of the Treaty, if the nation had genuinely desired peace rather than an early resumption of hostilities." (Publisher's note) Index.

"Both as a penetrating interpretation of the tragic events of the recent past and as a thought-provoking guide for the architects of the immediate future, the volume should find a very wide audience. It should interest the academic world no less than intelligent publicists, men of affairs, and statesmen everywhere. No careful reader will fail to detect, beneath the uncommon brilliancy of its style, a product of the most painstaking scientific craftsmanship and of a political sagacity for which many elder men may well envy its youthful author." W. E. Rappard

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:933 O '46 1400w

Reviewed by P. H. Douglas

Book Week p8 N 24 '46 700w

Reviewed by Edgar McInnis

Canadian Forum 26:235 Ja '47 490w

"The industry and learning of the destructive thesis are incontestable; there are very shrewd points and it is easy to convict Keynes of failing to be right every time in his prophecies. There is also much illuminating discussion on the whole history of German reparations. But most Englishmen will be left singularly unmoved; the French thesis on the treatment of Germany appears hardly more attractive in retrospect than it did in 1919, even if Keynes did not foresee Hitler. Alas for the gift of prophecy! Etienne Mantoux himself, brave and generous soul, was pathetically out."

Manchester Guardian p3 Je 19 '46 270w

Reviewed by G. R. Walker

Nation 163:588 N 23 '46 480w

Reviewed by George Soule

New Repub 115:559 O 28 '46 1550w

"This book, the work of a highly gifted young French scholar, who paid with his life for the failure of the Versailles Treaty, commands respect, even where one does not agree with it. . . . With painstaking industry, devastating incisiveness and a wide, almost mellow knowledge, surprising in one so young, Mantoux shows that many of Keynes' facts were wrong, and that therefore his conclusions must be equally so. . . . Mantoux is often right when criticising these. . . . By calling Keynes to account for the breakdown of the world's combined statesmanship Mantoux pays him a supreme compliment. Yet if he were right, his own book would be futile, for one cannot unmake history by proving that another writer has made it. Fortunately, this is not so.
Mantoux's postscript to a period of confusion is worthy of Keynes's foreword to it." M. J.
Bonn

+ New Statesman & Nation 32:30 Jl 13
'46 1450w

"The book is an impressive feat of logic and persuasion, and it is regrettable that the brilliant young Frenchman who wrote it will not have anything more to say; he was killed in Germany in the last days of the war."

+ New Yorker 22:102 S 28 '46 110w

Times [London] Lit Sup p313 Jl 6 '46
4150w

MANUEL, GORDON. 70,000 to 1. See Reynolds, Q. J.

MARBLE, ALICE. Road to Wimbledon. 167p il $2.75 Scribner

B or 92 Tenny

46-5902

Alice Marble, the California girl who fought her way up from poverty to the climax of her career when she won the "all-comers" tennis championship at Wimbledon, England, here tells the story of her life to date.

Booklist 43:15 S '46

"Her story is a brisk, buoyant one with dramatic ups and downs. From its pages Alice Marble emerges as a likable, honest and modest person. Most people would be delighted to root for her. But among her numerous talents there is no marked literary gift. She doesn't strike fire with her life's most exciting moments. Occasional moralizing passages seem to show a mentor's helping hand. And any intimate revelations are restrained to the point of flatness." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p20 J1 28 '46 650w

"I suppose that this is a book, really, for girls who are interested in tennis, though Miss Marble is not thinking of teen-age audiences and writes for the adults. But because it is also the book of an American champion—and Americans are always interested in champions wherever they find them—it is a little more than just a book about a tennis player. . . The overwhelming impression you get from Miss Marble's book is that here's a nice girl—a champion, to be sure, a girl who's been a lot of places and met a lot of people but managed somehow to remain a nice person. It can't be as easy as it sounds. So many don't." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 J1 25 '46 600w

"Miss Marble's story, which is excellently told, is an authentic piece of American life and, in its own way, is as true to life as the autobiographies of such men as the late Senator George W. Norris or William Allen White. If Miss Marble is necessarily cast for the heroine's role, in spite of being a modest narrator, her policeman brother who encouraged her, disciplined her, and evidently helped her in the beginning out of his modest salary before her secretarial work made her self-supporting, stands out as the sturdy hero. It all makes pleasant reading."

+ Springfield Republican p4d Ag 4 '46 300w
Weekly Book Review p16 S 15 '46 450w

MARBLE, M. S. Everybody makes mistakes. 212p $2 Rinehart

46-3128

Detective story.

Kirkus 14:113 Mr 1 '46 60w

New Repub 114:846 Je 10 '46 60w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p30 My 19 '46 100w

MARCELIN, PHILIPPE THOBY. See Thoby-Marcelin, P.

MARCOSSON, ISAAC FREDERICK. Wherever men trade; the romance of the cash register. 263p il $3 Dodd

681.145 Cash registers. Patterson, John Henry. National cash register company 46-9925

"The history of the invention of the cash register, its manufacture, and distribution into every corner of the world. It is the story of an invention that revolutionized business methods, of an industrial enterprise—the National Cash Register Company, and of John H. Patterson, another of that company of entrepreneurs who realized the American dream." (Christian Science Monitor) Index.

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 27 '46 90w

Library J 70:892 O 1 '45 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:27 Ap '46

MARGETSON, ELISABETH BERTRAM. Many are the hearts [Eng title: Prelude to David]. 278p $2.50 Mill [8s 6d Ward, Lock]

46-3764

"The emotional entanglements of Carey North as she first goes through with marriage to Rafe whom she'd loved years before, and who returns from India an aged, broken man. Marrying him out of conscience, she gets her reprieve when Rafe dies—on their honeymoon—and Carey goes to France as a Red Cross volunteer. There she falls in love with a susceptible, deceptive American who sours Carey on all men—even David, a flier, and a nice boy. Brushing him off time and again, Carey finally recovers from her hatred of men and admits her love to David." Kirkus

"The bits about the Welsh village and its inhabitants are nice; the Americans are quite out of focus, and the story is very silly." O. C.

+ Book Week p11 My 26 '46 180w

Kirkus 14:133 Mr 15 '46 130w

"If you like your heroine so beautiful that every man she meets goes into a swoon; if you fancy a plot with much sound and fury but signifying nothing—then this is your book." Anne Richards

N Y Times p26 My 26 '46 150w

MARGOLIES, JOSEPH AARON, ed. Strange and fantastic stories; introd. by Christopher Morley. (Whittlesey house publication) 762p $3.75 McGraw

Short stories—Collections 46-7566

These "fifty tales of terror, horror and fantasy" include stories by Balzac, Stephen Vincent Benét, Algernon Blackwood, Wilkie Collins, Joseph Conrad, Daniel Defoe, Richard Garnett, Nathaniel Hawthorne, M. R. James, de Maupassant, Poe, Saki, Dorothy L. Sayers, Stevenson, H. G. Wells, Edith Wharton, Alexander Woolcott, and others.

Booklist 43:103 D 1 '46

"A princely collection. . . By familiar names, the stories are apt to be less familiar than the usual collection; the obvious works have been deliberately set aside. A very capable piece of editing."

+ Kirkus 14:398 Ag 15 '46 90w

Reviewed by Donald Barr

+ N Y Times p18 N 10 '46 1150w

"If you are interested in demonology or witchcraft, you'll find this collection well above average."

+ New Yorker 22:120 O 26 '46 80w

"The average of quality is high; but far too many of the stories are familiar revenants which haunt all standard anthologies." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p15 D 8 '46 60w

"Creative choice has made of this portly volume a coherent whole: a sympathetic sense of how much the human frame can stand at one time has so arranged the items that they can be best read in the order given, which puts aside chronology. You wouldn't have believed there were so many different ways of making your flesh creep. This book is here to stay." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p12 D 15 '46 450w

MARGOLIN, ARNOLD DAVIDOVICH. From a political diary; Russia, the Ukraine, and America, 1905-1945. 250p $3 Columbia univ. press

327.47 Russia—Foreign relations—U.S. U.S.—Foreign relations—Russia. Ukraine. World politics 46-3317

"These are the memoirs of a Jewish-Ukrainian lawyer who participated in the struggle

MARGOLIN, A. D.—Continued
for liberty in Russia in the first two decades of the present century, and in the last two decades carried on the struggle in the United States, where he continued to maintain interest in foreign affairs." (N Y Times) Partial contents: The Russian revolutions of 1905 and 1917; The Ukrainian liberation movement; Pre-Roosevelt America and pre-Hitler Europe; Early warnings and suggestions; The problem of Russian debts in America; American-Russian rapprochement; Sumner Welles and the Wilsonian principles; Toward winning the peace. Index.

Reviewed by E. C. Helmreich
Am Pol Sci R 40:828 Ag '46 230w

Reviewed by D. F. White
Ann Am Acad 248:281 N '46 550w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 JI 7 '46 70w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook
Current Hist 11:46 JI '46 900w

"Where his book presents a rather unique and valuable contribution to our understanding of recent history and of the Russian problem is in its detailed account of his activities in the Ukrainian liberation movement. . . In the first seventy pages of Mr. Margolin's book which deal with the Ukraine and Russia, and in the appended documents, [the American reader] will find a mine of information not easily accessible elsewhere." Hans Kohn
+ N Y Times p18 JI 21 '46 500w

Reviewed by Alex Inkeles
Pol Sci Q 61:473 S '46 410w
U S Quarterly Bkl 2:220 S '46 190w

"Mr. Margolin has an admirable belief in the force of reasonableness in world affairs, but this quality, if otherwise unsupported, carries little weight in the international scene or in the process of preparing a useful book." S. S. Harcave

Weekly Book Review p15 Ag 4 '46 600w

MARIANO, JOHN HORACE. Shall I get a divorce, and how? 141p $2 Council on marriage relations

392.5 Divorce 46-5074

"Covers the entire situation in all its details, and provides complete information regarding the divorce laws of all the states. It answers such questions as, have I just grounds for a divorce—either morally or legally, what divorces are likely to be declared invalid, what are the residence requirements of the various states, how can an annulment be secured, and so on. Many will be surprised at the long list of possible reasons for annulment on the basis of fraud, which include deceit, or the withholding of any information which would have prevented the marriage, such as the failure to disclose a previous marriage, misrepresentation regarding the existence of certain blood-relations, and the unfulfilled promise to have a religious ceremony." (Churchman) Index.

Reviewed by R. E. Danielson
Atlantic 178:156 O '46 450w

Book Week p26 D 1 '46 100w

Booklist 43:7 S '46

Christian Century 63:919 JI 24 '46 120w

"It is full of sound advice and wholesome warnings against the too hasty breaking of the marriage tie. It is an excellent book to put into the hands of those who are experiencing doubts regarding the success of their marriage, and would be an invaluable aid to the pastor who advises them." W. L. Caswell
+ Churchman 160:21 Ag '46 300w

"The book is intended for persons who are dissatisfied with their marriage but offers some usefulness as a reference. Tables and charts at the end supply information regarding variations in grounds for divorce or annulment in the states and list state marriage requirements, residence requirements, jurisdictional requirements for divorce, and the waiting time between interlocutory and final decrees." L. A. Lynde

+ J Home Econ 38:605 N '46 160w

Reviewed by E. A. Lissfelt
Social Studies 37:378 D '46 300w

"While this is a timely book, the author's statements must be taken with a good grain of salt. Many pertinent questions have been left unanswered." Marie Munk
Survey 82:305 N '46 440w

MARIANO, JOHN HORACE. Veteran and his marriage. 303p $2.75 Council on marriage relations, inc, 110 E. 42d st, N.Y. 17

392.5 Marriage. Divorce 46-10

"Neuroses have their place in determining the future happiness of young people who married hastily during the war excitement. [This book] discusses these and other phases of the former serviceman's life for the general reader. It stresses the need of patience and thoughtfulness in helping him make adjustment, because he is not relieved of responsibility even if mis-mated. Here again steady employment for the man is excellent insurance. The author is of the opinion that if wives continue to work as they did in the war emergency, they will hinder normal marriage relations; that children will be neglected, husbands will become irritable, and 'a loss of femininity' will result." (Survey G) Appended is a chart of the divorce laws of the 48 states. Index.

"A superficial, diffuse, disconnected, and verbose book." R. S. Cavan

— Am Soc R 11:778 D '46 60w

Booklist 42:242 Ap 1 '46

Christian Century 63:723 Je 5 '46 20w

Reviewed by L. A. Lynde
J Home Econ 38:605 N '46 70w

Reviewed by Herbert Sonthoff
Social Studies 37:332 N '46 600w

"Any married couple can find a wealth of wise, if occasionally platitudinous, counsel in these pages, but most of it is aimed at those whose marriages are 'on the rocks.'" D. B. B.

+ Spring'd Republican p6 F 22 '46 300w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
Survey G 35:24 Ja '46 160w

MARIGNY, MARIE ALFRED FOUQUEREAUX DE. See De Marigny, M. A. F.

MARK, HERMAN FRANZ, ed. S. Fraemer, E. O. Scientific progress in the field of rubber and synthetic elastomers

MARKUS, JOHN, ed. See Electronics (periodical). Electronics for engineers

MARLETT, MRS MELBA. Tomorrow will be Monday. 311p $2.50 Doubleday 46-5414

Story of three sisters who are distributed among relatives when their mother dies, and grow up with varying ideals and aims, partly conditioned by their own natures, partly by environment. Eleanor, the oldest, is brought up to be a perfect lady, Martha, the brainy, solid type makes a good career for herself and finally comes into a happy marriage; and Penelope, the prettiest, has a number of marital adventures before she finally gets her deserts.

"Likeable, lifelike entertainment for women who want stories about identifiable characters."

+ Kirkus 14:204 My 1 '46 170w

"A good, light story. Fine characterization. Recommended." D. R. Homer

+ Library J 71:978 JI '46 70w

"A full, satisfying story, written out of sound knowledge of human behavior and middle-class life in a small town." Andrea Parke
+ N Y Times p8 Ag 25 '46 110w

"There are family chronicles in which the determinant force is cohesion, and there are family chronicles in which the dominant factor is dispersion. 'Tomorrow Will Be Monday' is one of the latter—engagingly discursive, rich in detail, and entertaining as a study of varied states of matrimony. It is written somewhat as though an acquaintance of Melba Marlett might have met her after a lapse of many years and in the course of their reminiscences the friend had said to the novelist: 'By the way, what happened to the King girls after their mother's death?' Out of a complete store of remembered incident and her own shrewd analysis Miss Marlett gives the answer." George Conrad

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Jl 21 '46 320w
Wis Lib Bul 42:151 N '46

MARQUAND, JOHN PHILLIPS. B. F.'s daughter. 439p $2.75 Little 46-7089

Character study of the beautiful daughter of a very wealthy industrialist, known to his friends as B. F. All her early life was dominated by B. F., so when Polly married a young professor, she started running his life for him. That time it did not work. The war gave her husband an excuse to make a getaway, and Polly, failing to capture the man she really wanted, was adrift.

"Mr. Marquand's satire, whether of New Dealers, of the Pentagon, or of the brass hats in the Pacific, as his devastating take-off of the Intellectual, is fresh, timely, and engrossing. The three themes which give his story its force—the father-daughter relationship, American acquisitiveness, and the lover-come-back-to-me—are much more germane to American life than, shall we say, homosexuality." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 178:160 D '46 330w

"The thousand bits of detail are both canny and rangy—the waxed white moustache of the old-school host in Washington, the Monel-metal sink in the little ($30,000) hideaway in Connecticut, the chlorine in the whisky and water on Guam. All that Marquand has learned has been put to work in this novel—and that is a great, great deal." S. K. Workman

+ Book Week p1 N 3 '46 1550w

Booklist 43:70 N 1 '46

"This time, Mr. Marquand has proved that he can give us women as skillfully as men. Polly Brett will take her place beside George Apley and Mr. H. M. Pulham. She is every bit as convincing. And it shall be confessed that the book is pleasurable reading; for its author is an able novelist, a brilliant master dialogue." Margaret Williamson

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 18 '46 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '46

"With the appearance of 'B. F.'s Daughter,' J. P. Marquand has reached a status of a major American writer. . . Our current literature offers men of greater genius than J. P. Marquand, but none with an acuter sense of the need for a civilized ethos." F. X. Connolly

+ Commonweal 45:330 Ja 10 '47 900w

Current Hist 11:512 D '46 70w

"A sure best seller and best renter, but a very mediocre book."

— Kirkus 14:462 S 15 '46 250w

"Another revealing study of contemporary life written with the author's discernment and mastery in portraying shades of characterization. . . For all libraries." M. C. Manley

+ Library J 71:1542 N 1 '46 100w

"For the first time one has an awareness of Mr. Marquand's own sharp sense of the divisions among the social-intellectual classes, and of himself as a spokesman for the embattled majority. There is a new note of defensiveness, not only in Mr. Marquand's satire of the long-hairs, but also in the main argument of his story. . . As a matter of fact, even the technical telling of Mr. Marquand's story betrays an uncertainty about his own position. The novel skips around in time in a fashion that is both confusing and useless. And there are pages and pages of empty 'bright' talk which are disturbingly reminiscent of that other uneasy champion of unhappy millionaires, Philip Barry." Diana Trilling

Nation 163:690 N 23 '46 1000w

New Repub 115:701 N 25 '46 120w

"'B. F.'s Daughter,' is another major Marquand product. To say that it is up to snuff is merely to endorse the inevitable rush to the bookstore. To say that it is always entertaining (and sometimes brilliant) is only to reaffirm the virtues of a craftsmanship that has proved itself abundantly. To say that it goes no deeper than its own multi-colored surface—and produces its effects within a strictly limited frame—is only to repeat that competence is praised above rubies in the fiction field today." James MacBride

+ — N Y Times p7 N 3 '46 950w

"'B. F.'s Daughter' is a readable book. Most all of Mr. Marquand's novels are readable. Thanks, however, to the school of reviewers, including jacket writers, which holds that they are also 'significant,' 'provocative,' and 'bitter' satires on a mentally decadent society," you sometimes feel it necessary to mention that Mr. Marquand's talent in his novels is exactly the same one he applied in his earlier, potboiling, highly successful Saturday Evening Post stories about Mr. Moto, the Japanese solver of crimes. That is, it is a talent for finding, and using over and over again, a formula that will entertain a public accustomed to formulas." John Lardner

+ — New Yorker 22:117 N 9 '46 1100w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 18 '46 900w

"'B. F.'s Daughter' is a good Marquand, a sound wine in a bad year and recommended to all those who like their satire to have bouquet. The ones who insist that a sword be used against our time will, I suppose, complain that, while Mr. Marquand continues to mold wax figures which are living likenesses, he is still content only to indicate with his pen the places where the lethal pins are to be driven." John Woodburn

+ Sat R of Lit 29:13 N 2 '46 1000w

Time 48:112 N 11 '46 600w

"The novel is written with the narrative skill that assures attention to the end. At the same time, however, it leaves the reader uneasy and unsatisfied in its resolution, not because Polly is left rudderless but because of the explanation therefor. In her final scene with Bob Tasmir Polly tells him that she could have honored and obeyed him and to be able to do that was what she really wanted out of life. It almost seems as if Mr. Marquand were making a pronouncement that breeding is the Gibraltar of emotional security." Rose Feld

Weekly Book Review p4 N 10 '46 1200w

Wis Lib Bul 42:151 N '46

"Formerly Mr. Marquand specialized in the frustrated. In B. F.'s Daughter the atmosphere is less chilly and sarcastic, more warm and compassionate. Yet enough of the old acidulous wit remains to keep Mr. Marquand's franchise." Orville Prescott

+ Yale R n s 36:380 winter '47 850w

MARQUIS, DON. Best of Don Marquis; with an introd. by Christopher Morley and with ill. by George Herriman. 670p $3 Doubleday

818

"[Includes] archy the cockroach and his raffish girl friend, mehitabel the cat; Clem Hawley the Old Soak; the Cave Man and his battered lady love; Hermione and her Little Group of Serious Thinkers; Noah an' Jonah an' Cap'n John Smith and most of the rest of the delightful characters who wandered in and out of Don Marquis' columns in the second and third decades of this century. Some of his Swiftian speculations on The Almost Perfect State are in the anthology, too, with twenty of his best short stories, some of his best serious poetry and a good deal of his light verse, including eight of the Sonnets to a Red-Haired Lady." N Y Times

"Christopher Morley, one of Don Marquis's most intimate friends, writes an excellent preface, comparing him to Mark Twain. In both writers, he says, you will find a rich vein of anger and disgust turned on the genteel and cruel hypocrites with childlike fury; the comedian's instinct to turn suddenly from the beautiful to the grotesque; a kindly and respectful charity for the underdog. The book would be greatly improved by the omission of some of Don Marquis's blasphemous short stories."

MARQUIS, DON—Continued

+ — Cath World 164:286 D '46 200w
 Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '46

"One realizes anew the versatility and the brilliance of Don Marquis, a modern Mark Twain. He is a better story teller than one realizes from scattered casual reading; and perhaps a less good poet. But anyhow, he is fun to read."

+ Kirkus 14:280 Je 15 '46 100w

Reviewed by Richard Watts
 New Repub 115:487 O 14 '46 550w

"Here is the pleasantest parade you would be likely to encounter in a month of Sundays. . . It is a collection that will give seasoned Marquis readers the pleasure of a reunion with a beloved old friend, and it will give the joy of discovery to those who will be reading him here for the first time. I recall the joy that was mine when I found Don Marquis and The Sun Dial. The misplaced stout Cortez had nothing on me." Frank Sullivan

+ N Y Times p1 S 1 '46 1700w

"Altogether this is what a book of its kind should be, no mere nibble around the author's edges, but a good hearty meal, with a variety of courses in which almost everyone can find something for him. And, to say it once more, Mr. Morley's introduction is as good an example of its kind as you'll find anywhere."

J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 S 6 '46 800w

Reviewed by Edward Hope

+ Weekly Book Review p8 D 22 '46 1050w

MARQUISS, WALTER. Brutus was an honorable man. 338p $3 Scribner

46-3408

Story of the development of a middlewest community from 1899, when it was little more than a hamlet, to 1941 when it had become one of America's important automotive centers. An eccentric leaves $10,000 as a memorial to the person who has done the most good for the community. In a series of flashbacks, while the committee is searching out this person, we get a picture of Great Bend life from horse and buggy days to December 6, 1941.

Reviewed by J. T. Flanagan

Book Week p4 Ap 21 '46 450w

Booklist 42:299 My 15 '46

"Mr. Marquiss, a familiar name in popular magazines, writes out of long experience as a journalist. Only a journalist, perhaps, could have written the book, which is much like, one supposes, the novels Lincoln Steffens might have written. It belongs in the tradition of Sinclair Lewis or of Frank Norris; it invites comparison with 'The Rise of Silas Lapham' (in theme, not subtlety) and with 'The Man Who Corrupted Hadleyburg.' The irony is perhaps ponderous at times; the style, though unobtrusively competent, is not distinguished. The subject, of course, and the attitude are anything but new. For all that, it is an extremely enjoyable and no doubt a distressingly truthful novel." D. S.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 Ap 22 '46 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '46

"An adroitly turned tale which reveals the seamy side of motives behind the lustrous exteriors of the good deeds of two worthy citizens of a mid-western town in the years between 1899 to 1941. The real hero of the story is a shadowy figure that serves as deus ex machina by applying a judicious bit of blackmail at psychological moments when the town's leading citizens are plotting some bit of self-interest. . . One could wish for slightly sharper focus on the main characters, which emerge as lay figures compared to some of the lesser lights. One could wish the pattern did not repeat itself so aptly. But, all in all, it's good reading and revealing."

+ Kirkus 14:45 F 1 '46 210w

"This first novel is a solid, well-planned study of a Midwestern city through four decades. There is a cantankerous honesty in its bare writing and an authentic ring to its unadorned characters. If they are stereotyped, it is because citizens of Great Bend are practical rather than imaginative, obvious rather than subtle. . . As a reporter of a section of the country [Mr Marquiss] knows well, he has turned out a faithful and interesting novel." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 14 '46 270w

"His book has a strong and fairly effective social conscience. Yet for all the mistakes which he ironically underlines and deplores, for all the good intentions of his book, he is, as a novelist, essentially unsuccessful. His general failure may, I think, be attributed to a failure in characterization, for the numerous individuals who move through Mr. Marquiss's book are not individuals at all, but mere symbols, instruments of his theses, and hardly more than that. Apparently quite unable to vitalize them through action and dialogue, he is forced time and time again to build them up through straight description; this is probably the weakest literary device employed in building up characters, and in Mr. Marquiss's case it proves fatal." Nancy Groberg

— + Sat R of Lit 24:17 Ap 20 '46 800w

"Not since the time when Elmer Davis was writing his witty and perceptive novels has so agreeable a talent come directly out of the city room. . . Mr. Marquiss's literary assets are those of a well trained journalist. He is shrewd and knowledgeable in all matters of financial plotting and political graft; he makes neat dramatic episodes of these complex patterns. His style is idiomatic and highly readable. Better as characters than his dehumanized sinners and his slightly aloof saint, are the companionable newspaper man, Major Whipple, and his wise crony, Mix Nelson." James Gray

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 14 '46 750w

MARSH, IRVING T., and EHRE, EDWARD, eds. Best sports stories of 1945. 368p il $3 Dutton

796 Sports

(45-35124)

This book contains nearly half-a-hundred sports stories, 16 sports pictures, and a summary of the year's sports events and records.

"As an addition to the sports library this volume is a must. And a better gift for the spectator fan will be very difficult, indeed, to find." H. F. R.

+ Book Week p15 My 26 '46 330w

"Every sports' fan will probably enjoy most the story of his favorite sport but will relish every story no matter whether he knows the sport or not—yes, even to fishing for whale."

+ Kirkus 14:238 My 15 '46 190w

"Readers of the sports pages, to whom hyperbole and superlative are reportorial musts, will get their share of them in this book. Virtually every game in its pages is the 'most thrilling,' every unexpected result 'rocks the very foundations of,' etc. The assorted authors are more Homeric than humorous." J. C. N.

N Y Times p22 Ag 11 '46 230w

Reviewed by John McNulty

Weekly Book Review p14 Je 16 '46 600w

Wis Lib Bul 42:128 O '46

MARSHALL, BRUCE. Yellow tapers for Paris. 294p $2.50 Houghton

46-25269

Tale of Paris on the eve of World war II, ending with the exodus from the city in June, 1940. The events are described as they affected a bookkeeper, his daughter, and their friends, thus viewing the war as it seemed to the "little" man.

"The story of Bigou and his pals is accompanied by a running commentary on political and economic acrobatics with sidelights on the jejune, froufrou culture of Tout Paris. This sharpens the ironic flavor of the narrative but the book is often dreary and somewhat dated (it was first published in England in 1943) and will probably disappoint readers who look for the salty humor and rich characterization which distinguished Marshall's other novels—'Father Malachy's Miracle' and 'The World, the Flesh and Father Smith.'" Jex Martin

Book Week p3 S 1 '46 650w

Booklist 43:36 O 1 '46

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley

Cath World 164:84 O '46 550w

Reviewed by L. E. Cannon

Christian Century 63:1344 N 6 '46 250w

"A thrilling and provocative indictment of a dying society—and a novel that indicates various paths that nations may take." W. P. Sears

Churchman 160:17 O 1 '46 240w

Reviewed by C. G. Paulding

Commonweal 44:576 S 27 '46 700w

"What a disappointment after The World, The Flesh and Father Smith and the long ago Father Malachy's Miracle. . . The atmosphere and mood are successfully captured; but there is lack of focus on plot or character, lack of the humanity that has made his other books memorable."

— Kirkus 14:352 Ag 1 '46 170w

"Subject outweighs the story interest. It is too French and too sombre to please the general reader." H. A. Wooster

Library J 71:1060 Ag '46 70w

"There is so much brightness and charm, so much real freshness and excitement that reading it one is frequently diverted by the phrasing from the fundamental seriousness of the theme. For out of its center of little, close-up experiences this book radiates its implications over a whole wide range of human activity." Richard Sullivan

+ N Y Times p5 S 1 '46 1100w

"Out of the confusion, religious compulsions, self-interest, loyalty, cynicism, and good humor of these unimportant Frenchmen, Mr. Marshall makes a warm and lovely novel, written with a unique combination of wit and intelligent Catholic piety."

+ New Yorker 22:98 S 7 '46 120w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 20 '46 400w

"This tale moves on two planes, shifting constantly between a stinging commentary on public irresponsibility and the harsh, yet almost lyrical narrative of personal events. Yet the alternation of the general with the particular does not jar the book's rhythm, for one flows into the other to complete it. But the language of the book, its uncouth words either invented or unhappily dug up by the author, does jar on the reader's ear. . . 'Yellow Tapers for Paris,' is, however, a direct, courageous book." Virginia Peterson

+ Weekly Book Review p3 S 1 '46 850w

Wis Lib Bul 42:152 N '46

MARSHALL, DAVID. Grand Central. (Whittlesey house publication) 280p il $3.50 McGraw 625.18 Grand Central terminal, New York 47-17

The story of the Grand Central terminal: its history; its organization; and the people who make it the efficient, smoothly running institution that it is. There are many human interest stories of men and women employed there at the present. Index.

Booklist 43:164 Ja 15 '47

"The romantic appeal of New York's Grand Central Station (and I know it should be Terminal) is a plain fact. . . But I suspect that there is a deeper reason, a deeper esthetic reason, and Mr. Marshall has caught it and conveyed it surprisingly well. Grand Central is a magnificent working plan. And any nearly perfect plan somehow subtly wins the affections of those who use it without their being quite aware of how their affections have been enlisted. . . 'Grand Central' should please almost any human being, young or old, who gives a hang about railroads or the world's most famous depot." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 45:284 D 27 '46 450w

"Stylistically annoying at times, but nonetheless fascinating material of more than local appeal."

+ Kirkus 14:566 N 1 '46 120w

Reviewed by Ruth Teiser

San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 19 '46 50w

"New York's giant-windowed public square has been worthily compressed into prose. The accompanying photographs are well chosen, especially the one taken at 4 o'clock in the morning on the lower level—a swept and glistening vista of lighted silence and serenity—empty of mankind, without even the stub of a ticket or the stub of a cigarette to testify that humanity has been here and gone home." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p13 D 22 '46 750w

MARSHALL, HARRY IGNATIUS. Flashes along the Burma road; with an introd. by E. Stanley Jones. 123p $2.50 Island workshop
266 Missions—Burma 46-1479

Stories about the hill people in the area opened up by the Burma road. The author spent many years among the natives of Burma as a Christian missionary.

Christian Century 63:433 Ap 3 '46 80w

"Missionaries like Dr Marshall do great good when they teach more than passive reliance on the grace of God, but in 'Flashes Along the Burma Road' the theme and style are both rather threadbare." Anne Reinstein

Spring'd Republican p6 Ap 17 '46 280w

MARSHALL, JAMES LESLIE. Santa Fe; the railroad that built an empire. 465p il maps $3.75 Random house

385 Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad 46-498

A long detailed history of the Santa Fe railroad, written by a West Coast newspaper man. An appendix gives a year by year chronology. Maps. Index.

"This book is the first attempt to present a complete story of the longest and one of the most important railway systems in the United States. A journalist and railway fan, Mr. Marshall knows what makes a good story and how to tell it. Inevitably, much has been omitted from this single volume because of limitations of space, but all the subjects covered are important." R. C. Overton

+ Am Hist R 51:732 Jl '46 480w

"How the Santa Fe came to be built is a good enough tale, and Marshall, who has plainly had access to all the company records he wanted, presents the best of it in interesting fashion." R. E. M. Whitaker

+ Book Week p10 Ja 13 '46 700w

Booklist 42:195 F 15 '46

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds

Christian Science Monitor p14 F 9 '46 480w

"Excellent railroad material which has glamor, color and breathless pace."

+ Kirkus 13:356 Ag 15 '46 210w

"Will be especially popular with men and those readers who want 'westerns.' Recommended also for its Americana value." E. H. Crowell

+ Library J 70:820 S 15 '45 70w

"Mr. Marshall has given us a readable story of how two streaks of rust on the Kansas prairie became a great railroad system. It is told in terms of the common denominator of the men and women, from president to track-walker and Harvey girl, who made it great. The dry statistics—and there are a few of them—are mercifully interred in an appendix where those who want such things can find them." Hoffman Birney

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 13 '46 700w

MARSHALL, J. L.—Continued

"Despite some special pleading, this is an interesting chronicle of the planning, plotting, financial and political maneuvering, and forthright Wild West adventuring that produced a railway system which has done a lot better by its public than most utilities."

+ New Yorker 21:79 F 2 '46 100w

"A real opportunity for a classic book has not been thrown away. The book reads well."

Edward Hungerford

+ Sat R of Lit 29:15 F 9 '46 950w

Spring'd Republican p4d Ag 4 '46 450w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:47 Mr '46 180w

"A good book it is—fascinating enough to the general reader and a must for all railroad fans, of which there seem to be a great many. Mr. Marshall obviously has a great affection for railroading, and for the Santa Fe in particular, and the result is pleasant from first to last." Stanley Walker

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ja 6 '46 1100w

MARSHALL, JOYCE. Presently tomorrow.
309p $2.50 Little

46-18352

First novel by a young Canadian author. It is a psychological study of adolescents—four young girls in a Quebec school, and a young Anglican priest. The Reverend Craig Everett had been completely dominated by his mother, even to the point of being forced into the ministry. When he went to the Quebec school to conduct a retreat his experiences released him from his ill-chosen work and from his prolonged adolescence into maturity.

Reviewed by Martha Read

Book Week p24 N 24 '46 370w

Reviewed by Northrop Frye

Canadian Forum 26:164 O '46 400w

"A first novel of considerable charm and sensitivity."

+ Kirkus 14:229 My 15 '46 170w

"Some parts are well written and exhibit an insight into human nature, but the book suffers from a lack of proper focus and an approach which is too objective. The result is superficial and unconvincing. Iconoclastic and will shock the orthodox and conventional. First novel which shows promise, but not recommended for general purchase." E. H. Kennedy

+ Library J 71:978 J1 '46 70w

Reviewed by E. S. Holsaert

N Y Times p10 J1 21 '46 420w

"Miss Marshall is a sensitive and talented young writer, and there is much that is valid and perceptive in her picture of troubled youth. But there is much, as well, that seems overdone and too intense—precocious rather than mature." S. H. Hay

Sat R of Lit 29:14 Ag 10 '46 550w

"An unusually interesting, well constructed first novel." P. H. Bickerton

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Ag 11 '46 240w

"Though Miss Marshall is a young Canadian writer without previous book publication, she handles this difficult story with the dexterity and control of an experienced novelist. She permits no sloppiness in plot development; every fact she introduces is in some way relevant to Craig's final decisions. And her style is quiet and sensitive, permeated with feeling. It will be interesting to watch the development of her very real talent." Stephen Stepanchev

+ Weekly Book Review p6 J1 21 '46 400w

MARSHALL, MRS KATHERINE (TUPPER). Together; annals of an army wife. 292p il $3.50 Tupper and Love

B or 92 Marshall, George Catlett 46-7792

"Recollections of the wife of General Marshall from their marriage in 1930 to the time of his departure as Special Ambassadorial Envoy to China. An intimate picture of the woman's side of U.S. Army life; of social functions at Army posts and of official Washington during the war; of housekeeping problems and of war work." Library J

Booklist 43:169 F 1 '47

"A remarkable book, remarkable in its form, its content and its attitude. It is particularly remarkable in its sincerity and in the beauty of character portrayal that Katherine Tupper Marshall has achieved. She presents a lively picture of two outstanding personalities, but this book is not, as some people have supposed, 'a life of General Marshall.' Actually, it is a careful account, written by a sensitive and highly intelligent woman who has observed a brilliant man grow in national stature and personal responsibilities from commandant of C. C. C. camps to General of the Army. Her narrative is as thrilling as it is accurate." Merrill Moore

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ja 16 '47 550w

Reviewed by John Broderick

Commonweal 45:307 Ja 3 '47 750w

Reviewed by B. B. Libaire

Library J 71:1540 N 1 '46 140w

"While nothing new or startling is disclosed in the present volume, it is of interest to the student as well as to the general reader. Sixteen pages of photographs add to the value of the record." Anne Peacock

+ N Y Times p18 N 24 '46 340w

"The result is a friendly, chatty, modest collection of data and trivia that rarely goes beyond the bounds of domesticity."

Time 48:110 N 25 '46 600w

"Were General Marshall ever himself to enter the field of politics, here is a documentary source book for those who want to know what manner of man he was, as father and husband, and ordinary citizen. His Army wife has no taste for the hurly-burly of civilian and Congressional inquiries. She is herself a good sport, a graceful society woman and also a home-maker. She writes with that special letter-writing gift that service wives do well to acquire in their lives so full of partings and jauntings from pillars to posts. Both those who want a bigger army, and those who want better diplomats and general disarmament can find something in this unpretentious book to study." Ernestine Evans.

+ Weekly Book Review p42 D 1 '46 1800w

MARSHALL, RAYMOND, pseud. See Raymond, R.

MARSHALL, MRS ROSAMOND VAN DER ZEE. Duchess Hotspur. 301p $2.75 Prentice-Hall

46-2668

Romance of an eighteenth century duchess and a struggling young journalist. Dr Johnson, David Garrick and Sir Joshua Reynolds are among the characters.

Reviewed by Jex Martin

Book Week p4 Ap 28 '46 270w

"Full decor and display of period and passion make this strictly cheesecake."

Kirkus 14:80 F 15 '46 180w

"A modern flavor to the dialogue eliminates this from authentic historical fiction, but Miss Marshall can always tell a good story. Percy Hotspur should hold her own against the author's best-selling Klitty. Recommended for recreational collections." Barbara Overton

+ Library J 71:587 Ap 15 '46 70w

"Not much above a slick-paper 'one-shot' in length. . . 'Duchess Hotspur' is rightly named, amusingly presented, and properly paced by a hand-picked supporting cast that fits its costuming." James MacBride

N Y Times p16 Ap 28 '46 700w

Spring'd Republican p4d My 12 '46 420w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p24 Ap 28 '46 230w

MARSHALL, MRS ROSAMOND VAN DER ZEE. Treasure of Shafto; II. by John Wonssetler. 217p $2.25 Messner 46-4958

Eighteenth century Germany and Cornwall is the scene of this romantic story for older boys and girls. Robert Shafto, sent to a German military academy by his uncle and guardian, receives word that his presence is needed in Cornwall. After his return to England danger dogs his footsteps, until the death of his villainous uncle.

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 29 '46
70w

+ Kirkus 14:276 Je 15 '46 90w

"A disappointment after None But the Brave." F. W. Turpin
Library J 71:984 J1 '46 70w

"What this author did in 'None but the Brave,' bringing to life in an exciting way the story of the Dutch against the Spaniards, she has done in this tale of eighteenth-century England and Germany. It is a story alive and exciting, with good characterization and a touch of romance." Phyllis Fenner

+ N Y Times p16 J1 21 '46 160w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p6 Je 30 '46 230w

MARSHALL, SAMUEL LYMAN ATWOOD, and others. Bastogne; the story of the first eight days in which the 101st airborne division was closed within the ring of German forces. 261p il maps $3 Infantry Journal 940,542 Ardennes, Battle of the, 1944-1945.

U.S. Army. 101st airborne division 46-3309

Describes how many different units—armored, artillery and infantry—banded together to form a team for the defense of Bastogne, in some of the darkest days of World war II.

Foreign Affairs 25:340 Ja '47 50w

Kirkus 14:172 Ap 1 '46 90w

"It is based on interviews with the survivors made after the ring around the town had been broken, though the battle for Bastogne was still going on in the bitter winter weather. It is pretty technical in spots, but it's worth the effort because it tells without varnish or heroics precisely what went on." Charles Poore

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 21 '46 700w

"Honest, factual reporting, a rare achievement in explaining and narrating a military feat that Americans will want to understand more than any other engagement of the war." Donald Armstrong

+ Sat R of Lit 29:23 My 11 '46 1200w

U S Quarterly Bk1 2:220 S '46 200w

"Colonel Marshall's book should be excellent source material for historians, but it is rough going for the general reader." Spencer Klaw

+ Weekly Book Review p26 Ap 14 '46
750w

MARTENS, DAVID. The abrupt self. 271p $2.50 Harper 46-7536

After what purports to be an introduction by an old friend, the book is composed of a collection of intimate notes and heart searchings, written by a college professor while spending some time on an island off the New England coast. There is also a postscript, written by the same friend after John Mathew's death.

Reviewed by Dorothy Sparks

Book Week p16 D 8 '46 550w

Current Hist 12:60 Ja '47 50w

"Not the stuff of which popular reading is made, but rather for those to whom word use, word manipulation, and introspective knowledge-seeking has appeal."

Kirkus 14:357 Ag 1 '46 170w

"Sure fire for your readers of Alexander Smith's Dreamthorp, Thoreau and Logan Pearsall Smith's Trivia. Fine stuff." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 71:1330 O 1 '46 140w

"The sentimental, apologetic passages of self-revelation are interspersed with fresh, detailed descriptions and wild sumac, elderberries, sand-dune plums and fishermen's shacks—and these always come as a pleasant relief." Isa Kapp

+ N Y Times p20 O 20 '46 550w

"Not really a novel at all, but a sort of sophomoric version of Amiel's Journal Intime."

New Yorker 22:114 O 12 '46 80w

MARTIN, A. E. Death in the limelight. 284p $2 Simon & Schuster 46-1348

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p19 F 17 '46 140w.

Booklist 42:283 My 1 '46

Kirkus 13:535 D 1 '45 80w

"Mr. Martin has what it takes to construct a good mystery plot and to make a set of odd characters completely convincing." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 3 '46 140w

"A great improvement over 'The Outsiders,' the previous mystery by this author, who now, it would seem, is almost ready to take his place beside his colleague from Down Under, Ngaio Marsh."

+ New Yorker 22:91 F 23 '46 80w

"Excellent."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:42 F 23 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p26 Mr 3 '46 270w

MARTIN, DAHRIS BUTTERWORTH (MRS HARRY SHOKLER). Adventure in Tunisia; the fair at Kairwan; II. by Flora Nash DeMuth. 162p $2.25 Messner 46-8272

Story of a mischievous Arabian boy, Allee, who had a gift for painting, but whose father had other plans for him. Thru the medium of a small cousin who wove a prize rug from Allee's design, his talent was finally recognized. For boys and girls of ten and over.

Booklist 43:158 Ja 15 '47

Kirkus 14:386 Ag 15 '46 90w

"Recommended for ages 10-14." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 74:84 Ja 1 '47 80w

"Written in a lively and informal style Allee, aside from differences in custom and costume, is very much like American boys, and his cousin Breeka is as rebellious and spirited as any American girl. The illustrations are a true part of the book and are full of the authentic detail and background of Tunisia." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times p11 D 29 '46 230w

"Everything goes merrily throughout the story, crammed with local customs, festivals and temperament. Dahrish Martin, an American, lived in Kairwan long enough to be accepted as part of the Arab community, and has shown in writing for adults a sensitive, sympathetic understanding of place and people. The pictures have the same merriment and local color; the artist also knows Kairwan at first hand." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 D 15 '46 400w

MARTIN, DAVID. Ally betrayed; the uncensored story of Tito and Mihailovich; foreword by Rebecca West. 372p $3.50 Prentice-Hall 940.53497 World war, 1939-1945—Yugoslavia. Mihailović, Draža.

An ardent admirer of Mihailovich, the author tells the story of Yugoslavia's part in World war II, of the struggle between its two leaders, and of Mihailovich's betrayal, trial and death. Bibliography. Index.

MARTIN, DAVID—Continued

Reviewed by Marie Seton

Book Week p2 N 17 '46 380w

"A weakness of this useful, fair-spirited, and comprehensive book is its tendency to excuse Mihailovich and explain away his collaboration with the Germans and Nedich." R. H. M. Christian Science Monitor p14 D 28 '46 380w

"This incredibly complicated bit of history is remarkably and convincingly penetrated by David Martin, a Canadian journalist, who has clearly done an enormous amount of digging for facts and documentation. Inherently, it's a fascinating story and it's well told. There are spots which are not easy going, but it's worth hanging on." W. J. Casey

Commonweal 45:305 Ja 3 '47 1250w

"The book is solid and difficult reading, impassioned advocacy of the cause of a martyred leader."

Kirkus 14:405 Ag 15 '46 260w

Reviewed by A. B. Lindsay

Library J 71:1328 O 1 '46 140w

"Unfortunately the author did not confine himself to vindicating Mihailovich's reputation. His book is so violent in its condemnation of Tito that it is difficult, despite the considerable research that it demonstrates, to accept it as serious history." T. J. Hamilton

N Y Times p6 D 29 '46 950w

"The author, a Canadian journalist who was secretary of the Committee for a Fair Trial for Mikhallovitch, maintains that the General's trial was a total miscarriage of justice engineered for political reasons by the Tito government. His brief is impressive and goes over the case point by point, but in the interests of impartiality, one must remember that it is strictly a plea for the defense."

New Yorker 22:132 N 16 '46 80w

"Any reader who expects to get a fair, objective view from this book of one of the grimmest internecine feuds in Balkan history is in for a disappointment. . . The most that one can say for the book is that it is written with a fire and passion which would be commendable if it were used in the defense of some person or cause that was more defensible." Robert St John

— + Sat R of Lit 29:12 D 28 '46 1100w

"David Martin has made a noteworthy contribution to history by courageously telling so much of the truth that the Communists all but succeeded in permanently suppressing. Although he occasionally embroiders the exploits of the Chetniks to a point beyond my capacity to accept, his argument throughout is surprisingly well documented, given the many obstacles of secret diplomacy that blocked his dogged research at every point." Leigh White

Sat R of Lit 29:12 D 28 '46 950w

"Mr. Martin has gathered a mass of authenticated evidence, particularly eye-witness accounts of Britons, Americans and Yugoslavs who were on the scene, to document his thesis that Mihailovich was betrayed by Great Britain and the United States. He presents this material so expertly, and writes with such a clear understanding of the incredibly complicated situation that prevailed in Yugoslavia during the war, that in this reviewer's opinion he makes out a wholly convincing case." F. R. Dulles

+ Weekly Book Review p8 N 24 '46 1000w

MARTIN, FREDERICKA. Hunting of the silver fleece; epic of the fur seal. 328p il $4 Greenberg

639.1 Seals (animals)

As46-12

A few months before the attack on Pearl Harbor the author accompanied her physician-husband to a post on St Paul, the largest of the seal islands in the Bering sea. For the next year until they were evacuated, the author studied the seals and the Aleut people. Her book is the result of her study and observations. It contains not only the story of the seals themselves, but also the history of man's hunting of the fur seal, from the days of their discovery by George Steller in 1741 to the present. Index.

"Besides being the first comprehensive story of the life and history of the fur seals, this is an absorbing, fascinating story from start to finish, as exciting to read as any mystery." Leonard Dubkin

+ Book Week p10 S 15 '46 230w

Booklist 43:30 O 1 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '46

Reviewed by Ruth Telser

San Francisco Chronicle p21 N 10 '46 300w

"In telling the story of the seal islands and the fight to save their inhabitants, Fredericka Martin writes with a crusader's pen and, incidentally, with a plethora of adjectives. It is difficult to see, however, how any right-minded person could remain emotionally impartial in viewing the long tragedy of the fur seal. . . By bringing together within the covers of a single volume information which was previously widely scattered, the book performs a special function." E. W. Teale

+ Weekly Book Review p22 S 29 '46 600w

MARTIN, HANSFORD. Send them summer. 288p $2 50 Harcourt

46-3774

The hero is a young air force cadet, stationed at an Oklahoma camp in the spring of 1942. Banjo was the normal, healthy type, but in two hectic week ends spent in the company of a wealthy civilian, his girl, and their friends, Banjo learns plenty about neurotics.

"The materials which Martin uses to depict the spiritual and intellectual education of a soldier are of the grossest; his presentation of them is shamelessly bold and at the same time fastidious. But their significance is inescapable. As a literary artist and as an interpreter of his own generation Martin is something significant and very, very special. Yet I doubt that anyone over the age of 30 can read 'Send Them Summer' without being shocked to the bone." F. H. Bullock

Book Week p4 Ap 21 '46 550w

"A first novel, with a certain tension, a certain intensity, which describes a noisy, neurotic nightmare world of unbalance, into which Banjo, a young soldier, is drawn for a few days. . . For all its distortion, interesting, experimental, but not uninfluenced by Saroyan."

Kirkus 14:184 Ap 15 '46 160w

"This picture of modern youth in rebellion does not have a ring of truth about it, first for the reason that their rebellion is centered in debauchery and degradation, and second because the author asks a tight little group of neurotics to stand for modern youth. Neither premise is substantiated by our own observation. Youth is not completely depraved even in the extremities of frustration. This first novel is not distinguished in style or characterization." Katharine Shorey

— Library J 71:587 Ap 15 '46 100w

"'Send Them Summer' has its quota of violent happenings in sordid surroundings, but this first novel by a writer from Oklahoma, still in his twenties, is more than a story of the degeneracy and frustration, of the brutishness and savagery that may well have been found around army camps. Although it is as unsentimental as a time table, it does, none the less, seek to find the causes and motivations for the moral landslide that it pictures." E. S. Holsaert

N Y Times p13 My 5 '46 270w

Reviewed by A. C. Fields

Sat R of Lit 29:30 Ag 17 '46 490w

"The book's sincerity makes you want to believe in the reality of Irene, Charley, Van Brunt. But, although as symbols they are often illuminating, as people they are cardboard dolls. . . I had the feeling of never actually knowing who any of them were. And their dialogue has an unfortunate tendency to parody itself. . . One might say this is a kind of morality play in which the morality is fine but the play is a dud." T. L. Collins

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Ap 28 '46 700w

MARTIN, JAMES ALFRED. Empirical philosophies of religion. 146p pa $2 King's crown press

201 Religion—Philosophy A45-4856

"Dr. Martin has given a valuable review of the philosophies of religion that go under the confusing name, 'empirical.' He has concentrated mainly on Boodin, Brightman, Hocking, Macintosh, and Wieman, and gives very ample digests of their major and minor writings." (J Philos) Bibliography.

"The book will be of particular interest to those philosophers and theologians who wish to know something about these contemporary authors, but who have little time for reading the primary books and articles. By giving succinct and objective expositions, Dr. Martin has performed a valuable service." J. R. Everett

+ J Philos 43:638 N 7 '46 340w

"We look for the author's own view in the eighteen pages of his 'Conclusion,' but it is not easy to discover what it is, for even these pages are largely taken up with a summary of his previous criticisms, and his own exposition is unduly brief. . . . Nevertheless, Mr. Martin has provided us with a useful account of five contemporary thinkers of some influence, and has shown at least one side on which they are open to criticism."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p510 O 19 '46 800w

MARTIN, JAMES WALTER. Southern state and local finance trends and the war. 106p pa 50c Vanderbilt univ. press; Univ. of Ky. 336.75 Finance—South. Municipal finance 46-27149

"This . . . is a joint venture of the Institute of Research and Training in the Social Sciences, Vanderbilt University, and the Bureau of Business Research, University of Kentucky. The monograph analyzes data regarding state and local finances centering on 14 southern states. The study begins with the year 1922 and continues through the latest data available." School & Society

"Thoughtful students of finance trends will appreciate the reliable statistical data furnished in this study." R. D. Fowler

+ Ann Am Acad 244:198 Mr '46 270w

"Interesting study." O. C. Ault

+ School & Society 63:34 Ja 12 '46 1250w

"Besides constituting an exacting and painstaking factual study of State and local finance in the South, this monograph represents a commendable cooperative effort between two major universities in the promotion of research in an important subject matter area. . . . Irrespective of anything the social scientist may desire in the theoretical interpretations of the study, it should be highly useful to the legislative body, the tax commissioner, or to the State executive in remoulding an existing fiscal system." O. D. Duncan

+ Social Forces 24:243 D '45 900w

MARTIN, JAMES WALTER, and BRISCOE, VERA. Kentucky state budget system. 103p pa 50c Univ. of Ky. 351.72 Budget—Kentucky 46-27030

"Dr. Martin has described and evaluated the steps in the development of budgeting in Kentucky since the turn of the century. He tells why Kentucky did not have a satisfactory budget system under the act of 1918, and why the governmental reorganization act of 1936 really made possible the first major advances in budgeting." Am Pol Sci R

"It would be a great help to students of budgeting if the budgetary practices in all state governments were written up in the authoritative and comprehensive manner of The Kentucky State Budget System." A. E. Buck

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:381 Ap '46 300w

Reviewed by A. D. Manvel

Pol Sci Q 61:317 Je '46 550w

MARTIN, LAURA KATHERINE. Magazines for school libraries; a rev. and enl. ed. of Magazines for high schools. 206p $1.90 Wilson, H.W.

016.05 Periodicals—Bibliography. School libraries (high school) 46-25048

"First published as Magazines for High Schools [Book Review Digest 1941], now brought up to date on changes in periodicals; includes two studies on elementary magazines, one made by a committee of the Madison, Wisconsin, public schools, and the other a survey by Wesley Francis Amar." (Booklist) Index of magazines used in the text.

Booklist 42:229 Mr 15 '46

"The volume is a serviceable reference guide for both school and public librarians. It may likewise be used to advantage by teachers and parents in selecting current readings of interest to children of different age groups." N. B. Henry

+ El School J 46:596 Je '46 450w

"The timely appearance of Laura Martin's Magazines for School Libraries at the moment when our school librarians were preparing their magazine orders for next year has emphasized its importance to us as an aid to school libraries. It was put into practical use at once and continues to prove its worth as questions about periodicals arise. Upon careful examination one is amazed at the wealth of information Miss Martin has given us in a logical and most usable arrangement." E. M. Crandall

+ Library J 71:1200 S 15 '46 750w

"Wider scope, greater emphasis on social problems, and a discerning awareness of new trends in periodical publishing characterize this new edition of Laura Martin's book on magazines for school libraries. . . . In Magazines for School Libraries the school librarian and the public librarian will find real assistance in making their yearly selections; the teacher will find it an invaluable source of information for work on magazine units; and the general reader, student or adult, will find it a reliable guide through the maze of periodical publication. Her colleagues are indebted to the author for this indispensable reference tool that her enthusiasm, hard labor, and sound judgment made possible. In a vital area of communication Miss Martin has made a significant contribution." L. E. Crawford

+ Library Q 16:265 Jl '46 1850w

Theatre Arts 30:557 S '46 60w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:161 Je '46 90w

MARTIN, LOWELL, ed. See Chicago. University. Graduate library school. Library institute. Personnel administration in libraries.

MARTIN, PHILIP L. Animals for you to make; a book for craftsmen of all ages, showing clearly, with patterns and easy directions, how to make and paint animal toys of soft wood [il. by the author]. 85p $2 Lipincott

688.7 Woodwork. Toys 46-2551

Patterns and instructions for making twenty toy animals out of wood. Animals included are polar bear, eskimo dog, walrus, tiger, yak, elephant, and others from the Arctic and from Asia. Tho intended primarily for the boy craftsman it is suggested that the book might serve older people desiring to find a wood-working hobby.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p15 Ap 21 '46 180w

Booklist 42:303 My 15 '46

"A boy or girl who can handle a jigsaw, or who is skillful with a knife, will be able to make these creatures, and adults, too, who enjoy a handcraft hobby will be tempted to try their hands at making this delightful Zoo."

MARTIN, P. L.—Continued

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 15 '46 280w

"A welcome how-to-do-it book, really workable for the entire family."

+ Kirkus 14:175 Ap 1 '46 90w

"Practical book for adults, and children old enough to use a jig or scroll saw. The finished products should have commercial value. Recommended." Ruth Bostwick

+ Library J 71:669 My 1 '46 80w

"The New York boys and girls who saw the wooden animals made from this book in the window of Scribner's Bookstore will all want to own it. The drawings show exactly how to cut them out and paint them against their own native background. The resulting menagerie has humor and distinction."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:45 Je 15 '46 60w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p6 Je 23 '46 90w

Wis Lib Bul 42:116 Jl '46

MARTIN, RALPH G. Boy from Nebraska; the story of Ben Kuroki. 208p $2.50 Harper

B or 92 Kuroki, Ben. Japanese in the U.S. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives. American 46-11911

The story of a second-generation Japanese-American boy from Nebraska, who first struggled to get into the war, and then had to struggle to stay in. He had never known prejudice at home in Nebraska; he found plenty of it in the army. He made his adjustments, however, and emerged from the war a hero.

Reviewed by Emily Schossberger

Book Week p5 O 20 '46 400w

Booklist 43:73 N 1 '46

Christian Century 63:1440 N 27 '46 120w

"A most useful and timely book for showing busy Americans the revised attitude justly due their loyal foreign and Negro element." A. B.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 D 14 '46 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '46

Kirkus 14:443 S 1 '46 250w

"An unassuming tale, but interest mounts with realistic sketches of a bomber crew and holds through a stirring indictment of intolerance. The book can be read for its entertaining value; it will be remembered for its message. Recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 71:1328 O 1 '46 120w

"Ben Kuroki is now on what he calls his fifty-ninth mission—the fight against prejudice here at home. All who believe democracy has a future must wish him well. Ralph Martin has told his story simply and clearly. It is a good book. It should be widely read." J. M. Morse

+ N Y Times p18 N 3 '46 450w

Reviewed by Eleanor Breed

San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 20 '46 450w

"A modest book; it is written simply and easily, and, although it is mostly the story of one man, it indirectly is the story of thousands of other Japanese-Americans in the incredibly courageous 442nd or 443rd Infantry Regiments and the 100th Infantry Battalion. In addition, as Bill Mauldin points out in his introduction, Ben Kuroki's story has, in one way or another, been equaled by the millions of Negroes and Jews who fought and frequently died in a battle against a hate-preaching enemy even though or perhaps because they knew firsthand what hate means." Merle Miller

+ Sat R of Lit 29:18 N 9 '46 600w

"Though most Americans would rather not think of the war any more, here is one book that the most battle-weary reader might well read." J. P. O'Neill

+ Weekly Book Review p6 O 27 '46 900w

Wis Lib Bul 42:166 D '46

MARTINDALE, CYRIL CHARLIE. Creative love [Eng title: Fountain of life]. 48p $1 (1s 3d) Sheed

232.96 Jesus Christ—Passion Love (theology) 46-3922

"Six readings written for broadcasting in the R.B.C. home service during Holy week 1946." (Subtitle) Contents: Creative love; Redemptive love; Self-sacrificing love; Love all-embracing; Love to the end; Love beyond the end.

Cath World 164:93 O '46 160w

Commonweal 44:149 My 24 '46 30w

MARTING, RUTH LENORE (HILEA BAILEY, pseud). Breathe no more, my lady. 254p $2 Doubleday

46-6841

Detective story.

"The feminine formula, with small talk and local touches as fillers—this is just about fair."

Kirkus 14:332 Jl 15 '46 70w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p36 O 20 '46 140w

"Interesting gimmicks on monoxide poisoning and surplus property reconversion scattered in a diffuse and very long story." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p10 S 29 '46 50w

MARY CHARITINA, SISTER. Adventures of the Redcrosse knight. See Spenser, E.MASEFIELD, JOHN. A Macbeth production. 64p $1.75 Macmillan [6s Heinemann]

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Macbeth. Shakespeare, William—Stage presentation 45-11444

Masefield imagines a group of thirty-nine veterans returning to England from the war. They plan to travel around the countryside for a time giving Elizabethan plays and call on the poet laureate for advice. He suggests Macbeth, and then outlines his ideas about the producing of the play.

"His book is thoughtful and should be exceedingly useful, especially to the novice, as a practical stage guide, for all that there are only rarely imaginative flashes as striking, say, as the little suggestion that the ghostly Show of Kings be played 'by men in masks resembling Banquo.'... Occasionally his notes are ill-proportioned. . . But his essential service in this series of notes is as useful a service as a critic can perform today' that of insisting that Shakespeare belongs not in the study but on the stage, and of implementing that insistence by showing how, carefully and soundly." James Sandoe

+ Book Week p4 Ja 20 '46 650w

Booklist 42:245 Ap 1 '46

"Highly recommended for theater and Shakespeare collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 71:120 Ja 15 '46 70w

"In this small volume of only 64 pages, England's poet laureate gives well-considered advice not only to the 39 eager veterans, but to all directors desirous of putting on a distinctive production of 'Macbeth' and the student and layman who will reread the play with new interest." C. K. Bausman

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Ja 27 '46 650w

"For all its small compass it is rich in the quality of theatre-magic too often absent from the stage today. . . All this is good to read and ponder. It is not necessary to be on the point of producing or acting Macbeth to find both pleasure and inspiration in this poet's comment on a great dramatic poem."

+ Theatre Arts 30:126 F '46 400w

"Mr. Masefield is a poet writing about a poet; that should be stimulating, and has proved so in his brief but pregnant prefaces to certain of the tragedies. He does not pretend to be a historian or a bibliographer, though he gives in this little volume a spicy glimpse or two into the actual history of eleventh century Scotland, which serves to remove Macbeth, even more completely than before, away from the domain of history and into the realm of fiction. He does not attempt textual criticism, though he is insistent as to the cuts and mangling to which our only extant version has been subjected. Like others who have preceded him, he makes a good case here on the general principles of the text's unusual brevity and of certain obvious roughnesses both in its construction and versification. But, like them, his application of this general theory is full of contradictions. . . . But the vision, the poet's eye and ear, the phrase which strikes home like a shaft, these we expect and receive." Margaret Webster

+ — Weekly Book Review p6 F 24 '46 1250w

MASON, ALFRED EDWARD WOODLEY.
House in Lordship lane. 266p $2.50 Dodd
[9s 6d Hodder]

46-3351

Detective story.

Booklist 42:300 My 15 '46

"An intricate and well-woven pattern of crime." J. D. Beresford

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 12 '46 100w

"A neat case it is, complete with World War II overtones."

+ New Repub 114:709 My 13 '46 90w

N Y Times p30 Ap 28 '46 120w

"Lapse of many years has not dulled steel of Hanaud and his able helpers—but, gad, how it does run on!"

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:46 Ap 27 '46 70w

"It is a tale on well-trying lines, but ingenious, entertaining and, as one would expect, well told."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p185 Ap 20 '46 250w

"A highly readable tale, heart warming for the oldsters and suitable for all discerning fans. . . . Superior entertainment, a necessity for addicts who take the long view." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p21 Ap 21 '46 260w

MASON, ALPHEUS THOMAS. Brandeis, a free man's life. 713p $5 Viking

B or 92 Brandeis, Louis Dembitz 46-25268

A full length biography of Justice Brandeis based on materials received from Brandeis himself and from friends and relatives. The author is professor of politics at Princeton University.

Reviewed by P. A. Freund

Atlantic 178:166 O '46 500w

Booklist 43:34 O 1 '46

Reviewed by F. L. Perrin

Christian Science Monitor p12 O 1 '46 800w

"This is a substantial biography of a great human being of our time. It is objective, seeking a solution of a complex personality in the exact presentation of fact rather than in facile psychological interpretation. It does not resolve all problems, but it intelligently sorts the material. It may be difficult reading for those accustomed to profiles, but it is rewarding." J. N. Moody

+ Commonweal 44:580 S 27 '46 800w

"The volume will undoubtedly be of great interest to jurists, but is a little too much concerned with the law for general readers."

+ — Current Hist 11:327 O '46 70w

"Professor Mason's biography of the late Justice Brandeis bears as its subtitle: 'A Free Man's Life.' For circulation among law students and lawyers, an edition might well have been prepared with the subtitle, 'A Case History of a Successful Legal Career.' For, in the life of Justice Brandeis, and particularly as the narrative appears in Professor Mason's work, may be found the material for many of the 'do's and 'don't's' which determine the success or failure of a lawyer in the practice of his profession. The work is particularly interesting and valuable in this aspect, since it portrays vividly the career of a brilliant and successful advocate, shown by the author to have been actuated in his private practice and in his public and community efforts by the highest of motives, who, nevertheless, came perilously near professional disaster as the result of a course of conduct which sharply divided the community into those who praised him beyond words as the 'People's Lawyer' and those who vigorously condemned the ethics of his conduct." J. J. Kaplan

+ Harvard Law R 60:165 N '46 2250w

"A magnificent job."

+ Kirkus 14:314 J1 1 '46 340w

"His colorful personality is presented from many sides. Very thorough research plus personal acquaintance enable the author to give an authentic picture. . . . Valuable, particularly for the social scientist, but not everyone will labor through this voluminous work. Recommended for large public, educational and law libraries." H. H. A. Bernt

+ Library J 71:1206 S 15 '46 110w

Reviewed by H. D. Davis

Nation 164:48 Ja 11 '47 1000w

"On the whole the book is both adequate and balanced, and as satisfactory a life as one could expect to have written within five years of his death." B. F. Wright

+ New Repub 115:417 S 30 '46 1800w

"Professor Mason has written more than an authoritative record and interpretation of what he calls in his suggestive subtitle 'A Free Man's Life.' This stimulating, highly readable book is also a chronicle of the processes of American democracy at work. This is a biography with a larger meaning—on all counts, it deserves a wide audience." H. J. Bresler

+ N Y Times p4 S 22 '46 1100w

"Professor Mason has done a fine and useful job in this discerning and sympathetic book."

+ New Yorker 22:125 N 9 '46 120w

"Dr. Mason's solid, detailed volume tells the story of all the varied aspects of Brandeis' career fully and carefully." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 O 6 '46 1450w

"In this massive biography Dr. Mason continues his study of Associate Justice Louis D. Brandeis. It is unlikely that any book about this great American jurist could be dull or without value. Nor is Dr. Mason's. But it is marred by bad organization, verbosity, and, in at least one place, by grave distortion." H. F. Pringle

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:7 S 21 '46 1500w

"A full, circumstantial account, in which every step in the long career is presented and analyzed, in which the man and his work are judged together. Brandeis, I am sure, would have approved this book for its facts, its balance, and its demonstration of how a citizen makes himself a valuable champion of democracy." Harry Hansen

+ Survey Q 35:370 O '46 2050w

"This carefully documented biography should be of first value to students of the history of liberal thought in America."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:289 D '46 320w

"Mr. Mason does not, to be sure, bring to his work any notable artistry as biographer, nor does he deal philosophically with a number of questions requiring philosophical treatment, but he has, none the less, told an important story with meticulous care and the most faithful honesty and devotion. Though the volume will, of course, be of peculiar interest to lawyers, the fact that it is written by a layman gives it non-professional dimensions of considerable value." M. D. Howe

+ — Weekly Book Review p3 S 22 '46 1500w

MASON, BERNARD STERLING. Book of Indian-crafts and costumes; drawings by Frederic H. Kock. 118p $5 Barnes, A.S.

970.6391 Indians of North America—Costume and adornment 46-6959

Explicit directions for making various items of Indian costumes: war-bonnets, feather

MASON, B. S.—Continued
crests, beaded headbands, and many other Indian articles. Drawings illustrate the steps in construction, and photographs of finished products are given. For grade seven or higher.

Book Week p14 N 10 '46 80w

Booklist 43:59 O 15 '46

"An excellent book for craft shelves in boys' clubs, scout libraries, camp libraries. Public libraries will find it useful for reference shelves."

+ Kirkus 14:457 S 15 '46 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p17 S 22 '46 70w

MASON, EDWARD SAGENDORPH. Controlling world trade; cartels and commodity agreements. (Committee for economic development. Research study) 289p $2.50 McGraw 338.85 Trusts, Industrial. Commercial policy 46-6170

"The author, professor of economics at Harvard University, examines the development of cartels and intergovernmental commodity agreements and discusses the role of governmental policies in postwar commerce. Not inclined to view cartels with as much horror as some of our contemporary public figures, he nevertheless concludes that when cartels are effective, 'there is no doubt that they reduce the total volume of world trade.' Co-operation between the nations can reduce the present drawbacks of cartels and agreements, he holds. Our State Department's Proposals for Expansion of World Trade and Employment are evaluated and the proposals are included as an appendix to the book." (Book Week) Index.

"This thoughtful, richly informative work is one of the series of studies sponsored by the Committee for Economic Development." W. F. M.

+ Book Week p13 O 27 '46 140w

"The book is very well prepared and will be useful and informative to those interested in world trade in chemicals, and in the effects of such trade on the chemical industry." W. F. Sterling

+ Chem & Eng N 25:264 Ja 27 '47 350w

Spring'd Republican p4d S 1 '46 900w

"Unlike much recent writing in the field [this] is a sober analysis; the case against cartels is carefully worked out, but the case for them, while rejected, is examined, not denounced."

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:301 D '46 320w

MASON, GEORGE CARRINGTON. Colonial churches of tidewater Virginia. 381p 11 maps $7.50 Whitet & Shepperson, 11-15 N 8th st, Richmond, Va.

726.5 Churches—Virginia A46-668

Study of the ancient brick churches still standing in the tidewater section of Virginia. Out of the original two hundred and fifty churches and chapels only fifty remain. The history of these churches has been carefully compiled from old records. Includes photographs, plans, and diagrams. Index.

"A great part of the work will command the attention more especially of Virginians and archaeologists and genealogists. But the author has done a painstaking job of research, has thrown welcome light on the history of the more famous of the churches and sifted the evidence bearing on disputed dates where generally accepted legend has tended to give a church exaggerated antiquity." H. I. Brock

+ N Y Times p14 D 16 '45 500w

"The text, containing a wealth of painstaking detail, is difficult reading, but inspires amazement at the author's digging into local records, dissection of traditions, and careful examination of the sites of vanished churches. He demolishes, with good-natured caution, some of the honored legends transmitted by Bishop William Meade's Old Churches, Ministers, and Families of Virginia. . . In spite of the detail, the work as a whole conveys an impression of the society that built those churches. . . Without sentimentalism, the book is a kind of scholarly elegy, an appreciation of a noble culture."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:79 Je '46 320w

MASON, JOHN BROWN. The Danzig dilemma; a study in peacemaking by compromise. 377p $4 Stanford Univ. press

943.12 Danzig. European war, 1914-1918—Territorial questions. Germany—Foreign relations—Poland. Poland—Foreign relations—Germany A46-2759

A detailed, documented study of the part the city of Danzig has played in international affairs for over a thousand years. Emphasis is naturally placed upon the political and economic problems of Danzig presented at the Paris Peace Conference (1919) and on the administrative problems which arose while Danzig was under the protection of the League of Nations. The conclusion is reached that the experiment at Danzig has not been unfruitful and that it points to possible compromises and solutions in future peacemaking attempts, not only in Danzig but in other disputed territories. Bibliography. Index.

"This reviewer, who has himself for many years studied the problem and treated it in a number of works, can testify that, in spite of the large literature on the Free City of Danzig, the book under review is an outstanding contribution." J. L. Kunz

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:809 Ag '46 600w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 My 26 '46 30w

Booklist 43:13 S '46

Christian Science Monitor p15 O 5 '46 360w

Foreign Affairs 25:344 Ja '47 20w

"This study in peacemaking by compromise is a timely contribution to the study of the problem of international administration." H. K.

+ N Y Times p18 J1 21 '46 360w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:221 S '46 200w

MASON, PHILIP (PHILIP WOODRUFF, pseud). Call the next witness. 208p $2.50 Harcourt [8s 6d Cape, J]

46-25073

"Mr. Woodruff describes the police investigation into the death of a Hindu lady in Northern India. Though written as fiction the book is based on the author's practical experience of the tortuous unreliability of Indian evidence and the dubious methods of Indian police." New Statesman & Nation

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock

Book Week p2 Mr 3 '46 400w

Booklist 42:248 Ap 1 '46

Bookmark 7:16 My '46

Christian Science Monitor p16 F 23 '46 550w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle

Commonweal 43:580 Mr 22 '46 750w

"More than just a murder mystery, though this will appeal to the factual minded audience, with its thorough follow-through on each aspect of the case, this is an unusual way of presenting a picture of India today."

+ Kirkus 14:81 F 15 '46 180w

"A pseudonym conceals the identity of its talented author, who has lived among the natives of northern India. Stylistically excellent, written with shrewd insight. Recommended." Scott Adams

+ Library J 71:281 F 15 '46 90w

"A shapely story which is both exciting and very informative about Indian life and character." Charles Marriott
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 27 '46 100w

"An absorbing novel by a man who has spent much of his life working in the hill-village background he describes."

+ New Repub 114:422 Mr 25 '46 120w

"Mr. Woodruff is right in thinking that India is no place for a detective story. In a country where no one is interested in the truth the solution of mysteries is unwarrantable. And at the end of this fascinating novel, it is still anyone's guess how the Hindu lady met her death." Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 29:362 Je 2 '46 180w

"For those who expect a conventional 'whodunit,' the title of this lively, informative novel is misleading. A detective story demands suspense as to the murderer's identity and a protagonist to solve the mystery; here the questions are whether Pyaran's death is murder or suicide and whether a family group can attach guilt to the only person who might have committed murder. And though the reader is interested in the case against Gopal Singh for the shot-gun murder of his young wife, he becomes more interested in the revelations of the workings of the Indian mind and of life in northern India." Alan Vrooman

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 10 '46 600w

"The reader, provided with absorbing short biographies of all the people involved, is allowed to decide for himself whether Pyari's death was really murder or, as the defense claims, suicide. Excellent background, but those with an inclination to skim may have their troubles with Indian psychology and Indian nomenclature, both of which are complex."

+ New Yorker 22:88 Mr 2 '46 140w

"Very good."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:88 Ap 13 '46 40w

"Call the Next Witness comes from the pre-war world. The author tells us that he wrote it in 1935, and put it aside for various reasons. Like The Fifth Seal, it stands firmly, having lost nothing of its freshness in the lapse of time. The political implications of this novel enhance its quality, though they are never stressed unduly." John Hampson

+ Spec 174:416 My 4 '46 360w

Time 47:106 Mr 25 '46 900w

"Whoever Philip Woodruff is, he writes of East Indians with a wisdom that holds a deep humility. He neither judges nor condemns nor condones. Their ways of life, of thinking, of acting are interesting to him and he succeeds in making them interesting to the reader. Whatever he lacks in literary skill, he makes up for in human portraiture. His segment of Indian life has significance beyond the fictional." Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Mr 3 '46 600w

MASON, R. E. How to write letters that get jobs. 192p $1.98 Rodd

331.1152 Applications for positions

46-4000

Advice on how to get a new job, or a better one, by writing better letters. The author maintains that whether you land a better position or not depends on "what you say and how you say it." Includes many sample letters.

Book Week p9 Mr 17 '46 70w

Spring'd Republican p6 Mr 13 '46 250w

MASON, VAN WYCK (GEOFFREY COFFIN, FRANK W. MASON, WARD WEAVER, pseud.). Saigon singer. 312p $2.50 Doubleday

46-8056

A tale of international intrigue in which Major Hugh North turns up in Saigon in search of a spy, and runs into complications, including murder.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Book Week p18 D 8 '46 70w

Booklist 43:171 F 1 '47

"Good reading."

+ Kirkus 14:502 O 1 '46 170w

"Here's a slam-bang, slap-dash tale of brawls and boudoirs, magnates and mistresses, guns, poison, grand opera. If North seems just a bit dense at times, the fault is the author's who gives the reader a blueprint of all, or nearly all, the villains." Hoffman Birney

+ — N Y Times p22 N 24 '46 230w

"Just the thing for those who like a neat plot, accompanied by incense, elephants, and other Oriental trimmings. The author does pull a remarkable chemical boner, though, in describing his murderer's methods."

+ — New Yorker 22:144 N 30 '46 100w

"The gallant major's return is highly welcome after five years; the Annamite local color is fascinating; and even howlers in opera and chemistry do not keep this from being one of the best of the North novels." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 15 '46 80w

"High powered counter-espionage yarn."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:80 D 7 '46 50w

"Better than average spy whodunit." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p54 D 1 '46 200w

MASSERMAN, JULES HYMEN. Principles of dynamic psychiatry; including an integrative approach to abnormal and clinical psychology; with a glossary of psychiatric terms. 322p il $4 Saunders

616.8 Psychology, Pathological SQ46-67

"In the Principles of Dynamic Psychiatry, Dr. Masserman has written an introduction to the Practice of Dynamic Psychiatry, a second volume to follow. This first volume defines the scope of modern dynamic psychiatry and presents a critical analysis of the various theories of behavior. . . . The author's general biodynamic theory of behavior is based on four general principles. (1) principles of motivation, (2) principles of experimental interpretation and adaptation; (3) principle of deviation and substitution, and (4) principle of conflict. The principles are illustrated with clinical material." (Am J Pub Health) Bibliography.

"Although the present volume may serve the author's needs, it is extremely doubtful whether any psychologist would find it sufficiently balanced for use as a textbook." M. E. Bitterman

Am J Psychol 59:325 Ap '46 950w

"While this is an introductory work, it is not a popular presentation, but is what the author describes in the preface, a preparation for the clinical examination and treatment of behavior disorders." J. M. Cunningham

+ Am J Pub Health 36:1070 S '46 220w

"The author, a well trained neuro-psychologist, psychiatrist and psychoanalyst, writes with the rare experience of animal experimentation, clinical work, and familiarity with a specialized technique of therapy. The result is an integration of various biological and psychological disciplines into a dynamic theory of behavior applicable to animal and man. Special emphasis, reinforced by well documented data, is placed on continuity and similarity rather than disparity in behavior in the phylogenetic series. Case material is well chosen and aptly used."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:150 Je '46 240w

MASTERS, DEXTER, and WAY, KATHA-RINE, eds. One world or none; foreword by Niels Bohr; introd. by Arthur H. Compton. 79p pa $1 McGraw

623.45 Atomic bomb. Atomic energy

46-2777

"Book concerns the atomic bomb and its menace to civilization. Among the contributing scientists are J. R. Oppenheimer, Niels Bohr, Hans A. Bethe, Harold Urey, Irving Langmuir and Albert Einstein. Other contributions are by political and military authorities, including General H. H. Arnold. Published in conjunction with Science Illustrated, the forthcoming McGraw magazine, of which Dexter Masters is editorial consultant." Library J

Reviewed by David Karno

Book Week p3 Mr 24 '46 950w

Bookmark 7:8 My '46

"Because chemists had a major share in bringing the bomb into being, chemists have a special responsibility for using their influence and their understanding of the problem to educate the public and especially our politicians and statesmen of the necessity for immediate action before it is too late. The widespread circulation of this pamphlet should help make this critically necessary task easier."

MASTERS, DEXTER—Continued

E. B. Wilson

+ Chem & Eng N 24:2112 Ag 10 '46 400w

Christian Century 63:627 My 15 '46 50w

Reviewed by E. D. Canham

Christian Science Monitor p20 Ap 11 '46 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '46

Foreign Affairs 25:334 Ja '47 60w

"Excellent title, excellent authors, excellent merchandise."

+ Kirkus 14:116 Mr 1 '46 150w

Library J 71:183 F 1 '46 70w

Reviewed by George Soule

New Repub 114:669 My 6 '46 550w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:19 Ap '46

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p1 Mr 17 '46 2350w

Reviewed by Waldemar Kampffert

N Y Times p6 Jl 14 '46 90w

New Yorker 22:93 Mr 30 '46 140w

Reviewed by Elmer Davis

Sat R of Lit 29:7 Mr 30 '46 5000w

Discussion by L. N. Ridenour

Sat R of Lit 29:14 Ap 13 '46 2350w

Reviewed by K. F. Mather & others

Scientific Bk Club R 17:1 Ap '46 1200w

Reviewed by H. M. Davis

Springf'd Republican p4d My 12 '46 950w

Reviewed by S. C. Gilfillan

Survey G 35:372 O '46 600w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:130 Je '46 320w

"An illuminating, powerful, threatening and hopeful statement which will clarify a lot of confused thinking about atomic energy. It is a highly compressed volume containing a wealth of facts and viewpoints in eighteen articles, the majority of them by scientists who have taken leading parts in producing and using the atomic bomb. It presents varied, but well planned, discussions of the world problem resulting from the use of the bomb, almost all of them leading to the conclusion that the scientists handed the statesmen, as an inseparable part of the bomb, a problem that can be solved only through the abolishment of war and the development of a unified order of world control."

J. J. O'Neill

+ Weekly Book Review p1 Mr 17 '46 1650w

MASTERS, ROBERT V. Stampography. 86p il $3 Printed arts co, 371 Broadway, N.Y. 13

383.22 Postage stamps 45-22073

"Truly named on the cover as 'an instructive travel album for the young stamp collector,' this handsome picture-manual photographically reproduces 250 commemorative stamps chosen for their pictorial interest and gives, country by country, such information as parents hope their young philatelists will look up for themselves." Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p23 Ap 14 '46 140w

"This ingenious book will not only stimulate the hobby of a young collector, but will be of real educational value." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:209 My '46 90w

Reviewed by K. H. McAlarney

Library J 71:920 Je 15 '46 80w

Weekly Book Review p32 Mr 3 '46 140w

MATHERS, EDWARD POWYS, tr. Love songs of Asia. 77p $2.50 Knopf [6s Pushkin]

808.81 Love poetry 46-3328

"Charming translations of Asiatic poetry—Sanskrit, Chinese, Hindu, Persian, Turkish, and so on—which were first issued in three separate volumes: 'Coloured Stars' (1918),

'Black Marigolds' (1919), and 'The Garden of Bright Waters' (1920). Notes and an introduction by Mrs. Mathers." New Yorker

Booklist 42:302 My 15 '46

"Interesting, if brief, collection of Asiatic love poetry."

+ Kirkus 14:140 Mr 15 '46 150w

"Mathers is an outstanding example of the poet who is a translator, as it were, at second hand. . . [His] work gains enormously from coming to English via French. He was deeply indebted to Adolphe Thalasso's 'Anthologie de l'Amour Asiatique' as well as to the work of Dr. J. C. Mardrus, among others. . . Mathers' rendering, horizoned by French precision and economy, dresses these Eastern poems in an English whose understatement is agreeably adequate." Anne Fremantle

+ N Y Times p7 Je 30 '46 1050w

New Yorker 22:112 My 4 '46 70w

"I think it highly unlikely that the present season will produce any other book as beautiful as 'Love Songs of Asia.'"

+ Weekly Book Review p24 Ap 21 '46 320w

MATSUMOTO, TORU, and LERRIGO, MARI-ON OLIVE. A brother is a stranger. 318p $3.75 Day

B or 92 Japanese in the U.S. 46-11958

Autobiography of a Japanese Christian, who came in contact with Japanese "thought police" in his own country before the war, came to this country and graduated from Union Theological Seminary, was interned temporarily, and later worked on the Committee on resettlement of Japanese Americans. He now lives in this country.

Reviewed by E. L. Jones

Atlantic 179:112 Ja '47 420w

Reviewed by F. S. Marquardt

Book Week p5 N 17 '46 420w

Booklist 43:85 N 15 '46

"Simple, heartfelt, deeply moving autobiography. . . It is as a warmly human story of one man and his family that the book will make its greatest appeal. There have been few autobiographies by Japanese, whose education denies the value of the individual. The greatest of them all is the Autobiography of Yukichi Fukuzawa, the great educator who pioneered in bringing Western ideas to Japan. Mr. Matsumoto's book deserves a place not far below Fukuzawa's. It gets off to a slow start, it lacks all literary distinction, it exhibits no intellectual sophistication—but it points the way to the rebirth of a nation." Robert Peel

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 D 2 '46 600w

Kirkus 14:573 N 1 '46 170w

"Extremely readable. Highly recommended for general purchase." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 71:1463 O 15 '46 140w

"Both in his careful depiction of pre-war Japan and the struggle there between militarism and liberalism, and in his explanation of how the Japanese thinks, and why he thinks that way, his account has much of interest to the Occidental. Pearl Buck commands it as 'the truest and most complete book of life in Japan with all its good and evil, that I have ever read.'" E. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 10 '46 250w

Reviewed by Lyman Bryson

Weekly Book Review p22 N 17 '46 900w

MATTHEWS, HERBERT LIONEL. Education of a correspondent. 550p $4 Harcourt

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 46-25183

The head of the London bureau of the New York Times, describes his own professional career during which he covered the Abyssinian war; the Spanish civil war; and World War II. Index.

Reviewed by F. L. Hadsel

Am Pol Sci R 40:1028 O '46 380w

"Among the welter of books by correspondents on the war, some of them sensational and opinionated, some of them repetitious, this report on the education of a correspondent, will retain for a long time its value as one of the most thoughtful and pertinent contributions to the understanding of our time."

Hans Kohn

+ Ann Am Acad 247:192 S '46 420w

Reviewed by R. E. Danielson

+ Atlantic 178:148 J1 '46 1350w

Booklist 42:327 Je 15 '46

Bookmark 7:12 N '46

"The book is disarmingly honest and vastly interesting. Mr. Matthews learned much in his wide-ranging adventures, but he would be the first to admit, in fact he does literally affirm, that he has not yet learned everything. Ten years from now perhaps he may have learned more of the complicated political situation in Spain and in Portugal, and incidentally, of Catholicism also."

Cath World 164:286 D '46 250w

Reviewed by Alfred Werner

Christian Century 63:963 Ag 7 '46 800w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '46

Reviewed by C. G. Paulding

+ Commonweal 44:262 Je 28 '46 2200w

Foreign Affairs 25:160 O '46 110w

"Humble and essentially honest memoirs revealing an acute sense of history and the best in the journalist tradition."

+ Kirkus 14:234 My 15 '46 190w

Reviewed by H. J. Bresler

New Repub 114:842 Je 10 '46 550w

"Mr. Matthews' book, much of which is fascinating simply for its battle scenes and sketches of great personages, has certain subtle overtones. Its two most important sections are a 150-page block on the Spanish Civil War and a 250-page block on India and Afghanistan; and taken in conjunction, they show that the 'liberalism' which he preaches is not always easy to apply. In Spain, liberalism faced fascism." Allan Nevins

+ N Y Times p1 Je 9 '46 1950w

"At the start, the author tries to find excuses for Mussolini's rape of Ethiopia and to explain his own pro-Italian sentiments in that sorry war, pleading the case of the aggressors with possibly more reasoned conviction than is usually encountered in such defenses. From then on the book gets a lot better, helped considerably by Mr. Matthews' urbane manner of writing."

+ New Yorker 22:94 Je 15 '46 90w

Reviewed by René Albrecht-Carrié

Pol Sci Q 61:470 S '46 900w

"One of the most honest, satisfying, and vital books to come out of the war. The reason is threefold: (1) it is a vivid, realistic account of the military campaigns in Africa, Spain, Italy, and Southern France, plus a long critical discussion of the Indian problem and its relation to war and peace; (2) it is autobiographical in the sense that the author, with devastating honesty, shows step-by-step how ten years of war on Fascism shaped his thinking and feeling; (3) it is far more than good journalism, it is history in the truest sense." Henry Christman

+ Sat R of Lit 29:10 Je 15 '46 1950w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:177 S '46 260w

Reviewed by Marcus Duffield

Weekly Book Review p2 Je 30 '46 1150w

Wis Lib Bul 42:131 O '46

MATTIELLO, JOSEPH J., ed. Protective and decorative coatings; prepared by a staff of specialists under the editorship of Joseph J. Mattiello; v 5. Analysis and testing methods. 662p il $7 Wiley

667.6 Paint. Varnish and varnishing

(41-19399)

"Fifth volume in this series considers the industry's problems from the analytical viewpoint and clearly discusses analysis of resins and associated materials, chemical analysis of drying oils, laboratory testing of metal finishes, spectrophotometric and photographic methods for measuring spectral characteristics of pigments and surface coatings, and 'resinography'—the structure of resins and its correlation with other physical-chemical properties involved in the practical performance or failure of the material." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:9 S '46

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:826 Je 1 '46 110w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:44 J1 '46

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:348 D '46 280w

MAUCLAIR, CAMILLE. Edgar Degas. See Degas, H. G. E.

MAUGH, LAWRENCE CARNAHAN. Statically indeterminate structures. 338p $5 Wiley

624.17 Structures, Theory of 46-4190

"Practical up-to-date material on the analysis of indeterminate frame structures. It is a comprehensive treatment of continuous frames, trusses, bents and frames with curved members by the method of moment distribution." (Library J) Index.

Eng N 136:127 Je 13 '46 200w

Library J 71:486 Ap 1 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:30 Ap '46

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:258 S '46 80w

MAUGHAM, WILLIAM SOMERSET. Then and now. 278p $2.50 Doubleday [10s 6d Heinemann]

Machiavelli, Niccolo—Fiction. Borgia,

Cesare—Fiction. 46-4126

"The scene is Italy at the dawn of the sixteenth century, and the not entirely heroic hero is Niccolo Machiavelli, best known to posterity as author of 'The Prince.' The main action runs from October 1502 into January of the following year; the principal elements of this action being diplomacy and love, nicely mingled in almost equal parts. Thanks to the diplomatic element, we witness the education of a political philosopher. Thanks to the amorous element, we witness the aspiration and frustration of a practised lecher." Sat R of Lit

"The dialogue is unstilted and as lively as if it had been spoken today. . . It is as if Mr. Maugham were reading The Prince in reverse, translating it back into the terms of Niccolo's own existence." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 177:160 Je '46 800w

Reviewed by Sterling North

Book Week p2 My 26 '46 370w

Booklist 42:329 Je 15 '46

"As always Mr. Maugham is highly imaginative. His narrative is reminiscent of the coarse tales of Rabelais and Boccaccio; and every reference to religion is equivalently a sneer."

— Cath World 163:475 Ag '46 200w

"Mr. Maugham is read by the discriminating not so much for what he writes as for the manner of his writing, for delight in the mastery of his practiced workmanship. Many will not applaud this latest novel, which is ribald in essence, which is filled with episodes, with speech, with the reckless lack of morals typical of the Italian Renaissance. . . As entertainment, the book is readable, naturally, filled with the violence, the color, the romance of the period. One freely admits the author's skill, but one may deplore some of the uses to which he has put it." Margaret Williamson

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 My 31 '46 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 J1 '46

"Not even Maugham's name can bridge the gap between what his readers expect from him and what he gives them in this pedestrian novel about Machiavelli and 'the Duke,' Caesar Borgia."

— Kirkus 14:129 Mr 15 '46 170w

MAUGHAM, W. S.—Continued

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p3 My 17 '46
270w

"Mr. Maugham's new book . . . alternates between a text book dryness of historical outline and an embarrassingly primitive effort to liven things up." Diana Trilling
Nation 162:790 Je 29 '46 280w

"The rather forced amusement of the book is in Mr. Maugham's trick of putting all the political wisdom of The Prince into the mouth of its author as a formula for conducting a love affair." John Farrelly
New Repub 114:907 Je 24 '46 500w

"It is refreshing to see a novelist as capable of mature and competent workmanship as W. Somerset Maugham trying his hand in the well-crowded field of historical romance. It is also pleasant to report that in so doing he has succeeded admirably—that he has produced a vivid, sprightly and convincing story. . . This is good history as well as good fiction, and it should also afford some wry amusement to anyone who has been ambassador to a dictator." T. C. Cubb
+ N Y Times p4 My 26 '46 550w

"The book is full of ill-composed sentences, bulging with disproportionate clauses that prevent them from coming out right, or confused by 'he's', 'him's', and 'his's' that apply to different antecedents: a kind of thing that an English master would have been sure to blue pencil in the young student's themes. The language is such a tissue of clichés that one's wonder is finally aroused at the writer's ability to assemble so many and at his unflinching inability to put anything in an individual way. . . The admirers of Mr. Maugham will tell me that he is 'old and tired' now, and that historical novels are not his forte—that it is quite unfair to judge him by 'Then and Now,' which is one of the least of his books. I know that he has done better stories, but I am not sure that it is quite unfair to judge his quality by the quality of 'Then and Now.' This quality is never, it seems to me, that either of a literary artist or of a first-rate critic of morals; and it may be worth while to say this at a moment when a tendency seems to be prevalent to step up Mr. Maugham's standing into the higher ranks of English fiction. What stirs one particularly to protest is a certain disposition on the part of Mr. Maugham himself to take advantage of his popularity for the purpose of disparaging his betters." Edmund Wilson
— New Yorker 22:103 Je 8 '46 2250w

"It is all, with the exception of a few un-leavened lumps of historical exposition, highly diverting; as we are entitled to expect it to be, coming as it does from the pen of a novelist who believes that the prime function of novel writing is to give pleasure. The past politics that the narrative contains may be read with an oblique glance at present politics, while the humorous ingredients of the love story are tested ingredients that have proved themselves effective in many masterly hands. And, in 'Then and Now,' they are once again in the service of a master, for, when it comes to a lively and naughty tale, Somerset Maugham can hold his own with the best of the Italians and the Romans." B. R. Redman
+ Sat R of Lit 29:9 My 25 '46 1550w

"The two portraits are so well done that if it were not for the Decameron counter-plot one could almost consider the book as a biographical study. It is short, but it has not been lightly undertaken. Indeed, it must have entailed considerable research. On the other hand, it does not show Mr. Maugham in as new a light as might naturally be supposed." V. C. Clinton-Baddeley
Spec 176:514 My 17 '46 430w

"In its vivid recreation of the scenes, customs and personages of a remote past, 'Then and Now' embodies not only an impressive scholarship and a keen wit attuned to the sophisticated cynicism of its leading character, but also the same acute character analysis so long associated with all the great fictional works of Somerset Maugham. While the story centers entirely around the 'Then' in the title, the 'Now' of it figures significantly in the implication that the ways of political and amorous intrigue are much the same now as then and that the modern counterparts of the freedom-loving city state of Florence must be on guard against the same sort of perils that ancient republic faced." E. A. F.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 2 '46 440w
Time 47:102 My 27 '46 500w

"A novel about Machiavelli, a most accomplished novel, well studied, shrewdly put together and often entertaining, but with no more flow of soul than is to be expected from a virtuoso's performance. Nothing that Mr. Maugham writes can fail to stimulate interest and admiration, and yet, partly because his is not a deep-rooted historical sense, still more because the mere contemplation of Machiavelli has so obviously kindled the worldliness and cynicism of temper which restrict imagination in Mr. Maugham, this latest volume of his is insubstantial and disappointing. It is a lightly farcical little conte inflated by a determined and almost ingenuous relish for the moral and political philosophy of 'The Prince.'" — + Times [London] Lit Sup p233 My 18 '46 750w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

Weekly Book Review p1 Je 2 '46 1650w

Reviewed by Orville Prescott

Yale R n s 36:189 autumn '46 200w

MAURA, SISTER. Initiate the heart. 46p $1.75
Macmillan

811 46-4082

"Sensitive and gentle verse, in free form, by a nun, reflecting upon various facets of life and nature and, in one section, on the satisfactions of conventual life." Christian Century

"Sister Maura's poems are hard, gem-like, and amazingly concise. Emotion is always controlled, words are used sparingly and effectively, and the author's genius for apt, original imagery is all the more outstanding because of her reserve. Sister Maura's poems do not merely sing—they think." Muriel Reno
+ Cath World 164:90 O '46 100w

Christian Century 63:724 Je 5 '46 30w

"A small volume of intense and sincere religious verse, that Catholic readers will appreciate. More deeply felt than skilled, her verse has the power of expressing many moods and thoughts native to a devout member of a religious order."

+ Kirkus 13:556 D 15 '45 90w

"Initiate the Heart' will probably mean more to sharers of the same faith than to lovers of poetry for its own sake. Her poems are best when they abandon religious aphorism for the particular image." Marguerite Young
N Y Times p12 Jl 21 '46 30w

"Sister Maura writes her quatrains with grace. She takes one or two fliers into the more usual media of modern verse but she is at her best when she is most simple and when she tries least to clothe her sincerity in the mantle of intellectual analysis. The simple prayers for the refugees, for persons of all faiths, included generously in her poetry, will find sympathetic readers everywhere." Marnie Bacon
+ Sat R of Lit 30:24 Ja 4 '47 150w

MAURER, EDWARD ROSE, and others. Mechanics for engineers; statics and dynamics. 425p $4 Wiley

531 Mechanics 45-10457

"This new revision of a long-established text (the first edition was published in 1903) has been reset and almost completely rewritten as compared to the fifth edition (1925). Topics introduced for the first time are virtual work and mechanical vibrations; topics amplified or treated in a new way include dynamics, plane motion and relative motion, and d'Alembert's principle. Many new problems are introduced and answers are now furnished for some of the more difficult ones. Throughout the text, sentences and paragraphs have been revised and re-worded for the sake of clarity. Earlier editions were entitled Technical Mechanics." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Eng N 136:111 Mr 7 '46 120w
Library J 70:1090 N 15 '45 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:58 O '45

Reviewed by James Stokley
Weekly Book Review p21 Ag 25 '46
150w

MAURIAC, FRANCOIS. Woman of the Pharisees (La Pharisienne) tr. by Gerard Hopkins. 241p $2.50 Holt [9s Eyre]

46-7273

Character study of a "good" woman who cannot refrain from imposing her will upon other people. One by one the people she tries to "help" in the name of religion, meet with tragedy, until her own tragedy overtakes her.

Reviewed by Helen Woodward
Book Week p5 O 27 '46 550w

"It is strong proof of M. Mauriac's artistic and Christian maturity that he dares the risk of anticlimax by showing the eventual conversion of his pious Pharisee—her realization that 'it is not our deserts that matter but our love.' Altogether he gives us the subtle and searching work one has learned to expect from so fastidious an artist. If the novel does not quite rank with his greatest, it is largely because the conclusion leaves several loose ends to be tied up in a projected sequel." Katherine Brégy

+ — Cath World 164:277 D '46 440w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle
Commonweal 45:17 O 18 '46 950w

"A portrait of self-righteousness and self-love at its most vindictive, of public humanitarianism and private inhumanity, this is a suggestive, subtle study—if presumably too refined, too alien, for a popular American public."

+ Kirkus 14:330 JI 15 '46 160w

"Recommended." E. S. Brown
+ Library J 71:1465 O 15 '46 100w

Reviewed by Harold Brighthouse
Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 18 '46 350w

Reviewed by Wallace Fowle
New Repub 115:523 O 21 '46 750w

"It is refreshing to come upon a contemporary, imaginative writer whose moral values do not wear a provisional air. Pity and understanding are certainly the most striking qualities of Mauriac's novels; but both are edged with the sternness that comes of an absolute religious conviction, bred in the bone and fostered by strong attachment to a traditional way of life in a remote and self-contained corner of France. . . This volume is planned as the first of a complete edition, in English, of Mauriac's novels, and the publishers must be congratulated on their choice of a translator. The narrative flows smoothly and clearly, the words are always nicely and judiciously chosen, and in rendering the dialogue Mr. Hopkins has wisely refrained from trying to make it sound like English talk. As a translation it is something of a work of art in itself, and for that reason a tribute to the greatest of living novelists." Paul Dombey

+ New Statesman & Nation 31:379 My 25 '46 1900w

"Particularly convincing are those passages where Mauriac displays his characters in moments of utter loneliness, of self-doubt and spiritual dereliction, when their outer characteristics seem to fall away and an inner fog deprives them of vividness and precision as human beings. This kind of revelation minor novelists invariably avoid. . . Mauriac's style avoids all trace of obliquity or virtuosity; he saves his ingenuity and indirection for purposes of psychological revelation. His style seems a little arid, but in the end fulfills its function with precision, coolness, economy. Beside him Gide seems artful and barren, Romans more than a little meretricious, Malraux harsh and narrow, Sartre ephemeral, Du Gard heavy and obtuse. He lacks magnificence, he lacks spaciousness. But he has a claim to be considered among the greatest of living novelists." Fred-eric Prokosch

+ N Y Times p7 O 20 '46 1000w

"A deeply impressive novel by an author whose growth has been continuous and whose present stature makes so much contemporary fiction seem sadly thin by comparison."

+ New Yorker 22:123 N 9 '46 140w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Sat R of Lit 29:26 D 7 '46 1400w

"There is no cheap tenderness in this man's work; it is exacting and arbitrary, even bigoted. It is bitter-tasting, as is the work of Camus and of Sartre; and if one does not have acquaintance with or curiosity for its spiritual idiom, which is the uncompromising one of the Roman Catholic Church, then its fruit may turn to dust in the mouth, as for some of us does the Existentialist dish. But Mauriac's analysis of human motive and absurdity is founded on a very old hypothesis, of the existence of God and of the responsibility before God of each isolated human soul. . . This particular novel, his latest, has curious structural flaws. The story is narrated in retrospect by one of its participants, who therefore has to invent reasons and devices to explain his close knowledge of the inner hearts of the others. This method weakens conviction in the reader, and affects characterisation so that we do not altogether get hold of the various personalities. Also, I am not sure that M. Mauriac persuades us that Brigitte Plan, the Pharisee, is as deeply responsible for the troubles wrought in her entourage as we are asked to believe." Kate O'Brien

Spec 176:436 Ap 26 '46 750w

Time 48:110 O 21 '46 380w

"Few better examples of the author's psychological mastery could have been chosen to inaugurate the present edition of his works. In no other of his novels are the moralist and the story-teller so skillfully combined. The narrator is, in fact, a Chorus, now touching the main action of the book and joining the interplay of its characters, now standing aside and speaking directly to the reader. This makes possible a certain blend of sympathy and detachment which suits both the necessities of the book and the temperament of the author. There is a quick fever in the style which tells us that Mauriac could never stand in icy detachment from his story as Flaubert stood from 'Madame Bovary.' "

Times [London] Lit Sup p229 My 18 '46
3600w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard, Jr.

Weekly Book Review p28 N 24 '46 800w

MAUROIS, ANDRE. Eisenhower, the liberator; drawings by George Avison [tr. by Eileen Lane Kinney]. 80p 2s Didier

B or 92 Eisenhower, Dwight David 46-222

Clear, simply written biography of Eisenhower, in which most of the eighty pages are devoted to his campaigns in Africa and Europe. For age ten and older.

Bookmark 7:11 Ag '46

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 29 '46
200w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn BK 22:212 My '46 120w

"This is a brief biography, routine material, undistinguished in style and content. (Maurois does not quite get the right approach for juvenile biography—as witness his Franklin)—and he tends to make the general a ponderously noble character rather than the genial human being he is."

Kirkus 13:437 O 1 '46 130w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Johnson
Library J 71:186 F 1 '46 70w

N Y Times p22 Ja 20 '46 80w

"A lively and interesting biography. . . Like the earlier life of Benjamin Franklin, the format of this book is confusing. In illustration and typography it suggests a book for younger boys and girls. In text it is definitely for the older ones. This is a pity, because there is much in both biographies that older boys and girls would enjoy. They should have, really, the format of a book for adults if they are to win the readers that they deserve." M. G. D.

MAUROIS, ANDRE—Continued
+ — Sat R of Lit 29:59 F 16 '46 470w

School & Society 63:143 F 23 '46 90w
"This is a condensation of material previously used in full-length biographies and the very process of boiling down sharpens the picture and leaves only essential residue, without heroics." D. B. E.
+ Spring'd Republican p4d Ja 27 '46 360w

"Brief and to the point, this portrait-biography . . . is high-lighted by a sense of momentous decisions continually made and kept swiftly moving by interest in the way these decisions were carried out." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p7 Ap 14 '46 260w

MAWHINNEY, MATTHEW HOLMES. Heating of steel. 265p il $4.75 Reinhold

669.1 Steel, Heat treatment of 46-716
"Although there is an introductory chapter on the chemical effects of heating steel, this work is mainly a discussion of methods and equipment used rather than of the metallurgical results obtained. Topics dealt with include fuels and burners, furnace control, quenching, alloys and refractories used in heat-treating equipment, and steel mill furnaces. There are numerous illustrations of modern installations. The work is intended chiefly for engineers and others practically concerned with the selection and operation of heat-treating equipment." N Y New Tech Bks

Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '46
Library J 71:184 F 1 '46 120w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:62 O '45

MAXTONE GRAHAM, MRS JOYCE (AN-STRUTHER) (JAN STRUTHER, pseud). Pocketful of pebbles; decorations by Aldren Watson. 428p $3.50 Harcourt

828 46-25160
Collection of poems, and informal essays, and some talks given in the United States since 1940. Some of the material has been published in book form in England, and some has appeared in magazines.

Booklist 42:314 Je 1 '46

Christian Century 63:807 Je 26 '46 40w

"'A Pocketful of Pebbles' is good Mrs. Miniver because it is humorous without being cynical, simple without being superficial, because a good part of it relates to family life, and all of it demonstrates the author's power of intense observation." W. K. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 14 '46 480w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '46

"'A Pocketful of Pebbles' will be sought out by the admirers of Mrs. Miniver (of which I am one), but some of the pebbles might better have been allowed to slip through the publishers' fingers." E. V. R. Wyatt
+ Commonweal 44:242 Je 21 '46 390w

"A spritely salamagundi of awareness, precision; and elegance."
+ Kirkus 14:211 My 1 '46 150w

"The little essay—or talk—on Librarians in this volume of 'pebbles' will endear the book to us all. Jan Struther is an ambassador of good will who does much for the English and much for the Americans. She is never too erudite, always sparkling and wise. A good bedside book." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 71:823 Je 1 '46 100w

Reviewed by Russell Maloney
N Y Times p4 Je 9 '46 600w

"This appetizing potpourri is an excellent summer dish for vacation diet. Moreover, the pleasing thought occurs that Miss Struther's desk drawers should be beautifully empty now, leaving nothing to deter her from starting on serious work now, which most of her readers are no doubt looking forward to." R. M. Morgan
+ Spring'd Republican p6 Je 25 '46 310w

"The poetry in this book is smooth and winning verse. It is more confession than art, and where it is light it is best. But the whole book is a kind of confession of a blithe and wise woman who ought some day to essay something larger and more unified. For this very winning personality here revealed is a born writer who ought not to be spending her time collecting pebbles." Irwin Edman

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Je 16 '46 950w
Wis Lib Bul 42:113 Jl '46

MAXWELL, WILLIAM. Heavenly tenants; pictures by Ilonka Karasz. 56p $2 Harper

46-11959

Fanciful tale for young readers. The Marvells from Wisconsin, all lovers of the stars, go on a visit to Virginia. While they are away a strange unearthly light appears in their farmhouse. It proves to be no fire; it resembles starlight; and when they return the Marvells find evidence of visitors from another sphere.

"This little tale attempts no propaganda, but the girl or boy—or adult—who reads of these kindly neighbors of the zodiac, will be conscious of a glow, a feeling of nearness to the starry universe. This I think is more important than word lists or primers on sociology. The delightful story is enhanced by the imaginative artistry of the illustrator." F. N. Littlen
+ Book Week p3 N 10 '46 160w

Booklist 43:60 O 15 '46

"The picture by Ilonka Karasz are unusual and interesting, but most children like their science straight."

Cath World 164:381 Ja '47 50w

"Mr. Maxwell does not spoil his fantasy with one word too many. By suggestion and implication he opens the door for the imaginative reader to take delight in this unusual tale which has humor as well as beauty. Not often has the feeling of early Spring in the country been so successfully suggested." A. T. Eaton
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 D 17 '46 320w

"Mr. Maxwell writes with perfect naturalness of the Marvell family and of the stars. Half realism, half fantasy, the reader is not confused but is left with a sense of the nearness of the heavens to the earth. Miss Karasz's full-color jacket and double-page drawings, in midnight blue, of the spring equinox and the shining farm buildings make a very beautiful book. The spot drawings of the signs of the zodiac are fascinating to children or grown-ups." A. C. Moore
+ Horn Bk 22:455 N '46 170w

"An enchanting story—and a good family tale as well—and the samples of illustrations by Ilonka Karasz give promise that it will be a beautiful book."

+ Kirkus 14:455 S 15 '46 170w

"It is difficult to predict its use; children who know something of astronomy should enjoy the book while others may be led to an interest in the stars through the story. Well written, distinguished in format. Unusual black and white illustrations by Ilonka Karasz include an imaginative picture of the heavens." M. A. Herr
Library J 71:1720 D 1 '46 140w

"Mr. Maxwell, a novelist of distinction, writes with his customary sensitive appreciation of both the homely things of farm life and of the shining mystery of the Milky Way. The fantasy's theme is one to delight the imaginative child of 8 to 12 and Ilonka Karasz' beautiful illustrations in midnight blue will quicken that delight. Yet there is a restraint of climax, a sloping-off of a narrative which gives to the whole a tenuous, rather disjointed air, robbing the story of its ultimate sense of wonder." E. L. Buell
+ — N Y Times p38 O 13 '46 270w

"Wholly matter-of-fact children may be unable to sense the rare quality of this book, but imaginative ones will like it. It is to be recommended, too, to adults, for the distinction of its writing and its illustrations." K. S. White

+ New Yorker 22:141 D 7 '46 60w

Reviewed by Phyllis White

San Francisco Chronicle p5 N 10 '46
130w

"A successful novelist wrote this story. The outstanding quality in it is its restraint. Nothing is obvious, much is implied. Familiar, homely things are here. The stars are in the sky. But no imaginative child will hesitate in his belief that the signs of the zodiac came down and spent three weeks at the Marvel farm. No one in the story saw them but old August, and he did not bother himself or them with questions. The writing is simple and objective. There is beauty and feeling in every word. Ilonka Karasz is perhaps best known to readers through the covers of The New Yorker. For this book she has made three double-page drawings in white ink on dark blue. They are realistic in detail and beautiful in design. The cover-jacket is in full, rich color. It reminds one of the early Italian artists or of one of Lauren Ford's paintings." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:44 N 9 '46 550w

"William Maxwell writes novels and short stories revealing a talent so unusual and so distinctively free from clichés of thought that his entrance into the children's field is bound to be a gain. I am not sure it is a book for children, but some of the best children's books are not." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p10 N 17 '46 310w
Wis Lib Bul 42:171 D '46

MAYNARD, THEODORE. Mystic in motley; the life of St. Philip Neri. (Science and culture ser) 250p $2.50 Bruce pub.

B or 92 Filippo Neri, Saint 46-3458

"The Newman Centenary may have prompted this new life of the founder of the Oratory to which he belonged. . . The picture of the noted Italian reformer, a great influence in 16th century Rome, one who played the fool to attract men to God, is well drawn and full." Library J

Book Week p8 Ap 21 '46 140w

"This life of St. Philip Neri is an interesting addition to hagiography. It is a popularly written but thorough account of the life and work of the one saint who was noted both for his saintliness and for his sense of humor."

+ Kirkus 14:194 Ap 15 '46 180w

Reviewed by R. J. Hurley

Library J 71:585 Ap 15 '46 120w

MAYO, ELEANOR R. Loom of the land. 405p $2.75 Morrow

46-25273

"Russ Walls, strong, dominant, stubborn, almost ruins the lives of his three older children, two sons and a daughter. Grace, the mother, putting her husband first, sincerely tries to understand her children and reconcile the family. Stanny, the youngest, fears his father, yet is fascinated by him." Library J

"Vigorously and well-written in the vernacular of the Maine seaside town whose story it tells. The physical and moral collapse near the end of the novel, of the town's single short-lived effort to rebel against their small-time dictator is completely convincing. You will enjoy reading, I believe, about Russ and his family and his town, and will understand his kind better for the skillful, perceptive picture Miss Mayo has drawn of him." F. H. Bullock

+ Book Week p8 S 15 '46 320w

Booklist 43:70 N 1 '46

"A sturdy, penetrating novel."

+ Kirkus 14:306 J1 1 '46 150w

"Worth reading, good characterizations, should be popular. Recommended." E. F. Kelly

+ Library J 71:127 S 1 '46 70w

"Treated with a little more humor, Russ could have been another likable, eccentric Father. Undoubtedly Miss Mayo has narrative ability and a certain descriptive power which is more visually vivid than imaginatively real. She has also a good ear for the unmistakable Maine dialect. These abilities she could have used to better advantage, in a really regional story about Maine people who are better attuned to the lonely splendor and beauty of their land." Nona Balakian

+ N Y Times p10 S 22 '46 700w

"The novelist evidently has drawn freely upon experience and observation for many of the episodes, some of which, although well executed, are not skilfully integrated into the novel, but seem detached and superimposed. The descriptive passages, mercifully brief, are excellent; the very feel of seaboard New England is here." R. A. Cordell

+ Sat R of Lit 29:81 D 7 '46 550w

"'Loom of the Land' has the vigor and sharpness of line of the Maine scene on a clear autumn day after a big blow. You see Russ Walls clearly. Yet his portrait lacks some dimension to make it wholly credible. The Russ of this story is a man without an Achilles heel, without doubt or misgiving. . . Miss Mayo's observation and writing is, at its best, so forceful and effective that one may hope that time will add depth to her portraiture." Mary Ross

Weekly Book Review p12 S 15 '46 500w

Wis Lib Bul 42:168 D '46

MAYO, ELTON. Social problems of an industrial civilization. 150p $2.50 Harvard univ. Division of research

301.153 Social problems

A46-624

"Directing his attention primarily to relationships between management and workers, Professor Mayo cites industrial research studies to show that, in the absence of adequate social organization, 'incentive' wages and appeals to individual economic self-interest do not operate to encourage production. Industrial efficiency and maximum production are the result primarily of solidarity and a feeling of oneness among workers—of the sense of belonging to a significant social group. 'If one observes either industrial workers or university students with sufficient care and continuity, one finds that the proportionate number actuated by motives of a self-interest logically elaborated is exceedingly small. They have relapsed upon self-interest when social association has failed them' (p.43). In politics, as might be expected, the author criticizes doctrines which stem from Hobbesian conceptions of the social order. Political order is not an imposition from without on anti-social men, but rather the outgrowth of inherent coöperative tendencies." (Am Pol Sci R) Index.

"To economists and especially to teachers of economics, this book will prove stimulating and at times shockingly irritating. With that portion of Professor Mayo's work which describes the difficulties of achieving effective co-operation in industry and advocates increased emphasis on the human factor, there must necessarily be definite agreement. In his discussion of these matters, Professor Mayo again proves himself not only an erudite scholar, but a down-to-earth philosopher with a sagacity founded upon his insistence on the utilization of objective clinical methods in studying industrial relations. On the other hand, with the thesis which apparently places the blame for both domestic and international ills largely upon the tenets of classical economic theory there can be no meeting of the minds." J. W. Harriman

+ — Am Econ R 36:394 Je '46 900w

Reviewed by B. B. Burritt

Am J Pub Health 36:810 J1 '46 320w

"There is nothing new in the general argument of this book, although Mayo seems at times to maintain the contrary. But the concrete illustrations taken from recent industrial research serve very well to point up Aristotle's ancient observation that man is a political animal." M. Q. Sibley

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:399 Ap '46 300w

Reviewed by D. S. Kimball

Ann Am Acad 245:206 My '46 340w

Reviewed by Emerson Hynes

Commonweal 43:625 Ap 5 '46 450w

"It is a matter of regret to have to record that Mr. Mayo's most recent volume does not add materially to the pronouncements with which we are already familiar from the Harvard group. Neither in point of findings of fact or principle is there here any substantial building upon what earlier studies have set forth. Even the title seems unwittingly misleading, promising more than it delivers." Ordnay Tead

MAYO, ELTON—Continued

— + Survey G 35:179 My '46 800w

"The volume should be useful to social scientists concerned in the improvement of research and educational methods, and also to alert industrial managers and labor leaders who could use the truly epochmaking discoveries of Professor Mayo and his colleagues regarding the role of personal-social relations in modern industry."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:138 Je '46 320w

MAYOR, ALPHEUS HYATT. Biblena family. 37p 49pl $12.50 Bittner, H.

725.822 Galli da Biblena family 46-1471

"The Biblenas were an Italian family who during most of the eighteenth century were the dominant stage designers for the baroque masques and other theatrical spectacles the great princes of the day so delighted in giving. Their work was therefore somewhat specialized. However, this book covers some interesting aspects of the techniques of early stagecraft, and the fifty-odd plates give a remarkable view of the baroque at its height." New Yorker

Reviewed by Dorothy Odenheimer
Book Week p14 Mr 24 '46 320w
New Yorker 22:90 F 23 '46 80w

"By a rare combination of excellence, the publisher, the printer and the author have made of this volume an immediate must for every theatre library, public or private, that makes the least pretension to quality. Besides the illuminating text and the informing biographies, there are fifty-two colotype reproductions of Biblena theatres, scenes or ornamental details—a treasure of baroque art." E. J. R. Isaacs

+ Theatre Arts 30:305 My '46 2950w
Times [London] Lit Sup p345 Ji 20 '46 2100w

"A. Hyatt Mayor, of the Metropolitan Museum, has brought the Biblenas, and their arts sharply to life in a wittily written and superbly illustrated folio." Kenneth MacGowan
+ Weekly Book Review p18 Mr 24 '46 1450w

MAYORGA, MRS MARGARET (GARDNER), ed. Best one-act plays of 1945. (V9) 321p $3 Dodd

812.08 Dramas—Collections (38-8006)

Contents: Atomic bombs, by Frank and Doris Hursley; On a note of triumph, by Norman Corwin; The face, by Arthur Laurents; To the American people, by Morton Wishengrad; A Bunyan yarn, by Stanley Young; Summer fury, by James Broughton; The devil's foot, by N. J. Biel; The unsatisfactory supper, by Tennessee Williams; The fisherman, by Jonathan Tree; Silver nails, by Nicholas Bela; The far-distant shore, by Robert Finch and Betty Smith; Bibliographies: Selected plays of the year, and New collections of one-act plays.

Book Week p4 Ji 14 '46 270w

Booklist 42:345 Ji 1 '46

Reviewed by Lewis Funke
N Y Times p22 Ag 25 '46 600w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Weekly Book Review p21 S 15 '46 100w

MAYORGA, MRS MARGARET (GARDNER), comp. 80 non-royalty one-act popular classics. 458p $3 Greenberg

808.82 Dramas—Collections 46-4054

One-act plays, some of them from medieval times, and all now free of royalties. Contents: The exodus from Egypt, by Ezekielos; The wandering scholar, by Hans Sachs; The dragon (Ancient Chinese); Gammer Gurton's needle (Medieval); The great theatre of the world, by George Calderon; The affected young ladies, by Molière; The Yankee peddler; or Old times in Virginia, by Morris Barnett; Box and Cox, by J. M. Morton; A likely story, by W. D. Howells; Countess Mizzie; or The family reunion, by Arthur Schnitzler; The boor, by Anton Chekhov; The land of heart's desire, by W. B. Yeats; A miracle of Saint Anthony, by Maurice Maeterlinck; The terrible meek, by C. R. Kennedy; The girl in the coffin, by Theodore Dreiser; The triumph of the egg, by Sherwood Anderson; In Abraham's bosom, by Paul Green; The feast of Ortolans, by Maxwell Anderson; Afternoon storm, by E. P. Conkle; The states talking, by Archibald MacLeish.

Booklist 42:326 Je 15 '46

Bookmark 7:7 N '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '46

"Excellent anthology. . . Recommended for all drama collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 71:407 Mr 15 '46 30w

MAZET, HORACE SAWYER. Eagles in the sky. 189p $1 Presbyterian bd.

46-4244

"Vivid story of a night flyer squadron and its operations from a Chinese base in the war against Japan. More than an account of dangerous missions from which men fall to return, of spies and narrow escapes from death. There is much emphasis on the fears of flying men and of how they are met and conquered." Library J

"Plane-wise teens will find this a satisfying book."

+ Kirkus 14:254 Je 1 '46 40w

"A better than average war thriller for teenage boys." Miriam Snow
+ Library J 71:984 Ji '46 70w

Reviewed by Frederick Graham
N Y Times p17 Je 23 '46 60w

MEAD, HUNTER. Types and problems of philosophy; an introduction. 402p $3 Holt
110 Philosophy 46-3875

"Avoiding the historical and chronological approach, because the reader too often exhausts himself before getting to the questions that seem most important to him, the author combines the consideration of the most urgent and universal problems of philosophy with a presentation of the competing types of systems that have been evolved in seeking answers to them. He attempts to stand outside of all these systems and view them all objectively and impartially. The aim is not to make propaganda for any particular set of answers, but to furnish a stimulus and a guide to philosophical thinking." (Christian Century) Index.

"You will recognize this as a textbook for college courses in introduction to philosophy chiefly from a hint in the preface, an occasional slant in style and typography, and the appended glossary of terms. Otherwise—and all the more because of these devices—it is well adapted for use by any thoughtful reader who wants to begin at the beginning and find out what philosophy is all about."

+ Christian Century 63:722 Je 5 '46 180w

"Any introductory exposition which leaves the student so completely on his own with but two such mutually blinding lighthouses [idealism and naturalism] to guide him seems to be of doubtful value. Neither idealists nor naturalists are likely to find its depictions of their positions entirely acceptable. Professor Mead has sacrificed too much to supposed dramatic contrast, and has allowed a sterile dichotomy inherited from the battles of the nineteenth century to dominate his treatment in a century which has been struggling toward more subtle and mediating views. So, in spite of his conscientious reviewing of the issues in the light of his thesis of philosophy as essentially an 'irreconcilable conflict' between idealism and naturalism, this reviewer finds it not only 'not proved' but a step backward in the construction of introductory texts." H. A. L.

— + J Philos 43:526 S 12 '46 900w

"Mr. Mead's book, in addition to combining an exposition of the types of philosophy with analyses of major philosophical problems, has the advantage of making philosophy a pertinent and important subject to the beginning student." A. F.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 18 '46
100w

MEADER, STEPHEN WARREN. Jonathan goes west; il. by Edward Shenton. 241p $2.25 Harcourt

46-6955

An adventure story for older boys. Sixteen-year-old Jonathan set out from Maine, in 1845, to join his father in Illinois. After a long journey by schooner, rail, steamboat, on foot, and as driver for a blind bookseller, Jonathan reached his destination and found his father had died. The journey back to Maine was almost as exciting as the journey out.

"Older boys will follow his travels by schooner and steamboat and wagon and on foot with keen interest and will thoroughly approve of the fine climax of a well-written story." Martha King

+ Book Week p9 O 6 '46 140w

Booklist 43:90 N 15 '46

"The tale is packed full with excitement, but it is believable, with a well-worked-out plot. As always, Mr. Meader writes well and catches the flavor of country and period." A. T. Eaton
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 D 5 '46
210w

Churchman 160:3 N 15 '46 40w

"The good sense of the historic past makes this excellent school and library background material."

+ Kirkus 14:491 O 1 '46 90w

"A new Meader title is good news to librarians and older boys who enjoy a stirring narrative. . . Edward Shenton's illustrations add greatly in creating a satisfying piece of bookmaking. Recommended." Margaret Miller
+ Library J 71:1468 O 15 '46 70w

"An absorbing story of our country before the Civil War, this is one of Mr. Meader's best." H. B. L.

+ N Y Times p5 N 10 '46 130w

"An adventurous, well-knit story, this is warm with feeling for the land and for the people that Jonathan met on his way. The drawings are effective, the type clear and inviting." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:52 N 9 '46 230w

"It would be hard to find for high-school age a better view of the country a hundred years ago, its way of getting about and through the delightful Traveling Athenaeum—the diffusion and character of its culture." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p9 N 24 '46 500w

Wis Lib Bul 42:154 N '46

MEADOWCROFT, MRS ENID (LA MONTE). China's story; il. by Dong Kingman [and others]. 92p maps $2 Crowell

951 China—Juvenile literature 46-6575

Description of China and her problems stressing details which would lead to an understanding of the country by grades five to eight. Illustrated by a Chinese artist.

Booklist 43:39 O 1 '46

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

Christian Science Monitor p14 D 5 '46
180w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 22:471 N '46 90w

Kirkus 13:224 My 15 '45 130w

"A simple, straight-forward, sympathetic description. . . In schools it could be used easily with fifth-grade children and at the same time be a boon to slower readers in the junior high school." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 71:1057 Ag '46 70w

"An informing, factual story of China. . . There is no index, but it will have great value to schools. Distinguished illustrations and format."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:70 N 9 '46 140w

MEANS, MRS FLORENCE (CRANNELL). Great day in the morning; il. by Helen Blair. 182p $2 Houghton

46-25295

Lilybelle is an ambitious Negro girl from St Helena Island, South Carolina, who goes to Tuskegee to take teacher's training. When overwork forces her to leave, she decides to take nurses training, which is the work she is best fitted to do. Dr Carver is one of the characters. For older girls.

"Life at Tuskegee and the portrait of Dr. Carver are done with warmth and skill, and Lily Belle's similarity to any witty white girl should do more to promote understanding between the two races than any amount of sermonizing." Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 178:170 D '46 120w

"Whether she is writing about the Mexican, Nisei, Indian or Negro, Mrs. Means writes with a deep understanding of their problems. Here she presents one of the major questions facing Negro young people today—getting jobs and fighting discrimination. She has also given us an honest picture of the rich folk customs of the people of St. Helena Island. Some critics may object to the use of dialect, but everyone must admit that the rural people of South Carolina have a vernacular all their own." Charlemae Rollins

+ Book Week p24 N 10 '46 220w

Booklist 43:57 O 15 '46

"This fine story is not one-sided; Mrs. Means has a lesson for black Americans as well as for white." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:473 N '46 180w

Kirkus 14:426 S 1 '46 110w

"Setting is real, Gullah dialect authentic and characters and situations convincing. Of interest to senior high school girls who like school stories and love stories and to the librarian who wishes to add to her collection of books on racial cooperation. Highly recommended." M. M. Smith

+ Library J 71:1720 D 1 '46 140w

"The dialect will bother some readers and offend others. But here is American life as it seems to a simple, ambitious Negro girl who learns the importance of good manners on both sides of the color line and the necessity for young Negroes to accept the responsibility which comes with equality. A rather serious girls' story which is also a plea for interracial understanding." M. C. S.

+ N Y Times p50 N 10 '46 180w

"Florence Crannell continues here her venturing into fields avoided by the timid, and does as fine a job on this as she did on 'The Moved-Outers.' The characters, skillfully drawn, are real and human young people, facing all young people's problems of love and career, and the extra problems of belonging to a minority." E. D. Breed

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 10 '46
300w

"A sensitive story, warm with humor, it lacks the strength and objectiveness of 'Shattered Windows.'"

+ Sat R of Lit 29:56 N 9 '46 70w

Wis Lib Bul 42:172 D '46

MEARS, MRS ALICE (MONKS). Brief enterprise. 61p $2 Dutton

811

45-10502

"'Brief Enterprise' received the 1945 Annual Award of the League to Support Poetry. It is a first volume of undoubted distinction, the expression of a mind mature, perceptive and alert. These are metaphysical poems, for the most part, in which the phenomena of the natural world become the symbols of the inner world of the spirit." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Book Week p20 N 25 '45 180w

MEARS, A. M.—Continued

"At her best she eloquently states a brave, almost joyful, stoicism. Her great capacity for sensuous enjoyment and her clear perception of the difficulty with which joy must be achieved create a tension that makes her most original poems (The Long Season, Give Us the Enemy, Knowledge of April, Swimmer) very effective indeed." H. C. Webster

+ Poetry 68:229 J1 '46 540w

"There are occasionally overtones of other metaphysical poets in her work. Mrs. Mears's apostrophes to the elements of air, earth, water, and fire in her poem 'Knowledge of April' cannot help but bring to mind Elinor Wylie's 'Hymn to Earth.'... But only occasionally does she speak in accents heard before. Her own idiom is distinguished and individual, rich with vivid metaphor and imagery." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 29:11 Mr 23 '46 450w

MEDARY, MARJORIE. Store at Crisscross corners; il. by Janet Smalley. 47p $1 Abingdon-Cokesbury

46-7180

Peter and Patsy loved to visit the tidy little Crisscross Corners store, kept by Mr Jenkins. When he had to go away for a few days Mr Jenkins left Freddie Fumble in charge, and confusion resulted. But with the help of Peter and Patsy, the little store was soon restored to order. For ages six to eight.

Reviewed by Martha King

Book Week p17 N 17 '46 60w

Booklist 43:75 N 1 '46

Kirkus 14:383 Ag 15 '46 80w

Reviewed by V. W. Schott

Library J 71:1335 O 1 '46 70w

Reviewed by R. A. Gordon

+ N Y Times p26 N 3 '46 140w

"Janet Smalley has done the illustrations, which are on almost every page and are in keeping with the story, being either in black and white or partially colored. They lend to the story, making an amusing tale for small folk." Florence Tapples

+ San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 10 '46 150w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p8 O 13 '46 300w

MEEK, STERNER ST PAUL. Gustav, a son of Franz; il. by Jacob Bates Abbott. 296p $2.50 Knopf

Dogs—Legends and stories

"A sequel to 'Franz,' (Book Review Digest 1935) this tells of the career of an exceptionally fine police dog in the U. S. Army Zone of Panama during the Second World War." Sat R of Lit

"Recommended." K. H. McAlarney

+ Library J 71:1630 N 15 '46 70w

Sat R of Lit 28:63 N 9 '46 30w

MELLAN, ELI H. Your rights as a veteran. 135p $1.50; pa 50c Ackerman

355.115 Veterans—Laws and legislation

45-11359

In this pocket-size book the author attempts to assemble the essentials of the laws relating to veterans' benefits. Mr Mellan, a staff sergeant in the judge advocate and legal assistance section of the army and a former government attorney, avoids detailed individual problems, but gives salient facts about pensions, vocational rehabilitation, insurance, etc. Index.

"What the book lacks is one factor that Sergeant Mellan could hardly help in view of his Army job. It is not critical and not as explanatory as one might hope. To this reviewer it reads too much like the booklets and pamphlets issued by the Army, the Navy and the Veterans Administration. They all share the same faculty of seeming to be clear in their statements but leaving veterans quite lost when they start in search of assistance or advice. These criticisms, however, are only minor in view of the scope of the book." Charles Hurd

+ — N Y Times p24 F 17 '46 270w

Reviewed by Harry Daum

Spring'd Republican p6 Ja 29 '46 300w

MELLOR, WILLIAM BANCROFT. Patton, fighting man. 245p il $3 Putnam

B or 92 Patton, George Smith 46-223

Biography of General George Patton, covering all but the final chapter of his death in Germany. The author says: "This book is not intended as an apology or an encomium. Patton needs no apology and the story of his victories is encomium enough." Illustrated with photographs. Index.

Booklist 42:183 F 1 '46

"Incredible, unpredictable, from his pearl-handled pistols, which were the wonder of war correspondents, to his profanity-strewn pre-battle fight talks—a choice sample of which is included—this was George Patton. A book dealing with such a phenomenon is bound to be fast-moving and vivid. This volume is so in thoroughly satisfying fashion." W. H. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 F 5 '46 600w

Foreign Affairs 25:165 O '46 20w

Kirkus 13:486 N 1 '45 210w

"The author's literary skill is such that the reader goes galloping through the book with eager interest. Recommended." Katherine Shorey

+ Library J 71:120 Ja 15 '46 140w

"A clear, well-written story." Don Dresden

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 20 '46 750w

"A superficial biography written in the style and with the critical acuity of a movie-magazine portrait of Van Johnson. The author leans heavily upon anecdotes, and some excellent ones are included, but he hardly goes beyond beginning to explain his fabulous subject."

+ New Yorker 21:80 F 2 '46 80w

"Swearing, swashbuckling, extremely vital Gen. George Smith Patton, Jr., lives again in the pages of Patton: Fighting Man. The biographer admires his subject and is properly sympathetic, yet he doesn't hesitate to present the evidence of detractors as well as of family, friends and the man himself. Even the early years of this colorful career are written about with appeal and imagination and the stirring account of the climactic campaign in the battle of France sweeps the reader almost into the whirlwind drive that hastened the end of the war in Europe." D. B. B.

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Ja 20 '46 900w

Reviewed by Joe McCarthy

Weekly Book Review p10 Ja 27 '46 700w

MENANDER. Two plays. 239p $3 Oxford

882 46-797

A translation and reconstruction of two dramatic fragments by Menander, which Gilbert Murray has made into two complete plays by the "father of modern comedy." The plays are: The Rape of the Locks, and The Arbitration.

"As interesting and readable as one would expect of this veteran scholar. Those who must take our Greek literature in English—and that is most of us—are quite justified in expecting translations in their times' idiom. Gilbert Murray's are such translations." Leo Kennedy

+ Book Week p17 F 17 '46 90w

Reviewed by W. J. Oates

N Y Times p86 Ap 28 '46 700w

"Both plays are, of course, in verse, but [Mr Murray] has striven for the colloquial ease of the original, and has not hesitated to employ modern idiom to render the sense, the effect sought, and let strict translation go hang. How far he has filled in the gaps, supplied the missing scenes, as they were in the originals, who can say? The layman, certainly, is quite disposed to trust him so far as any one can be trusted in such a task. And he has certainly produced two plays which could be acted (one of them already has been), which have wit and style and a certain realism in the characterization which explain the hold Menander had on the public of his day and on the Latin dramatists who copied him. They have a charm, too." W. P. Eaton

+ Weekly Book Review p16 F 17 '46
550w

MENCKEN, HENRY LOUIS. Christmas story [il. by Bill Crawford]. [32p] $1 Knopf

46-20990

A recollection of Baltimore in the early 1900's reprinted from The New Yorker. A Christmas party, given by a free thinker for a collection of bums, turns into a regular Salvation army hymn sing and testimonial meeting, to the disgust of the free thinker.

"Illustrations in color by Bill Crawford strike the proper raffish note. A robust and pointed anecdote, but not for the Scrooge-and-Tiny-Tim-trade." H. W. Hart

Library J 71:1542 N 1 '46 90w

"Mr. Mencken's story has received an assist from Bill Crawford's brassy drawings, but the illustrations are really unnecessary. For with Mr. Mencken gripping the rod with both hands and swinging mightily, his compressed morality does very well on its own." Thomas Lask

+ N Y Times p16 D 1 '46 470w

"The pictures are wonderful, and so, as you'll know if you read it, is the story." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 23 '46
450w

Reviewed by Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 29:42 D 7 '46 300w

"Just in time for the Christmas trade, this tiny book contains perhaps the nearest thing to plety in Mencken's writings. It is a moral tale, told in the Sage of Baltimore's redolent and contented prose."

Time 48:106 N 18 '46 200w

"If you are searching for an eleventh-hour gift to some bright, unbigoted friend, try Mr. Mencken's mistletoe missile. Long before Pavlov completed laboratory experiments and announced his discoveries concerning conditioned reflexes in dogs, Mr. Mencken was deep in his researches into the conditioned reflexes of man especially the bums of Baltimore some forty years ago. 'Christmas Story' lays a wreath on these departed lager hounds, without weeping into their bier." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p10 D 22 '46 270w

MENCKEN, HENRY LOUIS. Treatise on the gods. 2d ed; corrected and rewritten 302p $3.50 Knopf

290 Religion

46-6976

"First published in 1930 and since then eight times reprinted. In his new Preface [the author] explains that his purpose 'is simply to get together, in handy and I hope readable form, the material data about the embryology, anatomy, and physiology of theology, with an occasional glance at its pathology'. . . In the revision Mr. Mencken has left the first four sections substantially as they were, but has reworked the fifth on Its State Today." (Weekly Book Review) Index.

"It is literary heresy, I know, and a most reckless critical act besides, to hint that Mr. Mencken may not be omniscient—though he is incredibly learned in his fashion—or that 'logic' can make its own boobs. But, as an admiring reveler in 'Treatise on the Gods,' I am still constrained to doubt that Henry Mencken has an open mind and to suspect that he is merely what the best men have always been: somewhat brighter bigots than their contemporaries." Philip Wylie

N Y Times p6 Ja 19 '47 750w

"This is a revised edition of what many have considered to be one of Mr. Mencken's most brilliant books." P. S.

San Francisco Chronicle p13 N 24 '46
90w

Weekly Book Review p44 N 17 '46 180w

MERCER, CECIL WILLIAM (DORNFORD YATES, pseud). House that Berry built. 278p $2.50 Putnam [9s 6d Ward, Lock]

45-9780

Berry & Co, driven out of their beloved White Ladies by financial embarrassments, retreat to the Pyrenees, where, in the two years before the outbreak of war, they build a new home and help solve a murder mystery.

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers

Book Week p6 Ja 13 '46 300w

Booklist 42:200 F 15 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p4 Ja '46

Kirkus 13:496 N 15 '45 170w

"'The House That Berry Built' is utterly without intellectual significance or literary import. It pretends to none. It is old-fashioned, genteel adventure narrative with a rhinestone sparkle to its innocent gaiety, a bright artificiality about its characters, their talk and actions, and occasionally a passage of wise humor. The mannered writing and silly tricks of style do no great damage to what is essentially a delicious concoction. The novel is a delectable dish for those with a taste for this kind of delectation, and there are times when most readers have that taste." J. P. Wood

Sat R of Lit 29:51 F 16 '46 360w

Spring'd Republican p4d Ja 27 '46 140w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p16 Ja 20 '46 200w

MEREDITH, ROY. Mr Lincoln's camera man; Mathew B. Brady. 368p il $7.50 Scribner

B or 92 Brady, Mathew B. U.S.—History—Civil war—Pictorial works 46-1271

"The first full-length life, and a splendid one, of Mathew Brady, official photographer of the Civil War, containing more than four hundred pictures, a large number of which have never before been published. Here are portraits of Lincoln, Lee, Barnum, politicians, and generals; here are dead boys gaping at the sky; the burned, bombed cities of the South, dazed-looking Negro freed-men, the wrecked redoubts of the Confederate armies, and even a closeup of some D.A.R. ladies." (New Yorker) No index.

"The text of the book violates all academic orthodoxy. . . The author's spelling is equally erratic. A reader must be prepared to see: Sumpter. . . The book needs an index; quotations should be annotated; and the bibliography is naive. Often an author's name is omitted altogether. . . The author's contribution is his skill in arranging old familiar pictures with artistry that makes them appear new—certainly a great achievement for any historian." Jay Monaghan

+ — Am Hist R 51:728 Jl '46 550w

"An appreciative though not well-balanced biography. Mr. Meredith writes with admiration; he has done his best to bridge the gaps in Brady's career; he points out the technical hazards of such pioneer photography and he makes us feel the neglect with which Brady was rewarded. So far, so good. But in retracing the campaigns of the Civil War the biographer too often loses sight of his little bearded hero; the original captions of the battle scenes are not as closely related to the text as they might have been, nor is allowance made for discrepancies such as the photo of the National Hotel in Washington with a taxi parked in front!" Edward Weeks

+ — Atlantic 177:154 Ap '46 850w

"Here is a book about which even a hardened reviewer can wax enthusiastic. Not only was Brady himself an important, though now little remembered personage, but the entire Civil War unrolls itself in a new light in this well-illustrated volume, for the reader sees it through the eyes or rather through the lens of the man who functioned as the official photographer of the federal government." Otto Elsenachimi

MEREDITH, ROY—Continued

+ Book Week p3 F 10 '46 400w

Booklist 42:212 Mr 1 '46

"A beautifully-printed volume. Unfortunately, a few typographical mistakes and errors of fact—such as placing Andrew Jackson's 'Hermitage' in Kentucky—seem to indicate that publication was rushed for Lincoln's birthday. But these do not detract from the value of the whole." M. W. Bayley

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 F 11 '46 550w

Reviewed by Wayne Andrews

Commonweal 43:602 Mr 29 '46 450w

"The text—the first full biography of Brady—is factual, competent, but uninspired; the pictures are their own best advocate. An essential item for every collector of Civil War material. A beautiful piece of book making."

+ Kirkus 14:54 F 1 '46 170w

"This volume on Brady, the photographer, is a book that to all intents and purposes writes its own review. It is a piece of absorbing reading, a mine of material much of which has never been published before, and a book that is invaluable historically." Stark Young

+ New Repub 114:290 F 25 '46 950w

"Mr. Meredith provides the first full-length account of Brady. His text is competent and readable, though scholars will regret the vagueness of the citations; but the main thing is the pictures, and Mr. Meredith has brought together the well-known Bradys, some not so well known, and some never before reproduced. It is a half century's experience in American history to browse through the collection." A. M. Schlesinger

+ N Y Times p1 F 10 '46 1200w

New Yorker 22:88 F 23 '46 120w

"Mr. Meredith's fine collection of Brady's work, both portraits and war photographs, has done him justice. The author is himself a photographer, not a historian, and his recapitulation of the background of the Civil War adds some tedious pages to the volume. Most readers will prefer to dip occasionally into the text, and reserve their first attention for the pictures." Margaret Leach

+ Sat R of Lit 29:19 Mr 30 '46 1200w

Time 47:103 F 18 '46 550w

"Mr. Meredith has produced a book important to the historian and welcome to the Civil War fan, the camera fiend and to all readers who are interested in beautiful pictures." Lloyd Lewis

+ Weekly Book Review p1 F 10 '46 1300w
Wis Lib Bul 42:45 Mr '46

"Mr. Lincoln's Camera Man," is devoted solely to Brady, and it has two great advantages over any previous publication: the pictures are superbly reproduced (many are published for the first time), and they cover Brady's whole career, which may be measured by the fact that he photographed seventeen Presidents of the United States. These pages eloquently demonstrate how impoverished American historical portraiture would be without Brady. . . . It is unfortunate that Mr. Meredith's text does not match his selections of Brady's work. The writing is careless; irritating, easily avoidable errors of fact are numerous; picture captions are sketchy; and an index is lacking. Brady's genius as a photographer is not explained, and incredible though it may seem, the present ownership, location and status of the negatives from which the illustrations were made, is nowhere indicated. However, the book is primarily one of illustrations, and these are superb." D. M. Potter

+ Yale R n s 35:733 summer '46 700w

MERGENDAHL, CHARLES HENRY. His days are as grass. 397p $2.75 Little

46-2896

An almost day-by-day review of the life of a typical young American who died on Tarawa. It describes Gordie Taylor's childhood, his grammar school days; high school and college years; his marriage, and enlistment in the marines. Before his last agony on Betio Beach-head he had received a picture of the baby he was never to see.

"Mergendahl is a born novelist, holding the reader even when he writes page after page about practically nothing." George Dillon

+ Book Week p22 Ap 14 '46 320w

Christian Science Monitor p13 My 25 '46 700w

"Not important—but moving."

Kirkus 14:47 F 1 '46 190w

"Well written, human, often humorous." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 71:484 Ap 1 '46 130w

"An honest novel, written with a sensitivity for incident, and a sentimental reader will take delight in finding small parts of his own life mirrored in print. Sometimes this detail is justified by a leanness of touch, a psychological insight, that lifts it to importance. More often the book is a weary chronicle of a dull life that never gains the stature to justify its chronicling. It is partly redeemed by the author's feeling for his characters and his compassion for their struggle. But only in the description of the first months of marriage is there a cohesion of incident, analysis and compassion that raises the characters into a life outside the pages of the book." C. M. Fredericks

+ N Y Times p12 Je 23 '46 270w

"Mr. Mergendahl's writing is honest but never particularly individual. In effect he has furnished us with a recognizable transcript of American youth during the past twenty-five years, but a shallow one. It throws little new light on what goes on within the supposedly mysterious minds of our young people." Theodore Purdy

Sat R of Lit 29:36 My 25 '46 400w

Reviewed by R. M. Morgan

Spring'd Republican p4d My 5 '46 420w

"Each time a man dies a world ends. It happened 931 times, during three November days, at an island called Tarawa. Charles Mergendahl was there as a Navy landing-boat officer. His new novel is an attempt, a sensitive, brilliantly successful attempt, to sum up one of the worlds that came to an end on Nov. 20, 1943. . . . It is unique—every life is—but it is enough like the others to stand as a quiet tribute to all." Richard Match

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ap 14 '46 800w

MERIAM, LEWIS. Relief and social security. 912p $5 Brookings

331.2544 Insurance, Social 46-4628

"This is the most thorough study that has yet been made of the whole question of public relief and old age and unemployment insurance—the history of such undertakings, the systems formerly and now in operation under the federal government, in states, and in Great Britain and New Zealand, and the major issues today in financing and administering such programs, including their immediate and long-range social effects." Christian Century

Reviewed by William Haber

Am Soc R 11:648 O '46 1200w

"Serious students of social security legislation and administration will find it indispensable."

+ Christian Century 63:893 Jl 17 '46 140w

"Technical judgments are often influenced by underlying attitudes. This is strikingly true of all economic questions and more particularly so of those in the field of social security. It is not surprising, therefore, that the most important feature to be noted concerning the Brookings Institution's study is that it represents a view of social security which differs fundamentally from that developed in western countries over the last half century and imperfectly applied in the United States during the past decade. . . . The ground is covered extensively but not selectively. Minor points are often dealt with in exhausting detail, while major issues are overlooked or handled evasively. Argumentative passages tend to be winding, discursive, and annoyingly inconclusive. The author's failure to accept the concepts of social security has prevented him from understanding the problems and coming to grips with the real issues. Criticism is consistently misdirected, and the extensive supporting material has an ad hoc quality that deprives it of general usability. One can only regret that so much obvious effort should have produced a work of such negligible value." Chandler Morse

Harvard Law R 59:1338 O '46 3050w

Reviewed by Alzada Comstock
Spring'd Republican p4d Ag 25 '46
420w

"This book is founded on a pitifully obsolete concept of the relations of government to the individual. . . Fortunately, however, the American social security system of the future will be hammered out in congressional committee rooms by those who know, see, and talk with men and women seeking security, and not in the ivory towers of The Brookings Institution." J. J. Corson

— Survey 82:341 D '46 1150w

"The detailed data, as well as the interpretations, are up-to-date and excellent."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:326 D '46 260w

MERRIAM, CHARLES EDWARD. Systematic politics. 348p $3.75 Univ. of Chicago press [28s 6d Cambridge]

320 Political science A45-4394

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

Am J Soc 51:575 My '46 650w

"Here is a volume of epic proportions concerned with the classic problems of political philosophy and presented with the fresh and imaginative sweep characteristic of its distinguished author. To Professor Merriam's innumerable friends and admirers, this book will be a rich reminder of his personality. It should serve also to convey to many new readers the best of his wit, his sagacity, and his learning. The volume is, in a sense, the summation of the many years of thought and activity that the author has devoted to politics and government." Pendleton Herring

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:130 F '46 750w

"A pretty thoroughgoing rethinking of the standard categories of political science by a man whose career has combined to an exceptional degree opportunity for reflection with active and varied participation in public affairs." L. W. Lancaster

+ Ann Am Acad 243:172 Ja '46 450w

Booklist 42:196 F 15 '46

Bookmark 7:5 Mr '46

"It is in separating the essential from the nonessential and integrating universal political issues in their proper perspective that Mr. Merriam's book is of special assistance. Someone may ask 'Why not read Plato, The Federalist Papers, Saint Thomas Aquinas or Machiavelli instead?' The answer is, of course, by all means, read them. For a variety of reasons this book will not be classed among the 100 great books. But it serves most adequately to relate our present day political problems to the perennial framework of universal principles and thus furnishes us with the clue to how authority may be sought through freedom."

Commonweal 43:575 Mr 22 '46 1100w

Foreign Affairs 24:743 Jl '46 30w

Reviewed by Merle Fainsod

Harvard Law R 59:1016 Jl '46 1100w

Reviewed by H. M. Kallen

Sat R of Lit 29:29 F 2 '46 750w

"After a long lifetime spent in the study, practice and teaching of politics, Professor Merriam has set down his reflections on the art and science in a form that justifies the title 'systematic,' but with a warmth of feeling and a candour of exposition that takes away from it any suggestion of arid-system-making that the title might seem to imply. There is a brief—too brief—section on 'wisdom' in this book, but the brevity of the discussion of this great political virtue may be defended, since the whole book is permeated by it."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p147 Mr 30
'46 900w

MERRIAM, EVE. Family circle [poems] with a foreword by Archibald MacLeish. 74p $2.50 Yale univ. press

811

A46-6175

Collection of poems by a young American poet. "Most of Miss Merriam's poems have a deliberately chosen pattern. The rhythms are irregular, which may be what is meant by 'flexible.' She is concise to the point of casting off such extra baggage as articles, conjunctions, and pronouns. The language is free from poetic clichés. The themes come from the poet's own surroundings—mother, brother, a house, a party, the day's work; or, in a series about Old Testament characters, she deals with them in terms of today." (Christian Science Monitor)

"Mr. Archibald MacLeish says, in a foreword, that 'Miss Merriam is not yet mistress of the art of looking through by looking past but she has learned its possibilities—which seems a polite way of saying that she is cultivating the subtle art of seeing truth obliquely, as though out of the corner of the eye, and expressing it indirectly, but that she does not yet make very good poetry out of it. It is a well grounded opinion. The promise is better than the performance.'"

Christian Century 63:1281 O 23 '46 140w

"The total effect is hard, glancing, with moments of insight. The personal note is one of pity, or of scorn for injustice." W. K. R.
Christian Science Monitor p14 O 16 '46
550w

Kirkus 14:415 Ag 15 '46 120w

"An interesting group of poems. Archibald MacLeish writes, in the preface, that Miss Merriam's poems are not of the order etched on stone but are written to mean and be forgotten. Their temporary being, however, he believes to be their quality, not their defect. They are like notes pushed under a door. . . Miss Merriam is a naive realist, humorously cosmopolitan, very much at home in a great city of clanging streets. She should be less the realist, less cosmopolitan, and less at home in either the city or the country. She should get out of the family circle, sophisticated though it is, and turn off the radio. She should explore further depths in the moment's monstrous immediacy." Marguerite Young

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 12 '47 500w

Reviewed by Jeremy Ingalls

Sat R of Lit 29:16 N 16 '46 500w

"Defying ordinary analysis, its value lies in its 'courageous carelessness,' and in the altogether personal quality of the poet's appeal. It is hard to evade the force of this appeal. It hits home almost everywhere in the book—in a sister's bafflement at the strangeness of her brother, in the conscience-stricken memory of escape from the family, in the recall of old arguments which have not yet lost their sting, in a girl's view of young men going to war, and in rare passages of exciting descriptive vision." M. L. Rosenthal

+ Weekly Book Review p36 N 24 '46
800w

MERRILL, FRANCIS ELLSWORTH, ed. Fundamentals of social science, by [the editor and others]. 660p $3.75 Appleton-Century

300 Social Sciences

46-5146

"A college textbook following the outline of the course in general social science as taught at Dartmouth. It exhibits a proper synthesis of sociology, economics and political science. The major topics are: social organization and the family, population and race problems, crime and the criminal, business and government, price and credit institutions, public finance, labor and economic insecurity, and government and politics in a democracy." (Christian Century) This book is based on the

MERRILL, F. E.—Continued
two-volume work edited by Robert E. Riegel with the title Introduction to the Social Sciences (Book Review Digest, 1941)

Reviewed by Howard White
Am Pol Sci R 40:1029 O '46 340w
Christian Century 63:919 J1 24 '46 70w

MERTON, THOMAS. A man in the divided sea [poems]. 155p $2.50 New directions
811 46-7485

In 1944 a volume of poems entitled Thirty Poems (Book Review Digest 1945) by a young Trappist monk received favorable comment. In his present book the poet has reprinted the thirty poems, and added fifty-six more. Some of the poems were written before he took his monastic vows; others were written in the monastery in Kentucky.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Book Week p14 N 3 '46 230w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle
Commonweal 45:283 D 27 '46 650w

"Although it is easy to simulate moods of interior disorders, it is almost impossible to fake moods of interior tranquillity, and Merton's evocations of the joys of the cloister ring true. He has not yet developed a real synthesis between his poetic gifts and his religious ones, but the possibility of his becoming a religious poet of some stature is evident." Louise Bogan
New Yorker 22:122 O 5 '46 260w

"Merton's poems of [his] earlier period show a fine feeling for poetry, but, in a sense, they are perfunctory verse. . . It is, in short, verse written to a synthetic background, in which Merton is not fully at home: a poetry informed by the objective knowledge of the scholar, but informed hardly at all by the knowledge of the physical man, as a man. . . It is not until Merton has entered fully into Catholicism as a direct spiritual experience, until, in fact, he has felt its tradition in terms of his own mystic necessities, that his poetry changes its character. The baroque element disappears to a great extent. . . Principally, he has gained in passion, in spiritual insight, and in his lyric presentation. His poems, now, are at one with his interest. . . Merton's book, on the whole, is brilliant, provocative—and seductive. It is, without doubt, one of the important books of the year. I should say that all of the younger poets should read it—it repays a careful reading." John Nerber
+ — Poetry 69:165 D '46 1050w

"This is Catholic poetry of a strange order; it almost crosses the line into experimentalism, and yet it is deeply religious. Merton may well be as one critic has said, the most important Catholic poet since Francis Thompson." G. S.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 10 '46 80w

"Perhaps his poetic shortcomings (there is no doubt of his spiritual success) are due to the rarefied ether of his love: the ineffability of much religious experience makes it poor matter for poetry. 'The low sun has the color.' Nevertheless, Merton's admirers are almost right in asserting him the best Catholic poet since Francis Thompson (himself no giant among English poets). With Merton, modernity breaks at last into the innocuous parterres of that tradition: the fine music of Stevens, the tricks and questionings of Joyce and the surrealists may now be accepted, under the aegis of Merton's piety, even by writers consecrated to dulness and convention. Therefore his mild but genuine talent is of importance: like his favorite saint he is a precursor, a voice crying in what has been too long a wilderness." J. F. Nims
+ — Sat R of Lit 29:36 O 26 '46 600w

MERWIN, DECIE (MRS JOHN ERNEST BECHDOLT). Time for Tammie; pictures by [the author]. 39p $1.50 Oxford 46-15977

Story about a little girl named Tammie. She was almost six and could tell time because she played a game about it. When a big dog ran off with her pet teddy bear and a boy named Peter rescued the toy, Tammie taught the boy the clock game.

Book Week p15 Je 2 '46 180w
Kirkus 14:223 My 1 '46 150w

"This simple story with friendly pictures makes a practical book for kindergartners and first-graders for whom time is just beginning to have importance. Grown-ups have such a complicated way of explaining how to read the clock, but Tammie's way is fun." L. M. Palmer
+ N Y Times p23 Je 2 '46 140w

MERWIN, SAMUEL. 1910-. Matter of policy; an Amy Brewster mystery. 224p $2 Curl
Detective story.

"A mildly hilarious yarn with a happy ending for those who are on the right side."
N Y Times p24 N 3 '46 140w

"Featherweight, but rowdily entertaining."
Anthony Boucher
San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 20 '46 50w

Sat R of Lit 29:30 O 26 '46 70w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p23 O 13 '46 100w

METZ, HAROLD W. Labor policy of the federal government. 284p pa $2.50 Brookings 331 Labor laws and legislation. Trade unions 45-10667

"The chapters, eleven in all, of this survey expound the evolution of the labor policy of the federal government. The arrangement of the text into divisions, sub-divisions, paragraphs, and conclusions in the textbook manner adds to its usefulness. The study covers a wide range of policy as revealed in social security legislation, minimum wage and hours laws, labor market legislation, and union organizational law and jurisprudence developed in the federal courts and administrative agencies. The study tends to emphasize the favorable attitude toward labor during the Roosevelt administration." U S Quarterly Bkl

"With governmental policy as his golden thread, Mr. Metz has given us a new and fresh over-all view of our labor legislation. That this view shows labor policy to be incoherent will not alarm most of us who have a deep appreciation of democracy's ability to muddle through. By pointing up these inconsistencies, the author has certainly made the road toward consistency more visible." C. C. Rohlfing
+ Am Pol Sci R 40:583 Je '46 850w

"The author handles his material with great skill. This is particularly true in his analysis of the decisions of the courts and the awards of the administrative agencies. Generalization on these matters is often impossible because of the complexity of issues which arise on the labor problem and the paucity of decisions and awards on specific issues. The reviewer believes that the author should have given greater acknowledgment to earlier studies on certain aspects of the subject, particularly on the history of labor laws before the Supreme Court and on the legal effects of collective agreements. Mr. Metz has contributed a very useful book for students of current labor problems." J. P. Rowland
+ Ann Am Acad 245:213 My '46 450w

Christian Century 63:82 Ja 16 '46 20w

"Unlike most treatises these days on the subject of labor, this compact volume succeeds very well in avoiding much of the usual controversy, reporting in an objective way the development of the national labor policy, if there is one, and describing rather adequately our present position. The job is well done; the book is informative and thorough." F. H. Towseley
+ Columbia Law R 46:512 My '46 1500w

Eng N 136:95 Ap 4 '46 40w
Foreign Affairs 24:749 Jl '46 20w

Reviewed by Saul Carson
Sat R of Lit 29:24 F 2 '46 500w
U S Quarterly Bkl 2:56 Mr '46 360w

MEZERIK, AVRAHM G. Revolt of the South and West. 290p $3 Duell

338 U.S.—Industries and resources. Regionalism—U.S. 46-5466

"A documented, emphatically written report on what the author calls a new civil war in this country: the struggle of the Southern and Western states against the Eastern financial oligarchy. The author (along with Southern and Western governors, businessmen, and educators) claims that Wall Street has kept these regions in economic thrall by refusing to let them have their own industries." (New Yorker) No index.

Reviewed by Robert Lasch
Book Week p2 Ag 11 '46 500w
Booklist 43:7 S '46

Reviewed by Broadus Mitchell
Commonweal 41:530 S 13 '46 1200w
Kirkus 14:212 My 1 '46 170w

"Not just another 'slap at Wall street,' but a call for intelligent consideration of how the South and West 'got that way' and why the revolt is spreading." A. B. Lindsay
+ Library J 71:822 Je 1 '46 210w

"The revolt of the South and West brings the economic balance sheet among the sections up to date with admirable clarity and force. . . [It] is a basic for students of current American politics; and it should be read in particular, by every one interested in the possible origins and hallmarks of the next New Deal." A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.

+ Nation 163:187 Ag 17 '46 800w

"While Mr. Mezerik's approach to the problems of the South and West is strictly journalistic and somewhat sketchy in parts, his general argument is essentially sound and interestingly illustrated. Here is a book that will warrant careful study by the political leaders of the South and the West." Carey McWilliams

+ New Repub 115:84 Jl 22 '46 600w

"People of the South and West, who hope for both economic and political freedom for their regions, should carry copies of Mr. Mezerik's book in their brief cases. Even though the revolt does not yet flare as hotly as he implies, his book may make its flame brighter. He might have improved the fuel, however, had he documented his work with a bibliography and index. In a book replete with economic statistics and political names, the absence of an index is a sore handicap." R. L. Neuberger

+ N Y Times p38 O 6 '46 1150w

"Mr. Mezerik's book has some interesting explanations for a lot of the troubles that have been attracting uneasy national attention of late—race prejudice, loony politics, and the sub-standard of living in the backwoods areas, for instance."

+ New Yorker 22:83 Jl 13 '46 120w

Reviewed by Ruth Teiser
San Francisco Chronicle p16 S 8 '46 250w

Scientific Bk Club R 17:3 Ag '46 550w

Spring'd Republican p6 Jl 17 '46 350w

"An eloquent call to action for industrializing the under-developed areas of the United States."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:303 D '46 220w

"The Revolt of the South and West,' is the best example this reviewer has seen of the 'Take your foot off my neck' school of thinking on national problems. The author is an Easterner, but he discusses incisively and ably the reasons why the East has deliberately set out to hold down the less highly developed regions. . . He has given us a valuable study." Virginius Dabney

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Jl 21 '46 950w
Wis Lib Bul 42:127 O '46

MEZZROW, MILTON, and WOLFE, BERNARD. Really the blues. 388p $3 Random house

B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Jazz music 46-7838

"The confessions of Milton (Mezz) Mezzrow, a Chicago jazz man who figured in the early development of hot music in America." New Yorker

Am J Soc 52:381 Ja '47 10w

"Simple, direct, colorful language and a complete honesty: these are the ingredients which make the Mezzrow book a walloping human document. . . Jazz fans will delight in the numerous stories about the many musicians who crossed Mezz' path. But this book is the kind that will pull the general reader too; for it is the story of a man in our America, a true story with myriad overtones." P. E. Miller

+ Book Week p11 N 3 '46 270w

Kirkus 14:378 Ag 1 '46 220w

"In the retelling this sounds merely sordid and sensational; yet in the writing, for the most part, it is an intense, sincere and honest book. It makes all the novels with jazz backgrounds seem as phony as an Eddie Condon concert, even the sensitive and beautifully written Young Man with a Horn. Perhaps no one who has never been inside the twenties and its music can ever recapture the whole pulse and feel, the age of discovery and the search for something more that was always almost, but not quite, there." Bucklin Moon

New Repub 115:605 N 4 '46 400w

"Though some libraries may be inclined to keep the book over there on the restricted shelves, and with reason, it contains a good deal of material on the history of jazz in America." Charles Poore

N Y Times p18 N 3 '46 360w

"The book is exhibitionistic in the manner of Cellini's autobiography and often unappetizing, but it is also instructive, in spite of many passages of dubious accuracy, perhaps explained by Mr. Mezzrow's statement that he was in a fog of marijuana and opium fumes during a good part of his early life. The style is jive English at its most self-conscious." New Yorker 22:134 N 16 '46 90w

"If you have never been around people who use this out-of-this-world patois the dialogue of 'Really the Blues' will amaze, surprise and delight you. And if you are pretty 'hep' to the stuff yourself, it is safe to say that you'll find a few new expressions to add to your vocabulary. . . Through Mr. Wolfe, Mezzrow tries very hard to plead for racial tolerance, but the somewhat self-evident striving for effect imparts to this very laudable undertaking an air of make-believe which hurts rather than helps." Paul Speegle

+ San Francisco Chronicle p9 D 22 '46 350w

"Today, as the president of a company devoted to recording New Orleans jazz records, Mezz Mezzrow is contributing greatly to the documentation of America's native music. But whatever he is doing now—whatever he may do in the future—the fact will remain that in 'Really the Blues' he and Bernard Wolfe have given us a multi-sided book which is technically, psychologically, and historically interesting, and which may well survive beyond most of the transient material with which we are besieged from day to day, the material which is making of ours the false culture which Mezzrow says it is." R. B. Gehman

+ Sat R of Lit 29:28 N 16 '46 750w

"Here is a wild-eyed, baffling autobiography. . . While Bernard Wolfe is given credit as co-author, inquiry about the jazz hangouts reveals that the greatest part, almost all, was actually set down by the proudly mad Mezzrow, and Wolfe did an editing job. He did not edit out any of the loud, weird, extravagant manner of the saxophone player turned author. What is baffling is that despite this barrier of blataney of language and thought, something honest and vigorous comes through." John McNulty

Weekly Book Review p14 O 27 '46 950w

MIAN, MARY (SHIPMAN). My country-in-law; with an introd. by James Thurber; ill. by Maurice Duvallet. 196p $2.50 Houghton

914.468 Creuse (department), France 46-3206

A collection of eighteen sketches, some of which have appeared in the New Yorker, describing the life in the Creuse area of south-central France as it appeared to the author, an American woman married to a French sculptor.

"Her idyllic tale of life in the Creuse, while interesting and well-written, moves languidly until the final chapters where she tells how the people there welcome the war refugees from the north. At that point, the story gathers power. Her description of how her in-laws opened their hearts and doors to the exiles is both moving and eloquent." D. K.

+ Book Week p5 Mr 31 '46 180w

Booklist 42:281 My 1 '46

Bookmark 7:13 My '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '46

"Engaging and effortless chronicling of American Mary Mian's France, the sprawling, unkempt, virtually untouched part of France, the Creuse."

+ Kirkus 14:86 F 15 '46 150w

Reviewed by Richard Watts

N Y Times p6 My 26 '46 1300w

New Yorker 22:96 Mr 30 '46 50w

"There have been all sorts of books about France, but never one quite like this. Mary Mian tells of the peasants without imposing either an attitude or an opinion. She is neither snobbish about their shortcomings nor sentimental about the simplicity of their existence. She does not point a finger at their curious beliefs. They are, so far as she is concerned, just people, and people are the most wonderful things in the world. That is the ideal relationship for a writer to have with his material, and it usually brings excellent results. My Country-in-Law is no exception. It is charming from first to last, full of the sweetness, pathos, humor, faith, and endurance of the common people of the earth." Thomas Sugrue

+ Sat R of Lit 29:64 Ap 13 '46 1150w

"All the good, wholesome adjectives of the English language come to mind in reading a book at once so natural and so artful as Mary Mian's My Country-in-Law." L. S. Munn

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Ap 21 '46 450w

"This book is like very good soup with a ravishing smell that invites the hungry and stirs the listless appetite. Every bit of it, and the very paper around it, is health giving. Here is laughter and sense and some very extraordinary ordinary people." Ernestine Evans

+ Weekly Book Review p2 Mr 31 '46 1300w

Wis Lib Bul 42:73 My '46

MICH, DANIEL DANFORTH, and EBERMAN, EDWIN. Technique of the picture story. 239p ill $3.50 McGraw

070.4 Journalism, Pictorial 46-1047

"This is a practical guide for all and sundry attempting to tell a story in pictures, by two experienced editors of 'Look' magazine. Great detail is given on how picture stories are conceived, planned, directed and laid out, stories that reflect or follow the news. . . . Profusely illustrated by examples of successful picture-story layouts from photo magazines, the book contains many good hints for editors, photographers, layout men and artists." (Weekly Book Review) Index.

"Perhaps some other author—or team of authors—may want to tackle the question of whether picture magazines can or should be any better than they are. Meanwhile I welcome this book as a frank and honest introduction to a business which pays salaries to a large number of people and provides 'universal' and generally harmless entertainment to millions more." Roger Butterfield

+ Sat R of Lit 29:26 Mr 16 '46 1300w

"In a country where there are 2,800 magazines of general interest and more to come this is a fine acquisition to the growing national library of picture skills." R. F. Crandell

+ Weekly Book Review p26 Mr 31 '46 120w

MICHAELIS, KARIN. Little Troll; in collaboration with Lenore Sorsby. 310p $3 Creative age

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 46-11994

Autobiography of a Danish woman writer, author of a famous, controversial book of a generation ago, The Dangerous Age.

"The scenes in her best friend's home in Vienna, Dr. Eugenie Schwarzwald, a pioneer in progressive education, and the sketches of famous people she met there, will mean much to a European reader. I doubt, though, that they are of interest to the American, with the exception of the short scenes with Rilke. The chapters of observations, anecdotes and personal philosophies seem tagged on as an afterthought and impair the effect, but a slight melancholy for the fact that even such a crusader's work may become dated and forgotten remains." Emily Schosberger

Book Week p5 N 24 '46 400w

Booklist 43:100 D 1 '46

Reviewed by H. R. Forbes

Library J 71:1540 N 1 '46 120w

"'Little Troll' is a sparkling account of Karin Michaelis' altogether individual, variegated life." Marguerite Young

+ N Y Times p10 D 29 '46 650w

"Her remembrances of old friendships . . . show insight and a sly humor. An ingratiating book, if not a very consequential one."

New Yorker 22:126 N 9 '46 210w

"Karin Michaelis has been a force to reckon with, as artist and as journalist. She is as candid about money affairs and attitudes toward money as she is about sexual emotion, and she has not a few answers to the turmoil of emotional attitudes finding outlet in money, or explained by attitudes toward cash. . . . The book is often annoying, but it always stimulates in the reader further curiosity about life itself, and much respect for Karin Michaelis's own appetite for experience." Ernestine Evans

Weekly Book Review p2 Ja 12 '47 1550w

MICHEL, MILTON SCOTT. Psychiatric murders. (Mystery house publication) 256p $2 Curl

46-1780

Detective story.

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p22 Mr 24 '46 90w

Sat R of Lit 29:32 Mr 9 '46 40w

MIDDELDORF, ULRICH ALEXANDER. Raphael's drawings. See Raphael

MIDDLETON, DREW. Our share of night; a personal narrative of the war years. 380p $3.75 Viking

940.548173 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 46-7613

"Noted reporter of the New York Times has set down here his sensitive, intelligent impressions of six years of war as a correspondent. Vivid scenes of France and London in their worst hours; a brief, terrible chapter about Dieppe; angry sketches of the political mess that was a large part of the African campaign; an account of the victorious return through France into Germany; and strong statements concerning the weaknesses and perils of Allied occupation are its essence." Library J

Reviewed by Herman Kogan

Book Week p13 N 17 '46 320w

Booklist 43:99 D 1 '46

Kirkus 14:380 Ag 1 '46 210w

"It is a penetrating, revealing picture of humanity under unprecedented stress. Recommended." H. G. Kelley

+ Library J 71:1463 O 15 '46 140w

"There is a gathering dissatisfaction in 'Our Share of Night' with what the Allies did with the victory once they won it; also a complete, reasoned revulsion from war. Middleton came by this the hard way. He was not, at the outset, a man above being impressed by easy phrases and the sports-page aspects of battle, but he worked well and widely on the war, and with intelligence, and each conviction he states or implies in this book was formed by experience. It was a long road from the Battle of Poland to what we call V-E Day. Middleton traveled every step of it with his eyes and his ears open." John Lardner

+ N Y Times p3 O 27 '46 850w

New Yorker 22:118 O 26 '46 120w

"From his notebooks a discerning reporter on the human race has fashioned a highly readable chronicle of people and places. Some of his observations and some of the people who troop through the book are important while others are merely diverting. There is Darryl Zanuck with a big black cigar riding around North Africa in a dust-covered blue Chevy; the Big Two at Casablanca; Ali, a Moroccan encountered in a hospital; and a cross-section of American G. I.'s who were fighting to get back home and not because they were anti-fascist. Middleton has set them down on his pages with exactness and with a certain flair for insight and commentary which raises 'Our Share of Night' above the level of good reportage." R. E. Lauterbach

+ Sat R of Lit 29:19 N 9 '46 1050w

"Our Share of the Night is written with rare honesty and simplicity. Best of all is Drew Middleton's reason for writing, stated not in a self-conscious foreword but in the last sentence of the book: 'Now perhaps I can forget it.'"

+ Time 48:110 N 4 '46 500w

"Inevitably, his personal journal of the war years covers territory which has been dealt with in previous books. But Mr. Middleton has integrity, perception and a gift for recording deftly the significant episodes or snatches of conversation and omitting the insignificant. His book helps illuminate the war, adds to our picture of the multi-faceted slaughter." Marcus Duffield

+ Weekly Book Review p28 O 27 '46 600w

MIEL, ALICE. Changing the curriculum; a social process. 242p $2.25 Appleton-Century

375 Education—Curricula 46-5660

"The discussion opens with a vigorous attack on the inadequacy of school curriculums, and with a plea for better ways of bringing about curriculum change. Proceeding on the assumption that such change is a type of social change, Dr. Miel considers the possibility of acquiring some degree of control over such changes. She then describes 'the general nature of an adequate process for directing social change' and identifies the factors 'that promise to lend themselves to social control.' The chief purpose of this analysis is to identify 'the various features of a socially grounded process of curriculum change.'" (U S Quarterly Bkl) Selected bibliography. Index.

School & Society 64:48 J1 20 '46 20w

"The volume is addressed chiefly to administrators and supervisors, but should be of interest to all who are deeply concerned with curriculum problems. It provides an orientation and guiding philosophy underlying curriculum improvement rather than a catalog of specific curricular changes needed."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:310 D '46 320w

MILES, JOSEPHINE. Local measures. 62p $2 Reynal

811 46-4651

Third book of poems, in varied lyrical forms, about "the people, habits, customs, and judgments of daily life."

"Miss Miles's talent is that of the virtuoso. Her way with words is brilliant: the control or rhythm, the arrangement of rhyme and assonance, the answering of stanza to stanza—everything is elaborately and even intensely worked out. And there are unquestionable triumphs. . . Yet something is clearly wrong, for these successes are all too infrequent; and it is my impression that the fault lies mainly in the poet's extraordinary preoccupation with technique." Dudley Fitts

+ Nation 163:247 Ag 31 '46 370w

"Her poems are distinguished by their intellectual acerbity. They are never fleshy, richly colored, sensual, the sweeping emotional statement. In the very act of creation, Miss Miles is analytical, dissecting things into smaller and smaller parts, while always acknowledging the unresolved drama of the mind." Marguerite Young

+ N Y Times p12 J1 21 '46 600w

"Miss Miles in her third book of verse has become more interested in language than in the reality it describes, with the result that her poems have become more gnomic and cryptic than her relatively simple situations demand."

New Yorker 22:76 J1 20 '46 40w

"Miss Miles' poetry seems to me to evolve upward (though doubtless not in the order in which the poems are written) from something that is little more than the enjoyment of vernacular speech—which obviously delights her ear—through a kind of sharp, humorous, and often resonant character-picture, by way of enigma, to the lyric proper. At each level she shows some if not all of the traits which are most personal and peculiar to her as a writer and which give the over-all tone of her work." Barbara Gibbs

+ Poetry 69:49 O '46 600w

Reviewed by George Snell

San Francisco Chronicle p11 S 1 '46 100w

"Miss Miles's third book of poems indicates a sound maturing of her excellent and individual gift. The sharp refractions of her quietly incendiary mind in 'Lines at Intersection' and 'Poems on Several Occasions' draw here to a still finer and more exact focus, and at times to needle points of white light. Her enigmatic, almost shy humor, for which irony is a heavy word, still twinkles in such poems as 'Flag Level'—'And the feet of the office girls float in the breeze'—or 'Man of Letters.'" J. R. Caldwell

+ Sat R of Lit 29:38 S 28 '46 360w

"Miss Miles has obviously read with loving care the generation of poets that preceded her own, and one repeatedly comes upon cadences, off rhymes and other tricks of style that recall one or another of her more accomplished contemporaries, yet she manages to maintain her individuality." Babette Deutsch

Weekly Book Review p14 Je 9 '46 900w

MILLAR, GEORGE REID. Horned pigeon. 434p $2.75 Doubleday [10s 6d Heinemann]

940.547243 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, English. World war, 1939-1945—Prisoners and prisons. World war, 1939-1945—France 46-4439

This book describes the events which led the author to join the Maquis, described in his Waiting in the Night. Here he goes back to the early days of the war, and explains his part in the North African campaign, his capture by Rummel's men, his next three years in Axis prisons, and his escape. On the night of his arrival in London he learns the bitter truth which sends him to join the Maquis.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Book Week p4 Je 2 '46 650w

Booklist 42:346 J1 1 '46

"A book that would be hard to beat in the field of either fiction or non-fiction for excitement, suspense, character and just plain ordinary good writing." J. C. Cort

+ Commonweal 44:288 J1 5 '46 650w

"With all its drama, candid feeling, it has momentum."

Kirkus 14:168 Ap 1 '46 170w

MILLAR, G. R.—Continued

"Author possesses a remarkable memory for minutiae—such as all aspects of food—which becomes overwhelming at times, yet a terrible way of life is clearly drawn. Recommended." H. G. Kelley

+ Library J 71:756 My 15 '46 120w

"In spite of errors in taste and style and a prolixity that amounts to discourtesy towards the reader George Millar's Horned Pigeon is an important war book. The author shows clear signs now and then of having a trivial mind, yet his picture of prison camp conditions, of the trials, errors, and horrors of escaping, and of the strength and weaknesses of the French under occupation is far from trivial." G. F.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 F 20 '46 150w

"No more exciting book has been written about the war: one reviewer even objected that it was too vivid. Strange complaint! Mr. Millar surprises by his mastery, not of words perhaps, but of experience." G. W. Stonier

+ New Statesman & Nation 31:104 F 9 '46 900w

"The most profound single impression he conveys is how, even amid the multifarious horrors and disruptions of war, people never cease to be intense human beings, motivated by familiar stimuli, sometimes incredibly petty, sometimes incredibly heroic. The same British officers who would unhesitatingly hazard their lives for their men would conceal hard-boiled eggs from one another." Gladwin Hill

N Y Times p3 Je 2 '46 500w

"If the dénouement is not altogether surprising, the book is, nevertheless, just as good as the author's first one, for it contains a sharp and thoughtful treatise on imprisonment in wartime and its effect on a man of feeling and intelligence."

+ New Yorker 22:93 My 25 '46 150w

Reviewed by Richard Plant

Sat R of Lit 29:23 J1 20 '46 400w

Time 47:106 Je 10 '46 700w

"It is inevitable in a fantastic dream that all must be recorded, because artful editing might leave out clues. For this reason, no doubt, Mr. Millar's is a long story reaching towards a quarter of a million words, and of a uniform nature. A crisis is described in the same low tone as a pointless night in a café, and most likely with more economy."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p52 F 2 '46 850w

"Admirers of Waiting in the Night will not be disappointed by the dramatic record. The artlessness of the narrative gives it authenticity; so too does its rigorous honesty." A. J. Guerard

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Je 2 '46 950w

MILLAR, GEORGE REID. Waiting in the night; a story of the Maquis, told by one of its leaders [Eng title: Maquis]. 377p $2.75 Doubleday [10s 6d Heinemann]

940.548642 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, English. World war, 1939-1945—France 46-329

A British officer, specially trained in England, was dropped behind the lines in France a few days before D-day. He was to join the French maquis and explain the new weapons which the Allies were dropping for them to use against the Nazis. This is that officer's account of his experiences from the time he entered the school in England, until his return home, his duty well done.

"Millar's forte is guerrilla warfare rather than writing. But his prose is adequate to communicate to the reader an earthy and believable impression of the dangerous and admirable lives led by the French Maquis." Sterling North

+ Book Week p2 Ja 20 '46 350w

Booklist 42:198 F 15 '46

"Captain Millar does not pose as a hero, nor does he represent his Maquisards as heroic. In fact, he and they were heroic, but you learn this only from the record of what they did with what they had. Not least heroic was their persistence in the face of discouragements, their patience under such trying conditions. . . His book is not designed for entertainment. The going was tough and there was no glamour and no romance. The talk reflects the life, but it is no more coarse than might be expected under the circumstances." L. A. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ja 16 '46 550w

Foreign Affairs 24:746 J1 '46 30w

"Lots of color here—some of it a little high. A full first person narrative, often exciting." Kirkus 13:486 N 1 '45 160w

"Mr. Millar has something of the novelist's gift of the perception and delineation of character; so that, when we read of the hairbreadth escapes of the author and his associates, we are concerned not merely with the fate of labelled dummies but of vital personalities." W. G.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 9 '45 150w

"From the time he was parachuted onto a dark field near Dijon until he was flown back, Millar kept a nice eye on the ball, as he had previously, to such effect that it would seem possible for anyone who had never been to France to go to this area, map indelibly in mind, and seek out all the ways resourceful Millar went, all the people he knew and worked with there. And there are many one would want to know—for Millar has shown himself keen to the virtues of human beings. Without being profound, he is still very sensitive to the expression of character." Gertrude Buckman

+ Nation 163:163 Ag 10 '46 650w

"His story is very much worth reading for its skillful portraits of brave men—and women—and its sensitive feeling for the French countryside; it is good news that a novel by this young Englishman has been announced by Doubleday for early publication."

+ New Repub 114:198 F 11 '46 150w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

New Statesman & Nation 29:407 Je 23 '45 1750w

"Even though Millar has nothing particularly new to tell, most of Waiting in the Night makes good, even exciting, reading. To be sure, it is too long, and toward the end the rapid succession of characters and localities dulls the interest. But when Millar is taking the reader on one of his midnight excursions to fasten homemade demolition charges to the frogs in the railroad switches of a freight yard, or is firing a bazooka at a train of oil tank cars, he builds up considerable suspense." Creighton Peet

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 20 '46 500w

"His book is unlike many reports of the war; it is written with a novelist's sensitivity to atmosphere and character, and the author's brooding state of mind—he took on this almost suicidal mission to find in a useful death a surcease from some unspecified personal tragedy—gives his pages an emotional intensity that heightens the suspense."

+ New Yorker 21:90 Ja 12 '46 110w

"Does this sound like 'just another book of the French underground'? Nothing could be farther from the truth. Captain Millar has not only written an agonizingly exciting account of adventure, sabotage, and terror; he has succeeded in X-raying the French Maquis and, I'm almost tempted to say, in psychoanalyzing them." Richard Plant

+ Sat R of Lit 29:19 F 16 '46 700w

Time 47:94 Ja 14 '46 2000w

"Having very evidently been unable to keep a diary, Mr. Millar sets down verbatim innumerable conversations he could not possibly have remembered with such particularity. But few will quarrel with him on that score. If anything mars his record, it is an occasional inconsequence presumably dictated by discretion. . . All readers who can still enjoy a novel filled with exciting incident and appreciate circumstantial detail will feel amply satisfied by this record of actual experience. In particular, the book is likely to appeal strongly to French members of the Resistance, and the hope may be voiced that it will soon be translated into their language."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p279 Je 16 '45 850w

"Once back in England, Captain Millar lost no time in setting down his experiences before any of them could slip his mind, but though he writes carefully and copiously of what he did and saw during his weeks in France, his account of what must have been a very hectic time somehow misses fire. This is probably because Captain Millar is overly thorough in telling his story. . . But there are times [when] the excitement and drama force their way through." Herbert Kupferberg
 Weekly Book Review p14 Ja 27 '46
 650w

MILLAR, KENNETH. Trouble follows me.
 206p $2 Dodd
 Detective story. 46-6294

"Literate and exciting." E. H.
 + New Repub 115:302 S 9 '46 80w
 Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
 N Y Times p26 S 8 '46 140w
 Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
 San Francisco Chronicle p12 S 1 '46
 60w
 "Very grim spy-stuff."
 Sat R of Lit 29:41 S 21 '46 50w
 "For calloused customers, but others would also like the final revelations." Will Cuppy
 + Weekly Book Review p12 S 1 '46 140w

MILLARD, EARL BOWMAN. Physical chemistry for colleges; a course of instruction based upon the fundamental laws of chemistry. 6th ed 682p $4.50 McGraw
 541 Chemistry, Physical and theoretical. 46-5634

"The sixth edition contains the same selection and order of topics as the previous edition. However, substantial revision has been effected, and certain recent developments have been very briefly included. For example, on page 554 is discussed the formation of 'trans-uranium' elements. It is clear that the great developments made during these past few years in nuclear chemistry, synthetic rubbers, and jet propulsion will eventually be reflected by creation of new chapters in our standard physical chemistry textbooks, but this change will necessarily be somewhat slow. Meanwhile, the fundamentals of physical chemistry must still be presented with the aid of our standard texts, and new topics left to the discretion of the instructor." (Chem & Eng N) Index. For fourth edition see Book Review Digest, 1936.

Booklist 43:136 Ja 1 '47

"One of the author's chief considerations has been to present elementary physical chemistry with simplicity and clarity. This latest edition also amplifies the formal and rigorous development of the subject to some extent, for example, by a greater emphasis on thermodynamics. This tendency for greater rigor and more mathematical presentation will be welcomed by teachers whose classes include majors in physical chemistry and potential graduate students in chemistry or physics." A. V. Tobolsky

+ Chem & Eng N 24:2844 O 25 '46 250w
 Chem Eng 53:316 N '46 110w

"Not too difficult a textbook but assumes a knowledge of inorganic and analytical chemistry, college physics and simple processes of calculus." L. A. Eales
 Library J 71:981 J1 '46 70w
 N Y New Tech Bks 31:38 J1 '46

MILLEN, MURIEL F. Wild West Bill rides home; il. by Kurt Wiese. 32p $1 Whitman, A.
 46-18721
 Story of a small boy who went to visit his grandfather in the province of Alberta, and finds adventure on his very first day.

"Wholesome, funny, plausible and authentic in detail. Written by a Canadian woman and illustrated by Kurt Wiese. Somewhat similar to the Tousey books but has a more suitable format than his earlier ones." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 71:1055 Ag '46 70w

"Good summer reading—probably reading aloud—to little boys under nine." M. L. Becker
 + Weekly Book Review p6 J1 4 '46 230w

MILLER, CLYDE RAYMOND. Process of persuasion. 234p $2 Crown
 301.154 Psychology, Applied. Persuasion (rhetoric) 46-320

Describes the human behavior, the conditioning, and language, which form the backgrounds of persuasion. The author, who is associate professor of education, at Teachers college, Columbia university, uses a wealth of anecdote to emphasize his points. No index.

Booklist 42:196 F 15 '46

"Dr. Miller writes with facility and frequently dips into his fine store of anecdotes to add warmth and humor to his material. The Process of Persuasion is quick, entertaining reading—an important book that should have the effect of atomizing a lot of stereotyped and hence dangerous thinking." Charlotte Gorman

+ Churchman 160:18 Mr 1 '46 200w
 Commonweal 44:605 O 4 '46 70w

"Clyde R. Miller attempts to show in this book just why and how we yield to that army of tempters, advertising copywriters, propagandists, politicians and public relations experts. He does so in a very personal and charming manner. And he goes in rather heavily for the illustrative anecdote. In fact, this little book is so consciously 'loosened up' with incidents as to seem padded and, occasionally, lacking in continuity." Martin Ebon
 + N Y Times p28 Mr 17 '46 400w

Reviewed by Paul Flowers
 Sat R of Lit 29:46 F 16 '46 650w

"Especially in times like these, when scientists face such a grave responsibility in developing wise public opinion concerning many matters of profound importance to their own future, the careful reading of this book is strongly recommended."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 17:3 Mr '46 300w

"Although it covers familiar ground, this book presents the subject in relaxed and unpedagogic fashion and ends on a hopeful note—faith in the improbability of man through development of his powers to distinguish right persuasion from wrong."

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Mr 3 '46 150w

MILLER, GLADYS. Furniture for your home; il. by Harriet Meserole. 290p $3.50 Barrows 747 Furniture. House decoration 46-11993

Practical suggestions on the selecting, buying, and arranging of furniture. Discusses both antiques and modern furniture, and built-in furniture. Illustrated with photographs and drawings. Index.

Booklist 43:97 D 1 '46

"Whether you are furnishing an entire home or just scheming ways to bring a refreshing note of change into one or two rooms, this book will yield many useful ideas. Sketches and photographs enliven its pages throughout. Gladys Miller writes from extensive experience which included responsibility for furnishing residence halls for government girls, Waves, and Spars." Helen Henley
 + Christian Science Monitor p10 N 14 '46
 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '46

"A useful book for the one-book home maker, who wants a general and inclusive book which touches on selection and use of furniture for specific arrangement in the average home. The book has several points of special interest. The author assumes that the average home owner owns some furniture, and will not be starting from scratch; she suggests combining pieces of different periods and types. Each room is given a chart for suggested, balanced arrangement. There are clues to furniture values, what to look for and how. There are quick reference charts for identification of period."

MILLER, GLADYS—Continued

+ Kirkus 14:572 N 1 '46 120w

MILLER, MRS HELEN (TOPPING). Shod with flame. 270p $2.75 Bobbs

46-7546

Romantic tale of Tennessee in 1863 when the Civil war was surging back and forth over this territory. It is a story of war from the woman's point of view—in this case four women, three of whom are in love with the same Confederate soldier.

Kirkus 14:355 Ag 1 '46 170w

"'Shod With Flame,' with its effective historical background that deserved a much better story, is war from the woman's angle, written in quivering-lipped prose. Notably light to the hand in an era of historical heavyweights, its unpretentious range permits the author to make the coincidences seem slightly less remarkable than they really are. It is not quite long enough, however, to permit her to justify some of the claims she makes for her characters."

Mary McGrory

N Y Times p30 O 27 '46 500w

"Mrs. Miller's inspiration, which was running thin in light fiction, renewed itself in 'Dark Sails' and is even more manifest in this narrative." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p22 O 20 '46 170w

MILLER, MRS HELEN (TOPPING). Spotlight. 233p $2.50 Appleton-Century

46-2151

The spotlight in Alix Dempster's life was usually occupied by her more brilliant sister, Roslyn. Alix was the one who stayed home; Roslyn married, then divorced Mike, whom Alix loved. Then when Mike came home from the wars Alix thought she had a chance for happiness, until Roslyn came home again and changed all that.

Book Week p18 Ap 7 '46 80w

Kirkus 14:77 F 15 '46 90w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p18 Ap 21 '46 90w

MILLER, HENRY ARTHUR. Luminous tube lighting. 143p il $3.50 Chemical pub. co. [10s 6d Newnes]

621.327 Electric lighting. Vacuum tubes 46-3620

"British book presenting fundamental theory of gaseous ionization and light production, materials and required properties for use in luminous tubes and manufacturing equipment. Attention is given to low and higher pressure tubes, construction and characteristics of fluorescent lamps and useful information on Neon signs, Circuit diagrams, tables and illustrations" Library J

Chem & Eng N 24:1974 J1 25 '46 30w

Library J 71:486 Ap 1 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:23 Ap '46

MILLER, LEE GRAHAM. Ernie Pyle album; Indiana to Ie Shima. 159p il $3 Sloane, William, associates, inc, 119 W 57th st, N.Y. 19

B or 92 Pyle, Ernest Taylor 46-8018

A biography of Ernie Pyle composed of photographs with detailed captions. They begin with Ernie at ten months of age and continue thru all the important phases of his life to his death on Ie Shima.

Booklist 43:131 Ja 1 '47

"Mr. Miller, managing editor of the Scripps-Howard Newspaper Alliance, who tells the story of Pyle's career, knew and worked with him for twenty years. Although the photographs suffer from the 'look at me and don't squint your eyes' technique of the snapshot artist, they nevertheless comprise an authentic record of a great newspaper man, and are ably supported by Mr. Miller's affectionate captions." David Dempsey

+ N Y Times p4 D 8 '46 450w

Reviewed by William Hogan

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ja 5 '47 470w

"At first glance, the idea of presenting a man's biography in photographs might seem a poor one; one hundred and fifty-seven pages of pictures might seem too much of the same face and not enough of the mind behind it. Actually, however, the idea works out astonishingly well. Far from palling, the pictures become more fascinating as you go along, and by the time you have finished the book you feel not only that you know Ernie Pyle but also that he is a friend of yours. For that extraordinary quality of his friendliness, which endeared him to thousands of soldiers and people back home during the war, shines out magnificently in this book." Marcus Dufield

+ Weekly Book Review p22 D 8 '46 600w

MILLER, MAX. The lull. (Whittlesey house publication) 144p $2 McGraw 818

46-8289

"In this, his first book since leaving the service, author has written a personal biography of those first days of introspection, that period of sharp let-down immediately following a war, that comes to soldiers and civilians alike." Library J

"Tenuous, transitory in a manner which matches its mood, this has a very definite quality, though its audience is difficult to indicate."

Kirkus 14:510 O 1 '46 130w

Library J 71:1543 N 1 '46 40w

"The story, told in a stream-of-consciousness style, is vague and often filled with contemporary obscurantism. This, undoubtedly, is what Miller intended in order to show how moody the veteran is during the lull period. The words are grayed and the sparse incidents are sublimated into the shadows. 'The Lull' is completely subjective. Miller, to his credit, says he does not want to write about titillation like the blousy lady novelists; he is looking, in his lull, for a more inspired subject. Yet, despite his sincerity, it is doubtful whether the reconversion of a comfortable writer who can afford to delay has sufficient universality for the great majority of veterans." Herbert Mitgang

+ — N Y Times p14 Ja 19 '47 450w

"This unpretentious and unusual little book has honesty and insight that should, I think, carry it straight into the experience of many of the millions who share or have shared Mr. Miller's situation. It will strike home to many who have that experience only vicariously or not at all. It is the kind of a book that a man probably could write only once in his life, at a particular time, and that, in setting down an experience, helps him and others to lay the ghosts that are likely to haunt imaginative people when their worlds spin with a speed they themselves control." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p24 D 8 '46 800w

MILLER, MERLE, and SPITZER, ABE. We dropped the A-bomb. 152p $2 Crowell

940.544 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American. Atomic bomb 46-5816

An eyewitness account of the Hiroshima and Nagasaki bombings, told to Mr Miller by the radio operator of the Great Artists, which made both runs, and carried the Nagasaki bomb.

Book Week p4 Ag 4 '46 150w

Kirkus 14:288 Je 15 '46 100w

"This little book is unpretentious. The writing is spotty and overslick at times, when, quite obviously, it is Miller and not Spitzer who is talking. But it impresses as the honest effort of an average man to tell the horror that he felt when he saw the bombs burst and the added horror that came to him when he realized fully what it was that he had helped to do." Foster Halley

N Y Times p6 Ag 25 '46 280w

"It is not only a dramatic account but, more important, a thoughtful one, in that it tells how the men of the crews feel about the more solemn aspects of what they did. Apparently, none of them are yet disposed to think lightly of the efficacy of the bomb, in spite of the post-mortem opinions of certain groundlings."

+ New Yorker 22:68 J1 27 '46 120w

"We Dropped the A-Bomb" is an important book. Not because it reports anything essentially new, but because it personalizes for those of the twenty million veterans who will read it the most dramatic incident of the war and most impelling problem of the day. . . These are searing pages to live through again, but the overt acts do not impress. Rather it is the quiet talk of crew members." Joseph Hirsh

+ Sat R of Lit 29:14 S 21 '46 550w

Reviewed by Marcus Duffield

Weekly Book Review p14 Ag 25 '46 400w

MILLER, NOLAN. Moth of time. 369p $2.75 Harper

46-4606

"When Charles Lornefelt deserted his wife and went to California with her sister in the early 1900s he left behind him in Detroit a bewildered and unhappy family. This is the story of that family, especially of Paul, the youngest, a small unhappy boy when his father leaves, an intelligent and sensitive adolescent just graduating from high school when the story ends." Library J

"With insight and poignant honesty, Nolan Miller in this first novel has pictured boyhood and youth in all its hopeful aching uncertainty. . . 'A Moth of Time' is a rich and rewarding book." Dorothy Sparks

+ Book Week p2 My 26 '46 550w

Kirkus 14:110 Mr 1 '46 150w

"Above average, well written minor novel, good pay collection material." George Wakefield

+ Library J 71:758 My 15 '46 80w

"His nostalgic conjuring up of childhood induces Mr. Miller to overwrite occasionally. While his similes are often surprisingly apt, he tends to overdo them. But in contrast to his too frequent rhapsodies, his description of the sexual awakening of Paul and some of his gang are written with a restrained realism which makes other passages seem lush." Richard Plant

New Repub 115:50 J1 15 '46 180w

"Nolan Miller's 'A Moth of Time,' despite the fact that its general subject—a family radiating around a boy—has been widely treated, is a book so penetrant in its insights, and so consistently satisfying in its expression, that it stands out as a splendid work. Not at all in its rhetoric or in its attitude, but in a kind of rich sensuous immediacy, it suggests the early writing of Thomas Wolfe, from whom, incidentally, the title is derived." Richard Sullivan

+ N Y Times p6 Je 2 '46 440w

Reviewed by R. M. Morgan

Spring'd Republican p4d Je 23 '46 360w

"Despite the timid sketchiness of this novel, certain notable scenes reveal an undeniable and penetrating talent. Vivid touches appear when sheltered Aunt Victoria visits her brother-in-law in jail, and in scenes between George and the fiancée he will never marry. It is a pity that the sensitive Mr. Miller does not lay more stress on a story and less on the oft-told growing pains of youth." Margaret Mellinger

Weekly Book Review p10 Je 30 '46 450w

MILLER, THOMAS H., and BRUMMITT, WYATT. This is photography; its means and ends. 260p il $2 Garden City pub. co.

770 Photography 46-25041

"The fundamentals of equipment and use—taking pictures, developing, and printing—for the amateur. Short chapters on color photography and special subjects. The authors are employees of Eastman kodak company." Booklist

"This is photography" is a readable, unpretentious little manual packed with valuable information on picture-taking. The authors have succeeded in removing the mystery from a technical subject in a way that will please amateur photographers who have plodded through dry, involved discussions that left them hopelessly confused." Marjorie Parsons

+ Book Week p4 Mr 3 '46 230w

Booklist 42:210 Mr 1 '46

Bookmark 7:9 My '46

Christian Science Monitor p12 My 18 '46 90w

Library J 71:486 Ap 1 '46 70w

Spring'd Republican p6 F 20 '46 240w

MILLER, WADE, pseud. of BOB WADE and BILL MILLER. Deadly weapon. 218p $2 Farrar, Straus

46-8396

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p6 Ag 25 '46 70w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p20 Ag 11 '46 160w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 18 '46 70w

"Very tough stuff, with some good characterizations, action all over the place, sultry bits, and finish that delivers real surprise."

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:28 Ag 17 '46 50w

Weekly Book Review p15 Ag 11 '46 220w

MILLER, WARREN HASTINGS. Home-builders; il. by Kurt Wiese. 296p $2 Winston

46-4959

Sixteen-year-old Seth and his father and mother take over the abandoned farm, which had once been family property, build a home and plant crops. Each step is described in the restoration of house and farm. For older boys and girls.

Kirkus 14:276 Je 15 '46 100w

"There is real drama in the struggle, and in these days of housing difficulties the building of the burned-out home takes on a special interest. Recommended for early teen-age boys and girls." Eileen Riols

+ Library J 71:1057 Ag '46 70w

Reviewed by Creighton Peet

N Y Times p12 J1 28 '46 270w

"It does not make farming sound easy, but it does show why some farmers like it." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 25 '46 300w

MILLHOLLAND, RAY. Pay day; labor and management in the American system of free enterprise. 240p $2.50 Morrow

331.1 Industrial relations 46-711

"Both sides of labor-management controversies are given a hearing and both sides are taken to task for some of their practices and short-sightedness. The nontheoretical discussion is on worker's attitude toward machines, employee relations, piece work, origin of unions, closed shop, job security and annual wage, women in industry, and similar matters. Popular style in which there is an occasional note of cynicism." (Booklist) No index.

"This book will probably be a popular handbook for many employers and so-called experts on industrial relations. The employers and experts could do worse than 'Pay Day.' To the general public it presents a readable, plain, one-syllable discussion of labor-management problems and terms that most people glibly talk about but few understand." S. D. Alinsky

MILLHOLLAND, RAY—Continued

+ Book Week p6 Mr 10 '46 360w

Booklist 42:242 Ap 1 '46

"'Pay Day' is written in a racy style. The impression it conveys of Mr. Millholland is that of a 'boss'—his favorite term—who is both tough and fair—without hidebound convictions, willing to accept changes providing an enterprise can still be made to function with reasonable profits and without too much 'grief' for the boss. There are many employers currently bargaining with unions—or going through the motions—who could profit by reading this book. Its lessons are equally forceful for the unions which fail to realize the extent of public concern over some of their tactics." E. M. Herrick

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Mr 3 '46 1000w

MILLIS, WALTER. The last phase; the allied victory in western Europe. 130p il maps $2.50 Houghton

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Campaigns and battles 46-3864

"This is the story, told as factually as possible, of the defeat of Nazi Germany in the west. It is only one part of the whole story of how the great war in Europe was decided. It is concerned only with the western European theater in the period from June 6, 1944, to May 8, 1945." (Introd) "The original manuscript of The Last Phase was prepared for the Bureau of Overseas Publications of the Office of War Information, for publication abroad as a part of that agency's information services. It was intended particularly for distribution in Germany in connection with the Allied efforts at the reeducation of the enemy people, and was consequently written with a German audience primarily in mind. . . . The author is now led to hope that it will be of interest to American readers." (Foreword)

"A small book, a calm one, and one which makes no pretense of covering anything but the most important elements in the campaign, it will give military historians something to think about when most of the shouters have been forgotten." R. E. Danielson

+ Atlantic 178:148 Jl '46 120w

Reviewed by F. S. Marquardt

Book Week p3 My 19 '46 550w

Booklist 42:315 Je 1 '46

Bookmark 7:9 N '46

Reviewed by Homer Metz

Christian Science Monitor p12 My 25 '46 600w

Current Hist 11:228 S '46 70w

Foreign Affairs 25:163 O '46 60w

Kirkus 14:233 My 15 '46 170w

"A must book for all libraries." Mary Clark

+ Library J 71:756 My 15 '46 70w

"Mr. Millis's brief book is of very great merit indeed. . . . It is an admirable job, clean and swift in its telling." Ralph Bates

+ Nation 162:694 Je 8 '46 90w

"Mr. Millis was right in thinking that this book has a place among American books on the war. On the whole, it is perhaps too brief to satisfy serious military readers, but its very conciseness and forcefulness of presentation will commend it to the more general reader." J. I. Greene

+ N Y Times p7 My 19 '46 850w

"A brief, well-coordinated military history of the campaigns in Western Europe."

+ New Yorker 22:110 My 18 '46 90w

"The original aim was distribution in conquered Germany. . . . In its preparation there was therefore a special stimulus toward readability, a truly meticulous accuracy, a high degree of objectivity, and a scrupulous fairness toward our Allies, and for that matter toward our late foes. The result is a book which, despite its small compass, does more than select the dominant factors of victory and a few spectacular feats along the way. It places them in perspective and, most important, relates the Anglo-American Western Front campaign to other great factors in the victory." M. S. Watson

+ Sat R of Lit 29:12 My 18 '46 1150w

"This book is so lavishly illustrated that it almost qualifies as a pictorial history, and the illustrations are, for the most part, relevant. There are several maps, not always adequate to explain the text. A few of the statements of fact may be challenged." H. S. Commager

+ Weekly Book Review p4 My 19 '46 950w

Reviewed by S. L. A. Marshall

Yale R ns 36:147 autumn '46 1000w

MILLS, JOHN. Engineer in society. 196p $2.50 Van Nostrand

620.69 Engineers. Scientists 46-2124

"A veteran engineer presents a practical book about the salary and outlook for engineers and research men, gives advice on how to interpret from aptitudes, the kind of work to choose. Detailed explanation on how to present engineering, data and scientific discoveries effectively." (Library J) No index.

"This is not the memoir of a crotchety oldster whining for attention, but the human, sometimes acid, and utterly forthright statement of a man pleading the case of creative scientists and engineers governed by a benevolent industrial despotism. . . . A wry note: I was only mildly impressed with the 53 pages devoted to 'Exposition for Engineers.'" I. J. Lee

+ Book Week p17 Mr 31 '46 310w

Booklist 42:278 My 1 '46

Reviewed by H. C. Parmelee

Chem Eng 53:273 D '46 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '46

"Here is a discussion of engineers and scientists that should be read by every member of either group who takes an interest in his profession as a unit in society. Young men starting out to build a career in engineering or in scientific work should find the author's discussion of compensation in research work and engineering of practical value. Older engineers may not find as much of practical value to them in the book, but they will find it good reading. The author's basic theory is that the world would be greatly improved by an engineering or scientific approach to its problems. Hence he would like to see engineers and scientists take a much more active part in national affairs than they have in the past. . . . The book's chief value lies in the fact that its idealism is seasoned with much common sense."

+ Eng N 136:127 Je 13 '46 480w

Kirkus 13:553 D 15 '45 170w

Library J 71:346 Mr 1 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:7 Ja '46

Reviewed by Harrison Brown

Sat R of Lit 29:26 S 28 '46 1450w

Reviewed by H. M. Davis

Spring'd Republican p4d Ap 14 '46 900w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:138 Je '46 280w

MILLSPAUGH, ARTHUR CHESTER. Americans in Persia. 293p il $3 Brookings

955 Persia—Foreign relations. Persia—Economic policy 46-6826

"The best recent book telling what all the trouble is about in Iran. The author was administrator general of finances in that country, 1922-27 and 1943-45. He writes with a wealth of information, historical and contemporary, about the economic, political, administrative and military aspects of the matter, and the acts and aims of Russia, Great Britain and the United States. He does not speak for the state department and is not hampered by diplomatic reserve." Christian Century

+ Christian Century 63:1215 O 9 '46 140w

"This story of the successes and failures of a small nation, between vast empires, makes the world situation a little clearer, but not brighter. However, clarity is useful." R. H. M.
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 O 17 '46 600w

"Dr. Millspaugh is a man of unquestionable integrity, with exceptional first-hand experience in Persian finances. But his conception of his mission in Persia is certainly open to controversy. . . His fundamental error must be laid to his honesty, which led him to accept many things at face value. . . Dr. Millspaugh carried with him to Iran the zeal of a missionary. In his emotionalism he was not always fair. Articles on Iran with a Washington date-line, during the war, prove that the State Department was much better informed on this country than he believed. However, there is no doubt that his book is thought-provoking." Andre Visson

N Y Times p52 N 24 '46 1000w

"One may agree or disagree with the conclusions which Dr. Millspaugh has drawn. Few, however, can contest the authoritative character of his volume or deny the thoughtful quality of his observations."

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 2:303 D '46 290w

MILNE, ALAN ALEXANDER. Chloe Marr. 314p $2.75 Dutton [9s 6d Methuen]

46-5051

Portrait of the life and loves of a Mayfair beauty, Chloe Marr. Chloe's life is just one party after another. The book has no plot; just a series of sketches of Chloe as she seemed to her many friends and lovers.

Reviewed by George Dillon

Book Week p2 Ag 25 '46 400w

Booklist 42:366 J1 15 '46

Christian Science Monitor p18 O 5 '46 400w

"'Chloe Marr' is not for those who read with more earnestness than pleasure. Its delights exclude the acquisitive. It demands to be believed in and is impossible to believe: a heartening change from the more common novel which you can believe every step of the way but never for a second believe in. To one who is neither tone-deaf nor hyperopic, the slightness of this book will give no offense; and if he is glad not to be left to bread alone, he will not mind that Mr. Milne might be accused of letting us eat cake." Henry Rago

Commonwealth 44:626 O 11 '46 450w

"An exercise in tantalizing characterization, indirect, too objective, and resultantly superficial, intangible to reader as well. For all that, there are moments of warmth and appeal and humor."

+ Kirkus 14:283 Je 15 '46 160w

"Well-written, entertaining and genuine." B. B. Libaire

+ Library J 71:1050 Ag '46 90w

"The attraction of this novel is in its Milniness; in a light touch and a leisurely and rather whimsical humour." Charles Marriott

+ Manchester Guardian p3 J1 5 '46 130w

Reviewed by B. V. Winebaum

N Y Times p14 S 8 '46 450w

"In spite of the novel's bright, modern sparkle, it has an ending that even the most hopeless old stick-in-the-mud must have thought had gone out of style with Michael Arlen."

+ New Yorker 22:98 S 7 '46 100w

"Some readers may regard Chloe as caviar over which Milne took a lot of trouble for nothing. But if you are a Milne adept you'll accept Chloe as her own excuse for being, and welcome her into the enchanted Milne country. Somewhere in the text the author divulges one of the secrets of that country: 'It's magic the way words can mean something greater than their meaning, can give you the whole of experience in a flash.' Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 20 '46 370w

Reviewed by R. L. North

Sat R of Lit 29:44 O 12 '46 360w

"Undoubtedly Chloe Marr has a weak ending—but it remains an amusing book in spite of it." V. C. Clinton-Baddeley

+ Spec 177:46 J1 12 '46 450w

Spring'd Republican p4d S 8 '46 320w

"Readers who know A. A. Milne as the creator of whimsical juveniles and endearing animals are likely to be rocked back on their heels when they open Chloe Marr, Author Milne's first novel for adults in 13 years. . . Pooh is the word for Chloe Marr."

— Time 48:98 S 2 '46 330w

Times [London] Lit Sup p317 J1 6 '46 270w

"The best parts of the story are those dealing with publishing and the theater. Here the author, deserting his chromium-plated heroine for long stretches, gives us the wit and urbanity that one pleasantly remembers from so many of his earlier novels" James Hilton

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 25 '46 700w

Wis Lib Bul 42:133 O '46

MINER, LEWIS S. Wild waters; il. by Raymond Lufkin. 185p $2.25 Messner

46-4960

Adventure story for older boys, describing the life on the Mississippi a hundred years ago. The hero is the young son of Captain Jonathan Hawks, Sam, who had to learn the ways of the river "on his own."

Booklist 43:39 O 1 '46

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

Christian Science Monitor p14 S 26 '46 100w

Horn Bk 22:357 S '46 120w

Kirkus 14:36 Ja 15 '46 110w

Reviewed by Nelle McCalla

Library J 71:1057 Ag '46 70w

"One thrilling episode follows another as Sam threads his packet through the menacing rapids, battles the crushing impact of ice floes and later almost loses his life on a huge lumber raft as it is battered to pieces in a gale. The final incident in his story is a fine, unexpected climax combining treachery, disaster and triumph for the young cub pilot." H. B. Lent

+ N Y Times p16 J1 21 '46 230w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p7 S 1 '46 400w

MIRBEAU, OCTAVE. Diary of a chambermaid; introd. by Jules Romains [Eng title: Chambermaid's diary]. 309p $3 Didier pubs. [10s 6d Fortune]

46-5943

"A belated translation of a French novel of the 1890s which probably was considered 'naughty' at that time. Its appearance now in this country seems to be in honor of a motion picture of the same name. . . At its time, Mirbeau's novel was probably startling, as it is a bitter exposé of treatment given by employers to their servants. At this distance it is an interesting but not particularly shocking picture of a certain era in French society, heavily laden with boudoir scenes, backstairs gossip and kitchen knavery." Spring'd Republican

"The story, written with great style and almost unrelieved pessimism, is a bitterly ironic and highly spiced indictment of employers of domestic servants in the eighteen-nineties, and that, my dear, was a long, long time ago."

New Yorker 22:67 J1 27 '46 80w

"For those who enjoy period pieces this will prove interesting, but it is too dated to be really enjoyable—just try these days to find a servant to mistreat." R. F. H.

Spring'd Republican p4d Ag 11 '46 160w

MIRSKY, JEANNETTE (MRS EDWARD B. GINSBERG). Westward crossings; Balboa, Mackenzie, Lewis and Clark. 365p 11 maps $4 Knopf

973.1 America—Discovery and exploration 46-7299

"This book is part of the story of North America from its earliest settlement to the emergence of the United States into continental power. Its framework is the transcontinental explorations of Balboa, Mackenzie, and Lewis and Clark. The impelling motives, the social terms in which they were expressed, and the rewards harvested by each of these three expeditions, which all together stretched over three centuries, have historical continuity; there is illumination even in their contrasts." (Foreword) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:116 D 15 '46

Reviewed by R. A. Brown
Christian Science Monitor p12 D 14 '46 550w

"A book for scholars of the American scene. The average layman will find it difficult reading, in spite of the glamour of the names. . . Unfortunately, the author has a tendency to embroider the lily—her style is lush and overladen, and—to my thinking—hurts the values of her skillful use of her sources."

+ — Kirkus 14:472 S 15 '46 260w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison
Nation 163:624 N 30 '46 700w

"The book is obviously a labor of love, and it has the freshness and vigor which comes from enthusiasm combining with intellectual mastery of the subject. Yet for reasons immanent in the material itself, the first section is the most effective." E. B. Garside

+ N Y Times p5 O 20 '46 1200w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 5 '46 1850w

Reviewed by Bernard De Voto
Weekly Book Review p7 N 10 '46 1100w
Wis Lib Bul 42:165 D '46

MISCH, ROBERT JAY. At daddy's office; 11. by Roger Duvoisin. [32p] $1.50 Knopf

46-6776

Picture-story book about a small girl's visit to her father's office in a big city office building, and all the things she saw there. For three to six year olds.

Reviewed by Martha King
Book Week p9 O 6 '46 180w

"The Roger Duvoisin pictures are a disservice to what would otherwise be a good idea for a book. Every small boy and girl likes to be taken to Father's office to see what goes on all day. The text, in this book, is highly simplified, and none-the-less adequate to the purpose of the book, but the pictures seem stilted and unappealing. Duvoisin has done so much better that this is a disappointment."

+ — Kirkus 14:418 S 1 '46 90w

"Recommended for preschool children." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 71:1467 O 15 '46 70w
Sat R of Lit 29:44 N 9 '46 50w

MITCHELL, DONALD WILLIAM. History of the modern American Navy; from 1883 through Pearl Harbor. 477p 11 maps $4.50 Knopf

359 U.S.—History. Naval. U.S. Navy—History 46-4382

"At the end of the Civil War, the United States had the world's largest navy; by 1883, it consisted of a few rotting, outdated ships and our naval policy was non-existent. Mr. Mitchell, starting at that low point in our sea power, traces our involved efforts to build a world-sized navy and follows the mutations of official policy from Mahan's day to Franklin D. Roosevelt's. He ends with the attack at Pearl Harbor. The author's approach is critical, though not in a way that will upset anybody. He also touches on the Navy's extramartial activities, like diplomacy and polar exploration." (New Yorker) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 42:360 J1 15 '46

"A combination of accuracy and error. Professor Mitchell falls into misstatements, overstatements, and understatements, which could have been avoided by consulting naval authorities. The period from 1883 to the Spanish-American War, aside from minor errors of fact, is satisfactorily presented, considering the space allocated to it. . . . Thereafter, the book assumes a more critical tone. In many cases the criticisms are justified, although hindsight frequently provides the opportunity. . . . The work is marred by careless proof-reading, palpable errors in transcription, and inept diction." F. L. O.

Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 21 '46 360w

Foreign Affairs 25:341 Ja '47 20w

"Inclusive, scholarly, and a valuable interrelation of national and international concerns, but largely for the navy-minded layman or professional."

+ Kirkus 14:190 Ap 15 '46 170w

"According to the bibliography he gives, Mr. Mitchell has read practically every worth-while naval historian. But he has read with discernment and arrived at his own conclusions, some of which differ with those of other historians. The one great fault of the book is that it ends at Pearl Harbor—incidentally one of the poorer chapters of the book—thus taking the history only up to the Navy's greatest war." Foster Halley

+ — N Y Times p28 N 3 '46 700w

"A good, conscientious history, well illustrated."

+ New Yorker 22:60 J1 6 '46 80w

"For the amateur student, Mr. Mitchell has provided a highly absorbing story. For the reader who would go further, he has added a list of nearly 500 references used as background for his book."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 J1 21 '46 200w

"For a picture of the general background of our Navy since 1883, this book is the most useful yet available; but unfortunately too many minor errors or questionable statements shake one's faith in it as a reference work. It is a pity that the tremendous amount of intelligent effort which went into this study should be marred by this carelessness. A brief period of overhaul should, however, produce a second edition which would be dependable." R. G. Albion

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:14 Ag 31 '46 1150w

"Written in nontechnical language, the book should appeal to lay as well as professional readers and students. It is an excellent starting point for future research on the naval details of American history from 1883 to Pearl Harbor."

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 2:221 S '46 220w

"This is an important and timely book. It is well for the public to know from what small beginnings came the fighting machine that drove relentlessly across the Pacific to the heart of Japan, that maintained command of the sea, and transported millions of men safely to fighting zones. . . . It is to be hoped that Mr. Mitchell will continue his writings on the Navy. Scholarly, scientific studies such as this book are of great value not only to the Navy but to the nation. It is the people's navy, and they should understand the part it has played in the past and will play in the future." H. E. Yarnell

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Je 16 '46 1200w

MITCHELL, EDWIN VALENTINE. Encyclopedia of American politics. 338p $3.75 Doubleday

973.03 U.S.—Politics and government 46-7919

"In a book about the size of the average novel, Mr. Mitchell has managed to cover all sorts of odds and ends about the American political scene and events that overlap it such as the U. N. Charter, for instance, and the Constitution of the United States, the text of Washington's Farewell Address, the famous Wilson Fourteen Points and so on. . . In addition to this Mr. Mitchell gets in any number of definitions, references and such affairs." San Francisco Chronicle

Kirkus 14:409 Ag 15 '46 160w

N Y Times p34 N 24 '46 160w

"The volume has its weaknesses, chief among which is that it isn't long enough and therefore has to omit too much. On the other hand, no book or set of books could get in everything. This belongs on your shelf alongside your other books of reference in the general field of American politics and American history, though you'll often have to supplement Mr. Mitchell's notes by turning to some other encyclopedia or reference book." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 25 '46 230w

"The book as a whole is so good that it is merely captious to quarrel with the author's self-imposed limitations on the scope of his work, or to search out minor discrepancies. Mr. Mitchell has written clearly, compactly and with great objectivity about a difficult and highly controversial subject. He does not permit himself to sweeten his labors, as Dr. Johnson did in compiling his dictionary, by indulging his own prejudices or points of view—or if he does, in a few cases, it is by devastatingly pertinent quotation." H. W. Baehr

+ Weekly Book Review p26 N 3 '46 600w

MITCHELL, EDWIN VALENTINE, comp.
Great fishing stories. 285p $2.50 Doubleday

Short stories—Collections 46-4605

Contents: Big two-hearted river, by Ernest Hemingway; A fatal success, by Henry van Dyke; Plain fishing, by F. R. Stockton; Once on a Sunday, by Philip Wylie; Crocker's hole, by R. D. Blackmore; Ol' settler of Deep hole, by Irving Bacheller; Byme-by-tarpon, by Zane Grey; Trout fishing, by W. C. Prime; A shark story, by T. C. Haliburton; The hole, by Guy de Maupassant; Old Faithful, by J. T. Foote; Salar the salmon, by Henry Williamson; Pete and the big trout, by H. W. Beecher; It was on the Allagash, by DeWitt Mackenzie; Butterflies and brown trout, by Compton Mackenzie and Moray McLaren; Troutling along the Catasauqua, by Frank Forester; The fisherman, by Martin Armstrong; Gathering of the clan, by E. E. Slocum.

Reviewed by Peter Quinn

Book Week p10 My 26 '46 270w

Booklist 43:36 O 1 '46

Kirkus 14:135 Mr 15 '46 90w

Reviewed by J. R. de la Torre Bueno

N Y Times p12 Je 9 '46 500w

Wis Lib Bul 42:169 D '46

MITCHELL, EDWIN VALENTINE. It's an old New England custom. 277p $2.75 Vanguard

917.4 New England—Social life and customs 46-7197

Chapters on New England characteristics and customs. Contents: To have pie for breakfast; To serve turkey and cranberry sauce; To eat cheese; To be fond of fish; To indulge in bundling; To talk about the weather; To beat the drum; To reach a ripe old age; To excel in epitaphs; To thirst after strange gods; To have haunted houses; To behold phantom ships; To adopt peculiar place names; To hark back to the past.

Booklist 43:68 N 1 '46

Christian Science Monitor p14 N 30 '46 500w

"A humorous and unusual historical curiosity of a regional nature, amusing prints, gay verses, bits of odd information, curious episodes—a characteristic Mitchell item. In format it has a slightly juvenile flavor which may limit the market."

+ Kirkus 14:517 O 1 '46 80w

"Mr. Mitchell's collection of curiosities, for example, if nothing else, at least points up the wondrous fecundity of the past. He writes up these historical crotchets with a happy verve that suggests he may very well be using only a fraction of his total means—indeed, could easily turn out another book or two with similar content. Even his chapters on New England epitaphs and the practice of bundling offer relatively fresh information, and these two themes, it is fair to say, are about the most hackneyed in this school of writing." E. B. Garside

+ N Y Times p10 O 13 '46 600w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Weekly Book Review p2 O 6 '46 550w

Wis Lib Bul 42:165 D '46

MITCHELL, ISLA. The beginning was a Dutchman; II. by Richard Kennedy. 198p $2 Dodd [6s Faber]

46-4397

Two children, Mark and Bede Sykes, spend the summer holidays of 1938 with their parents on a small Dutch sailboat. The scene is England, with its rivers, canals and locks to be investigated. Before the summer is over the children become involved in a Nazi plot, because their boat had once belonged to a scientist who had invented a super-explosive. For ages ten to twelve.

Kirkus 14:127 Mr 1 '46 190w

"The English expression may not prove too popular and format is rather dull, but with a little introduction boys and girls of eleven years and up will like it." Olive Brain

+ Library J 71:984 Jl '46 140w

"The incredible plot, involving secret plans, Gestapo agents and a casual kidnapping aboard a German ship in an English harbor, results in making even these humorous, intelligent children behave as if they had neither common sense nor a normal instinct for self-preservation. This is a warm, true picture of a good family life, and it did not need any such unbelievable story to keep it going. Richard Kennedy's sketches add a fine atmosphere of boats and water." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times p23 Je 2 '46 120w

"Mrs. Mitchell wrote this book from her experience, shared with her own children. Perhaps she is still too close to those experiences to give them the perspective that is needed for a more universal appeal. The line drawings have atmosphere and vitality." R. A. H.

Sat R of Lit 29:50 N 9 '46 230w

"It is a rousing good story to keep any one reading and Catholics will read it with especial pleasure. For the family life is that of a household that takes this faith so thoroughly for granted it runs like a melody through everything. It even, and especially, conditions the method by which Bede brings the story to a climax. The pictures are many and have the convincing effect of rough sketches made on the spot."

+ Weekly Book Review p9 My 19 '46 480w

MITCHELL, PHILIP HENRY. Textbook of biochemistry. 640p il $5 McGraw

612.015 Biological chemistry. Physiological chemistry 46-4459

"This book is designed for students in a first year course of the subject who have had preliminary training in physical chemistry as well as general and organic. With the exception of a chapter on chemotherapy, the emphasis throughout the text is upon an understanding of metabolism as a foundation for the science of nutrition. Accordingly, major space has been devoted to such subjects as the constitution and activity of enzymes, vitamin and mineral requirements, and the significance of the hormones. The bibliographical aids are a special feature. In addition to extensive lists of references at the ends of chapters, there is an introductory list of biochemical journals, monographs, and review publications which are most helpful to the biochemist. The author is the Robert P. Brown Professor of Biology at Brown University." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

MITCHELL, P. H.—Continued

"Professor Mitchell has written a very readable textbook of biochemistry which chemists in other specialties would find useful as a reference book. It is up to date, and this reviewer found very few inaccuracies or errors. At the end of each chapter there is an extensive and valuable list of references to the subject matter. The author and subject indexes are excellent." D. W. MacCorquodale

+ Chem & Eng N 24:2284 Ag 25 '46 250w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:981 J1 '46 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:20 Ap '46

MITFORD, NANCY. Pursuit of love. 247p $2.50
Random house [8s 6d Hamilton, H.]

46-3949

Comedy of manners and love. Linda Radlett, a charming young English woman of the upper classes is the heroine. Her adventures in pursuit of love include two marriages: first with a banker, then with a communist. Her third adventure as the mistress of a wealthy Frenchman turns out to be the real love of her life.

Booklist 42:348 J1 1 '46

Kirkus 14:77 F 15 '46 120w

"Entertaining but not outstanding enough to be a must book." R. P. Tubby

Library J 71:407 Mr 15 '46 70w

"This, presumably, is satire upon free-living, fox-hunting aristocrats, but there are disconcerting admirations." Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p3 D 28 '45 130w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling

Nation 163:23 J1 6 '46 650w

New Repub 114:941 J1 1 '46 30w

"The Pursuit of Love is rewardingly funny in many places. This is the least, and indeed the most, one can say of it." Henry Reed

+ New Statesman & Nation 31:89 F 2 '46 600w

"Nancy Mitford, setting the light snares of irony and wry affection (with which the thoroughly landed English gentry often trap each other into print), has captured something far more important than an excellent likeness of her herd and times. Imprisoned in her new book, 'The Pursuit of Love,' is a fleeting hope of happiness, delicate, fresh and wistful. Why does it all linger in the memory like a smiling ghost? Perhaps because Miss Mitford's tempo races, letting subtlety and significance sink in at their leisure. Or perhaps the beat of the tempo suggests the breathless touching haste of a war-haunted generation." Isabelle Mallet

+ N Y Times p4 Je 9 '46 800w

"The let-your-mind-rest season is with us again, and a very enjoyable time it promises to be if this entertaining light novel is a reliable indication of what we can expect in the hot weather. Miss Mitford, describing in a tart and easy fashion the diverting activities of a titled English family, is mocking, good-tempered, and very funny."

+ New Yorker 22:94 Je 15 '46 50w

"An engaging and deftly written story." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 29:41 Je 22 '46 800w

"Nancy Mitford's new novel The Pursuit of Love has a theme which might have made as portentous and boring a story as any novelist could well wish—nothing less than a girl's progress to true happiness via two unsuitable marriages. But Nancy Mitford has been original enough to tell her story as a perfectly straight narration, (a method employed by some of the better writers in the past) and since her sense of humour is much deeper than her sense of the significant, she has written a book which is filled with laughter." V. C. Clinton-Baddeley

+ Spec 176:20 Ja 4 '46 360w

Time 47:102 Je 17 '46 750w

"The charm of Miss Mitford's work lies less in the sad little story she has to tell than in her own talent for personal and social mockery. Within the narrow and comfortable limits of the world she describes—which seems to include a few recognizable figures—her wit and her gift for detecting the absurdities of character have had full scope."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p617 D 29 '45 360w

"The author, for the most part, seldom omits a dash of bitterness or a zest of lemon from her rich confection and, at her best, she is wickedly funny. She writes brightly, if sometimes carelessly, and her characters seem probable except possibly for the heroine, who is almost too clearly kin to that other one who, some years ago, wore a green hat and similarly came to grief through love. It is the earlier part of the novel, which recounts such colorful scenes of childhood and piles up documentation on life amid the upper classes which really distinguishes it." Iris Barry

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Je 9 '46 600w

Reviewed by Orville Prescott

Yale R n s 36:192 autumn '46 50w

MOCK, MRS ELIZABETH (BAUER). If you want to build a house; il. by Robert C. Osborn. 96p $2 Museum of modern art

728 Architecture, Domestic 46-4224

"The author is Elizabeth B. Mock, curator of architecture for the Museum of Modern Art. She urges a fresh approach to 'many problems too often arbitrarily settled,' attempting to persuade the prospective client to satisfy his individual needs in regard to space, shape, light, materials and color rather than merely conform to tradition. Modern design is advocated, to the extent that many of the examples seem freakish. Modern architecture is represented as not just another imitative style but an 'attitude toward life,' regulated by the physical and emotional needs of living people and trying to meet them as nearly as possible. The question of size is considered first, starting with the pithy statement that 'the trouble with many small houses is that they're too small.' The items of ventilation and degree of 'openness to the outside,' furnishings and surroundings are taken up briefly, and the wide choice of materials and quality available nowadays pointed out. A competent architect is indispensable, according to this book, yet 'a modern house will give you more for your money, because you pay only for what you want.' There are 116 interior and exterior photographs of modern homes in many parts of the country." Spring'd Republican

"More than half the book is devoted to 116 well-chosen photographs which are a valuable complement to the text. And Robert C. Osborn's cartoons add a light touch which is lacking in most home-building books." E. B. R.

+ Book Week p14 My 26 '46 180w

Booklist 42:325 Je 15 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '46

New Yorker 22:96 Je 1 '46 100w

Spring'd Republican p6 My 18 '46 270w

Reviewed by Richardson Wright

Weekly Book Review p3 Je 30 '46 180w

MODELL, MERRIAM. Sound of years. 309p $2.75 Simon & Schuster

46-3633

Problem novel in which a happily married woman with a four-year-old son is faced with an echo of her past. Years before in Paris, Ellen had had an affair with an English sophisticated, and had left her illegitimate daughter with a wealthy childless couple, and had returned to the United States. Suddenly her seventeen-year-old daughter came to her for refuge. Her prosaic homelife shattered, Ellen tries to evade her responsibility. The result is tragedy.

Reviewed by Jex Martin

Book Week p7 My 12 '46 330w

Booklist 42:317 Je 1 '46

"Melodrama, toned down by intelligent writing, characterization, guarded exposition."

Kirkus 14:25 Ja 15 '46 190w

"Sophisticated, frank, modern, psychological, problem novel, considerable introspection, disagreeable characters and happenings—including sex abnormalities. Some vivid writing and story interest. . . . Limited appeal, caution necessary." H. A. Wooster

Library J 71:667 My 1 '46 100w

"Nowadays, when one is constantly amazed by the skill with which novelists who have nothing to say get the whole of it down on paper, it comes as something of a shock to find a novel like Merriam Modell's 'The Sound of Years,' which has so much more potential content than its author has been able to communicate. Not that Miss Modell's book suffers from any obvious technical deficiencies. It is more than competently contrived and written. But Miss Modell . . . has conceived for her first novel a psychological situation which is apparently beyond her present powers of projection. . . . I have been judging 'The Sound of Years' by what it promises but falls short of achieving; to do less would be a grave injustice to a writer of Miss Modell's potentiality. This is not to say that the novel, even as it stands, is not in many ways unusually pleasing." Diana Trilling

+ Nation 162:697 Je 8 '46 1650w

"Miss Modell, in her first novel, is able to draw a sympathetic portrait of a woman who cold-bloodedly leaves her newborn, illegitimate child with foster parents, and never gives another thought to her welfare. . . . At times, when the accumulation of tension is thinned to melodrama, characters and scenes lose their usual density and richness. Also, considering the possibilities of idiomatic language open to a contemporary writer, Miss Modell's selections seem unimaginative and commonplace; her attempts at racy dialogue often make her middle-aged characters sound like high school show-offs. Still, if 'The Sound of Years' is not always well written its interest is sustained and this reader believes that the pros and cons of Ellen's behavior toward Brigitta will be widely discussed. Many thoughtful readers will surely lay aside this book wondering what they would have done in Ellen's place." E. S. Holsaert

+ N Y Times p16 My 19 '46 500w

"If Miss Modell could have made the character and personality of Ellen as believable from the beginning as she does in the very effective conclusion of her book, it would have been a powerful and perceptive study of a woman. But neither Ellen, nor her husband, nor Brigitta is consistently credible. It is true, of course, that real life and real people are often so much stranger than fiction that hardly any plot or cast of characters could be called, per se, incredible. It all depends on whether or not the author can make us believe in the people and events portrayed. Granted, Miss Modell has undoubted talent, but this first novel seems to me to lack focus and proportion." S. H. Hay

Sat R of Lit 29:35 Je 1 '46 800w

Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 21 '46 300w

"It is a frequently moving story told with a brittle realism that keeps the outlines free of fuzzy sentimentality. Miss Modell tells it with the mature detachment of an observer watching two human beings fighting for security. . . . Miss Modell weaves her tragic story of psychological conflict with a fine restraint. The drama grows out of her characters, some of them unusual, but all of them convincing and essential to the resolution of her tale. She has a polished technique and ties up the past with the present both in events and in the changes that the years bring to human beings." Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p4 My 12 '46 750w

MOE, VIRGINIA. Animal inn [The stories of a Trailside museum] pictures by Milo Winter. 175p $2.50 Houghton

591.5 Animals, Habits and behavior of 46-25299

Outside of Chicago in the Thatcher woods there is a museum of natural history peopled with live animals and birds, run almost entirely by children. These stories are about some of the little creatures who live at the Trailside museum. For ages eight to twelve.

Booklist 43:75 N 1 '46

"Children who love animals will learn much from this entertaining book with its accurate drawings."

+ Horn Bk 22:358 S '46 140w

"Good for reading aloud as well as for classroom nature-study material of unusual appeal and interest. Life-like drawings by Milo Winter have dash and vitality."

+ Kirkus 14:325 Jl 15 '46 80w

Reviewed by Gertrude Andrus

Library J 72:84 Ja 1 '47 90w

"Keen eyes and an understanding heart have enabled the author to collect a wealth of animal lore, which she sets down in this book. Stories of the animals' captivating antics, facts from natural history, and advice on the care of pets combine to make this a happy choice for nature lovers young and old. Milo Winter's excellent drawings show the same humor and understanding as the stories and aid materially in revealing the character and personality of each inmate of the 'Animal Inn.'" Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p31 Ja 19 '47 180w

Reviewed by K. S. White

New Yorker 22:144 D 7 '46 60w

Wis Lib Bul 42:171 D '46

MOLLOY, MRS ANNE STEARNS (BAKER). Shooting Star farm; II, by Barbara Cooney. 231p $2.50 Houghton

46-7310

Sabra lived alone with her grandmother and needed a friend her own age; Tony, who disliked his job in a grocery store, needed a more congenial place. When the Keltons moved to Shooting Star Farm and started a riding school both children had their wishes. And when there was danger of losing the farm, Sabra and Tony helped the Keltons to keep the farm and the school. For ages eight to twelve.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

Atlantic 178:165 D '46 40w

Horn Bk 22:353 S '46 80w

Kirkus 14:346 Ag 1 '46 90w

"Good characterization and lively plot. Black-and-white illustrations by Barbara Cooney are spirited and add greatly to the book. For fifth and sixth grades. Recommended." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 71:1718 D 1 '46 100w

"A friendly, warmhearted story for boys and girls of 8 to 12." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p28 O 27 '46 150w

"Eight- to ten-year-old readers will enjoy the many episodes of this pleasant story." K. S. White

+ New Yorker 22:143 D 7 '46 60w

"This is a jolly, warm, friendly book. It is the kind of book that girls of ten or so enjoy because they identify themselves completely with the characters. Barbara Cooney's black and white drawings for it are original and delightful." R. A. H.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:50 N 9 '46 180w

Wis Lib Bul 42:154 N '46

MOLLOY, ROBERT. Uneasy spring. 293p $2.75 Macmillan

46-11992

At forty-six Edward Stafford found himself in a quandary. His wife had died suddenly and left him the care of two adolescent children. It was wartime and maids, when they could be found at all, were far from treasures. Then he met a young and charming woman and fell in love. It was more luck than good judgment which showed him his mistake, and he ended by marrying a woman of his own age.

"It is good to find in the welter of what is usually referred to as popular novels an unpretentious little book that is readable and entertaining without at the same time being banal or trying to masquerade as something it most certainly is not. "Uneasy Spring" is that kind of a novel." Bucklin Moon

MOLLOY, ROBERT—Continued

+ Book Week p31 N 10 '46 230w

Booklist 43:103 D 1 '46

Christian Science Monitor p18 N 6 '46 420w

"A second rate book which has, nonetheless, a certain perceptive insight. Molloy seems to handle family situations on the verge of chaos better than he does more palatable fare, and he is again at his best when his proponents are quarreling. That doesn't make for pleasant reading."

— + Kirkus 14:463 S 15 '46 170w

"In spite of routine plot, novel is well written with dialogue and psychology natural and convincing. . . Recommended." G. W. Hill

+ Library J 71:1542 N 1 '46 90w

"There are books and books, but the kind in which one feels an almost exact correspondence of intention and effect remains somewhat rare. 'Uneasy Spring' is of this scarce sort. It is a novel which attempts nothing cosmic or soul-shattering; no passion or fierce power ever cracks its smooth surface sheen of words; it is strictly limited and rigidly controlled work, aiming always at dexterity rather than depth. Yet its modest purpose is very accurately accomplished, as if all the possibilities had been calculated ahead of time, and then, after the most careful consideration, the story had been projected, carried through, ingeniously, unpretentiously and adequately." Richard Sullivan

+ N Y Times p14 N 17 '46 700w

Reviewed by Jane Volles

San Francisco Chronicle p6 D 1 '46 200w

"'Uneasy Spring' is deft and witty and often poignant, and though it misses being a really profound study of a man and his emotions it has a quality of warmth and human understanding which makes it a thoroughly charming and appealing book." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 29:26 N 16 '46 550w

"Mr. Molloy tells it simply, sympathetically and in considerable detail. . . And every word of it true. Mr. Molloy knows his man." F. H. Bullock

+ Weekly Book Review p8 N 17 '46 550w

Wis Lib Bul 42:168 D '46

MONAGHAN, FORBES J. Under the red sun: a letter from Manila. 279p $2.75 Declan X. McMullen co, 225 Broadway, N.Y. 7

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Philippine islands. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 46-8535

"The Jesuits in the Philippines compose the largest religious mission in the world. 'Under the Red Sun' is primarily the story of how that mission, made up of American and Filipino fathers, conducted itself during the Japanese occupation." New York Times

Reviewed by H. Z. Benitez

Book Week p20 N 24 '46 420w

Commonweal 45:286 D 27 '46 100w

"It is a story well worth telling. . . At a time when American-Filipino relations have reached a new low in Manila, it would pay both Americans and Filipinos to read this excellent account of the Philippines' finest hour." F. S. Marquardt

+ N Y Times p36 N 17 '46 500w

"Father Monaghan's stirring narrative should do much to convince thinking Americans that in spite of negligence and blunders in our colonial policy the magnificent loyalty displayed by the war-stricken Filipinos in a holocaust the reasons for which they seldom clearly understood is proof that America's ideals of right and justice are deeply seated in their hearts." W. F. Boericke

+ Weekly Book Review p34 N 24 '46 500w

MONAGHAN, JAMES. Last of the bad men [the legend of Tom Horn]. 293p il $3.50 Bobbs B or 92 Horn, Tom 46-4731

"A factual account of the life and death of a Wyoming assassin-for-hire of forty years ago. Mr. Monaghan has written a hard-riding tale of vigilantes, rustlers, gunmen, and cattle barons, and has also paid serious attention to the social and economic forces that produced men like Wyatt Earp, Billy the Kid, and Tom Horn, the hero of this book, who served his apprenticeship murdering Indians and later turned his well-developed talents to slaughtering small property owners on behalf of the big cattle interests. Photographs." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 42:347 JI 1 '46

"True riding, shooting history, of Wyoming's wilder days, for the western market."

+ Kirkus 14:189 Ap 15 '46 150w

"The author of this biography tells the story well. Moreover, he has the honest touch." Ernest Haycox

+ N Y Times p33 Ag 11 '46 700w

New Yorker 22:95 Je 15 '46 100w

Time 47:102 Je 24 '46 600w

"The book on Horn adds another portrait to the gallery of the West and, because of its general readability and authenticity, deserves to be added to collections dealing with the region."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:192 S '46 160w

"Jay Monaghan, who used to operate a ranch in the country where Tom Horn had sent chills through rustlers and small settlers, has performed a remarkably thorough and discriminating job of research, sifting all the data on Horn from first to last," talking to men who knew him and doing his best to reconcile or explain conflicting versions of various incidents in which Horn figured. Moreover, best of all, he has put it all on paper in a straightforward and convincing manner. Here is one of the most readable and soundest books about a Western character that has come along in many a moon." Stanley Walker

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Je 16 '46 750w

MONGAN, ELIZABETH, and others. Fragonard drawings for Ariosto. See Fragonard, J. H.

MONTGOMERY, ROBERT BRUCE (EDMUND CRISPIN, pseud). Holy disorders. 269p $2 Lippincott [7s 6d Gollancz]

46-1883

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p18 Ap 7 '46 100w

"Encyclopaedic cathedral details, and some mountebanking. Fancy."

Kirkus 14:50 F 1 '46 60w

"This is no mere tale of murder; it also involves witchcraft, treason and a miniscule (the author's vocabulary is infectious) dose of psychiatry. Mr. Crispin's wit and high spirits are exhilarating and there is every reason to expect that in his next book he may really make our flesh creep." E. H.

New Repub 114:486 Ap 8 '46 70w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 31:305 Ap 27 '46 90w

N Y Times p32 Ap 21 '46 120w

"In spite of all the bright dialogue, one is left with the suspicion that a cathedral town, even in the midst of a murder case, is a pretty dull place."

New Yorker 22:96 Mr 30 '46 120w

"First rate."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:28 Ap 6 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p22 Ap 7 '46 200w

MONTGOMERY, ROBERT BRUCE (EDMUND CRISPIN, pseud). Moving toyshop. 250p $2 Lippincott [7s 6d Gollancz]

47-28

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Book Week p4 D 22 '46 180w

"Still not tops in wide appeal, this—for its special market—is self contained in amusement values."

+ — Kirkus 14:530 O 15 '46 90w

"Good fun if you're fed up with the hard-boiled school."

+ New Repub 116:41 Ja 6 '47 90w

"If you can laugh at Professor Fen you will like it; but heaven help you if you're expecting detection." Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 32:103 Ag 10 '46 140w

"It is quite characteristic of Fen that he finds his best clues in certain limericks of Edmund Lear. That alone would be enough to justify the author in calling his book 'a comedy of murder,' but there are other equally good reasons. Mr. Crispin's erudition is not so obtrusive as it was in his earlier books, or perhaps it is merely obscured by the farcical antics of his characters." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p48 D 8 '46 180w

"The plot is fair, but you may wish at times that Mr. Crispin would relax in his efforts to wrest Dorothy Sayers' scholarly laurels away from her."

New Yorker 22:147 D 14 '46 80w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
San Francisco Chronicle p11 D 22 '46 60w

"Some of the characters are a pleasure to meet, not to mention such local color as dons, proctors, bullers and bowlers and young Mr. Hoskins, a rawboned student with an irresistible attraction for the ladies. He does it simply by giving them chocolates. And why does Mr. Crispin fling his erudite allusions hither and yon in a way that should cause Michael Innes to chew his nails? Because it's that kind of a whodunit." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p42 D 8 '46 290w

MOODY, JOHN. John Henry Newman. 353p $3.75 Sheed

B or 92 Newman, John Henry, cardinal 45-9074

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Reviewed by W. O. Aydelotte
Am Hist R 51:498 Ap '46 280w

"More than many a Catholic, Moody does write of the Oxford movement with considerable sympathetic understanding. He writes, however, as an amateur. While his left hand writes of Newman, his right hand directs Moody's manual of investments. His sketching-in of the eighteenth-century background of the Tractarian movement is thus rather thin and is also unfair to poor Jeremy Bentham. . . Now that I have said the worst of Moody's book, it is only fair that I should point out its genuine excellences. It is, indeed, a very lively book, written with verve and imagination. The author lives and feels with his subject. If his style is marred by slipshod syntax and an overabundance of exclamation points, it is, nevertheless, the style of a man for whom Newman and Keble and Manning and Dr. Achilli were actual people." C. F. Harrold

+ — Mod Philol 43:213 F '46 750w

"Mr. Moody's biography is simple, lucid, and warm, and as such admirable. But it is touched with a certain snippy, parochial condescension to non-Catholic thought; and the modesty of its intellectual pretensions does not justify the inadequacy of its intellectual power; nor is it sufficient in its scholarship, for it omits from its bibliography many of the most notable of the modern studies of Newman." Lionel Trilling

+ — Nation 162:132 F 2 '46 300w

Reviewed by Raymond Mortimer
New Statesman & Nation 31:196 Mr 16 '46 800w

"Dr. Moody, having trod, on his way to the Catholic Church, a path not dissimilar to Newman's, is peculiarly qualified to trace his history and expound it to Catholics and non-Catholics alike. His account is free from the virulent and polemical spirit which converts are supposed commonly to display, and which certainly characterises too many of the writings of materialist and anti-religious controversialists; and I hope it is not patronising to say that Dr. Moody, though occasionally somewhat naïve in his explanation of terms of English local and historical significance, succeeds to a surprising extent, by his sympathy and understanding, in making an English, and even an Oxford, reader forget that he is having his own oracles interpreted to him by one who is, after all, a stranger. . . It is with reluctance that the reviewer turns to the other side of the account. But he cannot help asking, as he lays down the volume, why it should have been written at all." John Sparrow

+ — Spec 176:328 Mr 29 '46 800w

MOONEY, PAUL. Profitable labor relations and how to develop them. 209p $2.50 Harper

658.3 Industrial relations 46-2780

"Practical and specific guidance in personnel relations. Suggestions and examples are given of intensive training methods as a constructive part of employer-employee relations." (Book-list) Index.

Booklist 42:278 My 1 '46

Chem & Eng N 24:1446 My 25 '46

Eng N 136:95 Ap 4 '46 40w

"An addition to a good library of personnel and labor relations volumes."

+ Kirkus 13:538 D 1 '45 150w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:826 Je 1 '46 80w

"The author's attempt to drive home the few simple points he develops is a good illustration of sales psychology. While this makes the book repetitious, management leaders should not hesitate to read it from cover to cover if they can learn sufficiently from it to achieve the same economies in their companies as Mr. Mooney claims he accomplished for the grocery chain." Murray Ross

Pol Sci Q 61:478 S '46 380w

Reviewed by E. M. Herrick

Weekly Book Review p14 My 12 '46 270w

MOORAD, GEORGE. Behind the iron curtain; with an introd. by W. L. White. 309p $3 Fireside press, inc, 604 S. Washington sq, Philadelphia 6

947.084 Russia—Politics and government.
Russia—Foreign relations 46-6680

The author, an American journalist, gives an account of his stay in Russia during the last months of the war and after, his related trips to Russia's satellite countries and China. Most of the interest in the book centers on Mr Moorad's observations on the ways of Russian censors and why they act as they do.

"This latest addition to the large number of Russian correspondents' reports is well informed, credible and exceptionally unemotional. . . All his opinions, favorable or unfavorable, are substantially documented. The book is vividly written and makes good reading."

+ New Repub 115:565 O 28 '46 150w

"Mr. Moorad's criticisms do not bring out anything new, but they at least sound temperate, and a marked sense of humor keeps him from getting shrill."

New Yorker 22:126 O 5 '46 80w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p10 O 17 '46 800w

"Mr. Moorad's general complaints are without question basically sound. There is no news in these revelations, however, and nothing is added on this score to what innumerable correspondents have already told us. What the reader has a right to expect from a book entitled 'Behind the Iron Curtain' is more substantial information than the author, finally freed from all censorship restrictions, has been able to produce. At one point he speaks of bewailing his lack of background for his Moscow assignment. This is perhaps the key to the unsatisfactory nature of his reporting." F. R. Dulles

MOORAD, GEORGE—Continued

Weekly Book Review p26 N 17 '46 500w

MOORE, CHARLES WALDEN. Timing a century; history of the Waltham watch company. 362p il $4 Harvard univ. press

658.981 Waltham watch company A46-657

"An account of the Waltham Watch Company. Originally a thesis, presented by Mr. Moore for the degree of Doctor of Commercial Science at Harvard, it is now published with some additions, for the perusal of those who are interested in the way a typical manufacturing company met the changing needs and necessities of a country. This story of making watches for practically a century is, chronologically, one of pioneering, successful operation, competition, distress, and the subsequent part played by 'financial capitalism'—investment bankers—in providing new capital and management." Christian Science Monitor

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 15 '46 550w

Library J 71:184 F 1 '46 140w

"With the fine tools of the objective scholar, [Dr. Moore] has probed the inner workings of the company to ascertain what made it tick and what makes its business wheels turn today. There is much in the story that is important for an understanding of the impact of economic trends on business vitality, and there are lessons that should prove helpful to contemporary management generally. With commendable candor and colorful detail, both as to men and measures, the author analyzes the strengths and weaknesses of successive managements, and the knotty problems of production and distribution, financing, stockholder relations and personnel policy that arose over the years. A special chronology and numerous illustrations, tables, charts, appendices and notes enhance the usefulness of the book and underline the great care that went into its composition. It is a superior volume in the uniformly excellent series of Harvard Studies in Business History." Sidney Pomerantz

+ N Y Times p24 Je 30 '46 320w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:121 Je '46 240w

"Like Thoreau, who traveled extensively in Concord, the author of this excellent corporate history has gone far in neighboring Waltham, which is not only a place but an institution. His journeys in space and scholarship were taken in search of facts concerning Waltham watches and the men and companies which under various names and groupings have been making and vending those timepieces for a century. The author missed nothing worth while and the result is a sound and copious work in good proportions." Arthur Pound

+ Weekly Book Review p25 My 26 '46 1500w

MOORE, HARRIET LUCY. Soviet Far Eastern policy, 1931-1945. (I.P.R. inquiry ser) 284p $2.50 Princeton univ. press [12s 6d Oxford]

327.47 Russia—Foreign relations—East (Far East) A45-5523

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"Miss Moore's volume is a very good and useful survey of the events and developments of Soviet Far Eastern policy after 1931. In some places the author develops a really vivid picture of inner links between the basic political phenomena of the East and West. Such, for instance, are the splendid pages dealing with the connection between the events and policies in the Far East prior to the second World War and the European political scene at that time. The author uses—but with a superb choice—abundant Russian-language materials including documents, journals, newspapers, and books. Therefore, instead of presenting her own interpretation too frequently, she is in a position to let the sources say, in an unmitigated way, what Soviet policy was aiming at." M. M. Laserson

+ Am Hist R 52:136 O '46 850w

Reviewed by P. H. Clyde

Am Pol Sci R 40:392 Ap '46 380w

"For the first time, a student of international affairs has placed in one handy volume a collection of documents together with intelligent interpretations. The collection is not exhaustive, but it is adequate. Quotations are fair, chosen with intent to explain and not to praise." C. A. Buss

+ Ann Am Acad 245:185 My '46 500w

"It is not only informative, but exceptionally interesting. The addition of the documents makes it a desirable reference work as well."

+ Current Hist 10:53 Ja '46 100w

"A scholarly history, much of it based on Russian sources."

+ Foreign Affairs 24:562 Ap '46 80w

Reviewed by Denis Plimmer

Nation 162:404 Ap 6 '46 350w

"In the light of the troubled circumstances today prevailing in the Far East, this careful and objective account of Soviet Russia's policy in that part of the world between 1931 and 1945 is both very timely and highly interesting. Another of the basic studies sponsored by the International Secretariat of the Institute of Pacific Relations, it fully lives up to its predecessors' standards in accuracy and thorough documentation." F. R. Dulles

+ N Y Times p38 Ap 7 '46 650w

"Useful as this book is in tracing the story of boundary and fishery disputes between the Soviet Union and Japan, it is to be regretted that even a study sponsored by the high authority of the International Secretariat of the Institute of Pacific Relations cannot at this time add substantially to what is already known about matters of such vital concern to Americans and to the world." J. D. Clarkson

+ Pol Sci Q 61:280 Je '46 750w

Reviewed by Edward Crankshaw

Spec 176:488 My 10 '46 360w

"The presentation is clear and concise. Not the least valuable part of this book is its extensive appendix of translated official documents and materials illustrating Soviet Far Eastern policy. These provide a valuable source of reference for the reader, a service performed in this book for the first time."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:51 Mr '46 150w

Reviewed by George Vernadsky

Yale R n s 35:756 summer '46 490w

MOORE, JOHN CECIL. Fair field [Eng title: Portrait of Elmbury] 240p $2.75 Simon & Schuster [12s 6d Collins]

46-11868

828 England—Social life and customs

In 1944 the author, a British navy flier, was in Normandy watching a small French town go up in flames. With the thought that it was probably just such another town as the English one in which he spent his youth, he wrote down the story of that town, called here Elm-bury. The years he covered were from 1907 (his birth year) to the beginning of World war II.

"All is set down in vigorous, sharp images seen through an unclouded memory. The brightest episodes are the genre sketches of local characters. . . . Occasionally there is a touch of sentimentality, a common ingredient of English portraiture, but in the main there is a Hogarthian lustiness that takes this book out of the class of those that describe the whimsies of a provincial lady or the minutiae of a Mrs. Miniver." Robert Halsband

+ Book Week p3 D 29 '46 330w

Booklist 43:130 Ja 1 '47

"Conscious of his literary heritage, Moore writes with warmth and vigor and presents England, perhaps too deliberately, in its best tradition. The writing is sensitive, in the Galsworthy manner."

+ Kirkus 14:334 Jl 15 '46 150w

"A book that combines documentary value with ripe charm and entertainment." G. T. + Manchester Guardian p3 N 23 '45 240w

"John Moore leaves us with the feeling that we have spent a good evening over a bottle of old port, listening to an Englishman talk about his home." Mary Mian

+ N Y Times p4 D 15 '46 700w

"Those to whom the delights of the English countryside are dear will probably derive much gentle pleasure from the tender reminiscences of the author's native shire. . . Coarser-grained readers may find Mr. Moore's talent for retrospection too delicately urbane and too consciously mellow and reasonable for these unmellow and unreasonable times. Irwin Edman contributes an agreeable and appreciative introduction."

+ New Yorker 22:125 N 23 '46 110w

Time 48:109 D 9 '46 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p533 N 10 '45 470w

"Mr. Moore's virtues are sound ones. He observes freshly and writes well. He sees the joke, he has a nose for good lore, and his tales of poachers, councillors, auctioneers, farmers, and publicans ring effortlessly true. Elmsbury, with its Tudor houses and Hogarthian slums, its Labor-versus-Tory politics, and its economic see-saw between boom and depression, becomes a place the reader feels he could recognize; and one of its inhabitants, a retired schoolmaster addicted to the classics, butterflies, and old port, provides a lovably eccentric axis on which Mr. Moore's town-picture oscillates." James Hilton

+ Weekly Book Review p6 D 1 '46 800w

MOORE, NATHANIEL FISH. Diary; a trip from New York to the Falls of St Anthony in 1845; ed. by Stanley Pargellis and Ruth Latham Butler; pub. for the Newberry Library. 101p il $5 Univ. of Chicago press

917.3 U.S.—Description and travel A46-6134

In 1845 the author, tired of his job as president of Columbia college in New York, tried to resign. He was persuaded to continue his work, but first he took a trip. He traveled by boat to Albany, by train to Buffalo, by boat to Detroit, by stagecoach across Michigan, by boat across the lake to Chicago, and then by stagecoach to Galena. From there he continued his travels as far as St Louis, before he returned to New York. His journal was for his own use, and was not intended for publication. Index.

"Moore wrote his diary solely for his own use and pleasure, in simple and lively prose. He was an experienced traveler—he had visited Egypt and the Holy Land in addition to European countries—and accepted hardship and danger without dismay. He was a close and keen observer in the fields of his interests, and his interests were wide. Moore's diary has been skillfully and helpfully edited by Stanley Pargellis, librarian of the Newberry Library, and Ruth Latham Butler, historian and bibliographer, and curator of the excellent Edward E. Aver collection at the Newberry Library." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p5 D 29 '46 450w

Booklist 43:154 Ja 15 '47

"Pleasantly illustrated with contemporary prints, this diary forms a charming addition to the rich record of our Western waters. It also serves to remind us of how much we have lost by allowing the long and deservedly popular river excursion almost to disappear from our inland rivers." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p5 D 29 '46 500w

MOORE, REGINALD ARTHUR. Listening world. 180p $2.50 Creative age

46-7931

The protagonist of this novel of wartime London, is Mac, a "lay preacher," who every Sunday harangues the crowd in Hyde Park, voicing his criticisms of the world as he sees it. The story relates the incidents of one week in Mac's life, between one Sunday and the next—contacts with his friends, his wife, his acquaintances—all converging on the center of his existence, those hours when he can talk.

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 28 '46 230w

"A profile of a mystic man of good will, with a considerable display of words and argument, but unresolved, and of little conceivable appeal."

Kirkus 14:560 N 1 '46 120w

"Few people will enjoy this spotless theme, without either a definite beginning or end." Anne Whitmore

— Library J 71:1543 N 1 '46 80w

"To those of us who knew London during the war, Mr. Moore's picture of it has an air of unreality, of appalling drabness. With bombs falling on every side of them, he allows his characters to continue their discussion group quoting Paracelsus, Spengler and Merezhkovsky, with Mac as their spokesman. We have no way of knowing—certainly not through the behavior and conversation of Mr. Moore's characters—the more decisive steps that were taken by those English men and women who accepted the challenge of those historic days." Richard McLaughlin

N Y Times p12 D 8 '46 390w

Reviewed by Richard Match

Weekly Book Review p11 Ja 19 '47 650w

MOORE, ROBERT CECIL. Piety and poverty in Chile; a study of the economic and social effects of Roman Catholicism on Chile. 130p $1.50 Broadman

282.83 Roman Catholic church in Chile. Chile—Economic conditions 46-20758

A study of the influence of the Roman Catholic church on the economic life of Chile in colonial days. The author is an American Protestant missionary who has been stationed in Chile for more than twenty years.

Christian Century 63:1016 Ag 21 '46 30w

"An interesting and informing little book." H. W. Smith

+ Crozer Q 23:393 O '46 200w

MOORE, RUTH. Spoonhandle. 377p $2.75 Morrow

46-3808

Life in a small Maine fishing village is the background for this story. The Stilwells are the central characters. There are four of them: Pete and his sister Agnes who would do anything in their greed for money; and Willie and Hod who lived on Little Spoon Island, fished for a living, and stood for better things than money grabbing.

Booklist 42:348 Jl 1 '46

Bookmark 7:14 N '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '46

"This has a very real quality, in the place, in the people, and is possibly more popular than [her] first which we also liked."

+ Kirkus 14:153 Ap 1 '46 190w

"Light, entertaining, well-written novel of natives of Maine coast. . . Should be popular with lovers of Joseph Lincoln's stories. Recommended." Elizabeth Kelley

+ Library J 71:324 Je 1 '46 60w

"A genial, easy-going novel which spreads engagingly out over the lives and affairs of some half dozen residents of a sea-coast community in Maine—that is Ruth Moore's pleasant accomplishment in 'Spoonhandle.' . . The writing throughout this novel is steady and competent. There is generally an authentic feeling for place, for the true and ordinary values of every day, the meaningfulness of independence, of work, of honesty and kindness. But characterization is on the whole somewhat conventional." Richard Sullivan

+ N Y Times p8 Je 16 '46 500w

New Yorker 22:94 Je 15 '46 70w

San Francisco Chronicle p11 S 1 '46 180w

MOORE, RUTH—Continued

"Spoonhandle" is a serious novel and a surprising novel: it is so sturdy, forthright, and kindly, and at the same time so deeply pessimistic." George Dangerfield

Sat R of Lit 29:42 Je 22 '46 600w

"Miss Moore is a native of Maine and her second novel has the authentic down-East tang, with the sea as a background. It's provincial but distinctive, the characters commonplace but the writing original and humorous." D. B. B.

Spring'd Republican p4d Je 23 '46 240w

"Many good books have been written about this northern sweep of land, arrogantly flung out into the Atlantic, but few as deeply evocative of its spirit as Ruth Moore's 'Spoonhandle.' With five generations of Maine blood in her veins, she has written a story that penetrates the bedrock of the people. Her characters are more than portraits; they possess a quality of temperament and color, they possess a quality of change that holds the essence of life. Though she writes of the upheavals wrought by the invasion of summer people, she never makes the mistake of creating a pattern of conflict composed of types." Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Je 18 '46 900w
Wis Lib Bul 42:133 O '46

MOORE, VIRGINIA. Ho for heaven! man's changing attitude toward dying; with designs by Horst V. Rhoden. 299p $3 Dutton 236.1 Death 46-3554

A survey of the ways in which men have met death, their last words, their last acts, from the days of the ancient Hindus, Egyptians, and Greeks, down thru the middle ages, the eighteenth century, to the present and the deaths of common soldiers and famous statesmen during World war II.

Reviewed by E. D. Branch

Book Week p4 My 12 '46 750w

Booklist 42:313 Je 1 '46

Cath World 163:573 S '46 170w

Kirkus 14:186 Ap 15 '46 140w

"Miss Moore is a skillful, intelligent writer, concerned alike with the two primary ingredients of her craft, style and thought. She has compiled an excellent and fascinating anthology of dying, but she has also put down a commentary on the spiritual, material, and mental progress of man which will madden the pedants, confound fools, and delight the imaginative." Thomas Sugrue

+ Sat R of Lit 29:14 My 18 '46 1350w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Spring'd Republican p4d My 26 '46 550w

Reviewed by Lorine Pruette

Weekly Book Review p4 My 12 '46 800w

MOORE, WILBERT ELLIS. Economic demography of eastern and southern Europe. 299p maps $3 Columbia univ. press

312 Europe—Population. Europe—Economic conditions

"This is a League of Nations publication, though prepared by a representative of the office of population research at Princeton. It deals with the Baltic states, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, the Balkan countries, and the four peninsular states, Greece, Italy, Spain and Portugal. These are, in general, the least industrialized parts of Europe, and the parts in which population increase is most rapid. Also, they are politically the most unstable areas, though this book does not discuss politics except insofar as it bears on systems of land tenure and agrarian reform. This is a highly technical and statistical study of fundamental facts about the populations of these countries and their means of livelihood." Christian Century

Reviewed by Georges Sabach

Am Soc R 11:496 Ag '46 800w

"The book is factual and convincing throughout. Mr. Moore has no axes to grind. He merely tries to find the best solution for some of the problems of Europe's 'problem regions.'" Emil Lengyel

+ Ann Am Acad 245:190 My '46 450w

Christian Century 63:400 Mr 27 '46 100w

Current Hist 10:444 My '46 70w

"The book is full of statistical provender, though not of a kind to be partaken of lightly. The demographic specialist will find much to ponder over, and perhaps to improve upon; to the general student the book will be suggestive in throwing into prominence the areas of apparent agricultural poverty. The geographer as well as the statistician will feel himself challenged to test the findings by the means at his command, and the policy makers will need to consider the fundamental issues involved. To aid in such interpretation, Dr. Moore has added a fat sheaf of notes on systems of land tenure and the associated labor systems in the countries of Eastern and Southern Europe in the interwar years, and he has set down his views on the bearing of some of the features of these systems on the productivity of agriculture. In comparison with the earlier chapters this seems a less assimilated discussion. Here the omission of the U.S.S.R. is especially unfortunate, and the lack of a parallel study of land tenure and labor systems in Northern and Western Europe prevents the reader from making some significant comparisons. Yet our gratitude is due to Dr. Moore for bringing together references and notes on a great mass of scattered material and for encouraging further investigation by recording his working hypotheses in these problems of prime importance."

Geog R 36:506 Jl '46 900w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:139 Je '46 400w

MOORE, WILBERT ELLIS. Industrial relations and the social order. 555p $4 Macmillan 658.3 Industrial relations 46-2344

"Professor Moore (Princeton) offers a textbook that describes the organization of modern industry, including chapters on management, labor, industrial relations and the findings of impartial investigators. There is a good deal of common sense comment in it, for the edification of both capital and labor." (Current Hist) Chapter bibliographies. Index.

Reviewed by Robert Dubin

Am J Soc 52:279 N '46 1250w

"This study is an extraordinary illustration of the indispensable need for a framework of reference within which relevant data are selected and made significant. The author is definitely oriented to the voluntaristic point of view in sociological theory. Whether the reader does or does not agree with this particular orientation, he cannot fail to be impressed by the acute and illuminating analysis of a large number of basic problems in modern industry found in this pioneer study." Nathaniel Cantor

+ Ann Am Acad 246:157 Jl '46 500w

Current Hist 10:538 Je '46 50w

Reviewed by Murray Ross

Pol Sci Q 61:439 S '46 800w

"This is primarily a textbook for upper-class college students taking a course in industrial relations. It will also be found useful as supplementary reading for courses in labor economics and personnel management. Industrial executives, union leaders, and informed laymen may profit from a study of it." M. J. Segal

+ Social Educ 11:46 Ja '47 600w

Reviewed by D. W. Harr

Social Studies 38:42 Ja '47 330w

"Labor-management problems in this country can best be viewed within the context of the cultural and economic scene and its historical antecedents. This new book on industrial relations, by studying the problem against the background of our social order, tries to do just that—and thereby distinguishes itself from the expanding output of volumes in this field."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:236 S '46 320w

MOOREHEAD, ALAN. Eclipse. 309p il $2.75
Coward-McCann [12s 6d Hamilton, H]

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Campaigns and battles. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, English 46-3556

"A review of the final stages of the war, by a longterm war correspondent of the London Daily Express, from Taormina, Sicily, to the invasion of Northern France, the crossing of the Rhine, the occupation of central Germany, to the liberation in Denmark, that manages many small details in a large camera focus. Here, with all the military strategy and importance, are the various phases of collapse, from the political to the emotional, the setbacks, the carry-through, the results of the successes." (Kirkus) Index.

Reviewed by F. S. Marquardt
Book Week p7 My 5 '46 650w
Booklist 42:296 My 15 '46
Foreign Affairs 25:339 Ja '47 40w

"It is a book of excellent reporting, penetrating observation, and gives more than one clue to the chaos of those times, for the intimate knowledge and the personal experiences of the actual events are vivid and memorable. For an overall picture, this, to date, is worthy coverage."

+ Kirkus 14:139 Mr 15 '46 160w

"This unpretentious book (the author disclaims for it either accuracy or completeness) is descriptive reporting of a high order. He is a sound and well-informed military commentator, but there is not much room for that in a book which takes us from Sicily through Italy and France to Berlin in 255 pages. What there is good, but in this book he is more often the alert observer with a sense of the dramatic and an unusual gift for describing scenes of colour, movement, and emotion in a rushing and happily excited style." E. A. M.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 28 '45 200w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates
Nation 162:694 Je 8 '46 170w

"The author has failed to write history and given us only an intensely readable book. . . But always—and this makes Eclipse compulsory reading—there is the personality of the author to bring shape into the confusion. If that personality seems to disintegrate as victory approaches and to retain only the integrity of a melancholy dismay, the fault lies, not with Alan Moorehead, but with the times in which we live." R. H. S. Crossman

+ New Statesman & Nation 30:320 N 10 '45 700w

"A fine narrative. . . Mr. Moorehead is able to view the empire with all the objectivity of a Briton born in Melbourne, Australia. He has some crisp things to say about what he calls 'the scandal' of British tank manufacture, bringing back the days when Winston Churchill used to have a scuffle with members of the House of Commons, notably a Mr. Stokes, on that very subject with considerable frequency." Charles Poore

+ N Y Times p5 My 5 '46 1300w

"One of the best narratives of the war in Sicily, Italy, and the West—those areas where American participation was steadily increasing—is written by the Australian correspondent Alan Moorehead." M. S. Watson

+ Sat R of Lit 29:30 My 25 '46 900w

"What 'Eclipse' has to offer is obvious: It is a well-written account of the overall allied military success in Europe, punctuated by periodic psychoanalyses of the liberated peoples. What it does not have, for an American audience is equally obvious; there is too much Montgomery, too little Eisenhower; too much Tommy and too little GI Joe. The lack of balance is all too apparent. The worst shortcoming of 'Eclipse,' however, is a lack of contact with the true significance of war." William Manchester

Springf'd Republican p4d J1 7 '46 360w

"Mr. Moorehead could probably have written a still better book had he waited a little longer and gone more slowly about it—in which case he would also probably have been more accurate in his spelling of names—but he has written a good one as it stands and one which is certain to be popular."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p519 N 3 '45 700w

Reviewed by Marcus Duffield
Weekly Book Review p18 My 5 '46 550w

MORA, JOSEPH JACINTO. Trail dust and saddle leather. 246p il $3 Scribner

917.8 Cowboys 46-4302

Authentic study of the American cowboy. Detailed descriptions of his character, the pony he rode, equipment, how he lived, and how he died are included. There is also an account of the evolution of western range cattle, and one of cattle brands. No index.

"To the two classics in the literature of the American cow-puncher—Andy Adams' 'Log of a Cowboy' and Philip Ashton Rollins' 'The Cowboy'—now may be added a third." E. S. Watson

+ Book Week p9 Je 2 '46 360w

Booklist 42:327 Je 15 '46

"The author-artist was an old timer—he's been at it for 47 years. He's a good tale spinner, and he knows what facts will give color and drama and authenticity to the picture he gives us."

+ Kirkus 14:120 Mr 1 '46 150w

"Superbly illustrated by the author. Many of the drawings show exact details of range operations, various types and styles of equipment and gear. Exceptionally fine book. Will have wide appeal to ever-growing group of lovers of the West." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 71:918 Je 15 '46 100w

"'Trail Dust and Saddle Leather' is, I think, the best thing in twenty-five years on the American cowboy and the tools of his trade. It stands with Rollins' 'The Cowboy' as a comprehensive study of the craft, and the illustrations—by the author—are, in my opinion, the best which have ever been published. Especially good are those picturing cowboy equipment. . . 'Trail Dust and Saddle Leather' is a book for everyone who knows or wants to know the West. It's good reading, and it's a first-rate reference volume for writers and illustrators and for editors who might want to know what writers are writing about." Hoffman Birney

+ N Y Times p10 My 26 '46 470w

Springf'd Republican p4d J1 21 '46 300w

"Mr. Mora's book is written in the drawing style which seems to affect many writers who try to write as cowboys talk, which is effective enough in spots, but more often seems an unnecessary affectation. When he writes plain English he is better. His own illustrations are vivid and full of action. His monograph should be particularly interesting to young persons who have their eye set on the West. Mr. Mora has most of the answers." Stanley Walker

Weekly Book Review p10 J1 28 '46 500w

Wis Lib Bul 42:129 O '46

MORDECAI, C. A. BEN, pseud. See Starr, H.

MORGAN, ALFRED POWELL. Boys' book of engines, motors and turbines; il. by the author. 264p $2.75 Scribner

621 Engines. Motors. Turbines 46-11991

"Interesting history and developments of various engines, motors and turbines, with clear, simple plans, illustrations and instructions for making toy models. A practical book, calling for the use of inexpensive materials boys can obtain. 'All of the toy machines described here have actually been built by boys.' There is a good index and chapters are outlined in the contents." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:106 D 1 '46

Kirkus 14:527 O 15 '46 90w

MORGAN, A. P.—Continued

"This book should be a welcome addition to many libraries where a need for this material has been felt." Alice Martin

+ Library J 71:1720 D 1 '46 80w

"Mr. Morgan has done it again. In his newest book, The Boys' Book of Engines, Motors and Turbines, he once more combines fascinating facts with clear diagrams to produce a book which will be enjoyed by boys as well as older people." M. R. Kirshman

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 10 '46 150w

MORGAN, ARTHUR ERNEST. Nowhere was somewhere; how history makes utopias and how utopias make history. 234p $2.50 Univ. of N.C. press

321.07 Utopias 46-25233

The theme of the book is that Utopia actually existed at one time. Basing his theory on information available to Thomas More at the time he wrote his Utopia, the author concludes that it is a description of the Inca civilization of Peru, based on reports of European travelers. He includes in his discussion other Utopias, ancient and modern, from the days of Isaiah to Edward Bellamy. Index

Reviewed by Louis Filler

Am Hist R 52:97 O '46 550w

"The strength of the book is its deep sincerity, compensating greatly for apparent lack of integral unity." C. W. Shull

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:1027 O '46 300w

Reviewed by J. O. Hertzler

Ann Am Acad 247:196 S '46 400w

"Dr. Morgan's book seems to me a positive contribution to long-range thinking about both means and ends in social change." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 J1 14 '46 270w

Reviewed by Garland Downum

Christian Century 63:1471 D 4 '46 800w

"Dr. Morgan's book would make fascinating reading, even if nowhere were really nowhere." R. K. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 J1 30 '46 220w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook

Current Hist 10:123 Ag '46 900w

"A sort of effortless, lively, breakfast-table discourse, with sundry notions and suggestions of the author thrown in, and references and sources, in case the listener wishes to do it over for himself." Christina Stead

+ N Y Times p29 Ag 11 '46 950w

"Of late there have been disquieting whispers that a Utopia once actually did exist, and now comes a fascinating exposition of that theory in 'Nowhere Was Somewhere.' With Dr Morgan's scholarly and often exciting detective work leading to acceptable conclusions, it seems agreed that More and Bellamy were not indulging in pure fantasy, that they were writing about something man had done and presumably could do again—build the perfect state. The question now, however, is not necessarily whether Utopia actually did exist, but how good was it, do we want it, and if so, how do we achieve it? Dr Morgan, who as chairman of the TVA was no stranger to social planning, thinks Utopia was basically good, that we want it, but that we must have a spiritual rebirth before we can hope for it." R. F. H.

+ Spring'd Republican p4d J1 7 '46 420w

Reviewed by Frances Witherspoon

Weekly Book Review p14 J1 21 '46 600w

MORGAN, ARTHUR ERNEST. Philosophy of Edward Bellamy. 96p pa $1.60 King's crown press

B or 92 Bellamy, Edward A45-3897

"This volume is an effort to revive the Bellamy of the years preceding the publication of Looking Backward and Equality. The years of social and political reform from 1888 to 1897 are treated as an intrusion into an already busy life being rapidly wasted away by chronic ill health. It is Dr. Morgan's contention that Bellamy was a philosopher, and regarded himself so." Am Soc R

"Students of Edward Bellamy and his school of utopian thought are deeply indebted to Dr. Morgan for his painstaking, scholarly and sympathetic study of this little known phase of Bellamy's life and for bringing to public attention Bellamy's thought-provoking contributions in these fields." H. W. Laidler

+ Am Econ R 36:195 Mr '46 700w

Reviewed by Joseph Schneider

Am Soc R 11:134 F '46 200w

Reviewed by J. L. Blau

J Philos 43:331 Je 6 '46 1400w

"Mr. Morgan has done a capable job of compiling and organizing the quotations that best enunciate Bellamy's central ideas. It is a book which elucidates rather than interprets critically. However, since it contains a number of hitherto scattered and even unpublished pieces of Bellamy's writing, it should prove useful." B. R. Bowron

New Eng Q 19:123 Mr '46 700w

"Dr. Morgan is a critic as well as an admirer of Bellamy's social and political views, and his analytical chapters contain much wisdom and practical knowledge. He has served Bellamy well, even to the extent of helping to preserve his manuscripts." Louis Filler

+ Pol Sci Q 60:469 S '45 200w

MORGAN, GEORGE CAMPBELL. Corinthian letters of Paul; an exposition of I and II Corinthians. 275p $3 Revell

227.2 Bible. New Testament—Corinthians 46-21078

An exposition of Paul's letters to the church at Corinth, written by an English Biblical scholar. No index.

"At 82, Dr. Morgan's natural force and religious insight seemed not to have abated. This commentary, which appears to be an entirely new work, is full of preachable material."

+ Christian Century 63:918 J1 24 '46 40w

"It is done in classroom, expository style, which would be dry and monotonous except for the touch of Christian grace and fellowship which the writer always manifests to so marked a degree. His treatment of Second Corinthians, which he says truly 'is a difficult book to analyze,' will be welcomed by teachers of Bible classes in particular."

+ Churchman 160:17 S 15 '46 110w

MORGAN, HELEN L. Mistress of the White House; the story of Dolly Madison; II. by Phyllis Coté. 248p $2 Presbyterian bd.

Madison, Dorothy (Payne) Todd—Juvenile literature 46-3479

Fictionized biography of Dolly Madison from the age of fourteen, thru her years in Philadelphia, her two marriages, and the flight from Washington, to the end of the War of 1812. For older girls.

Book Week p16 Je 2 '46 180w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 22:274 J1 '46 80w

+ Kirkus 14:223 My 1 '46 100w

Reviewed by Gertrude Andrus

Library J 71:829 Je 1 '46 110w

Reviewed by N. B. Baker

N Y Times p27 My 12 '46 140w

Spring'd Republican p4d Je 2 '46 120w

"Less a biography than a panorama of American history at a time when much American history was being made, its succession of lively narratives has much detail of social life, costumes and customs. It should be a useful book in schools, and it will continue an interesting one to read." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p7 Ap 28 '46 360w

MORGAN, JOHN HARTMAN. Assize of arms; the disarmament of Germany and her rearmament, 1919-1939; with a pref. by Sir G. M. W. Macdonogh. 357p il $3.50 Oxford [15s Methuen]

943.085 Germany—History—Allied occupation, 1918-1930. Militarism (46-7170)

"General Morgan was one of the British members of the Inter-Allied Commission of Control in Germany from 1919 to 1923 and, during that time, was senior British officer in charge of those German soldiers still permitted by the armistice to remain under arms. In the light of very recent history, his account of those days becomes an important and disturbing document, for the author relates in detail how the Germans—Socialists and Reichswehr men alike—conspired, with the connivance of sympathizers among the Allies, to fake disarmament." (New Yorker) This is the first of two volumes to deal with the subject.

Reviewed by L. G. Seligman.

Book Week p2 O 20 '46 360w

"There is no doubt that this is an important book at the present moment—brilliantly written, exciting to read, and full of grave warnings for the future." J. M. D. P.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 5 '45 480w

"An interesting and well told narrative. . . The book is a must for those seeking background on today's international situation. It is not pleasant reading." R. E. Dupuy

+ New Repub 115:489 O 14 '46 750w

"General Morgan's knowledge of Germany was inevitably mainly confined to an acquaintance with the Army. In a most useful chapter, he reminds us that barbarity and ruthlessness was ingrained in the German Army—especially the Officers' Corps and the N.C.O.s—long before Himmler began to form his S.S. But when he deals with social problems he is in danger of undermining the evidence of his earlier chapters, by the generalisations with which he desires to reinforce it. If this is the effect of Assize of Arms on the general reader, it will be a grievous thing. For it contains some of the best writing on the subject of German Militarism which it has been my privilege to read." R. H. S. Crossman

+ New Statesman & Nation 30:130 Ag 25 '45 650w

"The book is interesting not only because General Morgan has a profound knowledge of Germany but also because he has a fine sense of prose."

+ New Yorker 22:118 S 21 '46 120w

Reviewed by J. D. Millett

Pol Sci Q 61:609 D '46 550w

Reviewed by Gordon Pates

San Francisco Chronicle p10 D 22 '46 270w

Spec 175:228 S 7 '45 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p387 Ag 18 '45 900w

"The present volume tells only the first part of the story. It describes the establishment of the commission in Berlin and its first brush with the general staff, gives a first-hand account of the Kapp putsch of 1920 and analyzes the tactics of the Reichswehr during the so-called Communist risings in the Ruhr. These sections are brilliantly written and show a fine sense of the dramatic. The second half of the volume, which is devoted to a discussion of the composition and ethos of the Officers' Corps and an analysis of German society in the first years of the republic, is weakened by unwise generalizations about the national character and by conclusions which will be questioned by students of the period." G. A. Craig

+ Weekly Book Review p29 O 6 '46 800w

MORGAN, JOSEPH. History of the kingdom of Basaruah, and three unpublished letters; ed. with an introd. by Richard Schlatter. Ltd ed 172p $4 Harvard univ. press [22s 6d Oxford]

A46-2942

"This reprint makes available to the general reader a long neglected but once highly popular work of colonial literature. It is an allegory, remotely similar to those of Bunyan, setting forth the principles of Calvinist theology. Published in 1715, this story was an attempt to strengthen the hold of Calvinism—weakened by the new science and other forces—by presenting it persuasively and entertainingly." Book Week

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 Ap 14 '46 90w

Manchester Guardian p3 J1 30 '46 240w

"The History of the Kingdom of Basaruah' (the name is a Hebrew compound meaning 'flesh-spirit') was printed in Boston by William Bradford in 1715. From one of four surviving copies it has now been meticulously reproduced with an excellent introduction and with three letters from the author appended. The edition of 525 copies will probably supply the American demand for this curious blend of plety and fable for some years to come." G. F. Whicher

Weekly Book Review p50 N 10 '46 470w

MORGAN, MURRAY C. (CROMWELL MURRAY, pseud). Day of the dead. 200p $2 McKay

46-22833

Mystery story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Book Week p7 Ja 5 '47 70w

"Among the other characters involved is an American girl who appears to be much too friendly with the Sinarquistas and yet to be feared by them to such an extent that they try to kill her. The plotting and counter-plotting provide many exciting episodes along with bits of mystery and romance." I. A.

N Y Times p14 D 29 '46 180w

"A routine thriller, embellished by excellent local color."

+ New Yorker 22:148 D 14 '46 100w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 15 '46 40w

"Good thriller."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:80 D 7 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p12 D 22 '46 110w

MORGENSTERN, SOMA. The son of the lost son; tr. by Joseph Leftwich and Peter Gross [pub. for] Jewish publication soc. of America. 269p $2.50 Rinehart

46-25123

"Wolf Mohilevski, nicknamed Velvel, is a Jewish landowner in Galicia. No temptation, no ambition, not even his sufferings during the war of 1914 have budged him from the rigorous daily ritual of faith which he inherited from his forefathers. . . The book tells how Velvel makes a three-day journey to Vienna to attend a conference of Jews and there encounters and comes to love young Alfred, his brother's son. But upon this slender thread of story the author hangs a whole series of pictures." (Weekly Book Review) This is an English translation of a novel published in Berlin in 1934.

Reviewed by E. D. Branch

Book Week p14 Ap 14 '46 600w

Booklist 42:299 My 15 '46

Bookmark 7:14 N '46

"The plot is simple, but it is amply rounded out with many characters, fully, often humorously, drawn, and with what may be an authentic background a wide, flat farming country, a crowded and anxious Congress, a Viennese hotel and through it all, perpetually, the unwavering ritual of the Hasidic Jews. The result is rich and varied. No writer of small gift could create such depth of texture." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 J1 20 '46 750w

"The descriptions of the Polish countryside, of Vienna, and the Jewish congress are very vivid and the main characters are extremely

MORGENSTERN, SOMA—Continued
well drawn. Recommended for libraries which have Jewish communities and those having need for fiction in the literary tradition of the Old World." H. P. Bolman
+ Library J 71:407 Mr 15 '46 70w

"Mr. Morgenstern opens his novel on a broad note, reminiscent of the Russian manner, in describing the landowner, Wolf Mohilevski at home on his Galician farm. . . . You expect Veivel and the prose that carries him to remain that way, but are soon disappointed. The Russian note is easier to strike than to hold. . . . There is a good deal of clarity in what one may call Mr. Morgenstern's sense of natural piety, as distinct from religious piety. His love of the rural locale, the improvement of his writing whenever it deals with rustic character, in particular that of Yankel the balliff, a non-religious Jew, who helps win back his nephew, and his reverence toward the folk aspects of religion, would seem to indicate that even for Mr. Morgenstern the religious problem of the Jews merges with a larger one—that of their survival as a cultural body, which is to say, a people." Isaac Rosenfeld

N Y Times p10 My 12 '46 800w

"The fearful piety of Wolf Mohilevski, the varied states of revelation to be found at the Congress he attends among the representatives of European Jewry, the searching, yearning, serenely religious hunger of Alfred (this is a very complex and difficult portrait, beautifully done), are traced separately and jointly like themes in a sonorous fugue. . . . Each of these portraits is a statement of one aspect of the varied people who are known as Jews. Together, intertwined, interplaying, they make a whole, resonant, fugued, positive statement of Semitism—what it is, not what it is not." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 29:25 Mr 30 '46 700w

"In its irony, its tenderness, and its underlying grief, the book opens the gates to the Jewish mentality. But so vital a theme as Mr. Morgenstern's, in which he describes a way of life so alien to the Western world, needs power and passion to drive it home." Virgilia Peterson

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Mr 31 '46 800w

